

A Holmes and Doyle Bibliography

Volume 6
Periodical Articles
Subject Listing, By De Waal Category

Compiled by Timothy J. Johnson

Minneapolis
High Coffee Press
2018

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

INTRODUCTION

This bibliography is a work in progress. It attempts to update Ronald B. De Waal's comprehensive bibliography, The Universal Sherlock Holmes, but does not claim to be exhaustive in content. New works are continually discovered and added to this bibliography. Readers and researchers are invited to suggest additional content.

This volume is assembled from the general periodical literature and from selected Sherlockian or Doylean periodicals. Those periodicals or newsletters include (at this point):

The Baker Street Journal
Baker Street Miscellanea
Baker Street West 1
The Beeman's Christmas Annual
The Camden House Journal
Canadian Holmes
The Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter
The Holmes & Watson Report
The Illustrious Clients News
The Musgrave Papers
The Nezire Zanmai International
The Ritual
The Serpentine Muse
Sherlock
The Sherlock Holmes Gazette
The Sherlock Holmes Journal
Sherlock Holmes - The Detective Magazine
Shoso-In Bulletin
The Strand Magazine (Birmingham, MI)
Varieties of Ash

Coverage of these periodicals or newsletters begins around 1994, the final year covered by De Waal's bibliography, but may not yet be totally up-to-date (given the ongoing nature of this bibliography). It is hoped that other periodical titles will be added at a later date.

- Volume 1 in this supplement focuses on monographic and serial titles, arranged alphabetically by author or main entry.
- Volume 2 presents the exact same information arranged by subject.
- Volume 3 focuses on the periodical literature of Doyle and Holmes, listing individual articles alphabetically by author.
- Volume 4 includes "core" or "primary" citations, i.e. articles published in Sherlockian or Doylean periodicals, articles published elsewhere that are more substantive in nature, or that bear directly on Holmes, Doyle, or "playing the Game."
- Volume 5 includes "passing" or "secondary" references, i.e. those entries that are passing in nature or contain very brief information or content.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- Volume 6 presents the periodical literature arranged by subject categories (as originally devised for the De Waal bibliography and slightly modified here).
- Volume 7 lists audio/visual materials alphabetically by author/main entry.
- Volume 8 lists audio/visual material alphabetically by subject (De Waal category) heading.
- Volume 9 is a combined list, arranged alphabetically by author, of all formats (audio/visual, books, serials).
- Volume 10 is a combined list, arranged alphabetically by subject, of all formats.

The arrangement of the citations below reflects De Waal's structure, with slight modifications.

Please use the bookmark function in your PDF reader to navigate through the various subject categories. De Waal's major categories are:

1. The Sacred Writings
2. The Apocrypha
3. Manuscripts
4. Foreign Language Editions
5. The Literary Agent (Sir Arthur Conan Doyle)
6. The Writings About the Writings
7. Sherlockians and The Societies
8. Memorials and Memorabilia
9. Games, Puzzles and Quizzes
10. Actors, Performances and Recordings
11. Parodies, Pastiches, Burlesques, Travesties and Satires
12. Cartoons, Comics and Jokes

The compiler wishes to thank Peter E. Blau, Don Hobbs, Leslie S. Klinger, and Fred Levin for their assistance in providing additional entries for this bibliography.

~~~~~

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

01A SACRED WRITINGS -- INDIVIDUAL TALES -- THE ADVENTURE OF THE SUSSEX VAMPIRE
(1)

1. "The Adventure of the Sussex Vampire." Scholastic Voice 64, no. 16 (1980): 14-17, 23.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Illustrated.

03 MANUSCRIPTS AND ARCHIVAL MATERIAL (56)

2. "Antiques & Collecting: Collecting Dates." Birmingham Post, December 12, 1998: 47.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...Next Thursday at Sotheby's sale rooms in New Bond Street, London, letters, photographs and other documents are being sold which show that this literary giant of extraordinary intellect and maturity was completely and utterly fooled by two small schoolgirls. The documents are among a magnificent collection of Sherlockiana which is being dispersed at an auction, efforts having failed to keep the entire collection - hundreds of books and thousands of other documents together. The collection was formed by Mr Norman L Rosenbaum who began when he was a student at London University, scouring the bookshops of Charing Cross Road and Cecil Court for the author's works...."
3. "Briefly." The Ottawa Citizen, July 11, 1995: C6.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "One of the finest collections of Sherlock Holmes material ever offered for sale is expected to fetch $150,000 at auction in London this month. The July 24 auction will feature first editions, papers and memorabilia relating to one of the world's most famous fictional detectives and his creator, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. The collection, amassed by Stanley Mackenzie, a former custodian of London's Sherlock Holmes Society who died earlier this year, includes the pipe used by Peter Cushing in his film portrayal of the Victorian detective and a gold cigarette case inscribed, by Conan Doyle, 'Sherlock Holmes.'"
4. "The Case of Doyle's Lost Works is Finally Solved." Birmingham Post, March 17, 2004: 8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "A lost hoard of personal papers belonging to Sherlock Holmes creator Sir Arthur Conan Doyle has been discovered in the offices of a legal firm in London. The collection of 3,000 items, which went missing 40 years ago during a legal dispute over his estate, includes personal letters, notes and handwritten manuscripts -80 per cent of which have never been published. The collection will go on display in May before being auctioned by Christie's for an estimated pounds 2 million...."
5. "The case of the Conan Doyle papers." The Hindu, May 20, 2004: 1.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The [Arthur Conan Doyle] archive, including his unpublished first novel, a rich cache of family letters and handwritten notebooks full of research and musings about works in progress, was expected to bring in about GBP1 million to 1.5 million, according to Christie's, which is handling the sale. But even as the auction house has attracted a stream of Conan Doyle enthusiasts thrilled at the newly released material, it has also been sharply criticised by some scholars and Members of Parliament for allowing the sale because they say crucial legal questions remain unresolved. They also say the material is too important to be sold off piecemeal. Adding to the sense of unease is the mysterious death of Richard Lancelyn Green, a leading Conan Doyle scholar, private collector and a vociferous opponent of the sale."
6. "Conan Doyle story may fetch GBP250,000." The Herald (Glasgow), April 16, 2007: 8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The original revised manuscript of one of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's last Sherlock Holmes stories could fetch GBP250,000 at auction. The Scottish writer made more than 100 changes in black ink to his handwritten copy of The Adventure of the Three Gables, which appeared in The Strand Magazine in October 1926. The following year, the 31 page story of intrigue, theft, deception and deduction appeared as the fourth of his final, 12- story collection entitled The Case Book of Sherlock Holmes. In some cases, Conan Doyle crossed out the odd word, replacing it with another. In others, he replaced whole phrases or sentences. Complete manuscripts of Sherlock Holmes stories with such extensive alterations 'are of the utmost rarity', said Marsha Malinowski of auctioneers Sotheby's, who have put an estimate of dollars350,000 (GBP176,000) - dollars500,000 (GBP252,000) on it for their New York sale on June 21. The document was once owned by the

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Marquis of Donegall and has been in a private American collection since the 1970s. Among those interested in purchasing it may be Edinburgh University...."

7. "Conan the Librarian." New Zealand Archivists 15, no. 2 (2004): 17-18.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article presents information on Sir Arthur Conan Doyle a writer. A fascinating account of the story of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's personal archives is related in the Weekend Australian Magazine for 17-18 April 2004. The author, Philip Norman, recounts how the whereabouts of Conan Doyle's papers had been a mystery, but that the papers had now come to light and were to be auctioned on 19 May 2004 at Christie's in London.
8. "Expensive, My Dear Watson. Sherlock Holmes Fans Gathered at an Auction in London." The Philadelphia Inquirer, July 25, 1995: E06.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "A private collector from Chicago paid $33,000 yesterday for the 1887 edition of an annual Christmas publication that printed the first Sherlock Holmes story. The story, 'A Study in Scarlet,' was written by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle in 1886 when he was a physician making little or no money. The publishers of Beeton's Christmas Annual paid $40 for the copyright after it was rejected by several other houses. The book was part of a collection of memorabilia relating to the world-famous fictional detective. The collection was amassed by Stanley MacKenzie, who died this year aged 82. It fetched a total of $235,600, a representative of the Sotheby's auction house said...."
9. "GBP148,000 is paid by fans of the great detective." The Times (London), July 25, 1995: 1.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Addition, not deduction, is clue to Sherlock Holmes sale. A Twitch of a deerstalker or the tap of a Meerscham pipe was enough to catch the auctioneer's eye at Sotheby's yesterday as an outstanding Sherlock Holmes collection was sold for Pounds 148,000. Magazines, books, papers and memorabilia collected by Stanley MacKenzie, a renowned Sherlockian and Basil Rathbone-lookalike who died aged 82 in February, fetched more than double the estimated value...."
10. "Global Reach." American Libraries 38, no. 6 (2007): 42-42.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article offers news briefs about libraries. Includes a reference to Doyle. "Scottish celebrities, including actor Sir Sean Connery and author Ian Rankin, have joined the National Library of Scotland's campaign to purchase the archive of Edinburgh-born publisher John Murray, which includes manuscripts and letters from Charles Dickens, Jane Austen, Lord Byron, and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. The Heritage Lottery Fund and the Scottish Executive provided the bulk of the funding, but the library must raise GBP6.5 million to close the deal. The National Library plans to make the archive widely accessible through exhibitions that will travel the country...."
11. "Global Reach." American Libraries 36, no. 3 (2005): 22-22.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents updates on libraries as of March 2005. Under the entry for Scotland, notes "Thanks in part to a GBP7.7-million ($33.2 million) grant from the Heritage Lottery Fund, the National Library in Edinburgh has purchased the literary archives of the John Murray publishing house, founded in London in 1768. Hailed as the most historically significant literary archive to become available in the past 100 years, the collection contains some 150,000 letters by such authors as Lord Byron. Charles Darwin, Jane Austen. Benjamin Disraeli, Arthur Conan Doyle, and Edith Wharton."
12. "Global Reach." American Libraries 35, no. 8 (2004): 23-23.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents world news briefs on libraries as of September 2004. "What may be the world's largest collection of Arthur Conan Doyle memorabilia was donated August 6 to the Portsmouth Library' by the estate of writer Richard Lancelyn Green. The collection includes a full-size recreation of Sherlock Holmes's Baker Street study, and first editions of all Conan Doyle's works."
13. "Holmes 'First Draft' is Printed." Birmingham Evening Mail, March 31, 2001: 9.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "A short story thought to be the first ever written by Sherlock Holmes creator Sir Arthur Conan Doyle has been published for the first time. The Haunted Grange of Goresthorpe was originally rejected for publication by an Edinburgh-based magazine almost 125 years ago, when Conan Doyle was an 18-

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

year-old medical student. The hand-written book, which featured an early version of the author's most famous creation, Sherlock Holmes, remained in the archive of Blackwoods Magazine because Doyle did not include a stamped self-addressed envelope when he sent it in...."

14. "Library's Sherlock Holmes gift." The Herald (Glasgow), July 1, 2006: 10.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // An original Sherlock Holmes manuscript was yesterday donated to the National Library of Scotland (NLS). The Adventure of the Illustrious Client, published in 1927, was gifted by the late daughter of the detective's creator Sir Arthur Conan Doyle....The manuscript from Dame Jean Conan Doyle will join the library's collection of Conan Doyle material, which contains around 60 letters and another short story manuscript....The manuscript was handed over by Charles Foley, executor of Dame Jean's estate."

15. "Mystery of Sherlock Holmes' missing papers." The Irish Times, March 20, 2004: 20.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Forty years after their disappearance, the lost personal papers of the author of Sherlock Holmes, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, have been found in London. They will be put up for auction by Christie's in May of this year and are sure to generate interest from his fans worldwide. They are expected to make about (pounds) 2 million. The collection consists of the contents of Sir Arthur's writing desk at the time of his death, personal letters to his family, handwritten manuscripts (the bulk of which were never published) and various memorabilia relating to his life. The collection, which was lost in a lawyer's office in London, caused great excitement in Christie's Books and Manuscripts Department when it had the job of opening the dozen or so cardboard boxes which contained it. Many of these papers were listed in the 1949 biography of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle by Dickson Carr but they were lost fairly soon afterwards and as a result, have been unavailable to contemporary researchers...."

16. "A new home for Sherlock Holmes." Daily Mail (London), August 6, 2004: 19.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "A collection of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle memorabilia, including a hint of how Sherlock Holmes got his name, is moving. Writer Richard Lancelyn Green, who died in March, has left the 20,000 items, worth more than Pounds 2million, to Portsmouth library...."

17. "On the literary front." TLS, no. (2005): 12-13.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents commentary on the role of leading British writers in the war of words and ideas that coincided with the First World War. How unpublished files in the National Archives provide insight into the careers of Arnold Bennett, John Buchan, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, Rudyard Kipling and H.G. Wells; Examples of the writings.

18. "Papers of Sherlock Holmes creator sell for half of what auction house expected." National Post (Canada), May 20, 2004: A15.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "A collection of long-lost papers giving a rare glimpse into the private life of Sherlock Holmes' creator, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, was sold at auction in London for almost (ps)1-million ($2.3- million) yesterday, about half of what had been estimated. The 3,000 letters, notes and manuscripts fetched (ps)948,546, auction house Christie's said....The auction has ignited a furor among politicians and Holmes enthusiasts, with some saying the collection should have been bequeathed to the nation rather than sold off piecemeal. It took place against the backdrop of the bizarre death of a leading Holmes expert...."

19. "Save those love letters!". Writer 117, no. 11 (2004): 10-10.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents information on personal papers and love letters owned by writers that were sold at several auctions. Love letter from James Joyce to his wife; Collection of personal papers of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle; Family photo album belonging to A. A. Milne.

20. "Sherlock Holmes collection sold." The Toronto Star, July 25, 1995: C7.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "American bidders pushed up prices yesterday at an auction of Sherlock Holmes memorabilia from the late British Holmes expert, Stanley MacKenzie, which sold for nearly $236,000 at Sotheby's. That figure was nearly double pre-auction estimates."

21. "Sherlock Holmes Creator Helps Unlock Home Rule Mystery." Belfast News Letter (Northern Ireland), May 21,

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

2004: 20.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Personal papers belonging to Sir Arthur Conan Doyle have given an insight into his views on Home Rule for Ireland. The letters, notes and manuscripts went under the hammer this week at Christie's, fetching pounds 1m. Doyle - famous as the creator of the world's most famous detective, Sherlock Holmes - stood twice for Parliament as a Unionist, the Conservative Party having changed its name after the first Home Rule Bill, endorsing tariff reform and supporting one parliament for the UK. By 1912, the year of the Ulster Covenant, he had a change of heart...."

22. "Sherlock Holmes items to be sold." The Gazette (Montreal), July 11, 1995: C7.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "One of the finest collections of Sherlock Holmes material ever offered for sale is expected to fetch $150,000 Canadian at auction in London this month, Sotheby's said yesterday. The July 24 auction will feature first editions, papers and memorabilia relating to one of the world's most famous fictional detectives and his creator, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. The collection was amassed by Stanley Mackenzie, a former custodian of London's Sherlock Holmes Society, who died this year. The items for sale include the pipe used by Peter Cushing in his film portrayal of the Victorian detective and a gold cigarette case inscribed, by Conan Doyle, 'Sherlock Holmes.'"

23. "A tangled skein." Economist 371, no. 8376 (2004): 77-78.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The author reports on a controversial auction of private papers of author Sir Arthur Conan Doyle at Christie's in London this week. The long unseen collection shows that Conan Doyle was not only one of the most popular writers of the 20th century--he has still outsold J.K. Rowling and J.R.R. Tolkien put together--but a public figure who took an active interest in politics and war, championed many private causes and gave GBP250,000 (millions in today's money) to further the interests of spiritualism. Befittingly, the auction has not been without controversy, not least thanks to the mysterious death of Richard Lancelyn Green, a former chairman of the Sherlock Holmes Society of London, who was found garrotted in his locked bedroom in March. There was not enough evidence for the coroner to rule it was suicide, but enough for believers in the "Conan Doyle curse" to suspect foul play worthy of Holmes's attention. Lancelyn Green believed that some of the papers in the auction had rightfully been left to the British Library, and he told the Times newspaper that he had written to Christie's asking them not to go ahead with the sale, which Christie's denies. Would-be Conan Doyle biographers, as well as the British Library, have expressed disappointment that the material in the auction has now been dispersed.

24. "Two pipes, a pile of earth." USA Today, July 12, 1995: 09A.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Two pipes, a pile of earth . . . and a cigarette case? What can it all mean? Elementary: one of the most comprehensive collections of Sherlock Holmesia is going on sale later this month, Sotheby's auction house announced. The collection, from the estate of Stanley MacKenzie, a senior member of the Sherlock Holmes Society, includes a rare edition of Beeton's 1887 Christmas Annual."

25. Alberge, Darya. "Holmes archive row ends in GBP2m bequest." The Times (London), August 6, 2004: 11.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The world's leading authority on Sherlock Holmes, who was found garrotted on his bed three months ago, has bequeathed his Pounds 2 million collection of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's papers to the nation. Richard Lancelyn Green was found dead at 50 after trying in vain to stop the sale of another Pounds 2 million collection of Doyle papers, some of which he felt should have been left to the British Library. An open verdict on his death was recorded. Mr Lancelyn Green left more than 20,000 Doyle manuscripts and memorabilia, amassed over more than 40 years, to Portsmouth, where Dr Conan Doyle had his medical practice and where he created his legendary detective...."

26. Bannerman, Lucy. "For sale: Sherlock Holmes rarity in the author's hand." The Times (London), June 6, 2008: 11.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The name of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle on a manuscript usually spreads feverish chequebook writing among book collectors. But the latest to come on the market will test the bank balance of even the most ardent fan. The complete manuscript of a Sherlock Holmes short story, written in Conan Doyle's elegant hand and bound for the author himself, will be one of the highlights of the Antiquarian Book Fair in London today, with a price tag of Pounds 250,000. The 28-page edition of The Disappearance of Lady Frances Carfax, written in 1911, is one of the few complete Sherlock Holmes stories to survive the squabbles, scandals and mysterious deaths that have cursed the Conan Doyle estate...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

27. Brocklebank, Jonathan. "What price Conan Doyle? An elementary GBP250,000." Daily Mail (London), June 7, 2008: 41.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The slim volume contains only 28 pages and the story told on them is far from the author's most celebrated. But the 97-year-old manuscript in Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's own meticulous hand went on sale yesterday for [pounds]250,000. The short story, The Disappearance of Lady Frances Carfax, is one of 56 Sherlock Holmes mysteries written by the Edinburgh-born author, but manuscripts in his handwriting are rare and highly prized. The tale comes a long way down the list of favourite Sherlock Holmes adventures but experts say the handwritten text with pencilled corrections gives a fascinating insight into the working methods of the prolific author. Conan Doyle had the volume bound for himself in 1911, although the story was not seen by the public until it was serialised in the pages of The Strand magazine. It was later published in a collection of Sherlock Holmes short stories entitled His Last Bow. The book went on sale at the Antiquarian Book Fair in London with a price tag of [pounds]250,000 - but vendor Alex Hime, from Beverly Hills, California, said he might be prepared to consider a small reduction to a good customer...."
28. Brown, Allan. "The curious case of old Conan Doyle." Sunday Times (London), August 22, 2004: 4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Observations on Doyle, Edinburgh, the fate of various Doyle papers, the Christie's auction, Richard Lancelyn Green, Owen Dudley Edwards, and Charles Foley.
29. Cameron, Lucinda. "Sherlock Holmes and Amazing Case of the Doctor Who Inspired Him; Conan Doyle Archive Material to Go on show for First Time." Daily Mail (London), April 17, 2006: 28.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses new exhibit in Edinburgh. "'A fantastically observant man', he was a doctor rather than a detective, though he did wear a deerstalker hat and cloak. Dr Joseph Bell even used a magnifying glass, although it is not clear whether he ever smoked a pipe. Now, fascinating archive material about to go on public display for the first time has revealed just how much of an inspiration he was for Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's famous detective...."
30. Cannon, Peter, and Jeff Zaleski. "Mystery Notes." Publishers Weekly 249, no. 12 (2002): 46.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a list of several mystery books. They Died in Vain: Overlooked, Underappreciated and Forgotten Mystery Novels, edited by Jim Huang; The Sir Arthur Conan Doyle Reader: From Sherlock Holmes to Spiritualism, edited by Jeffrey Meyers; Angels of Darkness: A Drama in Three Acts, by Arthur Conan Doyle.
31. Cornwell, Tim. "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Writer's Vanishing Treasures." The Scotsman, May 14, 2004: 7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Scotland's foremost expert on Sir Arthur Conan Doyle has launched a last-minute campaign to ensure that recently-discovered papers by the Sherlock Holmes author, which are due to be auctioned by Christie's, are saved for the British nation. Owen Dudley Edwards, a historian at Edinburgh University and editor of The Oxford Sherlock Holmes, is calling on the government to step in to ensure that a key part of the Edinburgh-born author's legacy is saved for researchers and the public. 'When this sale was announced there was tremendous surprise and anger,' he said. 'I am thinking about posterity - for the next 100 to 200 years.' The Edinburgh South MP, Nigel Griffiths, has taken up Professor Edwards' cause, calling on Estelle Morris, the UK culture minister, to block the auction and explore ways of saving the Doyle archive...."
32. Cowan, James. "Conan Doyle saw greatness in Canada: Toronto library acquires collection of author's notes during visits here." National Post (Canada), November 18, 2004: A9.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Sir Arthur Conan Doyle loved Canada -- its landscape, its government, its literature. The creator of Sherlock Holmes came to North America three times between 1894 and 1922, travelling for different reasons but almost exclusively by private rail car. In 1914, he was headed to the National Reserve in Jasper, Alta., as an invited guest of the Canadian government. He stopped at Canadian Clubs along the way -- in Winnipeg, Fort William, Ont., and Hamilton, among other cities -- delivering speeches on literature....Doyle's speaking notes were among the items acquired last spring by the Toronto Public Library at an auction at Christie's in London and directly from the Doyle estate. Toronto has the only public library collection in the world dedicated to Arthur Conan Doyle, contained in a wood-panelled room on the fifth floor of the Toronto Reference Library...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

33. Duncan, Raymond. "Lost papers of Conan Doyle sell for GBP 1m." The Herald (Glasgow), May 20, 2004: 10.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Long-lost papers providing a compelling insight into the private life of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, the Scots-born creator of Sherlock Holmes, have been sold at auction for just under (pounds) 1m. The 3000 personal letters, notes and manuscripts, missing for 40 years, had been expected to fetch around double that figure, but Christie's in London said last night that 104 of the 135 lots were sold, fetching a total of (pounds) 948,546...."
34. Fisher, Benjamin Franklin. "The Poets of the Nineties." Victorian Poetry 40, no. 3 (2002): 328-332.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes reference to Doyle and Holmes. "Several recent books merit attention as important contributions to 1890s studies....Two books that might not immediately suggest '1890s,' but that nevertheless relate to our concerns, merit notice in the anniversary year of the primary text, Conan Doyle's The Hound of the Baskervilles, one of the most poetic pieces of fiction during the era, and certainly his most poetic piece of prose. First, a new edition, edited and annotated by Leslie S. Klinger (Gasogene Books), a title in the 'Sherlock Holmes Reference Library' series, offers a useful text of the novel, with explanations for variant readings (most from published texts, as only a small part of Doyle's novel survives in manuscript form), with helpful explanatory notes and an extensive, equally valuable, bibliography of secondary works. Despite the admittedly zany nature of some of the secondary items, sufficient meat and potatoes for the more serious make this a book not to be overlooked by students of the era. Dovetail reading appears in The Hound of the Baskervilles, Chapter XI (Baker Street Irregulars in cooperation with the New York Public Library--Berg Collection [2001]), which offers a facsimile of the one entire chapter extant in manuscript form, along with essays by eminent Doyle scholars concerning the nature of the novel. Reiterated comments about the importance of sense of place and landscape reveal just how linked The Hound is to other Nineties texts, such as Housman's, and how poetic is its technique, with, for example, Watson as 'chorus' (p. 68). One critic also compares this revival of legend and myth (Victorian poets' repeated practices), folk hero (Holmes) and all, to Beowulf (pp. 64-65)."
35. Green, Richard Lancelyn. "The Manuscript of 'Shoscombe Old Place'." Canadian Holmes 30, no. 4 (2007): 5-9.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
36. Grimston, Jack. "Conan Doyle hidden archive could fetch E2.9m at auction." Sunday Times (London), March 14, 2004: 13.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "A campaign by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, author of the Sherlock Holmes stories, to have British soldiers in the first world war issued with body armour has been revealed in a long-unseen collection of his papers that has turned up on the London auction market. Inspired by his own medieval tales, Conan Doyle, who had been a medic in the Boer war, believed armour would reduce the slaughter on the western front. He sent letters on the subject to David Lloyd George, the prime minister, and Sir Douglas Haig, the commander-in- chief. The 3,000 items in the archive, to be sold by Christie's in May, include written exchanges between Conan Doyle and his family and notebooks for many of his works. One is a sketch for A Study in Scarlet, the first Holmes story, which is expected to fetch between Pounds 100,000 and Pounds 150,000 (E146,000 and E220,000). There are also letters from famous figures such as Rudyard Kipling, Oscar Wilde, Theodore Roosevelt and Winston Churchill. The collection is valued at about Pounds 2m (E2.953m). Jane Flower, manuscripts consultant at Christie's, said it was the best archive she had seen at auction in 30 years. But the collection, which is being sold by distant relatives of the author, is likely to be broken up, with much of it going abroad...."
37. Harris, Christopher. "Arts Ink: Memorabilia Holmesiana for sale." The Globe and Mail (Toronto), July 13, 1995: C1.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "What Sotheby's is calling one of the finest collections of Sherlock Holmes memorabilia ever offered for sale is expected to fetch about L70,000 (roughly $145,000) when it goes on the block in London on July 24. The collection, amassed by a former custodian of the Sherlock Holmes Society, includes papers, first editions and other materials relating to the legendary fictional detective and his creator,

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Sir Arthur Conan Doyle...."

38. Harvey, A. D. "Texts by twentieth-century novelists in the public record office." Notes & Queries 46, no. 4 (1999): 493.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Lists non-fiction unpublished texts by British novelists which are being preserved among the official files of the Public Record Office at Kew, England. Includes 'Memorandum on British interests in Romania,' by John Buchan; 'An Investigation into the Effects of Dust Inhalation in Haematite Mines,' by A.J. Cronin; A memo on spiritualists written by Arthur Conan Doyle for James Ramsay MacDonald.
39. Jury, Louise. "Conan Doyle's Manuscripts Reveal a Meticulous Chronicler." The Independent (London), December 2, 2004: 22.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Recently acquired papers and manuscripts belonging to Sherlock Holmes's creator, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, reveal him to be a meticulous chronicler of the minutiae of his life. He detailed seances he attended, the books he read, the cricket matches he played in (including bowling out W G Grace), the number of words he wrote and what he was paid in a series of notebooks which are part of a treasure trove of more than 2,000 documents obtained by the British Library this year...."
40. Kennedy, Maev. "Flipside of Conan Doyle: Auction of romantic manuscripts from Sherlock Holmes creator." The Guardian (London), October 17, 2003: 12.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...A collection of Conan Doyle manuscripts, which have remained in his family for the past century, is to be auctioned at Christie's in London in aid of a number of charities. It includes the original manuscript of the book he insisted should have a print run of 15,000 copies, against the judgment of his publishers. A Duet with an Occasional Chorus, which appeared in 1889, was not what fans of A Study in Scarlet or The Sign of the Four expected...."
41. Klinger, Leslie S. "A Study in Manuscripts." Canadian Holmes 30, no. 3 (2007): 15-31.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
42. Lyall, Sarah. "A new case worthy of Sherlock himself." International Herald Tribune, May 19, 2004: 1.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "For 25 years the cardboard boxes, 15 of them, sat in a corner of a London solicitor's office, gathering dust while lawyers argued about who they belonged to and scholars dreamed about what was inside. But the auction on Wednesday of their contents 3,000 letters, manuscripts, papers and other items belonging to Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, the creator of Sherlock Holmes has provoked another angry fight and a mystery almost worthy of Holmes himself. The Conan Doyle archive, which includes the author's unpublished first novel, a rich cache of family letters and handwritten literary notebooks full of research and musings about works in progress, is expected to fetch about 11 million, according to Christie's, which is handling the sale. But even as the auction house plays host to excited Conan Doyle collectors, it has been criticized by some scholars and members of Parliament for allowing the sale to go ahead when, they say, several important legal questions remain unresolved...."
43. ———. "A Tussle Over a Cache of Conan Doyle's Artifacts Ends With an Auction." New York Times, May 19, 2004: E.1.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Similar to her article in the International Herald Tribune. "...The unavailability of the material has frustrated and tantalized Conan Doyle scholars for years. A 1949 biography by the American mystery writer John Dickson Carr drew on the papers and included a list without going into detail about their contents, and a French biographer read them in the 1960's, but no researchers have been allowed to see them since. 'Having access to these papers will really open things up,' Miss Cooke said. But like some other Conan Doyle scholars, she is troubled by the sale, she said. There is the fear that the collection would be broken up and sold to anonymous collectors uninterested in making them available to academics. And there is a concern about the murky disposition of what remains of Conan Doyle's prodigious estate...."
44. MacDonald, Marianne. "Sherlock Holmes fan wins his case in US golf case." The Independent (London), July 25, 1995: 6.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "One of the world's most important collections of Sherlock Holmes memorabilia sold for almost pounds 150,000 at Sotheby's yesterday, but confirmed fears that many of the best items would go abroad. The books, posters, pipes and magazines had been amassed by Stanley MacKenzie, an expert "Sherlockian". His wife put up the collection for auction after his death aged 82 in February. It was the most significant sale of Holmes memorabilia for 15 years and attended by fans and experts from across the world. Many smaller collectors were dismayed by the prices many of the books, magazines and posters fetched. In many cases these were double the estimate, but sometimes more...."

45. Petkus, Donald A. "Lone Star Treasures: ACD Manuscripts and Materials at the University of Texas-Austin." Baker Street West 1 10, no. 1 (2004): 13-14.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

46. Pogrebin, Robin. "When Sherlock Got His Quirks." The New York Times, December 3, 1996: C13.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "It was a late summer evening in 1889 when Sir Arthur Conan Doyle sat down to dinner at the Langham Hotel in London with an American publishing agent who had come to commission new works of fiction for Lippincott's monthly magazine. Oscar Wilde was also at the table, and the young writers engaged in mutual flattery. They also discussed such topics as future wars and what Doyle later called 'the cynical maxim that the good fortune of our friends made us discontented.' By the end of the meal, the publishing agent, J. M. Stoddart, had tacked down what he had traveled all the way from Philadelphia for: commitments from Doyle and Wilde that each would write a short novel for Lippincott's. As a result, Wilde produced 'The Picture of Dorian Gray' and Doyle the second appearance of Sherlock Holmes and Dr. John Watson, in 'The Sign of Four.' Doyle's handwritten final draft of that story, the oldest surviving complete Sherlock Holmes manuscript, will be auctioned tomorrow at Sotheby's for an anonymous seller. It is expected to bring $250,000 to $350,000...."
47. Shaw, John. "Last chapter in strange case of the literary detective." The Times (London), July 11, 1995: 1.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "A fascination with Sherlock Holmes, which turned a schoolboy into a literary detective, will lead to a Pounds 70,000 book sale in London this month. Stanley MacKenzie became a world authority on Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's fictional detective and his collection of first editions, reference books and papers is regarded as the finest in Europe. As an honorary member of the Sherlock Holmes Society of London, Mr MacKenzie, who lived in west London and died aged 82 earlier this year, had been consulted frequently by playwrights and film-makers. The material he collected will now be sold at Sotheby's on July 24...."
48. Smith, Lewis. "'Curse of Conan Doyle' strikes Holmes expert in Pounds 2m challenge." The Times (London), Apr 13, 2004: 8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The body of Richard Lancelyn Green was discovered when police broke into his home in Kensington, London. He was one of the foremost authorities on Conan Doyle and had concerns about the eventual destination of a Pounds 2 million collection of the author's papers that he felt should go to the British Library but which are instead due for auction...."
49. ———. "The mysterious death of the Conan Doyle expert." The Ottawa Citizen, Apr 24, 2004: A.12.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The world's foremost authority on the fictional detective Sherlock Holmes was found strangled on his bed after trying to stop a $5-million auction of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle papers. In a mystery that would have had [Holmes] reaching for his violin, Richard Lancelyn Green was discovered in his locked millionaire's apartment surrounded by his own Conan Doyle collection...."
50. ———. "Puzzle of Holmes expert's death by garotte unsolved." The Times (London), Apr 24, 2004: 7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The world's foremost authority on the fictional detective Sherlock Holmes was found garotted on his bed after trying to stop a Pounds 2 million auction of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle papers....'There was to be a sale of certain books and documents belonging to the late Sir Arthur Conan Doyle,' Dr [Paul Knapman] said. 'There's no doubt Mr Green thought it shouldn't go ahead. He was very anxious these documents should go to the British Library. I'm going to record an open verdict but in doing so I would not wish to stress the importance of any conspiracy theories.'..."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

51. Stock, Randall. "Perfect Reproductions: Some Notes on Canonical Manuscripts." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 53, no. 2 (2003): 46-48.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
52. Travis, Alan. "G-men rallied to aid Sherlock Holmes : Scotland Yard turned to FBI to find Conan Doyle collection." The Guardian (London), February 15, 2001: 8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "J. Edgar Hoover called in his special network of 'G-men' when Scotland Yard turned to the FBI for help in solving the case of the disappearance of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's crime library from his house at Crowborough in Sussex. The Metropolitan police case file released yesterday at the public record office shows that Conan Doyle's two sons and heirs, Denis and Adrian, appealed for Scotland Yard's help in 1945 when an American magazine led them to suspect that the collection of real crime stories their father had used to create the plots and character of Sherlock Holmes stories had been stolen...."
53. Watson, Peter. "For Sale all the Evidence of a Great Detective." The Guardian (London), June 11, 1995: 6.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Baker Street Irregulars will this week be invited to one of the greatest gatherings Sherlock Holmes buffs have known. The jamboree is not at 221B Baker Street, mythical home of the great pipe-smoking detective, but round the corner in Bond Street, where the world's largest and most important collection of Conan Doyle and Sherlock Holmes memorabilia is about to go under the hammer at Sotheby's. The collection of Stanley MacKenzie, actor and deputy stage manager of the Royal Shakespeare Company -- who died in February, aged 82 -- probably contains not just everything Arthur Conan Doyle wrote on Holmes, but everything written about Holmes, together with memorabilia from every play, film and TV adaptation...."
54. ———. "Sherlock Holmes collection on London auction block." The Ottawa Citizen, June 15, 1995: F16.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Baker Street Irregulars will this week receive invitations to one of the greatest gatherings Sherlock Holmes buffs have known. The jamboree is not at 221B Baker Street, mythical home of the great pipe-smoking detective, but round the corner in Bond Street, where the world's largest and most important collection of Conan Doyle and Sherlock Holmes memorabilia is about to go under the hammer at Sotheby's. The collection of Stanley MacKenzie, actor and deputy stage manager of the Royal Shakespeare Company -- who died in February, aged 82 -- probably contains not just everything Arthur Conan Doyle wrote on Holmes, but everything written about Holmes, together with memorabilia from every play, film and television adaptation...."
55. Woods, Audrey. "Conan Doyle's archive wrapped up in mystery; Author's 'lost' papers on display before sale Auction follows bizarre death of Holmes scholar." Toronto Star, May 15, 2004: A.08.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Family and friends said [Richard Lancelyn Green] had become fixated on the Conan Doyle archive, believing it should be available to students and scholars, not sold and dispersed. 'He might have been in the prime position to write the definitive biography of Conan Doyle,' said his friend, Nicholas Utechin, editor of The Sherlock Holmes Journal. At Christie's, [Tom Lamb] said the auction house had consulted Lancelyn Green - co-author of an important bibliography of Conan Doyle - as an expert and 'he was very happy to help us.' In fact, eight of the photographs that illustrate the sale catalogue are 'by courtesy of Richard Lancelyn Green.' The auctioneer expects the sale will earn about $3.5 million (U.S.) for the beneficiaries of the author's daughter-in-law, Anna Conan Doyle. In the 1940s and 1960s, two Conan Doyle scholars had access to the papers, but after the death in 1970 of the author's son Adrian, court battles broke out over the estate, and the collection was locked up in a lawyer's office for about 25 years."
56. ———. "Mystery Attends Conan Doyle Auction; Sale Follows Strange Death of Sherlock Holmes Scholar." St. Louis Post-Dispatch (St. Louis, MO), May 16, 2004: A.15.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Sherlock Holmes enthusiasts got a rare glimpse into the private world of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle as thousands of personal papers - from his passport to his jotted-down story ideas - went on display Friday. At the same time, the archive has become entwined in a mystery worthy of Conan Doyle's celebrated fictional detective: the bizarre death of a Holmes scholar. The papers are to be auctioned Wednesday, perhaps to disappear again into the obscurity of private ownership, a fate that had obsessed Richard Lancelyn Green, a former chairman of the Sherlock Holmes Society of London...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

57. Wordsworth, Araminta. "Conan Doyle auction opens amid mystery: Sherlock Holmes expert who opposed sale found dead." National Post, May 18, 2004: A.3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "A treasure-trove of material on the life and works of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle is to be auctioned off at Christie's in London tomorrow against the backdrop of a mysterious death that might have fascinated the man who created Sherlock Holmes. Mr. [Richard Lancelyn Green], a former chairman of the Sherlock Holmes Society and author of a biography of Conan Doyle, was discovered dead in his bed on March 27. He was surrounded by fluffy toys . Nearby was a bottle of gin. Friends and relatives of Mr. Lancelyn Green said the biographer was upset that the Conan Doyle papers were going to be sold off at auction piecemeal. He wanted them to be given to the British Library so they could be used by scholars, rather than disappear into private hands."

04 FOREIGN LANGUAGE EDITIONS AND OTHER WORKS (1)

58. Hobbs, Don. "Some Insight non-English Translations of Sherlock Holmes." Shoso-In Bulletin 11, no. (2001): 90-103.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

04 FOREIGN LANGUAGE EDITIONS AND OTHER WORKS -- CHINESE (4)

59. "Two Chinese Prefaces of the Canon." Shoso-In Bulletin 7, no. (1997): 7-11.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Translated by Margarline Lau.
60. Cheng, Henry P. "Chinese Articles on Sherlock Holmes." Shoso-In Bulletin 14, no. (2004): 50-52.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
61. Hirayama, Yuichi. "Chinese Works in the History of Sherlockian Pastiches." Shoso-In Bulletin 11, no. (2001): 104-108.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
62. Tarumoto, Teruo. "A Mistranslation of the title of a Chinese edition of the Canon." Shoso-In Bulletin 11, no. (2001): 11-18.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

04 FOREIGN LANGUAGE EDITIONS AND OTHER WORKS -- FRENCH (1)

63. "50 Years Ago: "We may need an interpreter."." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 2, no. 1 (1998): 5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Notes French, German, and Spanish titles from the Holmes Collections, especially La casa vacia (The Empty House) purchased by Dr. Philip Hench in 1961.

04 FOREIGN LANGUAGE EDITIONS AND OTHER WORKS -- GERMAN (6)

64. "50 Years Ago: "We may need an interpreter."." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 2, no. 1 (1998): 5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Notes French, German, and Spanish titles from the Holmes Collections, especially La casa vacia (The Empty House) purchased by Dr. Philip Hench in 1961.
65. Hobbs, Don. "Review (as Dugan Hobbenstein)--Die Schale des Zodiakus by D. O. Smith." The Holmes & Watson Report 2, no. 5 (1998): 15.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
66. Przybilka, Thomas. "Book Review (Die Schale des Zokiakus)." Shoso-In Bulletin 7, no. (1997): 193.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

67. ———. "Book Review (Sherlock Holmes in Film und Fernsehen: Ein Handbuch)." Shoso-In Bulletin 14, no. (2004): 149.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

68. ———. "Book Review (Sherlock Holmes und die Schrecken von Sumatra)." Shoso-In Bulletin 8, no. (1998): 237-238.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

69. ———. "Lexikon der Kriminalliteratur (LKL) and Sherlock Holmes." Shoso-In Bulletin 7, no. (1997): 58-60.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

04 FOREIGN LANGUAGE EDITIONS AND OTHER WORKS -- ITALIAN (1)

70. Weller, Philip. "Book Review (La Maledizione dei Baskervilles by G. Mazzoni)." Shoso-In Bulletin 13, no. (2003): 158.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

04 FOREIGN LANGUAGE EDITIONS AND OTHER WORKS -- JAPANESE (2)

71. Flutsch, Maria. "Book Reviews." Asian Studies Review 31, no. 4 (2007): 471-497.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews several books including one by Okamoto Kidô. The Curious Casebook of Inspector Hanshichi: Detective Stories of Old Edo (trans. Ian MacDonald). Honolulu: University of Hawai'i Press. Introduction. xxiv, 335 pp. US$50.00, hardcover; US$24.00, paper. Includes multiple references to Doyle and Holmes. "...The fascination of these stories lies in the 70-year time-overlap of the writing (second and third decades of the twentieth century) and the setting (mid-nineteenth century Edo): they are modern, beautifully crafted short stories about the activities of the Edo detective, Inspector Hanshichi. Unlike Sherlock Holmes, on which Okamoto himself indicates that these stories are based, Hanshichi does not have science or technology to work with....'

72. Yamamae, Yuzuru. "A Brief History and Current Scene of Mystery Novels in Japan...and Sherlock Holmes." Shoso-In Bulletin 8, no. (1998): 170-172.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

04 FOREIGN LANGUAGE EDITIONS AND OTHER WORKS -- KOREAN (1)

73. "Korean Holmes: The Failures of Sherlock Holmes (and of Canadian Holmes readers?)." Canadian Holmes 17, no. 3 (1994): 4.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a challenge to readers to identify certain Holmes stories contained in a Korean edition.

04 FOREIGN LANGUAGE EDITIONS AND OTHER WORKS -- RUSSIAN (2)

74. Korolenko, Oksana. "Russian Translations of Sherlockiana." Shoso-In Bulletin 11, no. (2001): 164-203.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

75. Orlov, Alexander. "Book Review (Bibliographic Information About a Russian Publication of Sherlock Holmes Stories)." Shoso-In Bulletin 11, no. (2001): 220-221.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

04 FOREIGN LANGUAGE EDITIONS AND OTHER WORKS -- SHORTHAND (1)

76. "100 Years Ago." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 2, no. 3 (1998): 2.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Highlights the 1898 publication of "The Sign of the Four" in Pitman's shorthand.

04 FOREIGN LANGUAGE EDITIONS AND OTHER WORKS -- SPANISH (6)

77. "50 Years Ago: "We may need an interpreter."." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 2, no. 1 (1998): 5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Notes French, German, and Spanish titles from the Holmes Collections, especially La casa vacia (The Empty House) purchased by Dr. Philip Hench in 1961.
78. "What the world is reading." Economist, no. (1996): 4/5p.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Looks at lists of bestselling books in Mexico and Brazil, with Holmes reference.
"O Xango de Baker Street by Jo Soares transplants Sherlock Holmes to fin-de-siecle Rio de Janeiro in a comic detective tale."
79. Schon, Isabel. "Books in Spanish published in the U.S." Booklist 92, no. 9/10 (1996): 852.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Lists several books in Spanish published in the United States. Includes 'Santa Balbina, 37, gas en cada piso,' by Camilo Jose Cela; 'La dama del perrito y otros relatos,' by Anton Chejov; 'El tren especial desaparecido y otros relatos,' by Arthur Conan Doyle.
80. ———. "Enticing Spanish-speaking adolescents: Recent books in Spanish for every taste." Journal of Adolescent & Adult Literacy 43, no. 2 (1999): 126.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews several Spanish books for adolescents. Includes Monreal, Sergio J. La sombra de Pan (Pan's Shadow). Mexico City: SM de Ediciones. 1997. 109 pp. ISBN 968-7791-16-0. Softcover. US$8.95. Gr. 8-12. "The famous detective Sherlock Holmes and his faithful friend Dr. Watson are approached by an old friend to investigate the mysterious happenings in Glastonbury, where a murder apparently was caused by the supernatural. Set in England and borrowing Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's well-known characters, this fast-paced mystery will appeal to adolescents in search of a fast read. Holmes's observation abilities and analytical mind triumph over ignorance and deceit." Doyle, Sir Arthur Conan. El valle del terror (The Valley of Fear). Illustrated by Frank Wiles. Translated by Juan Manuel Ibeas. 218 pp. ISBN 84-207-8450-8. "Wonderful Spanish renditions of three classic British novels of the 19th century that have definitely maintained their drama and excitement. Based on the original British editions, these Spanish versions include the complete texts, appropriate black-and-white illustrations that will certainly appeal to adolescents, and well-done appendixes highlighting the times, the author, and the work. These are indeed the perfect introductions for Spanish-speaking adolescents to Bronte's well-known romantic novel Wuthering Heights, Doyle's popular mystery The Valley of Fear, and Stevenson's celebrated mystery and adventure novel, The Master of Ballantrae."
81. ———. "Recommended YA books in Spanish." Journal of Adolescent & Adult Literacy 40, no. 7 (1997): 590.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a review of several young adult books in Spanish language. Includes Breve antologia de cuentos policiales/Brief Anthology of Police Short Stories. 1995. Buenos Aires: Editorial Sudamericana. 229 pp. ISBN 950-07-1006-4. Soft-cover. US$9.95. Grades 8-12. "This volume is a well-selected collection of 10 short mysteries by some of the world's best writers: Edgar Allan Poe, Arthur Conan Doyle, Conrado Nale Roxlo, Manuel Peyrou, Rodolfo Walsh, Ernest Hemingway, Raymond Chandler, Julio Cortazar, Jorge Luis Borges, and Rubem Fonseca. The stories, which vary in length from 2 pages to 42 pages, include a one-page author biography, a glossary, and a brief notes section. The fast pace and the smooth Spanish renditions of these stories, which tell about horrendous crimes, impossible delays, former friends,

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

murderers, and others, are sure to appeal to lovers of this genre."

82. Soares, Jo. "De donde viene la caipirinha." Americas 60, no. 6 (2008): 64-64.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A short piece featuring Holmes and Watson, in Spanish.

04 FOREIGN LANGUAGE EDITIONS AND OTHER WORKS -- YIDDISH (1)

83. "Sherlock Holmes in many languages." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 2, no. 1 (1998): 1-3, 5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Profile of Fred Levin's interest in Yiddish language versions of the Sherlock Holmes stories. Includes photograph of Bruce Southworth, Fred Levin, and Dr. Richard Sveum.

05A SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE (199)

84. "100 Years Ago: "The Press....is a most valuable institution"." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 1, no. 2 (1997): 2.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reprint of a letter written by Doyle to The Times, October 20, 1897 from Morley's Hotel, Trafalgar Square, London, WC
85. "100 Years Ago: "To Ada, from her old friend Arthur Conan Doyle, Jan. 18, '97"." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 1, no. 3 (1997): 2.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses a photograph taken of Doyle in New York, during his 1894 tour of the United States and Canada and the mysteries associated with the inscription on the back of the photograph. Includes a reproduction of the photograph and inscription.
86. "100 Years Ago: Ada and the Napoleon of Photography." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 1, no. 4 (1997): 2.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A follow-up article on the mysteries presented in an inscription on the back side of a photograph taken of Doyle in New York. The photographer is identified as Napoleon Sarony, known for his photographs of celebrities in the late 19th century. The identity of the "Ada" of the inscription is still unknown, Ada Waller and Ada Pasby being the most likely candidates.
87. "Books Received." SEL Studies in English Literature 1500-1900 43, no. 4 (2003): 998-1017.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes reference to Doyle. Wynne, Catherine. The Colonial Conan Doyle: British Imperialism, Irish Nationalism, and the Gothic. Contributions to the Study of World Literature 114. Westport CT and London: Greenwood Press, 2002. Pp. ix + 212. $61.95. ISBN 0-313-32005-5.
88. "Books Received." SEL Studies in English Literature 1500-1900 41, no. 4 (2001): 880-898.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes reference to Doyle. Barsham, Diana. Arthur Conan Doyle and the Meaning of Masculinity. The Nineteenth Century. Aldershot and Burlington VT: Ashgate, 2000. Pp. viii + 312. $84.95. ISBN 1-85928-264-4.
89. "The Case of Doyle's Lost Works is Finally Solved." Birmingham Post, March 17, 2004: 8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "A lost hoard of personal papers belonging to Sherlock Holmes creator Sir Arthur Conan Doyle has been discovered in the offices of a legal firm in London. The collection of 3,000 items, which went missing 40 years ago during a legal dispute over his estate, includes personal letters, notes and hand-written manuscripts -80 per cent of which have never been published. The collection will go on display in May before being auctioned by Christie's for an estimated pounds 2 million...."
90. "A Chat With Conan Doyle." The Ritual, no. 18 (1996): 51-59.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

91. "Conan the Librarian." New Zealand Archivists 15, no. 2 (2004): 17-18.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article presents information on Sir Arthur Conan Doyle a writer. A fascinating account of the story of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's personal archives is related in the Weekend Australian Magazine for 17-18 April 2004. The author, Philip Norman, recounts how the whereabouts of Conan Doyle's papers had been a mystery, but that the papers had now come to light and were to be auctioned on 19 May 2004 at Christie's in London.

92. "Did Conan Doyle play Dr Watson, on the case with a real Sherlock Holmes?." Daily Mail (London), January 3, 2000: 27.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Shortly before the black flag above the jail let the crowds swarming over Calton Hill know justice had been done, the condemned man made a remarkable request. Turning to Dr Henry Littlejohn, Edinburgh's chief medical officer who had come to witness the hanging, wife murderer Eugene Chantrelle said coolly: 'Give my compliments to Joe Bell. He did a good job in bringing me to the scaffold.' In 1878 the remark was widely reported, yet it remains a mystery. Joseph Bell was an eminent Victorian surgeon at Edinburgh's Royal Infirmary, who would amuse medical students by deducing the occupation of his patients from small clues in their appearance. This habit would later inspire a certain student called Arthur Conan Doyle to create the world's most famous detective in Sherlock Holmes. But could there have been more to it than that? Chantrelle's remark suggests Bell solved the murder, not those who took credit at the trial for proving the womanising alcoholic had disposed of his wife with a large dose of opium. If Bell was a real-life Sherlock Holmes, solving crimes that baffled the police, who was the real Doctor Watson who assisted in his secret detective work? The creator of a new BBC drama claims the model for Watson was Doyle himself, and that he and Bell were actively involved in solving crimes. In uncovering the evidence, screen writer David Pirie had to wrestle with mysteries that would have taxed even Holmes. Bell and Doyle were very private men and would in any case have been sworn to secrecy if they did special detective work for the Crown Office...."

93. "English-Language Literatures." Reference & Research Book News 22, no. 2 (2007): 253-260.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A list of items related to English language literatures that were published in several journals is presented. Includes some articles with reference to Doyle and Holmes including: The narcissism of empire; loss, rage, and revenge in Thomas De Quincey, Robert Louis Stevenson, Arthur Conan Doyle, Rudyard Kipling, and Isak Dinesen. Simmons, Diane. Sussex Academic Press, ©2007 148 p., $57.50. "The five Victorian writers were instrumental in popularizing the imperial agenda of power and dominance, says Simmons (English, City U. of New York-Manhattan Community College), but were themselves deeply scarred, and as adults bolstered their fragile emotional states through fantasies of empire. She looks not only as the youthful experiences of the writers themselves, but also at child rearing attitudes during the British imperial period. Distributed in the US by ISBS." Modernist literature; challenging fictions. Mahaffey, Vicki. Blackwell Publishing, ©2007 242 p. $74.95 "Mahaffey (modern literature, U. of York) dares reader's to think of modern fiction not only as challenging to read but as a challenge to the fictions by which they live. She confronts a range of authors, from Doyle to Joyce, Woolf, Eliot, Djuna Barnes, Wilde and Rhys to explore modern occupations in partnering, whether as Holmes and Watson, author and reader, lover and loved, or husband and wife, in opacity and the uncontrollable urge to block understanding, and in those dark reaches within the reader's soul that are in fact the most opaque features of all. Combining commentary on literary works with that on art, gender, and society's restless for meaning after the decline of the need to be understood, Mahaffey provides a far-seeking and challenging read for those who nevertheless must be further challenged by the work in hand." Heidegger's bicycle; interfering with Victorian texts. Ebbatson, Roger. (Critical inventions) Sussex Academic Press, ©2006 172 p. $67.50 "Ebbatson (Loughborough U.) juxtaposes German philosopher Heidegger's notion of existence as a practical investment in the world that allows things to show up--among them a bicycle too rickety to ride--with the murder of a cycling German teacher named Herr Heidegger in the Sherlock Holmes canon. In each, he argues, the echo or mask is broken or cut adrift so that, for example, Holmes' forensic skill on an English moorside foreshadows the evil of the Final Solution so beloved by Heidegger a half century later. Distributed in the US by ISBS."

94. "Expensive, My Dear Watson. Sherlock Holmes Fans Gathered at an Auction in London." The Philadelphia Inquirer, July 25, 1995: E06.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "A private collector from Chicago paid $33,000 yesterday for the 1887 edition of an annual Christmas publication that printed the first Sherlock Holmes story. The story, 'A Study in Scarlet,' was written by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle in 1886 when he was a physician making little or no money. The publishers of Beeton's Christmas Annual paid $40 for the copyright after it was rejected by several other houses. The book was part of a collection of memorabilia relating to the world-famous fictional detective. The collection was amassed by Stanley MacKenzie, who died this year aged 82. It fetched a total of $235,600, a representative of the Sotheby's auction house said...."

95. "Global Reach." American Libraries 36, no. 3 (2005): 22-22.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents updates on libraries as of March 2005. Under the entry for Scotland, notes "Thanks in part to a GBP7.7-million ($33.2 million) grant from the Heritage Lottery Fund, the National Library in Edinburgh has purchased the literary archives of the John Murray publishing house, founded in London in 1768. Hailed as the most historically significant literary archive to become available in the past 100 years, the collection contains some 150,000 letters by such authors as Lord Byron. Charles Darwin, Jane Austen. Benjamin Disraeli, Arthur Conan Doyle, and Edith Wharton."

96. "Global Reach." American Libraries 35, no. 8 (2004): 23-23.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents world news briefs on libraries as of September 2004. "What may be the world's largest collection of Arthur Conan Doyle memorabilia was donated August 6 to the Portsmouth Library' by the estate of writer Richard Lancelyn Green. The collection includes a full-size recreation of Sherlock Holmes's Baker Street study, and first editions of all Conan Doyle's works."

97. "A Man of Many Mysteries." Wall Street Journal - Eastern Edition, 09/20/, 2000: A24.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the accusations of writer Rodger Garrick-Steele that novelist Sir Arthur Conan Doyle stole the idea for the 1901 Sherlock Holmes novel 'The Hound of the Baskervilles' from his friend Bertram Fletcher Robinson. Reaction from the Sherlock Holmes Society.

98. "Milngavie to Nowhere." The Herald (Glasgow), July 31, 2007: 10.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The good burghers of Milngavie, to the north-west of Glasgow, were given a glimpse of the future in July 1930, when George Bennie unveiled a full-size working prototype of his innovative Railplane....Bennie's prototype, which was built above a railway sidings on the London and North-Eastern Railway Company line at Kilmardinny, ran for around a quarter of a mile. The overhead monorail track was constructed by The Teeside Bridge and Engineering Works, and the aluminium-sheathed carriage was built by William Beardmore of Dalmeir....In the same month that the Bennie Railplane entered public life, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, creator of Sherlock Holmes and Dr Watson, exited. Sir Arthur, who was born in Edinburgh in 1859, died at his home near Crowborough, Sussex, on July 7, 1930. Doyle, who trained as a doctor at Edinburgh University, worked as a ship's surgeon before beginning general practice in Portsmouth, where he began writing the Sherlock Holmes stories. The first of these, A Study in Scarlet, brought the impecunious young medic L20. The Herald's obituary, published on July 8, 1930, summed up his career as a writer: 'None of Conan Doyle's work was literature of the first class, and he was never taken very seriously by the critics; but in Sherlock Holmes he created a genuine character and produced a genuine atmosphere.'"

99. "Modern Fiction Studies Biannual Index: Volumes 48 (2002) and 49 (2003)." MFS Modern Fiction Studies 50, no. 2 (2004): 542-549.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a reference to Doyle. Huh, Jinny. "Whispers of Norbury: Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and the Modernist Crisis of Racial (Un)Detection." 49.3: 550-80.

100. "Mystery of Sherlock Holmes' missing papers." The Irish Times, March 20, 2004: 20.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Forty years after their disappearance, the lost personal papers of the author of Sherlock Holmes, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, have been found in London. They will be put up for auction by Christie's in May of this year and are sure to generate interest from his fans worldwide. They are expected to make about (pounds) 2 million. The collection consists of the contents of Sir Arthur's writing desk at the time of his death, personal letters to his family, handwritten manuscripts (the bulk of which were never published) and various memorabilia relating to his life. The collection, which was lost in a lawyer's office in London,

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

caused great excitement in Christie's Books and Manuscripts Department when it had the job of opening the dozen or so cardboard boxes which contained it. Many of these papers were listed in the 1949 biography of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle by Dickson Carr but they were lost fairly soon afterwards and as a result, have been unavailable to contemporary researchers...."

101. "A new home for Sherlock Holmes." Daily Mail (London), August 6, 2004: 19.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "A collection of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle memorabilia, including a hint of how Sherlock Holmes got his name, is moving. Writer Richard Lancelyn Green, who died in March, has left the 20,000 items, worth more than Pounds 2million, to Portsmouth library...."
102. "Newsbrief: Sherlock's home." The Independent (London), May 19, 1994: no page citation.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "A plaque commemorating the creator of Sherlock Holmes, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle is to be unveiled this month by his daughter, Lady Bromet, at 2 Upper Wimpole Street, where her father wrote several books, including 'A Scandal in Bohemia' and 'The Red Headed League'."
103. "On the literary front." TLS, no. (2005): 12-13.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents commentary on the role of leading British writers in the war of words and ideas that coincided with the First World War. How unpublished files in the National Archives provide insight into the careers of Arnold Bennett, John Buchan, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, Rudyard Kipling and H.G. Wells; Examples of the writings.
104. "Papers of Sherlock Holmes creator sell for half of what auction house expected." National Post (Canada), May 20, 2004: A15.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "A collection of long-lost papers giving a rare glimpse into the private life of Sherlock Holmes' creator, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, was sold at auction in London for almost (ps)1-million ($2.3- million) yesterday, about half of what had been estimated. The 3,000 letters, notes and manuscripts fetched (ps)948,546, auction house Christie's said....The auction has ignited a furor among politicians and Holmes enthusiasts, with some saying the collection should have been bequeathed to the nation rather than sold off piecemeal. It took place against the backdrop of the bizarre death of a leading Holmes expert...."
105. "Reviews." Contemporary Review 272, no. 1584 (1998): 52.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews several books. Includes reference to Doyle in British Literary Culture and Publishing Practice 1880-1914 by Peter D. McDonald. (Cambridge University Press. GBP37.50/US$59.95. ISBN 0-521-57149-9.) "This volume is part of the 'Cambridge Studies in Publishing and Printing History' and tackles the period which saw the collapse of mid-Victorian publishing (serialisation, part issues and subscription libraries) and the emergence of a style of publishing largely still with us. To tell his story the author first describes the 'literary field in the 1890s' and then concentrates, in three chapters, on three writers: Joseph Conrad, Arnold Bennett and Arthur Conan Doyle...."
106. "Save those love letters!". Writer 117, no. 11 (2004): 10-10.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents information on personal papers and love letters owned by writers that were sold at several auctions. Love letter from James Joyce to his wife; Collection of personal papers of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle; Family photo album belonging to A. A. Milne.
107. "Sherlock Holmes Creator Helps Unlock Home Rule Mystery." Belfast News Letter (Northern Ireland), May 21, 2004: 20.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Personal papers belonging to Sir Arthur Conan Doyle have given an insight into his views on Home Rule for Ireland. The letters, notes and manuscripts went under the hammer this week at Christie's, fetching pounds 1m. Doyle - famous as the creator of the world's most famous detective, Sherlock Holmes - stood twice for Parliament as a Unionist, the Conservative Party having changed its name after the first Home Rule Bill, endorsing tariff reform and supporting one parliament for the UK. By 1912, the year of the Ulster Covenant, he had a change of heart...."
108. "Speakers' Corner." British Heritage 24, no. 7 (2003): 6.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article presents letters to the editor published in December 2003 issue of the journal "British Heritage." In some aspects, the few particulars mentioned above do indeed seem to describe Craigmillar Castle, located just south-east of central Edinburgh, Scotland. Reference to Doyle and Holmes. "Memories can be imprecise, and perhaps the name that Ms Murray recalls from her days in the service was not that of the building, but of the local residential development of Cragmillar that took its name from the castle. The neighborhood dates from the 1920s and it could be that a local boarding school was indeed commandeered, as were so many public buildings, for use by the military. In fact, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, the creator of the Sherlock Holmes stories, attended a boarding school in the general vicinity and the Craigmillar Park Association is currently engaged in efforts to help save from demolition the nearby house in which he also lived."

109. "A tangled skein." Economist 371, no. 8376 (2004): 77-78.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The author reports on a controversial auction of private papers of author Sir Arthur Conan Doyle at Christie's in London this week. The long unseen collection shows that Conan Doyle was not only one of the most popular writers of the 20th century--he has still outsold J.K. Rowling and J.R.R. Tolkien put together--but a public figure who took an active interest in politics and war, championed many private causes and gave GBP250,000 (millions in today's money) to further the interests of spiritualism. Befittingly, the auction has not been without controversy, not least thanks to the mysterious death of Richard Lancelyn Green, a former chairman of the Sherlock Holmes Society of London, who was found garrotted in his locked bedroom in March. There was not enough evidence for the coroner to rule it was suicide, but enough for believers in the "Conan Doyle curse" to suspect foul play worthy of Holmes's attention. Lancelyn Green believed that some of the papers in the auction had rightfully been left to the British Library, and he told the Times newspaper that he had written to Christie's asking them not to go ahead with the sale, which Christie's denies. Would-be Conan Doyle biographers, as well as the British Library, have expressed disappointment that the material in the auction has now been dispersed.

110. "Travel: Grand Tour; Holmes falls for Moriarty (literally)." Independent on Sunday (London), May 5, 2002: 24.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Great writers and their adventures in Literature. This week, Arthur Conan Doyle kills off his hero....Arthur Conan Doyle, below, later resurrected his most famous character after protests from fans. Includes a brief biographical sketch of Doyle, an excerpt from "The Final Problem" and tourist information on London and tours to Switzerland.

111. "Victorian Detective Fiction and the Nature of Evidence: The Scientific Investigations of Poe, Dickens, and Doyle." Victorian Studies 47, no. 4 (2005): 609-611.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of book by Lawrence Frank, with remark "Applying methods of close reading to both scientific and literary texts, Frank argues that Edgar Allen Poe, Charles Dickens, and Arthur Conan Doyle 'promoted a new, emerging worldview that was secular and naturalistic.'"

112. "Victorian Studies: Index to Volume 44 (2001-2002)." Victorian Studies 44, no. 4 (2003): 743-753.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes two references to Doyle. Sussman, Herbert. Review: Barsharn, Arthur Conan Doyle and the Meaning of Masculinity; Barsharn, Diana, Arthur Conan Doyle and the Meaning of Masculinity, 536-39.

113. Agathocleous, Tanya. "London Mysteries and international conspiracies: James, Doyle, and the aesthetics of cosmopolitanism." Nineteenth-Century Contexts 26, no. 2 (2004): 125-148.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the striking commonalities between the writings of British fiction writers Henry James and Arthur Conan Doyle. Authors' fascination with aesthetic perception, international conspiracy, and the mysteries of urban life; Their literary depiction of the city of London, its contrast of wealth and poverty, and its place in world history; Association between the concept of cosmopolitanism and aestheticism.

114. Aykroyd, Lucas, Clifford S. Goldfarb, and Brian S. Brodie. "'Bookshelf' Reviews of The Abominable Wife and Other Unrecorded Cases of Mr. Sherlock Holmes, The Spenserian Holmes: Being the Annotated Manuscript of the Hell of the Baskervilles, Teller of Tales: The Life of Arthur Conan Doyle and The Hounds Collection: Volume IV." Canadian Holmes 23, no. 1 (1999): 38-42.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

115. Ayoub, Nina C. "New Scholarly Books." Chronicle of Higher Education 51, no. 38 (2005): A16-A19.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents information on scholarly books published in the U.S. in 2005. Includes item with reference to Doyle. Representing Scotland in Literature, Popular Culture, and Iconography: The Masks of the Modern Nation, by Alan Riach (Palgrave Macmillan; 280 pages; $69.95). "Explores images of Scottishness in media from the canonical literature of Scott, Conan Doyle, and other writers to such contemporary British television programs as Edge of Darkness."
116. ———. "New Scholarly Books." Chronicle of Higher Education 49, no. 47 (2003): A16.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents information on several books, including one with a reference to Doyle. Capital Offenses: Geographies of Class and Crime in Victorian London, by Simon Joyce (University of Virginia Press; 288 pages; $39.50). "Describes how Conan Doyle, Dickens, Wilde, and other writers of the period challenged social commentators' views of the relationship among crime, class, and neighborhood."
117. ———. "New Scholarly Books." Chronicle of Higher Education 47, no. 19 (2001): A17.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a list and summaries of several books including Arthur Conan Doyle and the meaning of Masculinity, by Diana Barsham (Ashgate Publishing; 312 pages; $84.95). "Discusses Doyle's life, writings, and personal rivalries in a study of the author's attempts to embody the ideals of British manhood; topics include the relationship between Doyle's histories of the Boer War and World War I and his Sherlock Holmes stories, here read as a secret autobiography."
118. ———. "New Scholarly Books." Chronicle of Higher Education 46, no. 29 (2000): A24.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Lists books including Modernism, Romance, and the "Fin de Siecle": Popular Fiction and British Culture, by Nicholas Daly (Cambridge University Press; 228 pages; $59.95), with reference to Doyle. "Links the 'romance revival' of the late 19th and early 20th centuries to Britain's efforts to come to terms with a 'new imperialism'; focuses on such writers as Arthur Conan Doyle, H. Rider Haggard, and Bram Stoker."
119. ———. "New Scholarly Books." Chronicle of Higher Education 45, no. 30 (1999): A25.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews scholarly books including Membranes: Metaphors of Invasion in Nineteenth-Century Literature, Science, and Politics, by Laura Otis (Johns Hopkins University Press; 248 pages; $45). "Uses examples from literary, political, and scientific texts to argue that the biological cell became a major metaphor in 19th-century culture; focuses on works by four physician-writers: Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, S. Weir Mitchell, Santiago Ramon y Cajal, and Arthur Schnitzler."
120. Baker, William, and Kenneth Womack. "Recent Work in Critical Theory." Style 32, no. 4 (1998): 535.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a bibliography of published books based on materials coming into Northern Illinois University libraries between August 1997 and August 1998. Includes entries for Doyle and reference to Holmes. Booth, Martin. The Doctor, the Detective, and Arthur Conan Doyle: A Biography of Arthur Conan Doyle. London: Hodder and Stoughton, 1997. "Booth offers a new study of the biographical and literary lives of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. Booth devotes particular attention to Conan Doyle's formative years in which he suffered a poverty-stricken childhood at the hands of an alcoholic father. After abandoning his medical training, Conan Doyle finally pursued the literary career which earned him great wealth and fame. Booth also discusses the qualities that ensured Conan Doyle's success, including his enormous self-confidence and stubbornness, as well as his refusal to pass up any opportunity for adventure." Kestner, Joseph A. Sherlock's Men: Masculinity, Conan Doyle, and Cultural History. Aldershot: Ashgate, 1997. "Kestner examines constructions of masculinity throughout Conan Doyle's nine volumes of short stories from 1887 through 1927 and the publication of The Case Book of Sherlock Holmes. In addition to discussing the manner in which popular culture conveys the masculine gender, Kestner demonstrates Conan Doyle's interest in addressing masculinity in social, historical, legal, literary, educational, marital, and aesthetic contexts. Kestner explores such concepts as the notion of the gentleman, the role of reason, the nature of heroism, the ideology of chivalry, and the functions of law and punishment." McDonald, Peter D. British Literary Culture and Publishing Practice, 1880-1914. Cambridge: Cambridge UP, 1997. "McDonald examines the radical

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- transformation of British literary culture from 1880 to 1914. Using works by such figures as Joseph Conrad, Arnold Bennet, and Arthur Conan Doyle, McDonald discusses the cultural politics inherent in the period. McDonald demonstrates that the discursive qualities of their texts cannot be fully appreciated without understanding the material conditions of their production." Thoms, Peter. Narrative and Power in Nineteenth-Century Detective Fiction. Athens: Ohio UP, 1998. "Thoms argues that some of the most significant nineteenth-century works of detective fiction not only helped to establish the genre, but also to subvert its structural conventions as well. Using works by Godwin, Poe, Dickens, Collins, and Conan Doyle, Thoms contends that the detective's figurative writing emerges out of a desire to exert control over others and occasionally over himself. Additionally, Thoms reveals the manner in which early detective fiction grapples with the very issue of storytelling itself."
121. ———. "Recent work in critical theory." Style 30, no. 4 (1996): 584.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents an alphabetically arranged bibliography that annotates several books on critical theory, published between June 1995 and July 1996. Includes entries with reference to Doyle. Belford, Barbara. Bram Stoker: A Biography of the Author of Dracula. New York: Knopf, 1996. "Belford traces the life of Bram Stoker through her analysis of his public and private faces. In addition to discussing Stoker's life as the innovative manager of London's Lyceum Theatre and his place among Victorian society's glitterati, Belford explores the writer's private obsessions in his novels with such forbidden subjects as seduction, rape, necrophilia, incest, and voyeurism. Belford also examines Stoker's place among the writers of his day, including Mark Twain, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, James Whistler, Alfred Lord Tennyson, and George Bernard Shaw." Kerrigan, John. Revenge Tragedy: Aeschylus to Armageddon. Oxford: Oxford UP, 1996. "Kerrigan investigates the centrality of revenge tragedy in Western culture from the works of Homer and Nietzsche through Greek drama and Sylvia Plath. In addition to interpretive forays into film and postmodernism, Kerrigan provides close readings of revenge tragedy, using the works of Shakespeare, Samuel Richardson, and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, among others. Kerrigan also demonstrates the ways in which evolving attitudes toward retribution continue to shape and reconstitute tragedy in Western culture."
122. ———. "Recent work in critical theory." Style 29, no. 4 (1995): 568.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a listing of four hundred eighty-seven published monographs and articles that treat on critical theory, including an entry that reference Doyle. Orel, Harold. The Historical Novel from Scott to Sabatini: Changing Attitudes Toward a Literary Genre. London: Macmillan, 1995. "Orel survey the genre of historical fiction in the works of a wide range of literary figures. including Sir Walter Scott, Sir Walter Besant, Richard Doddridge Blackmore, Sir Arthur Quiller-Couch, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, Stanley John Weyman, Anthony Hope, Sir Henry Rider Haggard, and Rafael Sabatini. Orel discusses the relationship between research and imagination in the composition strategies of these novelists, while also assessing the significance of language and character in their works."
123. Bassett, Troy J., and Christina M. Walter. "Booksellers and Bestsellers: British Book Sales as Documented by The Bookman, 1891-1906." Book History 4, no. (2001): 205-236.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes multiple references to Doyle.
124. Beard, Matthew. "An Elementary Explanation for Sherlock Holmes." The Independent (London), July 11, 2002: 1.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The inspiration for the characters in Sherlock Holmes books has intrigued devotees of the detective novel for nearly two centuries. The explanation behind their creation seems elementary. The Scottish author's alma mater, Stonyhurst College, near Clitheroe in Lancashire, has revealed Doyle may have taken names from the school register....The author may even have drawn inspiration for the setting of The Hound of the Baskervilles from the school building, which bears a startling resemblance to Baskerville Hall. Details of Doyle's schooldays emerged after Stonyhurst recruited a curator to compile a permanent archive to the writer, which will open in September...."
125. Bensley, D. Alan. "Why great thinkers sometimes fail to think critically." Skeptical Inquirer 30, no. 4 (2006): 47-52.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // It is somewhat paradoxical that Sherlock Holmes was a literary creation of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, says D. Alan Bensley, an associate professor of psychology at Frostburg State University,

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

in an essay about critical thinking. After all, he says, Sherlock Holmes was a shrewd detective with uncanny reasoning abilities, while Conan Doyle often exhibited "dramatic lapses in his own critical thinking."

126. Bergem, Phillip G. "Arthur Conan Doyle: Connections to the Latter-Day Saints and Other Matters." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 54, no. 1 (2004): 39-42.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
127. Betzner, Ray. "Arthur Conan Doyle in Society." Baker Street Miscellanea, no. 76 (1994): 6-11.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
128. Binyon, Tj. "If only he'd listened to Holmes." The Evening Standard (London), February 21, 2000: 56.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of Teller of Tales: The Life of Arthur Conan Doyle by Daniel Stashower (Allen Lane/The Penguin Press, 18.99). "...Stashower's book is certainly a worthy addition to the long shelf of Conan Doyle biographies. Elegant and scholarly, it is, perhaps, the sanest and most balanced of all...."
129. Birch, Dinah. "Elementary love." TLS, no. 5458 (2007): 3-5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the books "Conan Doyle: The Man Who Created Sherlock Holmes," by Andrew Lycett and "Arthur Conan Doyle: A Life in Letters," edited by Jon Lellenberg, Daniel Stashower, and Charles Foley.
130. Blau, Peter E. "About Golf, and Rudyard Kipling, and Vermont, and Other Things." Shoso-In Bulletin 5, no. (1995): 8-13.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
131. Bliss, Laurel M. "Book Reviews: Arts & Humanities." Library Journal 124, no. 3 (1999): 152.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'Teller of Tales: The Life of Arthur Conan Doyle,' by Daniel Stashower.
132. Brown, Allan. "The curious case of old Conan Doyle." Sunday Times (London), August 22, 2004: 4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Observations on Doyle, Edinburgh, the fate of various Doyle papers, the Christie's auction, Richard Lancelyn Green, Owen Dudley Edwards, and Charles Foley.
133. Buitenhuis, Peter. "The First World War and the Language of Fiction." European Contributions to American Studies [Netherlands] 10, no. (1986): 99-111.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Contrasts the work of old-school authors Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, Sir Edmund Gosse, and Rudyard Kipling, who worked as propagandists during World War I, with that of Ernest Hemingway, Charles Harrison, John Dos Passos, and E. E. Cummings, all of whom experienced the war directly. The language of the propagandists reaffirmed and reasserted old values and covered the reality of the war with a romantic and patriotic facade. The younger writers faced the problem of finding a way to express the disparity between reality and propaganda. Using romantic language and romantic images as a springboard, the younger writers replaced nationalism, patriotism, and imperialism with self-reliance, skepticism, irony, and aestheticism.
134. Burke, James. "Connections." Scientific American 278, no. 1 (1998): 113.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Look at the views of James Burke as he relate to the question on who came up first with the idea of evolution. Includes reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...McParlan's work was not, however, to go totally unrecognized. In 1914 he became the internationally acclaimed hero of a novel entitled Valley of Fear. Well, he would have been such but for the fact that the author ended up naming the book's detective protagonist something else. McParlan's heroics were fictionally appropriated by (the already internationally famous) Sherlock Holmes. Given McParlan's fate, it's ironic that Valley of Fear was to be Sherlock's last case, too. After which his creator, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, turned to expressing himself through a different medium. The kind that sat around tables and got up to what I was playing at the other night. Because in 1914 Doyle stopped writing and took over where Wallace and Lodge had left off: he became a leading light in the Society for Psychic Research...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

135. Burr, Robert C. "Review--Sir Arthur Conan Doyle at the Cinema by Scott Allen Nollen." The Holmes & Watson Report 1, no. 2 (1997): 24.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The major adaptations of all of Conan Doyle's literary works are fully covered here, as is a 1927 one-reel documentary in which the author talks about his work and his psychic beliefs. The focus is on how faithful each adaptation is to the author's own work and the overall effectiveness of the film.
136. Cannon, Peter, and Jeff Zaleski. "Mystery Notes." Publishers Weekly 249, no. 12 (2002): 46.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a list of several mystery books. They Died in Vain: Overlooked, Underappreciated and Forgotten Mystery Novels, edited by Jim Huang; The Sir Arthur Conan Doyle Reader: From Sherlock Holmes to Spiritualism, edited by Jeffrey Meyers; Angels of Darkness: A Drama in Three Acts, by Arthur Conan Doyle.
137. Carey, John. "Outwitted by his own creation." The Sunday Times (London), August 26, 2007: 39.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of Conan Doyle: The Man Who Created Sherlock Holmes by Andrew Lycett and Arthur Conan Doyle: A Life in Letters edited by Daniel Stashower, Jon Lellenberg and Charles Foley.
138. Chalmers, John. "You write the festival reviews." The Independent (London), August 7, 2006: 20.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of the exhibit in Edinburgh, "Conan Doyle and Joseph Bell: The Real Sherlock Holmes," Surgeons' Hall Museums. "This is a small but fascinating exhibition on Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and his teacher, the surgeon Joseph Bell, who was his inspiration for Sherlock Holmes. Bell's ability to learn much about his patients simply from his powers of observation is legendary, and several examples are given in this show...."
139. Chapman, Paul M. "A Literary Mosaic: Arthur Conan Doyle as Literary Pioneer and Synthesizer." The Ritual, no. 27 (2001): 34-46.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
140. ———. "Review--'The Doctor, The Detective and Arthur Conan Doyle' by Martin Booth." The Ritual, no. 20 (1997): 66-68.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
141. ———. "A Study in Friendship: Conan Doyle and Bram Stoker." The Musgrave Papers, no. 8 (1995): 71-81.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
142. ———. "Through the Stage Door: The Dramatic Ventures of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle." The Ritual, no. 24 (1999): 38-45.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
143. Clinch, Minty. "The Snow Special: Short Breaks - in Search Of...; Conan Doyle in the Swiss Alps; did You Know, the Creator of Sherlock Holmes was also a Pioneer of Skiing?" Independent on Sunday (London), November 2, 2003: 4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Conan Doyle? On skis? I thought he'd be a pipe and slippers man. Even in the world of eminent Victorians, Dr Arthur Conan Doyle stood out as a Renaissance man, a natural extrovert with diverse talents fuelled by huge reserves of energy, enthusiasm and wit. Less well charted is his flirtation with skiing, an intensive two-year fling that established him as a winter sports prophet and pioneer. The affair reached its zenith on 23 March 1894, when the creator of Sherlock Holmes became the first Englishman to cross the 2,440m Maiefelder Furka pass above Davos and ski down to Arosa on the other side. Rising before 4am, he headed for the village of Frauenkirch, accompanied by his guides, Tobias and Johannes Branger, making the trip for a second time...."
144. Coles, Bill. "Sherlock Holmes Still Lives." Wall Street Journal - Eastern Edition, 02/24, 2007: P16.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article features writer Arthur Conan Doyle and his Sherlock Holmes detective

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

stories.

145. Cook, William. "Close to home: A bit more than naval-gazing: When you think of Portsmouth, what comes to mind? Its redoubtable historic warships, perhaps. Chances are, it's not designer shopping, contemporary art - or Portsmouth FC's first goalkeeper, Arthur Conan Doyle." The Guardian (London), Apr 12, 2008: 2.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "From the crow's nest of Portsmouth's new Spinnaker Tower, you get a great view of the Isle of Wight, but the most spectacular sight is right beneath your feet, more than 100 metres below. Portsmouth's Historic Dockyard is a slice of living history, featuring several fascinating museums, housed in the original dockside buildings that were the powerhouse of the royal navy for several centuries. Most riveting is Nelson's flagship, HMS Victory, moored beside the Victorian battleship HMS Warrior, and Henry VIII's favourite warship, the Mary Rose. [Richard Lancelyn Green]'s bequest has provided a cultural catalyst for a city with a far more varied cultural life than its robust public image as a military harbour would suggest. Portsmouth was also the birthplace of Britain's greatest novelist, Charles Dickens. The handsome house where he was born is now a museum. And if you prefer fine art to literature, the local artist WL Wyllie was one of the finest maritime painters of the late 19th and early 20th centuries. There are some splendid examples of his work Portsmouth's City and Royal Naval Museums, most notably his epic panorama of the Battle of Trafalgar. There's first class stand-up comedy at Jongleurs and the Wedgwood Rooms, and the cathedral is a gem. 'It was a place in which a man might very well spend a happy life,' wrote [Arthur Conan Doyle], of Portsmouth. Or, he might have added, a very enjoyable weekend."
146. Cooke, Catherine, and Alvin E. Rodin. "Arthur Conan Doyle in London, Part I, In Baker Street and Beyond." Baker Street Miscellanea, no. 73 (1993): 16-27.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
147. Cornwell, Tim. "Scotland 'Should Retake Holmes'." The Scotsman, March 19, 2005: 19.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Scotland is to be urged to exploit Sherlock Holmes as a national cultural icon in an effort to promote Scottish writing worldwide. The chairman of Scotland's cultural commission will next week single out Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's fictional detective as a prime example of 'Scottish rationalism'. James Boyle will outline his vision of how Scotland can promote its arts and culture around the world in a lecture at the Scottish Parliament...."
148. Cowan, James. "Conan Doyle saw greatness in Canada: Toronto library acquires collection of author's notes during visits here." National Post (Canada), November 18, 2004: A9.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Sir Arthur Conan Doyle loved Canada -- its landscape, its government, its literature. The creator of Sherlock Holmes came to North America three times between 1894 and 1922, travelling for different reasons but almost exclusively by private rail car. In 1914, he was headed to the National Reserve in Jasper, Alta., as an invited guest of the Canadian government. He stopped at Canadian Clubs along the way -- in Winnipeg, Fort William, Ont., and Hamilton, among other cities -- delivering speeches on literature....Doyle's speaking notes were among the items acquired last spring by the Toronto Public Library at an auction at Christie's in London and directly from the Doyle estate. Toronto has the only public library collection in the world dedicated to Arthur Conan Doyle, contained in a wood-panelled room on the fifth floor of the Toronto Reference Library...."
149. Cox, Don Richard. "The Artistic Failure of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle." Baker Street Miscellanea, no. 75 (1994): 11-27.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
150. Cox, Jim. "Book Review Teller of Tales by Daniel Stashower." Baker Street West 16, no. 2 (2000): 35-40.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
151. Crawford, MaryAnn Krajnik. "Introduction: Shaw Scholarship: 'Here and Now' and at the 2004 International Shaw Society (ISS) Conference." SHAW The Annual of Bernard Shaw Studies 25, no. (2005): 1-8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes conference paper with reference to Doyle. "Papers were given by Lagretta Lenker ('Shaw's Best Play?')...Alan Andrews ('Shaw and Conan Doyle'), Rodelle Weintraub ('What Makes

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- Johnny Run? Man and Superman as Pre-Freudian Dream Play")..."
152. Dahlinger, Susan E., and Leslie S. Klinger. "Arthur Conan Doyle, Fletcher Robinson & The Hound." Canadian Holmes 25, no. 1 (2001): 7-16.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
153. Dalrymple, Theodore. "Sheer delight in doing evil." BMJ: British Medical Journal 334, no. 7607 (2007): 1325-1325.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article presents the author's reaction to having read the book "The Resident Patient," by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, which centers on a doctor named Trevelyan who visits Sherlock Holmes and Watson to discuss a patient named Blessington. A discussion of the story's plot, which centers on the fact that Blessington is really a criminal named Sutton, is presented. The author's involvement in being a witness in a case where a man hanged another man and attempted to make the incident look like suicide is discussed.
154. Davies, David Stuart. "Conan Doyle and the Actors." The Ritual, no. 16 (1995): 46-50.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
155. Dekoning, Ivo A. "In the Footsteps of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle." Shoso-In Bulletin 12, no. (2002): 153-167.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
156. Dillstone, Don. "Arthur Conan Doyle and Irene Adler." Canadian Holmes 24, no. 2 (2000): 9-13.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
157. Donald, Ann. "Who's that cat in the deer hat?" The Herald (Glasgow), July 8, 2000: 19.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Sherlock Holmes ranks alone in the distinguished genre of crime fiction creations - if only for his class A drug habit and eccentric apparel of deerstalker and pipe. This week's celebration of the Baker Street clever clogs and his creator, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, hung on the flimsy premise that Doyle popped his clogs 70 years ago. Given the riches languishing in the BBC's own radio drama vaults, it was remiss of the powers-that-be to deprive us of at least one rendition of Basil Rathbone's blinding interpretation of the great detective. However, Radio 4 was obviously intent on plunging into the real-life mire with The Secret History of Conan Doyle and The Real Sherlock Holmes. The mystery clouding Doyle's own life was pierced by Humphrey Carpenter's investigation...."
158. Drabelle, Dennis. "Master of Deduction." The Washington Post, January 30, 2000: X04.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of The Doctor and the Detective: A Biography of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, by Martin Booth. St. Martin's. 371 pp.
159. Duncan, Raymond. "Lost papers of Conan Doyle sell for GBP 1m." The Herald (Glasgow), May 20, 2004: 10.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Long-lost papers providing a compelling insight into the private life of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, the Scots-born creator of Sherlock Holmes, have been sold at auction for just under (pounds) 1m. The 3000 personal letters, notes and manuscripts, missing for 40 years, had been expected to fetch around double that figure, but Christie's in London said last night that 104 of the 135 lots were sold, fetching a total of (pounds) 948,546...."
160. Feay, Suzi. "Notes & Theories: She's buying a stairway to heaven and other ghost stories." The Independent on Sunday, Jul 24, 2005: 46.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "I'm interviewing [Julian Barnes] on stage at the Ways With Words festival about his new novel Arthur and George. Its protagonist, Arthur Conan Doyle, tackles a celebrated Victorian miscarriage of justice la mode de Sherlock Holmes. The Edalji case, featuring a mild-mannered Birmingham solicitor accused of cattle mutilation, was every bit as significant to British cultural life and the legal system as the Dreyfus case was to France. But there is another, weirder strand to this complex and interesting novel, and I've amused Barnes and clearly ruffled at least one audience member by referring to Doyle's ardent spiritualist beliefs as 'batty'. Doyle was a devout believer in table-rapping, ectoplasm and voices beyond the grave, and was famously hoaxed by two schoolgirls who said they'd been photographing fairies...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

161. Feigelman, Jennifer. "Graphic Classics: Arthur Conan Doyle." School Library Journal 51, no. 11 (2005): 177-177.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book "Graphic Classics: Arthur Conan Doyle," vol. 2, edited by Tom Pomplun, illustrated by Rick Geary.
162. Ferguson, Brian. "Another string to the bow of Holmes's legacy." The Scotsman, January 14, 2009: 3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "For more than 170 years, a sycamore stood in the garden where the young Arthur Conan Doyle was inspired to write his first stories. As a schoolboy, the creator of Sherlock Holmes would clamber on the branches of the tree in the grounds of Liberton Bank House in Edinburgh. But now the sycamore has to be cut down because of disease, to the dismay of the staff and pupils at the special school that has recently moved into the 18th-century building. However, a memorial to the tree and its links to Conan Doyle is to be created. Dunedin School has commissioned the creation of a violin from the sycamore's wood, in tribute to Doyle's celebrated detective and his penchant for playing the instrument. It is hoped the GBP 1,800 violin, to be created by the Edinburgh-based instrument maker Steve Burnett, will be completed in time for the 150th anniversary of Conan Doyle's birth in May...."
163. Foden, Giles. "Review: Book of the week: The case of the mysterious author: Giles Foden is glad that a new biography of Conan Doyle focuses on work rather than wacky beliefs." The Guardian (London), September 22, 2007: 7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of Andrew Lycett's biography, Conan Doyle: The Man Who Created Sherlock Holmes by Andrew Lycett: 525pp, Weidenfeld & Nicolson, GBP20. "...Conan Doyle has found a biographer of distinction in Andrew Lycett, who has previously written lives of Rudyard Kipling, Ian Fleming and Dylan Thomas. Lycett's brilliant piece of detective work on the author of the Sherlock Holmes stories now allows us to judge his literary worth against that of his peers and properly to set him in the context of his times...." Mention also made of Arthur Conan Doyle: A Life in Letters, edited by Jon Lellenberg, Daniel Stashower "and Conan Doyle's great-nephew Charles Foley (HarperCollins, pounds 25)."
164. Foot, Monica. "Life of Conan the Victorian; The Doctor, the Detective and Arthur Conan Doyle. a Biography of Arthur Conan Doyle. by Martin Booth (Coronet Paperback. Pounds 7.99)." Birmingham Post, May 9, 1998: 36.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of the book. "...A fascinating biography, which has not, apparently, exhausted all the family's archives, for some are still in copyright, and, as yet, unavailable."
165. Fordyce, Rachel. "Dissertations of Note." Children's Literature 32, no. (2004): 270-284.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Compilation of recent doctoral dissertations of note, including one with a reference to Doyle: Halloran, Jennifer Ann. "Keeping the Peace: Detective Fiction and the British Imperial Project, 1844-1939." Ph.D. diss. The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, 2002. 205 pp. DAI 63: 931A. "Among other authors, Halloran looks at the works of Poe, Dickens, and Arthur Conan Doyle and shows that the three historical periods they represent produced 'a type of fictional detective who reflected and reinforced the same fantasies of control found in the contemporary discourses of empire, such as travel writing, exploration, narratives, and memoirs.'"
166. Forman, Ross G. "The Narcissism of Empire: Loss, Rage and Revenge in Thomas De Quincey, Robert Louis Stevenson, Arthur Conan Doyle, Rudyard Kipling and Isak Dinesen." Victorian Studies 50, no. 4 (2008): 723-725.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "The Narcissism of Empire: Loss, Rage and Revenge in Thomas De Quincey, Robert Louis Stevenson, Arthur Conan Doyle, Rudyard Kipling and Isak Dinesen," by Diane Simmons. "In The Narcissism of Empire, Diane Simmons looks to a set of canonical authors on imperialism to see how their childhood problems, rages and frustrations, feelings of abandonment, and desires for revenge manifest themselves in their literary production...."
167. Frank, Lawrence. "Dreaming the Medusa: Imperialism, primitivism, and sexuality in Arthur Conan Doyle's The Sign of Four." Signs: Journal of Women in Culture & Society 22, no. 1 (1996): 52.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses author Arthur Conan Doyle's treatment of the issues of imperialism,

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

primitivism and sexuality in his book The Sign of Four. Characterization of detective Sherlock Holmes; Characterization of women in Doyle's published works; Projection of a Victorian anxiety about women; Description of India and the Indian culture.

168. ———. "The Hound of the Baskervilles, the Man on the Tor, and a metaphor for the mind." Nineteenth-Century Literature 54, no. 3 (1999): 336.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Examines a dramatization of a nineteenth-century debate between opposing naturalistic accounts of the human mind reflected in The Hound of Baskervilles, by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. Influence of Darwinian thought on the 'Man of the Tor' episode; Metaphor of mind offered by the episode; Association of enlightenment rationalism with Romantic consciousness.
169. Gibson, Brian Neil. "From Samoa to Uffa: The Untold Tale of Robert Louis Stevenson and Arthur Conan Doyle." Canadian Holmes 26, no. 3 (2003): 24-34.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
170. Goldfarb, Clifford S. "Arthur Conan Doyle and Napoleon: A Case of Hero-Worship?" Canadian Holmes 21, no. 4 (1998): 4-16.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
171. ———. "Conan Doyle and the Mummy's Curse." Canadian Holmes 20, no. 1 (1996): 6-12.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
172. ———. "A three-pipe life." The Globe and Mail (Toronto), Jan 19, 2008: D8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of Conan Doyle: The Man Who Created Sherlock Holmes, by Andrew Lycett.
173. Grant, Graham. "Could Sherlock Holmes' creator also be a killer?; Expert claims Conan Doyle stole classic plot then murdered real author." Daily Mail (London), July 26, 2008: 47.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // It has all the ingredients you would expect of a classic Sherlock Holmes story. A national newspaper editor dies suddenly and a knight of the realm is suspected of his murder, triggered by infidelity, blackmail and fear of exposure. But according to one psychologist, author and Holmes enthusiast, this is no fictional plot - and the killer was none other than Holmes' Edinburgh-born creator, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. Dr Rodger Garrick-Steele claims Sir Arthur stole the idea for his most famous Holmes novel, The Hound of the Baskervilles, from his friend Fletcher Robinson - then had him poisoned when he threatened to reveal the truth...."
174. Greenwood, Therese. "Arthur Conan Doyle, Grant Allen and Wolfe Island." Canadian Holmes 26, no. 3 (2003): 19-21.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
175. Grimston, Jack. "Conan Doyle hidden archive could fetch E2.9m at auction." Sunday Times (London), March 14, 2004: 13.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "A campaign by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, author of the Sherlock Holmes stories, to have British soldiers in the first world war issued with body armour has been revealed in a long-unseen collection of his papers that has turned up on the London auction market. Inspired by his own medieval tales, Conan Doyle, who had been a medic in the Boer war, believed armour would reduce the slaughter on the western front. He sent letters on the subject to David Lloyd George, the prime minister, and Sir Douglas Haig, the commander-in- chief. The 3,000 items in the archive, to be sold by Christie's in May, include written exchanges between Conan Doyle and his family and notebooks for many of his works. One is a sketch for A Study in Scarlet, the first Holmes story, which is expected to fetch between Pounds 100,000 and Pounds 150,000 (E146,000 and E220,000). There are also letters from famous figures such as Rudyard Kipling, Oscar Wilde, Theodore Roosevelt and Winston Churchill. The collection is valued at about Pounds 2m (E2.953m). Jane Flower, manuscripts consultant at Christie's, said it was the best archive she had seen at auction in 30 years. But the collection, which is being sold by distant relatives of the author, is likely to be broken up, with much of it going abroad..."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

176. Gunn, Neil. "Arthur Conan Doyle, the Scot Who Created Sherlock Holmes." The Highlander - The Magazine of Scottish Heritage 48, no. 3 (2010): 10-14.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // An overview of Doyle's life and work.
177. Halsema-Kubes, W. "Een Ursula-beeld door Henrik Douvermann." Bulletin van het Rijksmuseum XXIII, no. 2 (1975): 63-66.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A statue of S. Ursula by Henrik Douvermann formerly in the collection of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle has been given to the Rijksmuseum, Amsterdam in honor of Arthur van Schendel on his retirement as Director General. Discusses Douvermann's style, his female figures of 1518-ca.1525, and dates the work to ca.1510. Attributes a previously unpublished statue of a female saint holding an open book in her left hand (sold in Amsterdam, 1907, present location unknown) to Douvermann on the basis of a stylistic comparison with the S. Ursula. (Bulletin van het Rijksmuseum)
178. Hanks, Robert. "Books: Elementary, my dear Barnes; Julian Barnes's new novel resurrects Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and a real-life mystery." The Independent (London), Jul 8, 2005: 20-21.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of Arthur & George. "...The quality in Arthur & George I liked the most apart, of course, from Barnes's preternaturally smooth and readable prose was the way it avoids condescension to the past, always going with the grain of the characters' beliefs. One aspect of this is Barnes's treatment of Conan Doyle's sex life, never bowing to the modern orthodoxy that regards Victorian morals as purely a matter of repression and hypocrisy. Another is his treatment of religion. Barnes himself says he has never had 'even glimmerings' of belief, but he presents without irony George's devout Anglicanism and Conan Doyle's wackier spiritualist creed..."
179. Hapgood, Lynne. "The Literature of the Suburbs: Versions of Repression in the Novels of George Gissing, Arthur Conan Doyle and William Pett Ridge, 1890-1899." Journal of Victorian Culture 5, no. 2 (2000): 287.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the nature and function of repression in suburban novels of the 1890s in Victorian England. Ways in which repression was realized as a literary mode and political intervention; Focus on the writings of Arthur Conan Doyle, William Pett Ridge and George Gissing; Fictional strategies that encode physical and psychological constraint.
180. Hardyment, Christina. "Books: a Word in Your Ear; Arthur Conan Doyle: a Life by Hesketh Pearson Read by Tim Pigott-Smith Naxos, C3hrs, Pounds 8.99." The Independent (London), October 6, 2001: 11.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The fact that Hesketh Pearson knew Conan Doyle, and that his life of the man who invented Sherlock Holmes was written before many of the Doyle papers disappeared into a lawsuit in which they are still unmeshed, gives his 1943 biography an interest all its own. Pearson makes good use of Doyle's 1924 autobiography, Memories and Adventures, so that we get a satisfying sense of the voice of a man who was, it seems, more mild Dr Watson than drug-addicted detective....But Doyle was a gentleman of the old school, dedicated to chivalric causes; his only regret was that people loved Holmes too much and Brigadier Gerard, his own favourite of his creations, too little. David Timson has abridged Pearson's words skilfully; Tim Pigott-Smith is a fine choice as reader. Let's hope Naxos will add Brigadier Gerard's exploits to their four sets of Sherlock Holmes's adventures."
181. Hargan, Jim. "Dartmoor of the Baskervilles." British Heritage 19, no. 5 (1998): 52.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Provides information on the hounds of Dartmoor, with reference to The Hound of the Baskervilles. When Conan Doyle first heard about the hounds; Folk tales surrounding the hounds of Dartmoor; How Conan Doyle set about writing a book about this folk tale; Places of interest in Dartmoor.
182. Hodges, Jeremy. "Crime and compassion; Seventy years on from the death of the man who created Sherlock Holmes, how three women moulded the life of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle." Daily Mail (London), July 4, 2000: 11.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Shortly before his death 70 years ago, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle rose from his sickbed and went into the garden of his country home to pick a single snowdrop. Suddenly the 71-year-old creator of Sherlock Holmes collapsed, clutching his heart. As a doctor was sent for, Doyle's thoughts were fixed on the delicate flower he had picked as his annual gift to his second wife Jean, to remind her of the day they met. Little could be further from the image of the lean, scientific investigator Doyle created. Yet while Sherlock Holmes is still the world's most famous detective, his creator remains largely a man of mystery. In his native city of Edinburgh, there is a statue of Holmes, but none of Doyle. The BBC is running a 70th anniversary Conan Doyle season on TV and Radio 4 this week, but there are no plans for any commemorative event in Edinburgh. Perhaps it is because Doyle, unlike the famous creation that overshadows him, was a private man, and never more so than in his relationships with women...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

183. Hodgkinson, Thomas. "Books: Sherlock Holmes the Aesthete; Teller of Tales: the Life of Arthur Conan Doyle by Daniel Stashower Allen Lane Pounds 18.99." The Independent (London), February 27, 2000: 51.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of Stashower's biography of Doyle.

184. Hogarth, Dennis. "Edgar Allan Poe: The Father of the Modern Detective Story and His Influence Upon Arthur Conan Doyle." Baker Street West 1 4, no. 2 (1998): 7-11, 13.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

185. Horne, Marc. "Letter makes real Holmes elementary." The Sunday Times (London), April 16, 2006: 13.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "He wore a deerstalker hat and cloak, frequently gazed through a magnifying glass and boasted a razor-sharp mind, but, as far as history can tell, he never smoked a pipe or uttered the immortal words: 'Elementary, my dear Watson.' A new archive to be displayed in Edinburgh this summer shows the remarkable extent to which Sir Arthur Conan Doyle drew inspiration for Sherlock Holmes from his cerebral university tutor...."

186. Hounion, Morris. "The Man Who Created Sherlock Holmes: The Life and Times of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle." Library Journal 133, no. 3 (2008): 105-105.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article reviews the book "The Man Who Created Sherlock Holmes: The Life and Times of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle," by Andrew Lycett.

187. Hughes, David. "More than meets the eye, Watson." Spectator 284, no. 8953 (2000): 41.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'Teller of Tales: The Life of Arthur Conan Doyle,' by Daniel Stashower.

188. Huh, Jinny. "Whispers of Norbury: Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and the Modernist Crisis of Racial (Un) Detection." Modern Fiction Studies 49, no. 3 (2003): 550-580.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article discusses works of author Arthur Conan Doyle. It illustrates how author Henry Highland Garnet and Africa/Africans may have affected Doyle in his struggle with race politics, his continuing anxiety with the epistemology of Blackness. Doyle articulates constant struggle of the photographer and his tools with the object of the photographic gaze. The article emphasizes that the emergence of the science/detection method is in specific response to the anxieties uprooted by modernity. Twentieth-century critics reveal that racial anxieties or "whispers of Norbury" are still very much a menace, threatening to explode at the blink of an unseeing eye.

189. Hunter-Purvis, Mark. "Review--'Sherlock Holmes and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle in Edinburgh' by Charles Hall and Peter Blythe." The Ritual, no. 15 (1995): 55.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Offers interesting discussions of Sherlockian and Doylean plays performed in Edinburgh (mostly during the Edinburgh Festival Fringe), Conan Doyle's speeches and lectures in Edinburgh, and memorials to him in Edinburgh, with amusing artwork by Hall."

190. Huntington, Tom. "Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's Edinburgh." British Heritage 23, no. 3 (2002): 33.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents the life and works of writer Sir Arthur Conan Doyle in Edinburgh, Scotland. Full name of Doyle; Alma mater of Doyle; Family background; Problems with alcoholism.

191. James, P. D. "Book review / From diagnosis to deduction; The Doctor, the Detective and Arthur Conan Doyle by

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- Martin Booth, Hodder & Stoughton, pounds 20." The Independent (London), August 23, 1997: 6.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...It was a full and interesting life, well lived, but it is doubtful whether either his virtues or his eccentricities would have justified this or previous biographies were it not for his creation of a single fictional character, Sherlock Holmes. This is not a judgement which would have afforded satisfaction to Conan Doyle. In placing this achievement in relation to the author's life, Martin Booth has had to rely on previously published records and material, since for some decades biographers have been denied access to Conan Doyle's private papers. Given this prohibition it would be unreasonable to expect new insights and fresh discoveries. Booth has written a conscientious and comprehensive account of his subject's life from the material available; if we wish to find our way to the essential man, we need look little further than his work...."
192. Jamieson, Teddy. "Return to the Lost World of Conan Doyle; If you want to retrace the footsteps of Sherlock Holmes's creator in his native Edinburgh, you'll need to do a little detective work." The Herald (Glasgow), January 31, 2009: 12.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...Me, I'm trying to get my head round Conan Doyle's Edinburgh and [Allan] Foster, who's hugely knowledgeable and entertaining company, is the man to help me. Sherlock Holmes's creator was born in the city (in 1859, making this the 150th anniversary of his birth) and studied medicine here before leaving Scotland. Foster knows where Conan Doyle bought his books and where he took a drink. And this bright blue Monday morning he's agreed to show me around the Edinburgh that the author knew...."
193. Jann, Rosemary. "Sherlock's Men: Masculinity, Conan Doyle, and Cultural History (review)." Victorian Studies 42, no. 2 (2000): 314-316.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of Sherlock's Men: Masculinity, Conan Doyle, and Cultural History, by Joseph A. Kestner; pp. viii + 250. Aldershot and Brookfield, VT: Ashgate, 1997, GBP45.00, $72.95.
194. Jury, Louise. "Conan Doyle's Manuscripts Reveal a Meticulous Chronicler." The Independent (London), December 2, 2004: 22.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Recently acquired papers and manuscripts belonging to Sherlock Holmes's creator, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, reveal him to be a meticulous chronicler of the minutiae of his life. He detailed seances he attended, the books he read, the cricket matches he played in (including bowling out W G Grace), the number of words he wrote and what he was paid in a series of notebooks which are part of a treasure trove of more than 2,000 documents obtained by the British Library this year...."
195. Kegley, Jerry. "Arthur Conan Doyle and the Second Boer War." Baker Street West 17, no. 2 (2001): 24-27.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
196. Kehoe, John. "The Case of the Murderous Author." Biography 4, no. 5 (2000): 114.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Focuses on the reasons for the attempts of author Arthur Conan Doyle to kill his fictitious character [sic], Sherlock Holmes. Background of the character's creation and development; Public outcry over the publication of the book 'The Final Problem,' which related Holmes' death."
197. Kemp, Peter. "Conan Doyle to the rescue." Sunday Times (London), June 26, 2005: 37.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...When cattle in the vicinity are viciously slashed, things take an even more macabre turn. Soon the press is clamouring about The Great Wyrley Outrages. It sounds like a case for Sherlock Holmes. And, indeed, the sleuth who eventually sets out to disentangle the gruesome affair is Sherlock Holmes's creator, Arthur Conan Doyle. Unlike Holmes's exploits, though, the situation at the centre of Julian Barnes's richly accomplished new novel isn't fantasy but fact. Taking a real-life whodunit, Arthur & George transforms it into a dazzling exercise in detective fiction of more kinds than one...."
198. Kerr, Alison. "Anything but elementary." The Herald (Glasgow), June 26, 2000: 13.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Tribute is being paid this week to Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, creator of the world's favourite detective, and a complex character in his own right For over a century, the world has been fascinated and captivated by the character and adventures of Sherlock Holmes, literature's most famous private detective. With his astounding powers of deduction and phenomenal intuition skills, Holmes paved the way, not only for the hundreds of literary detectives of the twentieth century, but also for the superhuman heroes of comic books and cartoon strips. Holmes was the creation of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, the Scottish doctor turned writer who died 70 years ago this month, an anniversary which is being marked from Saturday with a short season of programmes on Radio 4...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

199. Kestner, Joseph A. "Real' men: Construction of masculinity in the Sherlock Holmes narratives." Studies in the Literary Imagination 29, no. 1 (1996): 73.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents an analysis of several Sherlock Holmes stories by Arthur Conan Doyle, and his attempt to construct masculinity. Discussion of several of the Holmes narratives about art; Excerpts from 'Copper Beeches,' 'The Empty House' and 'A Case of Identity'; Construction of masculinity; Views on realism.
200. Key, Jack D., Marc A. Shampo, and Robert A. Kyle. "Doyle, Holmes, and Watson--a 'Special' Trinity." Mayo Clinic proceedings 80, no. 6 (2005): 722-722.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "This article focuses on physicians Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, John Watson and William Sherlock Holmes. Arthur Conan Doyle was both a physician and a versatile author of historical novels, short stories, volumes of poems, plays, histories, science fiction, and publications on occult science. Holmes and Watson are 2 of the most immediately recognizable figures in popular culture. Their images have been adapted countless times for innumerable purposes. Biographical data concerning them can be drawn from the research efforts of Holmesian authorities. Arthur Conan Doyle, Sherlock Holmes, and John Watson were honored on a set of 4 stamps showing scenes from the adventures of Sherlock Holmes."
201. Kimball, Miles A. "'A Benefactor of the Race': Sherlock Holmes, Voyeurism, and Victorian Readers." Kentucky Philological Review 9, no. (1994): 16-22.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
202. Kington, Miles. "When the Writer Becomes the Star." The Independent (London), July 25, 2005: 32.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...'Well,' said Pranger, 'it's very odd when the writer becomes the star. Almost always, the fictional creation outshines the creator. Harry Potter overshadows Rowling. James Bond is big, Ian Fleming is small. Who remembers who created Tarzan? And until now Conan Doyle has been blotted out by the wretched Sherlock Holmes. But suddenly, Conan Doyle has bounced back. 'There was a novel which came out the other day by Julian Barnes, all about a real-life case in which Conan Doyle really did help to prove that a man had been wrongfully imprisoned. Conan Doyle as true life Sherlock Holmes. Good story. Surprised it hasn't been turned into a musical by Lloyd Webber or Ben Elton. And then there is this renewed attempt to prove that Conan Doyle was a murderer.'..."
203. Kobayashi, Tsukasa, and Akane Higashiyama. "Doyle's Unconscious Exposed in the Holmes Stories (translated by Harold Brown from Esperanto)." Shoso-In Bulletin 8, no. (1998): 181-185.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
204. Krasner, James. "Arthur Conan Doyle as Doctor and Writer." Mosaic: A Journal for the Interdisciplinary Study of Literature 33, no. 4 (2000): 19.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Examines the nature of the medical and detective fiction of Arthur Conan Doyle, a doctor turned writer. Value of narrative approach to engagements between doctor and patient; Utilization of storytelling in medical practice by medical ethicists; Factors influencing the writings of Doyle; Depiction of the different features of medical life in Doyle's works.
205. Laws, Roz. "The Week: Murder Mystery; Why Conan Doyle Killed Off Sherlock Holmes." Sunday Mercury, July 24, 2005: 8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Imagine the fuss if TV executives decided to axe Coronation Street. Or if JK Rowling killed off Harry Potter. That's the modern-day equivalent of what happened in 1893 when Arthur Conan Doyle shocked his fans. He sent his infamous creation of Sherlock Holmes to his death at the Reichenbach Falls, prompting public outrage, scandalised headlines in the press and even hate mail. The backlash was so great that he was later forced to resurrect his hero. Now a new feature-length drama, The Strange Case Of Sherlock Holmes And Arthur Conan Doyle (BBC2, Wednesday), shows what was in Doyle's mind when he made the decision...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

206. Levy, Paul. "Personal Journal; Review / Book: Strong Novels Vie For Man Booker." Wall Street Journal, Oct 7, 2005: P.1.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...The favorite, at 5 to 4, is Julian Barnes's supremely well-constructed 'Arthur & George' (Jonathan Cape, 352 pages, GBP 17.99). A true story of Arthur Conan Doyle, the creator of Sherlock Holmes, and his involvement in the real-life mystery of George Edalji, a gentle, half-Parsee lawyer accused of brutality to animals, this is one of Mr. Barnes's richly complex fictions, like his 'Flaubert's Parrot' or 'A History of the World in 101/2 Chapters,' rather than the more straightforward works (which I also love, such as 'Before She Met Me' or 'Talking It Over'). For my money, Mr. Barnes is the best novelist of his talented generation; we're in the hands of a master, but there is something bloodless about this tightly plotted, completely controlled narrative, with its on-purpose, single loose end that tells the reader that not everything, including Conan Doyle's being a sucker for spiritualism, is as tidy as it seems...."

207. Lewis, Peter. "It's elementary my dear Watson, I've been misunderstood." Daily Mail (London), March 24, 2000: 60.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of Teller of Tales: The Life of Arthur Conan Doyle by Daniel Stashower (Penguin Press, 18.99). "Everyone knows the standard portrait of the creator of Sherlock Holmes: he was the bluff Scottish doctor with no patients who based his immortal detective on his onetime teacher, Dr Joseph Bell of Edinburgh. He killed off Holmes because he was tired of him, reluctantly brought him back to make a fortune and spent the rest of his life writing unread historical novels and going barmy about spirits and fairies. So a book about the other side of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle is overdue. This well-told tale by an American crime writer is constantly surprising and shrewdly entertaining. It left me viewing Conan Doyle with enhanced respect as an honourable and quixotic man...."

208. Liebman, Arthur, and David H. Galerstein. "The Sign of the Moonstone." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 2 (1994): 71-74.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Some observations on the influence of Wilkie Collins on Doyle and the parallels between Collins' The Moonstone and Doyle's The Sign of Four.

209. Lister, David. "Was Sherlock Holmes born of an ill mind?" The Times (London), February 19, 2007: 8.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "His most famous creation was a master detective who applied his forensic intellect and powers of deduction to solve the most baffling of murder mysteries. But while Sherlock Holmes believed that reason made everything 'elementary', his creator, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, was at times so irrational and deluded that he may have been suffering from schizophrenia, according to a new biography. Arthur Conan Doyle: Beyond Sherlock Holmes, by Andrew Norman, a former GP turned biographer, uses the Edinburgh-born writer's medical records, family history and fictional works to suggest that his obsession with the occult was the result of a mental illness inherited from his father...."

210. Lord, Graham. "Begorra, c'est elementaire, Miss Watson." The Sunday Times (London), May 19, 1996: 6.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Sherlock Holmes has been claimed by the French, but could have been Irish - and what about the doctor? Sherlock Holmes was not only partly French he probably came from Ireland. Pukka chaps who believe the great Baker Street detective was 100% British were appalled to learn on Thursday that a new Paris exhibition claims Holmes as French and says his grandmother, Emilie Vernet, died on the guillotine during the French revolution. Now the secretary of the Sherlock Holmes Society of London, Commander Geoffrey Stavert, suggests the detective was an Irishman...."

211. Lyall, Sarah. "A new case worthy of Sherlock himself." International Herald Tribune, May 19, 2004: 1.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "For 25 years the cardboard boxes, 15 of them, sat in a corner of a London solicitor's office, gathering dust while lawyers argued about who they belonged to and scholars dreamed about what was inside. But the auction on Wednesday of their contents 3,000 letters, manuscripts, papers and other items belonging to Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, the creator of Sherlock Holmes has provoked another angry fight and a mystery almost worthy of Holmes himself. The Conan Doyle archive, which includes the author's unpublished first novel, a rich cache of family letters and handwritten literary notebooks full of research and

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

musings about works in progress, is expected to fetch about 11 million, according to Christie's, which is handling the sale. But even as the auction house plays host to excited Conan Doyle collectors, it has been criticized by some scholars and members of Parliament for allowing the sale to go ahead when, they say, several important legal questions remain unresolved...."

212. ———. "A Tussle Over a Cache of Conan Doyle's Artifacts Ends With an Auction." New York Times, May 19, 2004: E.1.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Similar to her article in the International Herald Tribune. "...The unavailability of the material has frustrated and tantalized Conan Doyle scholars for years. A 1949 biography by the American mystery writer John Dickson Carr drew on the papers and included a list without going into detail about their contents, and a French biographer read them in the 1960's, but no researchers have been allowed to see them since. 'Having access to these papers will really open things up,' Miss Cooke said. But like some other Conan Doyle scholars, she is troubled by the sale, she said. There is the fear that the collection would be broken up and sold to anonymous collectors uninterested in making them available to academics. And there is a concern about the murky disposition of what remains of Conan Doyle's prodigious estate...."

213. Lycett, Andrew. "Adultery, My Dear Watson." The Guardian (London), Sep 15, 2007: 22.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

214. ———. "...and Clues from a Master Detective." The Times (London), September 29, 2007: 15.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...The ingredients that make this consulting detective's exploits as fresh today as when they were written (mostly more than a century ago) are an engaging mixture of character, incident, dialogue and plot -the last providing the structure that allows the stories to unfold. The first person to analyse this was Ronald Knox, who initiated the mock serious scrutiny of the 'canon' in 1911 when he addressed the Gryphon Club in Oxford on Studies in the Literature of Sherlock Holmes...."

215. MacDonald, Marianne. "Sherlock Holmes fan wins his case in US golf case." The Independent (London), July 25, 1995: 6.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "One of the world's most important collections of Sherlock Holmes memorabilia sold for almost pounds 150,000 at Sotheby's yesterday, but confirmed fears that many of the best items would go abroad. The books, posters, pipes and magazines had been amassed by Stanley MacKenzie, an expert "Sherlockian". His wife put up the collection for auction after his death aged 82 in February. It was the most significant sale of Holmes memorabilia for 15 years and attended by fans and experts from across the world. Many smaller collectors were dismayed by the prices many of the books, magazines and posters fetched. In many cases these were double the estimate, but sometimes more...."

216. Mahoney, Mark. "Death and cricket." American Editor 82, no. 4 (2007): 5-5.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article states that the "Independent of London" reported the publication of an entire book of strange obituaries about human and nonhuman individuals involved in the cricket sport. The book is a collection of strange obituaries published by the Wisden Cricketers' Almanack of cricket-related obituaries 1892. The book includes the obituaries of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, Anthony Ainley, Donald Eligon, Alexander Miller-Hallett, George Cecil Petter, and for a cat named "Peter the Cat."

217. McArthur, Douglas. "Hot on the trail of the master of deduction A white company? A scarlet study? Five orange pips? Look for these -- and Sherlock Holmes himself -- in the countryside that Arthur Conan Doyle once called home." The Globe and Mail (Toronto), June 5, 1999: F3.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Account of a tour with Philip Weller. "My friend Peter is a Sherlockian, North America's term for otherwise sane folk who go gaga over Sherlock Holmes. The guide he had prearranged for a day tour in southern England was a Holmesian -- the British name for people similarly obsessed...."

218. McCarter, Jeremy. "One-Hit Wonder." New York Times Book Review 157, no. 54174 (2007): 15-15.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the books "The Man Who Created Sherlock Holmes: The Life and Times of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle," by Andrew Lycett and "Arthur Conan Doyle: A Life in Letters," edited by Jon Lellenberg, Daniel Stashower and Charles Foley.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

219. McDermid, Val. "Crime and the literary solution;Scotland is the spiritual home of the crime thriller but, after Wilkie Collins, the genre's greatest exponent remains an enigma." The Sunday Herald, February 20, 2000: 11.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of Teller of Tales: The Life of Arthur Conan Doyle by Daniel Stashower (Penguin, 18.99). "Sherlock Holmes, like Coca Cola, is a brand name recognised across the globe. There are societies dedicated to studying the canon; a monthly magazine devoted to all matters Sherlockian; websites and newsgroups on the internet that discuss the great detective; and hundreds of novels and short stories picking up the character where his creator left off. Since the death of Conan Doyle, Holmes has been resurrected to meet Freud, to solve the Jack the Ripper murders, even to marry a young heiress 40 years his junior. And the house where Conan Doyle grew up in Edinburgh is marked not by a statue to the man himself, but by one of Holmes. But who is the man behind the myth? That is the question Daniel Stashower attempts to answer in this new biography...."
220. McIntyre, Ian. "Elementary clues to a study in obstinacy." The Times (London), December 21, 1995: 1.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of Conan Doyle, by Michael Coren, Bloomsbury, Pounds 18.99. "A new life of the man who created Sherlock Holmes fails to explain his abiding obsession with spiritualism, argues Ian McIntyre....Coren, praised here and in America for his biographies of Wells and Chesterton, defines his intention as being to describe Conan Doyle the man an amalgam of the doctor, the adventurer, the journalist and above all the spiritualist. He concedes that it is what Holmes once called 'quite a three-pipe problem'. The conclusion at the end of this too-brief biographical sketch must be that on this occasion Coren did not have enough tobacco in his pouch."
221. McKuras, Julie. "50 Years Ago." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 5, no. 2 (2001): 3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on a file in the John Bennett Shaw Collection labeled "Conan Doyle Signature Hoax" involving a mystery that took place in Shrewsbury in 1915 and apparently went unnoticed until 1951.
222. ———. "50 Years Ago." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 3, no. 1 (1999): 3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Highlights the 1949 publication of John Dickson Carr's biography, The Life of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle.
223. ———. "100 Years Ago." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 3, no. 1 (1999): 2.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Highlights an article by Gertrude Bacon in the June 1899 Strand Magazine entitled "Pigs of Celebrities" that features artwork by Arthur Conan Doyle.
224. McPherson, Lynn. "Sherlock Holmes Author 'Killed His Rival'." Sunday Mail, July 27, 2008: 11.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "It reads like the plot from one of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes novels. A top writer steals the idea for his most famous novel from a friend - then has him killed. But Holmes enthusiast Dr Rodger Garrick-Steele is convinced that's exactly what the legendary Scots writer did a century ago. He claims Conan Doyle stole the outline of The Hound Of The Baskervilles from his friend, former Daily Express editor Fletcher Robinson. And when Robinson threatened to expose the author, Conan Doyle had him poisoned...."
225. McVeigh, Tracy. "Sleuth calls for Conan Doyle's love rival to be dug from grave: Behind the fictions penned by the creator of Sherlock Holmes lies a bizarre literary tale of intrigue and mystery." The Observer, October 15, 2000: 6.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Was Britain's greatest crime-writer and creator of the world's best-known detective novel also a killer and adulterer? The allegations have been dismissed as 'ludicrous' by the Sherlock Holmes Society, but now author Rodger Garrick-Steele is hoping to prove his case beyond doubt with the proceeds of a film planned on the subject. For 11 years he has gathered evidence to show that Sir Arthur Conan Doyle actually poisoned a man whose work he then plagiarised. The modern-day sleuth plans to have the alleged victim's body exhumed and tested to prove his theory...."
226. Mendick, Robert. "Was Conan Doyle a Killer and a Thief?: Scotland Yard Detectives to Investigate Allegation of

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- Dark Secret Behind the Greatest of Sherlock Holmes' Mysteries." The Independent (London), September 10, 2000: 3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "When you have eliminated the impossible, whatever remains, however improbable, must be the truth.' Now the enduring maxim of that most cerebral of detectives Sherlock Holmes is being put to the test. It is a mystery as dark as any of those for which his creator Sir Arthur Conan Doyle is so justly celebrated - or is he? For Scotland Yard detectives are to investigate the death, almost a century ago, of a close acquaintance of the writer - and the man accused of murder is Conan Doyle himself. And the motive? According to the research, he stole the work, The Hound of the Baskervilles - and then poisoned the true author to cover up the plagiarism...."
227. Metress, Christopher. "Book reviews." Victorian Studies 37, no. 4 (1994): 622.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'Critical Essays on Sir Arthur Conan Doyle,' edited by Harold Orel.
228. Michelson, Theresa. "Reviews: Non-fiction." Book Report 18, no. 2 (1999): 66.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'The Mysterious Case of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle,' by Cynthia Adams. "Young aficionados of Sherlock Holmes will be interested in this biography of Arthur Conan Doyle, which begins with his early life as a poor boy growing up in Edinburgh, the eldest son in a large Roman Catholic family. Giving sufficient attention to the roots and development of Doyle's creative gifts as a writer and storyteller, Adams shows how Doyle created and developed the character of Sherlock Holmes while working as a medical doctor, why he killed him off at the height of Holmes' popularity, and how he brought this incredibly popular fictional detective back for an adoring public. She succeeds in making major contemporary events in which Doyle was involved, such as the Boer War, understandable to a young audience. Doyle's complexity as a writer and an individual are suggested in the narrative, but the shortness of the biography allows Adams time only for a straightforward, uncomplicated treatment of his life. If Doyle is studied in your curriculum, this book will get some use from Sherlock Holmes fans. Recommended."
229. Millar, Anna. "The tragic case of Conan Doyle." The Scotsman, no. (2007).
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Article about an upcoming book, Arthur Conan Doyle: Beyond Sherlock Holmes, to be published on March 5. "A former GP last night sparked a literary row after claiming to have unearthed proof that Sir Arthur Conan Doyle was schizophrenic. Doctor turned author Andrew Norman makes the claim in a new book, which uses Conan Doyle's medical records, family history and fictional works as evidence for his claim. Arthur Conan Doyle: Beyond Sherlock Holmes, a biography due out next month, alleges that the Edinburgh-born author inherited the mental condition from his father Charles...."
230. Moskowitz, Sam. "Studies in Science Fiction: Arthur Conan Doyle." The Ritual, no. 25 (2000): 33-46.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
231. Muller, Alexandra. "Sleuthing Conan Doyle." New Criterion 26, no. 10 (2008): 25-29.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews two books related to surgeon and writer Arthur Conan Doyle including "The Man Who Created Sherlock Holmes: The Life and Times of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle," by Andrew Lycett and "Arthur Conan Doyle: A Life in Letters," by Jon Lellenberg, Daniel Stashower and Charles Foley.
232. O'Hagan, Simon. "Books: the Game's Afoot! it could be a Case for Sherlock Holmes ; Arthur & George by Julian Barnes Cape GBP17.99 GBP16.99 (P&P)." Independent on Sunday (London), July 3, 2005: 23.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of the book. "...Indeed, it's one of Barnes's best, a beautiful and engrossing work which brings together some classic Barnesian themes (love, identity), introduces some new ones (spirituality, guilt and innocence), and hangs them all on a real-life miscarriage of justice from 100 years ago that was always going to be a gift for the first writer to spot its potential for re-imagining...."
233. Ohara, Gerald F. "Sherlock Holmes; the Alberta Connection." Alberta History [Canada] 36, no. 3 (1988): 11-14.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Sir Arthur Conan Doyle visited Alberta in 1914 and 1923, and left his mark in the form of a proposed golf course, a Jasper church dedication, and a poem called "The Athabasca Trail." He also

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- kept a diary describing his experiences and wrote a book, Memories and Adventures.
234. Olding, Alan C. "Letter to the Editor ('The 100th Anniversary of the Death of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle')." Shoso-In Bulletin 5, no. (1995): 144.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
235. Otter, Charlotte. "Holmes hounded by lovelorn women." Daily Mail (London), October 23, 2008: 26.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Sherlock Holmes received marriage proposals from women convinced he was a real person. The revelation comes in a newly released recording of an interview with the fictional detective's creator, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. Speaking to a BBC presenter in May, 1930 - just weeks before his death - he told how he had modelled his hero on Scots forensic science pioneer Joseph Bell. The Edinburgh-born author said: 'The result was Sherlock Holmes and the result surprised me very much as I learned that many schools of detection working around the world, from France, Egypt and China, founded their system on that of Holmes. 'For many, he seemed like a real person and I even received letters addressed to him which included proposals of marriage.' The rare recording - believed to be Conan Doyle's sole radio interview - has been released on a set of British Library CDs featuring the voices of leading 20th century UK and American authors...."
236. Owen, Richard. "Sherlock Holmes and the curious case of a scholar who detects the Bible in Conan Doyle's tales." The Times (London), November 7, 2002: 20.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...The Sherlock Holmes novels were partly based on biblical stories and themes, despite Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's professed rejection of Christianity, according to a book by a Vatican scholar. Mario Palmaro, who teaches philosophy at the Regina Apostolorum Pontifical University in Rome, argues that Conan Doyle was influenced 'both consciously and unconsciously' by his early education by Jesuits. In particular, Supernatural, My Dear Watson: Sherlock Holmes and the Case of God claims that Holmes's struggle to the death with his archenemy Moriarty, and his subsequent revival in other books, mirrors Christ's Resurrection....'
237. Paterson, Peter. "Conan the barbarian." Daily Mail (London), July 28, 2005: 53.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The Strange Case Of Sherlock Holmes And Arthur Conan Doyle (BBC2). "To make a story from the life of a real historical character, it is usually best to ignore the obvious and attribute his actions and behaviour to the most complicated explanation. Especially if you are contracted to fill 90 minutes of primetime TV. Filling the allotted span seemed to be a burden for last night's psychodrama, The Strange Case Of Sherlock Holmes And Arthur Conan Doyle...."
238. Pearce, D. N. "The illness of Dr George Turnavine Budd and its influence on the literary career of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle." Journal of Medical Biography 3, no. 4 (1995): 236-238.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
239. ———. "Sherlock Holmes, Conan Doyle and cocaine." J Hist Neurosci 3, no. 4 (1994): 227-32.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
240. Pendreigh, Brian. "Family's 'shame' gave birth to Sherlock Holmes; New TV drama claims drunken father was Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's model for his drug-abusing detective." The Sunday Herald, November 28, 2004: 7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "A new television drama about Sherlock Holmes starring some of Scotland's top acting talent will suggest the fictional detective was based on author Arthur Conan Doyle's alcoholic father. The similarities between Holmes and Charles Doyle were never acknowledged by the author, who enjoyed fame and fortune while his father was secretly shut away in a mental institution. The drama's producer, Richard Downes, believes Charles Doyle's death in 1893 may have caused Conan Doyle to suffer a nervous breakdown and kill off his father's literary alter ego - only to resurrect him eight years later after sorting out his own personal demons...."
241. ———. "What's the big Holmes secret? It's elementary; New BBC drama claims Conan Doyle's alcoholic father explains flaws in the great detective." Mail on Sunday (London), November 28, 2004: 44-45.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Sherlock Holmes was the hero of dozens of classic detective novels, baffling the hapless Dr Watson with his powers of deduction. But the image of the cold, calculating Victorian gentleman always sat slightly awkwardly with his mood swings and his liking for cocaine. Now BBC producer Richard Downes believes he may have solved the mystery, controversially attributing Holmes's darker side to author Arthur Conan Doyle's alcoholic father...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

242. Pfeiffer, John R., and Richard E. Winslow Iii. "A Continuing Checklist of Shaviana." Shaw: The Annual of Bernard Shaw Studies 23, no. (2003): 181-201.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Lists books by and about the Irish playwright George Bernard Shaw. Includes one entry (p. 200) with reference to Doyle. 'The Titanic.' The Chronicles of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. April 2002. 19 April 2003; www.siracd.com/life_titanic.shtml. "This article is virtually entirely devoted to a recollection of the disagreement between Shaw and Doyle about how the Titanic disaster was characterized in the press. This entry is offered as an example of the choice to mention GBS by this Doyle Web site, reporting as well in a sidebar that Shaw once called Sherlock Holmes 'a drug addict without a single amiable trait.'"
243. Pirie, David. "The dark secrets of Conan Doyle." Sunday Times (London), June 10, 2001: 10.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Although Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, the creator of Sherlock Holmes, ranks among the most famous of all Victorian writers, his life is shrouded in as much mystery as one of his stories. The pictures we have of a crusty Victorian grandee give no hint that poor Arthur almost certainly grew up in the full knowledge of his mother's infidelity with a young lodger, who supplanted his drunken, insane father at the head of his family's breakfast table. Instead, countless biographers have rehearsed what is known, even though this has largely been controlled by Conan Doyle himself, for not a single researcher has had unhampered access to his personal papers. Indeed, following bitter legal battles, these papers have not been seen for half a century, and nobody can say for sure where they are, or if they have been destroyed. In researching my novel, The Patient's Eyes (as well as the original Murder Rooms television drama and those that follow this autumn), I have been consistently amazed by what I have found. That Conan Doyle suppressed many facts, especially about his early life, has never been in doubt. But even in the published writing, such as his autobiography, there are many clues to the truth...."
244. Powell, Adam. "Where did Conan Doyle first meet Sherlock and Moriarty? Elementary school my dear Watson; Solved, mystery that baffled Holmes fans." Daily Mail (London), June 24, 2002: 31.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Their names are inseparably linked in literary history. Sherlock Holmes and Professor Moriarty - the world's greatest detective and the evil genius whose name has become a byword for a criminal mastermind. But until now the inspiration for Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's two greatest creations has remained a mystery. However a simple glance at the attendance register for Stonyhurst College in 1868 has revealed that the then plain Arthur Doyle spent three years at school with a Patrick Sherlock and two Moriarty brothers, John and Michael. The logic, as Holmes would say, is elementary...."
245. Propson, David. "Sir Arthur Conundrum Doyle." Wall Street Journal - Eastern Edition, 12/08, 2007: W12.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the books "The Man Who Created Sherlock Holmes," by Andrew Lycett and "Arthur Conan Doyle: A Life in Letters," edited by Jon Lellenberg, Daniel Stashower and Charles Foley.
246. Pugh, Brian W., Philip Weller, and Gary Lovisi. "Book Review (Doylean Links With London and Naples)." Shoso-In Bulletin 13, no. (2003): 156-157.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
247. Purdon, Charles J. "Arthur Conan Doyle and Marksmanship." Canadian Holmes 19, no. 3 (1996): 11-13.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
248. Ramsey, Terry. "Elementary flaws spoil this Holmes." The Evening Standard (London), July 27, 2005: 19.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of "The Strange Case Of Sherlock Holmes And Arthur Conan Doyle," BBC2. "Television is in its summer doldrums at the moment (as I am sure you will have noticed), which means we have to be grateful for any new, adventurous, individual drama that comes our way. But exactly how much gratitude we should feel for this confused - and confusing - work is questionable. That's not to say its version of the life of Victorian writer Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, and his relationship with his most famous character, Sherlock Holmes, doesn't have its memorable moments - just that it also has some very frustrating ones...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

249. Redmond, Christopher. "Book Review--'Sir Arthur Conan Doyle: Interviews and Recollections,' edited by Harold Orel." Baker Street Miscellanea, no. 75 (1994): 40-43.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
250. Richardson, David. "Literary Agent, Redactor, or." The Holmes & Watson Report 7, no. 5 (2003): 4-6.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
251. Roden, Christopher. "Review--'The Hilltop Writers' by W. R. Trotter." The Ritual, no. 18 (1996): 70-71.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
252. Rodin, Alvin E., Catherine Cooke, and Kevin Brown. "Arthur Conan Doyle in London, Part II, St. Mary's Hospital: Medicine, Spiritualism and Sion." Baker Street Miscellanea, no. 74 (1994): 37-48.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
253. Rosenblum, Trudi Miller. "Adult Audio For Fall." Publishers Weekly 248, no. 32 (2001): 35.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a list of several audiotapes for adults including Naxos Audiobooks Arthur Conan Doyle: A Life by Hesketh Pearson. Read by Tim Pigott-Smith. Abridged, two cassettes, 2.5 hours, $13.98; two CDs, $15.98. Oct.
254. Sawyers, June. "Arthur Conan Doyle: A Life in Letters." Booklist 104, no. 5 (2007): 14.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book "A Life in Letters: Arthur Conan Doyle."
255. Seaman, Donna. "Maps and Legends: Essays on Reading and Writing along the Borderlands." Booklist 104, no. 13 (2008): 28.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book "Essays on Reading and Writing along the Borderlands: Maps and Legends" by Michael Chabon. "...He offers a fresh and affecting take on Arthur Conan Doyle and pays witty and provocative tribute to M. R. James, a seemingly serene British author of superb horror and ghost stories...."
256. Simmons, Clare A. "Tennyson and Conan Doyle: Two Medieval Worlds, One Empire." Baker Street Miscellanea, no. 74 (1994): 26.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
257. Simmons, Diane. "The curse of empire: Grandiosity and guilt in the stories of Arthur Conan Doyle." Psychoanalytic Review. Electronic; 89, no. 4 (2002): 533-556.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Argues that during the later years of empire, English popular literature took on the task of managing a repressed but corrosive guilt over imperial "loot," a constant battle against a feared "curse" of empire. One of the writers to step up to that challenge was Arthur Conan Doyle, whose phenomenally popular detective, Sherlock Holmes, not only provides near magical solutions to problems besetting the English, but also explains guilt in terms of foreign contamination. The author explores the view of the imperial relationship as a narcissistic one in which it is the dual sense of self--the alternation between grandiosity on one hand, and a terrified sense of guilt, loss, and vulnerability to destruction on the other--that is the hallmark of narcissistic disturbance. A further understanding of this disturbance may provide a tool with which to probe the psychology of the British imperial public and finally the role of Sherlock Holmes in managing imperial duality. If the dangers in the Sherlock Holmes stories described by the author reveal a narcissistic vulnerability, then this vulnerability is balanced by a study in grandiosity, the omniscient and omnipotent detective Sherlock Holmes.
258. Snyder, Laura J. "Sherlock Holmes: scientific detective." Endeavour 28, no. 3 (2004): 104-108.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Sherlock Holmes was intended by his creator, Arthur Conan Doyle, to be a 'scientific detective'. Conan Doyle criticized his predecessor Edgar Allan Poe for giving his creation --

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Inspector Dupin -- only the 'illusion' of scientific method. Conan Doyle believed that he had succeeded where Poe had failed; thus, he has Watson remark that Holmes has 'brought detection as near an exact science as it will ever be brought into the world.' By examining Holmes' methods, it becomes clear that Conan Doyle modelled them on certain images of science that were popular in mid- to late-19th century Britain. Contrary to a common view, it is also evident that rather than being responsible for the invention of forensic science, the creation of Holmes was influenced by the early development of it." [Abstract from author]

259. Sodeman, William A., Jr. "Sherlock Holmes and tropical medicine: A centennial appraisal." American Journal of Tropical Medicine & Hygiene 50, no. 1 (1994): 99-101.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Sir Arthur Conan Doyle incorporated an unidentified tropical disease as a murder weapon in the Sherlock Holmes story, "The Dying Detective," written in 1913. Documentary and circumstantial evidence suggests that the disease mentioned was melioidosis. The description of the newly identified disease occurred shortly before Doyle's death. Doyle's other works at the time reflect a consistent interest in tropical disease.
260. Stashower, Daniel. "100 Years Ago: Is "S.S.T." the Love-child of Bigfoot?" Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 5, no. 3 (2001): 2, 8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Comments and observations on the article "Is Doyle a Plagiarist?" in a 1901 issue of The University of Virginia Magazine by an anonymous author, S. S. T., that "presents his readers with the assertion that Conan Doyle has plagiarized the essential elements of the character of Sherlock Holmes from Poe's fictional sleuth, C. Auguste Dupin."
261. Strebeigh, Fred. "To His Modern Fans, Sherlock is Still Worth a Close Look." Smithsonian 17, no. 9 (1986): 60-66, 68-69.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Author of historical works and of studies of spiritualism, British physician Arthur Conan Doyle (1859-1930) is remembered chiefly for his prolific outpouring of detective stories about the fictional Sherlock Holmes, who, in the century after the first tale was published, remains a hero to his fans around the world, most particularly in the United States.
262. Sully, Andrew. "The 08 Olympics. . . 1908, that is." 7 August 2008, no. (2008): 1.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Discusses the 1908 Olympic Games, and ACD's possible involvement in helping Dorando Pietri across the finish line in the marathon is mentioned. The article does use the word 'possibly', and also gives a brief mention of ACD's attempts to help Pietri after the games; a quote from the author is given in a sidebar."
263. Sussman, Herbert L. "Arthur Conan Doyle and the Meaning of Masculinity, and: Conrad and Masculinity (review)." Victorian Studies 44, no. 3 (2002): 536-539.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of Arthur Conan Doyle and the Meaning of Masculinity, by Diana Barsham; pp. viii + 312. Aldershot and Brookfield, VT: Ashgate, 2000, GBP49.50, $69.95; and Conrad and Masculinity, by Andrew Michael Roberts; pp. xi + 250. Basingstoke and New York: Palgrave, 2001, GBP45.00, $55.00. Multiple references to Doyle and Holmes.
264. Sutherland, John. "The mysterious waller." Tls, no. (1997): 30.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'The Doctor, The Detective, and Arthur Conan Doyle: A Biography of Arthur Conan Doyle,' by Martin Booth.
265. Sveum, Richard J. "100 Years Ago." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 4, no. 1 (2000): 2.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Highlights the publication of the final installment of Grant Allen's "Hilda Wade" and makes some additional observations on Allen and Doyle's friendship with Allen.
266. Taves, Brian. "Forgotten Influences of Jules Verne on Sir Arthur Conan Doyle." Baker Street West 13, no. 3 (1997): 9-10.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

267. Terr, Stephen. "Millennium memories: Sir Arthur Conan Doyle." Evening Times (Glasgow), January 3, 2001: 10.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Very brief biographical sketch of Doyle.
268. Thomas, Ronald R. "The Fingerprint of the Foreigner: Colonizing the Criminal Body in 1890s Detective Fiction and Criminal Anthropology." ELH 61, no. 3 (1994): 655-83.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Extensive reference to Doyle and Holmes. "This essay examines the relationship between George Eliot's representation of the Jewish body in "Daniel Deronda" and Francis Galton's photographic race-science. It argues that, for both Eliot and Galton, Jewish racial identity is, paradoxically, defined..."
269. Thompson, Kenneth. "Victorian Detective Fiction and the Nature of Evidence: The Scientific Investigations of Poe, Dickens, and Doyle (review)." Victorian Studies 47, no. 4 (2006): 609-611.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of Victorian Detective Fiction and the Nature of Evidence: The Scientific Investigations of Poe, Dickens, and Doyle, by Lawrence Frank; pp. x + 249. Basingstoke and New York: Palgrave Macmillan, 2003, GBP47.50, $90.00. Contains multiple references to Doyle and Holmes.
270. Travis, Alan. "G-men rallied to aid Sherlock Holmes : Scotland Yard turned to FBI to find Conan Doyle collection." The Guardian (London), February 15, 2001: 8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "J. Edgar Hoover called in his special network of 'G-men' when Scotland Yard turned to the FBI for help in solving the case of the disappearance of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's crime library from his house at Crowborough in Sussex. The Metropolitan police case file released yesterday at the public record office shows that Conan Doyle's two sons and heirs, Denis and Adrian, appealed for Scotland Yard's help in 1945 when an American magazine led them to suspect that the collection of real crime stories their father had used to create the plots and character of Sherlock Holmes stories had been stolen...."
271. Trump, Simon. "Conan Doyle Accused of Baskerville Betrayal." The Toronto Star, September 11, 2000: E 07.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Rodger Garrick-Steele, a writer from Dawlish, Devon, has spent 11 years researching a new book on [Arthur Conan Doyle]'s relationship with Bertram Fletcher Robinson, a journalist and the largely unsung co- author of The Hound Of The Baskervilles. He claims Conan Doyle colluded with his publishers to deny Fletcher Robinson recognition for devising the plot and supplying much of the local detail. Christopher Frayling, rector of the Royal College of Art and an authority on Conan Doyle, also believes Fletcher Robinson was unfairly treated...." Article also appeared in the Ottawa Citizen the previous day.
272. Tweedie, Neil. "Vengeful butler is prime suspect in Holmes' last case." The Daily Telegraph (London), February 15, 2001: 12.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "It was a whodunnit worthy of fiction's greatest detective. The crime library of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, creator of Sherlock Holmes, vanishes with a treasure map shortly before his death only to resurface on the far side of the Atlantic in the hands of an American collector. Was it the work of the author himself, or could it have been the final revenge of the butler he dismissed? The mystery of the 79 books came to occupy the finest minds in Scotland Yard and the FBI when the British enlisted the help of J Edgar Hoover to establish who had stolen the raw material for the adventures of literature's most famous sleuth. The story, contained in Scotland Yard files released at the Public Record Office yesterday, began in June 1946, when Insp Symes of the Metropolitan Police CID was visited by Sir Arthur's sons, Denis and Adrian...."
273. Valente, Joseph. "The Colonial Conan Doyle: British Imperialism, Irish Nationalism and the Gothic (review)." Victorian Studies 46, no. 4 (2005): 694-696.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of The Colonial Conan Doyle: British Imperialism, Irish Nationalism and the Gothic, by Catherine Wynne; pp. 224. Westport, CT: Greenwood Press, 2003, $75.00.
274. Wachter, Phyllis Ethel, and William Todd Schultz. "Annual Bibliography of Works about Life Writing, 2002-2003." Biography 26, no. 4 (2004): 625-711.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a reference to Doyle. Simmons, Diane. "The Curse of Empire: Grandiosity and Guilt in the Stories of Arthur Conan Doyle." Psychoanalytic Review 89.4 (2002): 533- 56.
"Examines Doyle's history of loss and his 'narcissistic dualism' to gain an understanding of the psychic life of

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- the British public during the high point of imperialism."
275. White, Kathryn. "Review--'Myth and Modern Man in Sherlock Holmes: Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and the Uses of Nostalgia' by David S. Payne." The Musgrave Papers, no. 6 (1993): 111-113.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
276. ———. "Sherlockian Seeds: Arthur Conan Doyle at Stonyhurst." The Ritual, no. 20 (1997): 38-47.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
277. Whittington-Egan, Richard. "The Man Behind Sherlock Holmes." Contemporary Review 289, no. 1687 (2007): 518-519.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "Conan Doyle: The Man Who Created Sherlock Holmes," by Andrew Lycett.
278. Wilson, A. N. "In Holmes's shadow." TLS, no. (2000): 36.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'Teller of Tales: The life of Arthur Conan Doyle,' by Daniel Stashower.
279. Wilson, Frances. "Man of mystery." New Statesman 137, no. 4860 (2007): 54-54.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "Conan Doyle: the man Who Created Sherlock Holmes," by Andrew Lycett.
280. Woods, Audrey. "Mystery Attends Conan Doyle Auction; Sale Follows Strange Death of Sherlock Holmes Scholar." St. Louis Post-Dispatch (St. Louis, MO), May 16, 2004: A.15.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Sherlock Holmes enthusiasts got a rare glimpse into the private world of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle as thousands of personal papers - from his passport to his jotted-down story ideas - went on display Friday. At the same time, the archive has become entwined in a mystery worthy of Conan Doyle's celebrated fictional detective: the bizarre death of a Holmes scholar. The papers are to be auctioned Wednesday, perhaps to disappear again into the obscurity of private ownership, a fate that had obsessed Richard Lancelyn Green, a former chairman of the Sherlock Holmes Society of London...."
281. Wyatt, Neal. "The Sir Arthur Conan Doyle Reader (Book)." Library Journal 127, no. 9 (2002): 97.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book The Sir Arthur Conan Doyle Reader: From Sherlock Holmes to Spiritualism, by Arthur Conan Doyle, edited by Jeffrey and Valerie Meyers.
282. Zinoman, Jason. "A Court Full of Chaos, a Trial Crammed With Questions." New York Times, May 28, 2008: 8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of 'Prisoner of the Crown' playing through July 6, 2008 at the Irish Repertory Theater. "The 1916 trial of Sir Roger Casement had everything a dramatist could want: salacious revelations, media manipulation, star cameos (George Bernard Shaw and Arthur Conan Doyle were among those appealing for clemency), political intrigue and a central character wrapped in mystery. Sir Roger (played here by Philip Goodwin) was an Irish patriot and former British diplomat who was arrested on charges of treason during World War I after returning from Germany, where he was seeking aid for the Irish independence movement. During the trial, in which he was convicted, the government released his diaries. Those revealed a homosexual private life and were circulated, as the courtroom drama 'Prisoner of the Crown' suggests, in an effort to influence public opinion. 'Was that really why they hanged Sir Roger?' a narrator asks leadingly early on." [Abstract from publisher]

05A SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE -- BIOGRAPHIES -- BOOTH (4)

283. Barrow, Andrew. "Similarity is Almost Invariably a Clue." Spectator 279, no. 8821 (1997): 35.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the books 'The Doctor, the Detective and Arthur Conan Doyle,' by Martin Booth and 'Playing the Game: A Biography of Sir Henry Newbolt,' by Susan Chitty.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

284. Cooksey, Thomas L. "Book Reviews: Arts & Humanities." Library Journal 125, no. 1 (2000): 102.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'The Doctor and the Detective: A Biography of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle,' by Martin Booth.
285. Macintyre, Ben. "The Mystery of the Stradivarius of Scotland Yard." The Times (London), August 7, 1997: 33.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of The Doctor, the Detective and Arthur Conan Doyle by Martin Booth, Hodder & Stoughton, Pounds 20 ISBN 0 340 64897 X. "Japanese tourists drift down Baker Street in ever-increasing numbers looking for the home of Sherlock Holmes. The stories of the fictional detective have been translated into virtually every language, including Esperanto, Eskimo and Pitman's shorthand. The Scotland Yard database is called 'Holmes', and letters still arrive there requesting the detective's help. Holmes has even invaded the German dictionary with 'sherlockieren', meaning 'to deduce. Sherlock Holmes is probably the single most popular character in literary history, far better-known than his creator, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. As Martin Booth observes in his admirably balanced, new biography of the author, no one would have been more surprised and probably peeved at the astonishing breadth of the Sherlock Holmes cult than Conan Doyle himself, who regarded that aspect of his prodigious oeuvre as 'a lower stratum of literary achievement'. He was desperate to kill off the detective, did so, and then reluctantly resurrected him again. Mr Booth makes a valiant, but only partially successful case in support of Conan Doyle's assertion that his historical novels, poetry and works of history formed a most substantial contribution to literature. Measured against the Sherlock Holmes canon, the first of the blockbuster phenomenon, these are thin and often wildly cranky...."
286. Zaleski, Jeff, and Paul Gediman. "Forecasts: Nonfiction." Publishers Weekly 246, no. 51 (1999): 72.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book The Doctor and the Detective: A Biography of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, by Martin Booth.

05A SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE -- BIOGRAPHIES -- COREN (6)

287. Bemrose, John. "A life with Sherlock." Maclean's 109, no. 6 (1996): 60.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the biography Conan Doyle, by Michael Coren.
288. Byfield, Virginia. "The man who created Holmes." Alberta Report / Newsmagazine 23, no. 20 (1996): 39.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'Conan Doyle,' by Michael Coren.
289. Carpenter, Humphrey. "Give us a clue." The Sunday Times (London), November 12, 1995: 1.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of Michael Coren's biography of Doyle.
290. Craig, Patricia. "Elementary." New Statesman & Society 9, no. 385 (1996): 40.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book, 'Conan Doyle,' by Michael Coren.
291. Davies, David Stuart. "Review--'Conan Doyle' by Michael Coren." The Ritual, no. 17 (1996): 75-76.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
292. Marchand, Philip. "Holmes' creator made a great Watson The young Conan Doyle got his start penning magazine stories based on blood and thunder popular fiction Conan Doyle." The Toronto Star, January 13, 1996: K14.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of Michael Coren's biography of Doyle. "Not long after Arthur Conan Doyle published the first of his Sherlock Holmes stories in 1887, he met Oscar Wilde at a literary dinner party in London. Oddly enough, as Michael Coren notes in Conan Doyle, his biographical study of the Scottish author, the two got on famously....Such a significant character could not have come from the brain of an insignificant man, and Coren, a noted broadcaster and print journalist living in Toronto, underlines just what a fascinating and multifaceted character Arthur Conan Doyle was. To be sure, Doyle was nowhere near as brilliant as G. K. Chesterton, or as accomplished a fiction writer as H. G. Wells, the subjects of Coren's two previous biographies. But Coren has chosen for his third biography a man whose life, embodying so many of the confusions and passions of an era, exceeds in interest both Chesterton's and Wells'...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

05A SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE -- BIOGRAPHIES -- LYCETT (15)

293. "A man divided." Economist 385, no. 8549 (2007): 98-99.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article reviews the books "Conan Doyle: The Man Who Created Sherlock Holmes," by Andrew Lycett and "Arthur Conan Doyle: A Life in Letters," edited by Jon Lellenberg.
294. "The Man Who Created Sherlock Holmes: The Life and Times of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle." Publishers Weekly 254, no. 41 (2007): 53-53.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of the Doyle biography by Andrew Lycett. Free Press, $30 (416p) ISBN 978-0-7432-7523-1
295. "The Man Who Created Sherlock Holmes: The Life and Times of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle." Kirkus Reviews 75, no. 19 (2007): 1037-1037.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "The Man Who Created Sherlock Holmes: The Life and Times of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle," by Andrew Lycett.
296. "Reviewed Elsewhere." Biography: An Interdisciplinary Quarterly 30, no. 4 (2007): 670-723.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews several books from different sources including Conan Doyle: The Man Who Created Sherlock Holmes. Andrew Lycett . London: Weidenfeld and Nicolson, 2007. 525 pp.
"In the public mind Conan Doyle is forever associated with his cerebral detective and loyal assistant Dr. Watson. Yet throughout his productive life Doyle considered himself foremost as the author of medieval tales and historical novels. For him, the Sherlock Holmes short stories and the ghostly Hound of the Baskervilles were a welcome source of additional income until he tired of his own creation and had the detective conveniently killed, only to have to resuscitate him at the urging of his many readers, including Queen Victoria. But the reality of Doyle's life was much darker. As Lycett points out in his excellent biography, Doyle spent all his life pulled between the factual and the imaginative. The central paradox of his life was his 'becoming a spiritualist so soon after creating the quintessentially rational Sherlock Holmes.' Through spiritualism, Doyle sought to contact the recently bereaved but also to insulate himself from daily reality. Much of his later writing was marked by strange theories such as The Coming of the Fairies and The Case for Spirit Photography. Nevertheless, he was a shrewd investor, and died both famous and wealthy. Guardian Weekly, Oct. 5-11, 2007: 34-35.
297. "Top 10 Biographies." Booklist 104, no. 19 (2008): 29-29.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article reviews the books "The Man Who Created Sherlock Holmes: The Life and Times of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle," by Andrew Lycett, "The Pirate Queen: Queen Elizabeth I, Her Pirate Adventures, and the Dawn of Empire," by Susan Ronald, and "The Tenth Muse: My Life in Food," by Judith Jones.
298. "The World of Paperbacks." Contemporary Review 290, no. 1691 (2008): 521-524.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Lists a few titles related to Doyle and Holmes. "Also from Phoenix we have...Andrew Lycett's Conan Doyle: The Man Who Created Sherlock Holmes (GBP10.99) whose hardback edition was hailed in this journal as 'the best and . . . certainly the fullest' biography of the writer...Vintage Classics have brought out Arthur Conan Doyle's famous novel. The Hound of the Baskervilles and have included with it not only the short story, The Adventure of the Speckled Band, which Doyle judged his best story, but an introduction by Ruth Rendell and all for GBP5.99....The life of Arthur Conan Doyle is arguably best seen in his correspondence and Harper Perennial has brought out Arthur Conan Doyle: A Life in Letters (GBP12.99), edited by Jon Lellenberg, Daniel Stashower and Charles Foley. The review of the hardback edition praised this 'valuable collection', based on Doyle's letters to his mother, letters which were 'frank and revealing'and which showed his 'many and varied interests'...."
299. Alberge, Darya. "The spirited beginning of Sherlock Holmes." The Times (London), September 15, 2007: 28.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Sherlock Holmes may have been the epitome of scientific reason, but Arthur Conan Doyle, his creator, was obsessed by seances and spiritualism. Notebooks describing his earliest contact with mediums and psychic phenomena have emerged this week, 120 years after he wrote them, proving that his interest in seances had started 30 years earlier than previously thought. The author was working as a doctor in Portsmouth when he attended his first seance in 1887, the year that he published his first Sherlock Holmes story, A Study in Scarlet....The contents of the notebooks, which date from 1885 to 1889, are disclosed in a new biography, Conan Doyle: The Man Who Created Sherlock Holmes, by Andrew Lycett...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

300. Christensen, Bryce. "The Man Who Created Sherlock Holmes: The Life and Times of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle." Booklist 104, no. 5 (2007): 14.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book "The Life and Times of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle: The Man Who Created Sherlock Holmes" by Andrew Lycett.

301. Elborn, Geoffrey. "Conan Doyle - the Man Who Created Sherlock Holmes." The Sunday Herald, September 9, 2007: 43.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of Andrew Lycett's biography. "...Doyle's fiction will always be dominated by the most celebrated detective in the world, a character he grew to despise and prematurely kill off, and who remains more famous than Doyle himself. His other writing will be read because of Holmes and better understood as a result of Lycett's brilliant analysis."

302. Gilchrist, Jim. "Not so elementary." The Scotsman, no. (2007): 22.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "I think when I started out, inevitably, I had a fairly naive view of him,' says [Andrew Lycett], 'based on the available evidence, which tended to present this rather upright English gentleman, forever taking up causes and, of course, his life dominated by writing Sherlock Homes.' We're talking in London, at the Primrose Hill flat of his partner, the literary photographer Sue Greenhill, and he has just obliged our own photographer by donning a T-shirt emblazoned with the single word 'Elementary'. Doyle (whose immortal detective never actually use the phrase 'elementary my dear [John H Watson]', until an 1899 stage dramatisation by the American actor William Gillette) would turn out to be rather more complicated than Lycett expected. 'Now, after looking into his life in some detail, I suppose I'm more aware of the warts-and-all aspect of his character, and that there were these contradictions. I'm much more aware of his sheer complexity and, in a way, I look to Edinburgh as a metaphor for that. It was Robert Louis Stevenson who alighted on the 'divided city' aspect of Edinburgh and you get that in Conan Doyle's character - the fascination with the supernatural alongside that strong belief in reason and science.' But even the field of Conan Doyle scholarship turned out not to be without its dark side: during Lycett's period of research, a leading Doyle scholar and archivist, Richard Lancelyn Green, was found dead amid strange circumstances. Amid the conspiracy theories, Lancelyn Green's own massive collection, as he had bequeathed, went to the City of Portsmouth, where Doyle practised as a doctor and where Lycett was eventually able to access it - though not without some help from the actor and broadcaster Stephen Fry, who is patron of the collection. Among so much fresh documentary material the biographer was able to 'flesh out the details' of the author's close relationship with his second wife while his first, Louise, was dying of tuberculosis. The established picture was one of Doyle, although fond of [Jean Leckie], doing the honourable thing of the day. Lycett refers to Leckie as Doyle's 'mistress', but how certain is he that, prior to Louise's death and his marriage to Leckie in 1907, theirs was a physical affair? 'I think he was in this awful dilemma. He had this wife who was ill, who I don't think he was very passionate about but who he respected and liked. He did his best for her in many ways, taking her abroad to try and ensure she'd live longer. However, during this period he met and fell in love with this younger, attractive and in many ways more suitable woman.'"

303. Goldfarb, Clifford S. "Reviewed Elsewhere." Biography: An Interdisciplinary Quarterly 31, no. 2 (2008): 313-365.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Several excerpts from various books are presented which include Conan Doyle: The Man Who Created Sherlock Holmes. Andrew Lycett. London: Weidenfeld & Nicolson, 2007. 527 pp. $39.95. The review is by Clifford Goldfarb and appeared in the Globe and Mail, Jan. 19, 2008 page D8. "...this is certainly the best biography we have had, and well worth reading by anyone interested in the life and times of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, fans of Victorian and Edwardian literature and Sherlockian enthusiasts."

304. Guttman, Jon. "The Man Who Created Sherlock Holmes: The Life and Times of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle." British

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Heritage 29, no. 4 (2008): 58-58.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "The Man who Created Sherlock Holmes: The Life and Times of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle," by Andrew Lycett.

305. Johri, Vikram. "The Mystery of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle." St. Petersburg Times (Florida), November 18, 2007: 10L.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...Arthur Conan Doyle is best known as the creator of Sherlock Holmes, the Baker Street sleuth who, along with his sidekick, Dr. Watson, solved many an intractable mystery. Many readers know less about other facets of Doyle's personality, notably his late-life interest in the occult - areas biographer Andrew Lycett explores in The Man Who Created Sherlock Holmes...."

306. McCarter, Jeremy. "The Man Who Created Sherlock Holmes: The Life and Times of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle." Biography: An Interdisciplinary Quarterly 31, no. 1 (2008): 177-177.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "The Man Who Created Sherlock Holmes: The Life and Times of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle," by Andrew Lycett.

307. Sims, Michael. "Beyond Baker Street; Remembering Conan Doyle only as the inventor of Sherlock Holmes is a crime." The Washington Post, January 27, 2008: T9.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of The Man Who Created Sherlock Holmes: The Life and Times of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, by Andrew Lycett (Free Press. 557 pp. $30) and Arthur Conan Doyle: A Life in Letters, edited by Jon Lellenberg, Daniel Stashower and Charles Foley (Penguin Press. 706 pp. $37.95).

05A SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE -- BIOGRAPHIES -- MILLER (1)

308. "The Adventures of Arthur Conan Doyle: A Biography." Kirkus Reviews 76, no. 20 (2008): 1104-1104.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "The Adventures of Arthur Conan Doyle: A Biography," by Russell Miller. "Balanced, highly readable biography of Sherlock Holmes's phenomenally prolific creator, who began his career as a hardheaded physician and ended it with a daffy devotion to Spiritualism and an adamant advocacy for existence of fairies."

05A SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE -- BIOGRAPHIES -- PASCAL (1)

309. "Resources for the classroom." Curriculum Review 39, no. 9 (2000): 12.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Offers information on teaching and educational resources. Includes mention of both Doyle and Holmes in notice of Arthur Conan Doyle: Beyond Baker Street. "Whenever there was excitement or danger, wherever important events were taking place, wherever he felt he could be useful, Arthur Conan Doyle (1859-1930) could be found near the front lines, enthusiastically doing twice as much work as anyone else, having a wonderful time. And helping to lift everyone else's spirits. Nevertheless, whether he was harpooning whales in the Arctic, competing with German officers in a road race, introducing skis to the Alps, stitching wounds on the front lines, or fighting to save a wrongly condemned man from the gallows, in the eyes of the public, he was always the creator of Sherlock Holmes, and the public never let him forget it. But as readers of Arthur Conan Doyle: Beyond Baker Street will learn, the Holmes tales were only a tiny part of the author's literary output and something he never took very seriously. This first biography of the man written for young adults takes a seriously engaging look at Doyle." (Oxford University Press)

05A SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE -- BIOGRAPHIES -- PEARSALL (1)

310. Dillon, David A. "Conan Doyle (Book)." Library Journal 102, no. 22 (1977): 2501.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'Conan Doyle: A Biographical Solution,' by Ronald Pearsall.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

05A SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE -- BIOGRAPHIES -- SIMMONS (1)

311. "Annual Bibliography of Works about Life Writing, 2002 --2003." Biography: An Interdisciplinary Quarterly 26, no. 4 (2003): 625-711.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Features books on biography. Includes following reference: Simmons, Diane. "The Curse of Empires Grandiosity and Guilt in the Stories of Arthur Conan Doyle." Psychoanalytic Review 89.4 (2002): 533-56. "Examines Doyle's history of loss and his 'narcissistic dualism' to gain an understanding of the psychic life of the British public during the high point of imperialism."

05A SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE -- BIOGRAPHIES -- STASHOWER (6)

312. "The Gullible Creator of Sherlock Holmes." The Toronto Star, May 16, 1999: 1.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of Daniel Stashower's Teller of Tales. "...As a London bookseller told American Daniel Stashower, author of Teller Of Tales: The Life Of Arthur Conan Doyle, 'Doyle went a bit potty at the end, didn't he?' Certainly it's intriguing, to say the least, that the creator of the world's ultra-rational detective and thinking machine ended up seeing fairies at the bottom of his garden. Not at all elementary, you might say (which Holmes wouldn't, since it turns out he never used that much abused phrase). Yet there must surely be something in the connection between Sherlock Holmes and his incongruous author. After all, both are spun from the same ectoplasm (Doyle, I mean). So it was in anticipation of a daring and maybe even creepy ride that I turned to Teller Of Tales, which spends about a quarter of its bulk on the issue. Only to be disappointed...."
313. "Reviewed Elsewhere." Biography 23, no. 3 (2000): 583-638.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes Doyle reference. Doyle, Arthur Conan. Teller of Tales: The Life of Arthur Conan Doyle. Daniel Stashower. London: Allen Lane/Penguin, 1999. 472 pp. GBP18.99. "Stashower is wonderfully gentle and quite sympathetic to Doyle. . . ." He is "particularly good at describing the way in which Conan Doyle . . . entered into the weird world of the paranormal. . . . [T]his is a good, solid and above all sympathetic introduction" to the life. A. N. Wilson. TLS, Feb. 25, 2000: 36
314. "Reviewed Elsewhere." Biography 23, no. 1 (1999): 264-301.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes Doyle reference. Teller of Tales: The Life of Arthur Conan Doyle. Daniel Stashower. New York: Holt, 1999. 472 pp. $32.50. "Daniel Stashower's rather jaunty biography returns us to the days of George Gissing and New Grub Street, the age of an awakening mass literacy and of popular fiction magazines like The Strand, the perhaps latent connection between Victorian optimism and the stirrings of science fiction." Christopher Hitchens. NYRB, Nov. 4, 1999: 25
315. "Teller of Tales (Book)." Publishers Weekly 246, no. 11 (1999): 41.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'Teller of Tales: The Life of Arthur Conan Doyle,' by Daniel Stashower.
316. Taylor, D. J. "Under investigation." Sunday Times (London), February 13, 2000: 39.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of Teller of Tales: The Life of Arthur Conan Doyle. by Daniel Stashower. "...Teller of Tales is a highly competent recapitulation of most of the known facts about Conan Doyle - possibly a bit too enthusiastic about the spiritualist fixation, which could have been done at half the length. As an attempt to see him in the round, Stashower's study is never less than interesting. And yet, however thoroughly put through his paces, however cunningly introduced to aspects of the modern dressage, you fear that its subject turns out to have been a one-trick pony after all."
317. Walton, David. "Sherlock Holmes's Maker." The New York Times Book Review, May 2, 1999: 34.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of "Teller of Tales: The Life of Arthur Conan Doyle" by Daniel Stashower.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

05A SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE -- BIOGRAPHIES -- STAVERT (1)

318. Rawlinson, Nora, and Charles Bishop. "A Study in Southsea (Book)." Library Journal 113, no. 13 (1988): 160.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'A Study in Southsea: The Unrevealed Life of Doctor Arthur Conan Doyle,' by Geoffrey Stavert.

05A SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE -- FAMILY -- ADRIAN CONAN DOYLE (2)

319. Doyle, Adrian Conan. "Thoughts From A. Conan Doyle -- the other one." Canadian Holmes 21, no. 3 (1998): 27-29.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
320. Travis, Alan. "G-men rallied to aid Sherlock Holmes : Scotland Yard turned to FBI to find Conan Doyle collection." The Guardian (London), February 15, 2001: 8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "J. Edgar Hoover called in his special network of 'G-men' when Scotland Yard turned to the FBI for help in solving the case of the disappearance of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's crime library from his house at Crowborough in Sussex. The Metropolitan police case file released yesterday at the public record office shows that Conan Doyle's two sons and heirs, Denis and Adrian, appealed for Scotland Yard's help in 1945 when an American magazine led them to suspect that the collection of real crime stories their father had used to create the plots and character of Sherlock Holmes stories had been stolen...."

05A SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE -- FAMILY -- CHARLES ALTAMONT DOYLE (5)

321. Beveridge, A. "What Became of Arthur Conan Doyle's Father?: The Last Years of Charles Altamont Doyle." Journal of the Royal College of Physicians Edinburgh 36, no. (2006): 264-270.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "This paper examines the fate of Arthur Conan Doyle's father, Charles Altamont Doyle, a Victorian illustrator, who spent his last years as an asylum inmate. Based on new archival research, it looks at the reasons for his institutionalisation and what befell him during his stay. It will consider Doyle's claim that he was wrongfully confined and also the suggestion that his family were responsible for having him committed. Finally, the paper will examine the nature of Doyle's condition and the creative work he produced whilst an asylum inmate."
322. Grant, Graham. "Why was Sherlock Holmes killed off in his prime? The true answer is less than elementary." Daily Mail (London), January 8, 2005: 38-39.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...Browsing through the deluge of angry letters from loyal readers in the pages of national newspapers that appeared after Holmes's 'death', Conan Doyle was also grieving not just for Holmes, but also for his father, Charles Altamont Doyle....Now the story of Conan Doyle's 'lost' father is to be explored in a new BBC drama, which begins shooting soon. The Strange Case of Sherlock Holmes and Arthur Conan Doyle, starring Dundonian Brian Cox as the author's mentor, the surgeon Joseph Bell, and Douglas Henshall as Holmes, aims to explain why Conan Doyle killed off his celebrated detective...."
323. Shattuck, Kathryn. "Close Reading: Letters by Richard Doyle and Family at the Morgan Library." New York Times, May 14, 2006.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Highlights the 79 Doyle-brother letters held by the Morgan Library and Museum: 51 by Richard, 25 by Henry and 3 by Charles, the father of Arthur Conan, who once owned all the letters.
324. Stuttaford, Andrew. "Feywatch." National Review 50, no. 25 (1998): 52-52.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the exhibition "Victorian Fairy Painting" at the Frick Collection in New York City in 1998. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...It is no coincidence that a number of the most striking works on display at the Frick are by painters who were outsiders. The greatest of them all, Richard Dadd, murdered his father. His obsessively detailed masterpiece, The Fairy Feller's Master Stroke, was the product of nine years' work in a lunatic asylum. That's also where Charles Doyle (father of the creator of Sherlock Holmes) ended up. His Self-Portrait, A Meditation, shows a man all too aware that the spirits surrounding him are the product of a troubled mind...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

325. Susina, Jan. "'Like the fragments of coloured glass in a kaleidoscope': Andrew Lang Mixes Up Richard Doyle's In Fairyland." Marvels & Tales 17, no. 1 (2003): 100-119.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Article focuses on Richard ("Dicky") Doyle, but there is a passing reference to ACD in the fourth footnote: "John Doyle's 'Political Sketches' appeared under the initials HB. The DoYLES were a large artistic family of five brothers and two sisters who were trained at home in art by the father. James Doyle tried his hand as a historical painter, but found more success with his Historical Baronage of England (1866). Henry Doyle also worked as a painter and illustrator, but eventually became the director of the National Gallery of Ireland. Charles Altamont Doyle--father of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, the author of the Sherlock Holmes detective series--had some success as both a painter and a book illustrator, but suffered a mental breakdown and was admitted to the Monrose Royal Lunatic Asylum. There Charles, like his more successful brother Dicky Doyle, continued to paint fairies. Charles Doyle's diary was discovered and published as Doyle Diary (1978); his illustrations provide an eerie nightmare version that mirrors the more light-hearted fairy world created by his brother Dicky."

05A SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE -- FAMILY -- CHARLES FOLEY (2)

326. Brown, Allan. "The curious case of old Conan Doyle." Sunday Times (London), August 22, 2004: 4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Observations on Doyle, Edinburgh, the fate of various Doyle papers, the Christie's auction, Richard Lancelyn Green, Owen Dudley Edwards, and Charles Foley.
327. Picker, Leonard. "Epistolary, My Dear Watson." Publishers Weekly 254, no. 32 (2007): 54-54.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // An interview with Charles Foley, nephew of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, creator of Sherlock Holmes fiction. He details how he was first exposed to the writings of his great-uncle. Foley also describes his uncle's image created from reading his uncle's letters to his mother. He then cites the indications the letters gave him as to what Doyle thought were his greatest achievements.

05A SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE -- FAMILY -- DENIS CONAN DOYLE (2)

328. Green, Richard Lancelyn. "Tilting at Windmills: Denis Conan Doyle and the Baker Street Irregulars." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana, no. (2002): 5-64.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
329. Travis, Alan. "G-men rallied to aid Sherlock Holmes : Scotland Yard turned to FBI to find Conan Doyle collection." The Guardian (London), February 15, 2001: 8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "J. Edgar Hoover called in his special network of 'G-men' when Scotland Yard turned to the FBI for help in solving the case of the disappearance of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's crime library from his house at Crowborough in Sussex. The Metropolitan police case file released yesterday at the public record office shows that Conan Doyle's two sons and heirs, Denis and Adrian, appealed for Scotland Yard's help in 1945 when an American magazine led them to suspect that the collection of real crime stories their father had used to create the plots and character of Sherlock Holmes stories had been stolen...."

05A SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE -- FAMILY -- GEORGINA DOYLE (1)

330. Doyle, Michael. "'A certain gracious lady'." Canadian Holmes 17, no. 4 (1994): 11-14.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The author, a member of The Stormy Petrels of British Columbia, meets a member of Arthur Conan Doyle's family.

05A SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE -- FAMILY -- HENRY DOYLE (2)

331. Shattuck, Kathryn. "Close Reading: Letters by Richard Doyle and Family at the Morgan Library." New York Times, May 14, 2006.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Highlights the 79 Doyle-brother letters held by the Morgan Library and Museum: 51 by Richard, 25 by Henry and 3 by Charles, the father of Arthur Conan, who once owned all the letters.

332. Susina, Jan. "'Like the fragments of coloured glass in a kaleidoscope': Andrew Lang Mixes Up Richard Doyle's In Fairyland." Marvels & Tales 17, no. 1 (2003): 100-119.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Article focuses on Richard ("Dicky") Doyle, but there is a passing reference to ACD in the fourth footnote: "John Doyle's 'Political Sketches' appeared under the initials HB. The Doyles were a large artistic family of five brothers and two sisters who were trained at home in art by the father. James Doyle tried his hand as a historical painter, but found more success with his Historical Baronage of England (1866). Henry Doyle also worked as a painter and illustrator, but eventually became the director of the National Gallery of Ireland. Charles Altamont Doyle--father of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, the author of the Sherlock Holmes detective series--had some success as both a painter and a book illustrator, but suffered a mental breakdown and was admitted to the Monrosey Royal Lunatic Asylum. There Charles, like his more successful brother Dicky Doyle, continued to paint fairies. Charles Doyle's diary was discovered and published as Doyle Diary (1978); his illustrations provide an eerie nightmare version that mirrors the more light-hearted fairy world created by his brother Dicky."

05A SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE -- FAMILY -- JAMES DOYLE (1)

333. Susina, Jan. "'Like the fragments of coloured glass in a kaleidoscope': Andrew Lang Mixes Up Richard Doyle's In Fairyland." Marvels & Tales 17, no. 1 (2003): 100-119.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Article focuses on Richard ("Dicky") Doyle, but there is a passing reference to ACD in the fourth footnote: "John Doyle's 'Political Sketches' appeared under the initials HB. The Doyles were a large artistic family of five brothers and two sisters who were trained at home in art by the father. James Doyle tried his hand as a historical painter, but found more success with his Historical Baronage of England (1866). Henry Doyle also worked as a painter and illustrator, but eventually became the director of the National Gallery of Ireland. Charles Altamont Doyle--father of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, the author of the Sherlock Holmes detective series--had some success as both a painter and a book illustrator, but suffered a mental breakdown and was admitted to the Monrosey Royal Lunatic Asylum. There Charles, like his more successful brother Dicky Doyle, continued to paint fairies. Charles Doyle's diary was discovered and published as Doyle Diary (1978); his illustrations provide an eerie nightmare version that mirrors the more light-hearted fairy world created by his brother Dicky."

05A SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE -- FAMILY -- JEAN CONAN DOYLE (6)

334. "Air Commandant Dame Jean Conan Doyle." The Times (London), January 30, 1998: 22.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Princess Alice Duchess of Gloucester was represented by Dame Jean Maxwell-Scott at a service of thanksgiving for the life of Air Commandant Dame Jean Conan Doyle held yesterday at St Clement Danes, Strand. The Rev David Mackenzie, Resident Chaplain, officiated. Air Chief Marshal Sir Michael Stear, President of the Naval 8/208 Squadron Association, and Air Commodore C.R. Fowler, Adviser Women Royal Air Force, also representing the Chief of the Air Staff, read the lessons. Air Chief Marshal Sir Lewis Hodges gave an address. The Lord-Lieutenant of Greater London and Lady Bramall attended. Among others present were: Mr and Mrs Michael Pooley, Mr Charles Foley, Mr Peter Foley, Mr and Mrs Robert

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Foley, Mrs John Doyle, Mr and Mrs Michael Beggs, Mr Richard Doyle, Mr and Mrs Richard Pooley, Mrs Marcus Humphrey....Mr B Wright (Sherlock Holmes Festival, Crowborough) and Mrs Wright, Mrs G Nassau (Conan Doyle Trust, Crowborough), Mrs F Brown, Miss T Lunn, Mr J Thrift, Mr G Budd (Conan Doyle Society) Mr A D Howlett and Mr S Davies (Sherlock Holmes Society) Mr J Berwanger (Chicago Sherlock Holmes Society), Mrs R O Kennee (Sherlock Holmes Society of London, USA), Miss D Watherspoon (Sir Arthur Conan Doyle Trust), Mr and Mrs Payne (Sir Arthur Conan Doyle Study Group), Mr P Harkness ( Sherlock Holmes Detective Magazine ), Mr N Utechin ( Sherlock Holmes Journal), Mr D Harris (Crowborough Council)...."

335. "Dame Jean Conan Doyle 1912-1997." The Ritual, no. 21 (1998): 50-52.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
336. "Obituaries." St. Petersburg Times (Florida), November 20, 1997: 7A.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Brief notice on the death of Dame Jean Conan Doyle.
337. Davies, David Stuart. "Air Commander Dame Jean Conan Doyle DBE Lady Bromet." The Ritual, no. 20 (1997): Insert, 3 pages.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
338. Underwood, Peter. "My Friend Dame Jean Conan Doyle." Shoso-In Bulletin 12, no. (2002): 128-131.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
339. Upton, Jean. "Dame Jean Conan Doyle 1912-1997." The Serpentine Muse 14, no. 2 (1998): 6-9.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

05A SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE -- FAMILY -- JOHN DOYLE (1)

340. Susina, Jan. "'Like the fragments of coloured glass in a kaleidoscope': Andrew Lang Mixes Up Richard Doyle's In Fairyland." Marvels & Tales 17, no. 1 (2003): 100-119.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Article focuses on Richard ("Dicky") Doyle, but there is a passing reference to ACD in the fourth footnote: "John Doyle's 'Political Sketches' appeared under the initials HB. The Doyles were a large artistic family of five brothers and two sisters who were trained at home in art by the father. James Doyle tried his hand as a historical painter, but found more success with his Historical Baronage of England (1866). Henry Doyle also worked as a painter and illustrator, but eventually became the director of the National Gallery of Ireland. Charles Altamont Doyle--father of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, the author of the Sherlock Holmes detective series--had some success as both a painter and a book illustrator, but suffered a mental breakdown and was admitted to the Monrosey Royal Lunatic Asylum. There Charles, like his more successful brother Dicky Doyle, continued to paint fairies. Charles Doyle's diary was discovered and published as Doyle Diary (1978); his illustrations provide an eerie nightmare version that mirrors the more light-hearted fairy world created by his brother Dicky."

05A SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE -- FAMILY -- MARY DOYLE (1)

341. Pyne, Kathleen. "Portrait of a collector as an agnostic: Charles Lang Freer and connoisseurship." Art Bulletin 78, no. 1 (1996): 75.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Explores the ideological origins of Charles Lang Freer's essentialist rhetoric in the agnostic discourse of aestheticism. Investigation on how Freer's collecting was shaped by the evolutionary beliefs promoted by the Northeastern Anglo-American elite; Bernard Berenson's philosophy of art; Interchanges between Freer, Berenson and Ernest Fenollosa. Includes a passing reference to Mary Doyle. "...The ground swell of spiritualism, Theosophy, and mind cure within the circles of Boston brahmins and the northeastern intelligentsia in this period reflects the inroads of agnosticism and the restless searching among liberal Protestants for viable religious beliefs in the face of Darwinian science. In 1893 Freer carried out a private reading course in the occult religion of Theosophy, and during a trip to Japan in 1895 began a study of Buddhism, which he continued after his return to Detroit. At his death in 1919 Freer's library contained a wealth of tomes that answered his need for reassurance of the existence of the human soul: for example, The Complaint: or, Night-Thoughts on Life, Death, and Immortality (1791) by Edward Young (at least two copies); the Upanishads; the Emersonian poetry and essays of writers such as Bliss Carman and Hamilton Wright Mabie, who regarded a spiritual force in nature and art as a source of therapy for the mind overtaxed by the strenuousness of work; and spiritualist testimonials such as Mary Conan Doyle's Visit to Heaven, Kandinsky's Art of Spiritual Harmony, and Maeterlinck's Inner Beauty...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

05A SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE -- FAMILY -- RICHARD DOYLE (3)

342. Lenhoff, Howard M., and Paul P. Wang. "Williams syndrome and the brain." Scientific American 277, no. 6 (1997): 68.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the cognitive abilities of persons suffering from Williams syndrome. Results of studies on musical ability in Williams children; How the abilities of persons affected with Williams syndrome can shed some light on the organization and adaptability of the normal brain. INSETS: The making of a cognitive profile; Williams syndrome: An inspiration for some pixie legends? Inset includes a passing reference and photograph to Doyle's uncle, Richard. "PHOTO (COLOR): The depiction of an elf at the right is the 19th-century work of Richard Doyle, an uncle of the Sherlock Holmes creator."

343. Shattuck, Kathryn. "Close Reading: Letters by Richard Doyle and Family at the Morgan Library." New York Times, May 14, 2006.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Highlights the 79 Doyle-brother letters held by the Morgan Library and Museum: 51 by Richard, 25 by Henry and 3 by Charles, the father of Arthur Conan, who once owned all the letters.

344. Susina, Jan. "'Like the fragments of coloured glass in a kaleidoscope': Andrew Lang Mixes Up Richard Doyle's In Fairyland." Marvels & Tales 17, no. 1 (2003): 100-119.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Article focuses on Richard ("Dicky") Doyle, but there is a passing reference to ACD in the fourth footnote: "John Doyle's 'Political Sketches' appeared under the initials HB. The Doyles were a large artistic family of five brothers and two sisters who were trained at home in art by the father. James Doyle tried his hand as a historical painter, but found more success with his Historical Baronage of England (1866). Henry Doyle also worked as a painter and illustrator, but eventually became the director of the National Gallery of Ireland. Charles Altamont Doyle--father of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, the author of the Sherlock Holmes detective series--had some success as both a painter and a book illustrator, but suffered a mental breakdown and was admitted to the Monrosey Royal Lunatic Asylum. There Charles, like his more successful brother Dicky Doyle, continued to paint fairies. Charles Doyle's diary was discovered and published as Doyle Diary (1978); his illustrations provide an eerie nightmare version that mirrors the more light-hearted fairy world created by his brother Dicky."

05A SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE -- FICTION -- BARNES, JULIAN (22)

345. "Books for Christmas." Community Care, no. 12/8 (2005): 44-44.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article presents information on several books, including Untold Stories by Alan Bennett, Arthur and George by Julian Barnes, Munch by Himself by Iris Muller Westermann, Kite Runner by Khaled Hosseini, Never Let Me Go by Kazuo Ishiguro, Leadership by Peter Gilbert and Human Traces by Sebastian Faulks.

346. "Conan Doyle, man of action." The Gold Coast Bulletin, Apr 22, 2006: 18.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Reading about the infamous Dreyfus Case, the celebrated incident in which writer Emile Zola came to the aid of a French military officer wrongly accused of treason, author [Julian Barnes]

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

discovered parallels to an incident in the life of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, creator of Sherlock Holmes. While Conan Doyle believed that Edalji was the victim of bigoted police, Edalji himself did not see it as an issue of colour, something that made the story all the more interesting for Barnes. Barnes' research involved reading about Conan Doyle and relying on tour guides to evoke certain settings for the story. Conan Doyle is said to have come up with endings for his complex whodunnits before writing them and Barnes recalls using a similar approach."

347. "G2: Lawson on TV: The man who wouldn't die." The Guardian (London), July 25, 2005: 17.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Just a few weeks after the publication of Julian Barnes's splendid novel about [Arthur Conan Doyle] as a real-life detective comes David Pirie's drama The Strange Case of Sherlock Holmes and Arthur Conan Doyle. This is the latest biographical variation from Pirie who explored in a previous film Doyle's relationship with the apparent model for [Holmes]: the Scottish doctor, Sir Joseph Bell."
348. Feay, Suzi. "Notes & Theories: She's buying a stairway to heaven and other ghost stories." The Independent on Sunday, Jul 24, 2005: 46.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "I'm interviewing [Julian Barnes] on stage at the Ways With Words festival about his new novel Arthur and George. Its protagonist, Arthur Conan Doyle, tackles a celebrated Victorian miscarriage of justice la mode de Sherlock Holmes. The Edalji case, featuring a mild-mannered Birmingham solicitor accused of cattle mutilation, was every bit as significant to British cultural life and the legal system as the Dreyfus case was to France. But there is another, weirder strand to this complex and interesting novel, and I've amused Barnes and clearly ruffled at least one audience member by referring to Doyle's ardent spiritualist beliefs as 'batty'. Doyle was a devout believer in table-rapping, ectoplasm and voices beyond the grave, and was famously hoaxed by two schoolgirls who said they'd been photographing fairies...."
349. Hanks, Robert. "Books: Elementary, my dear Barnes; Julian Barnes's new novel resurrects Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and a real-life mystery." The Independent (London), Jul 8, 2005: 20-21.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of Arthur & George. "...The quality in Arthur & George I liked the most apart, of course, from Barnes's preternaturally smooth and readable prose was the way it avoids condescension to the past, always going with the grain of the characters' beliefs. One aspect of this is Barnes's treatment of Conan Doyle's sex life, never bowing to the modern orthodoxy that regards Victorian morals as purely a matter of repression and hypocrisy. Another is his treatment of religion. Barnes himself says he has never had 'even glimmerings' of belief, but he presents without irony George's devout Anglicanism and Conan Doyle's wackier spiritualist creed...."
350. Hargreaves, Tracy. "'We Other Victorians': Literary Victorian Afterlives." Journal of Victorian Culture 13, no. 2 (2008): 278-286.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The article explores how 20th century writers have portrayed Victorians and the Victorian period. It examines the works of authors such as Virginia Woolfe and John Galsworthy and discusses the social, political and family issues that were raised in the 20th century regarding life in the Victorian period. It discusses the representation of Victorian life on television in the 1950s and 1960s and what the afterlife of the Victorian period has allowed social and cultural commentators to reexamine about the values and morals of the Victorians." Includes a reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...The classic text has been re-imagined.... Emily Brontë resurfaces in Jane Urquhart's Changing Heaven: A Novel, Clare Boylan's Emma Brown: A Novel From the Unfinished Manuscript of Charlotte Bronte appeared in 2004, Maryse Conde transplants Wuthering Heights to Windward Heights, Emma Tennant imagines Heathcliff's Tale, Caleb Carr and Jamyang Norbu add to the Sherlock Holmes canon (The Italian Secretary: A Further Adventure of Sherlock Holmes and Sherlock Holmes: The Missing Years respectively) as of course did Julian Barnes in Arthur and George. Wilkie Collins and Charles Dickens were intertextually present in Sarah Waters' Fingersmith...."
351. Hoffert, Barbara. "Fiction." Library Journal 130, no. 18 (2005): 63.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // An annotated bibliography of fiction titles is provided. Includes Barnes, Julian. Arthur & George. Knopf. 2005. c.391p. ISBN 0-307-26310-X. $24.95. "As all Sherlockians know, in 1906 Arthur Conan Doyle took on the case of George Edalji, a reserved young lawyer, half Scottish and half Indian, who was wrongly accused of mutilating animals--and in the process helped set up Britain's Court of Appeals.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Perhaps it is not so surprising that the author of Flaubert's Parrot would choose to reconstruct not just this case but the lives of both participants; what is surprising is the almost deadpan way he does it--and that his approach works so well. Barnes tells the life stories of Arthur and George with almost clinical precision, alternating between them from school age on. The storm gathers slowly; one learns the details of the mutilations and how the case was built so incongruously against the upright and deeply myopic George, even as Arthur is whiling away his time as famed writer and romancer of Miss Jean Leckie. The book picks up like a whirlwind when Arthur and George meet at last; and though a few early passages can seem a bit leisurely, it finally make powerful sense to see how these men arrived where they did. A beautifully modulated work; highly recommended." Barbara Hoffert, Library Journal

352. ———. "Prepub Alert." Library Journal 130, no. 14 (2005): 114-116.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews several books that have yet to be published including Barnes, Julian. Arthur & George. Knopf. Jan. 2006. 384p. ISBN 0-307-26310-X. $24.95. "George grows up a poor vicar's son and eventually crosses paths with Arthur, who grows up to create Sherlock Holmes. With a 100,000-copy first printing and a ten-city tour."

353. Judd, Elizabeth. "Arthur & George." Atlantic 297, no. 1 (2006): 179-179.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A review of Julian Barnes' Arthur & George.

354. Kakutani, Michiko. "Sherlock's Creator Gives Sleuthing a Try." New York Times, January 10, 2006: E1-E8.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The author reviews the book "Arthur & George," by Julian Barnes.

355. Kehe, Marjorie. "How would Sherlock Holmes fare in real life?" Christian Science Monitor, Jan 17, 2006: 13-16.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of "Arthur & George" by Julian Barnes.

356. Kemp, Peter. "Conan Doyle to the rescue." Sunday Times (London), June 26, 2005: 37.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...When cattle in the vicinity are viciously slashed, things take an even more macabre turn. Soon the press is clamouring about The Great Wyrley Outrages. It sounds like a case for Sherlock Holmes. And, indeed, the sleuth who eventually sets out to disentangle the gruesome affair is Sherlock Holmes's creator, Arthur Conan Doyle. Unlike Holmes's exploits, though, the situation at the centre of Julian Barnes's richly accomplished new novel isn't fantasy but fact. Taking a real-life whodunit, Arthur & George transforms it into a dazzling exercise in detective fiction of more kinds than one...."

357. Kington, Miles. "When the Writer Becomes the Star." The Independent (London), July 25, 2005: 32.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...Well,' said Pranger, 'it's very odd when the writer becomes the star. Almost always, the fictional creation outshines the creator. Harry Potter overshadows Rowling. James Bond is big, Ian Fleming is small. Who remembers who created Tarzan? And until now Conan Doyle has been blotted out by the wretched Sherlock Holmes. But suddenly, Conan Doyle has bounced back. There was a novel which came out the other day by Julian Barnes, all about a real-life case in which Conan Doyle really did help to prove that a man had been wrongfully imprisoned. Conan Doyle as true life Sherlock Holmes. Good story. Surprised it hasn't been turned into a musical by Lloyd Webber or Ben Elton. And then there is this renewed attempt to prove that Conan Doyle was a murderer.'..."

358. Levy, Paul. "Personal Journal; Review / Book: Strong Novels Vie For Man Booker." Wall Street Journal, Oct 7, 2005: P.1.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...The favorite, at 5 to 4, is Julian Barnes's supremely well-constructed 'Arthur & George' (Jonathan Cape, 352 pages, GBP 17.99). A true story of Arthur Conan Doyle, the creator of Sherlock Holmes, and his involvement in the real-life mystery of George Edalji, a gentle, half-Parsee lawyer accused of brutality to animals, this is one of Mr. Barnes's richly complex fictions, like his 'Flaubert's Parrot' or 'A History of the World in 101/2 Chapters,' rather than the more straightforward works (which I also love, such as 'Before She Met Me' or 'Talking It Over'). For my money, Mr. Barnes is the best novelist of his talented generation; we're in the hands of a master, but there is something bloodless about this tightly plotted, completely controlled narrative, with its on-purpose, single loose end that tells the reader that not everything, including Conan Doyle's being a sucker for spiritualism, is as tidy as it seems...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

359. O'Hagan, Simon. "Books: the Game's Afoot! it could be a Case for Sherlock Holmes ; Arthur & George by Julian Barnes Cape GBP17.99 GBP16.99 (P&P)." Independent on Sunday (London), July 3, 2005: 23.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of the book. "...Indeed, it's one of Barnes's best, a beautiful and engrossing work which brings together some classic Barnesian themes (love, identity), introduces some new ones (spirituality, guilt and innocence), and hangs them all on a real-life miscarriage of justice from 100 years ago that was always going to be a gift for the first writer to spot its potential for re-imagining...."
360. O'Reilly, Mary Rose. "Revising Thérèse." Literary Review 51, no. 4 (2008): 3-20.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // An essay is presented on the memoir "The Story of a Soul," by Thérèse Martin. It discusses the childhood and monastic experience of Saint Thérèse as she wrote in her memoir and reflects on masochistic pietism. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...In his novel, Arthur and George, the contemporary British author, Julian Barnes, situates his hero, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, as a dutiful Catholic in this transitional epoch. Conan Doyle inquires of his more skeptical friend, George, 'What is the church threatened by?' 'By science,' replies George...."
361. Parini, Jay. "Eyes on the Prizes." Chronicle of Higher Education 52, no. 7 (2005): B20-B20.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents the author's views about the Man Booker Prize, bestowed on one lucky novelist each October at a banquet watched by almost a million people on prime-time national television. Statement of John Sutherland, chairman of the prize committee that the strength of the year's competition can be measured by the fact that three good books by previous Man Booker winners were finally not selected; Information that the three former winners who didn't make the cut from the long list are writers J.M. Coetzee, Ian McEwan, and Salman Rushdie, and their exclusion has engendered a good deal of criticism; Argument that the winner is often someone whose reputation has already been established, or who commands special attention because the subject of the book itself happens to be hot. Includes a reference to Doyle. "...In spite of the unreality of the contest for the Booker, I find myself eagerly reading through the novels on the shortlist....And finally there is Julian Barnes, whose novel about an incident in the life of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle lifts the historical novel to new heights...."
362. Scrivener, Richard. "Reading for Pleasure." Bookseller, no. 5213 (2006): 24-24.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article presents views of the author on the book "Arthur and George," by Julian Barnes. "'Arthur and George' is two intertwined biographies, of English writer Arthur Conan Doyle and writer George Edalji, wrongly imprisoned for seven years on charges of livestock mutilation. Barnes' forensic writing deftly introduces to two men who inhabit different worlds in the same country. Arthur, while not cut out for greatness, has the opportunities to experience life through travel, education and war, while George is restricted to a quiet existence as the obedient son of a Midlands vicar."
363. Solomon, Deborah. "Rewriting History." New York Times Magazine 155, no. 53432 (2005): 17-17.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article presents a series of questions and answers with Julian Barnes. The author discusses his new book "Arthur & George," based on the true story of George Edjali, who was accused of a crime and defended by Arthur Conan Doyle. Barnes also talk about writing mysteries under the pseudonym Dan Kavanagh.
364. Taylor, Ihsan. "Paperback Row." New York Times, Jan 14, 2007: 24.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Arthur & George, by Julian Barnes. (Vintage International, $14.95.) The Arthur in Barnes's extraordinary novel is Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, the creator of Sherlock Holmes. The other title character is George Edalji, a half-Indian solicitor who was convicted of a series of livestock mutilations in his rural parish in 1903. Barnes dissects early-20th-century English society as he spins the real-life detective story of how Arthur took up George's case and tried to exonerate him. (Doyle's work on the case helped lead to the creation of a Court of Criminal Appeal in 1907.) "Arthur & George" was a Man Booker Prize finalist in 2005; our reviewer, Terrence Rafferty, called it a "cracking good yarn." [Abstract from publisher]
365. Torgovnick, Marianna. "Supporting Roles." Chronicle of Higher Education 54, no. 20 (2008): B14-B15.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the novels "The Scandal of the Season," by Sophie Gee,

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

"Loving Frank," by Nancy Horan, and "Hotel de Dream: A New York Novel," by Edmund White. Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...A flurry of notable books since 1998 have included famous authors as characters, among them Michael Cunningham's The Hours, a commercially successful re-creation in contemporary terms of Virginia Woolf's Mrs. Dalloway; Colm Toibin's The Master, about Henry James from the time he wrote Guy Domville (a play that failed) through his closest female friend's suicide; and Julian Barnes's Arthur & George, about a real-life mystery solved by the creator of Sherlock Holmes. They differed from books like The Agony and the Ecstasy in their choice of artist and, even more, in their temporal scope and plot. Virginia Woolf, Henry James, and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle are big names, to be sure. But they are not names like Michelangelo or Van Gogh (the subject of Stone's Lust for Life), synonymous in the public mind with genius...."

366. Wyatt, Neal, and Jeff Ayers. "Do the Time, Read the Crime." Library Journal 132, no. 14 (2007): 184-184.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Lists a number of true crime books including one related to Doyle. "Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, the creator of Sherlock Holmes, and George Edalji, a man accused of writing threatening letters, cross paths in Julian Barnes's Booker-nominated Arthur & George (Vintage. 2007. ISBN 978-1-4000-9703-6. pap. $14.95). Edalji was convicted in 1903 on the basis of his race (his father was Parsi) rather than hard evidence. Doyle hears about the case and tries to prove Edalji's innocence. The actual case resulted in the establishment of the British Court of Appeals."

05A SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE -- FICTION -- BRANDRETH, GYLES (11)

367. "Fall 2008 Trade Paperbacks." Publishers Weekly 255, no. 26 (2008): 122-157.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews several books including Oscar Wilde and a Game Called Murder (Touchstone, Sept., $14) by Gyles Brandreth. "Imagines Wilde as a detective aided by Arthur Conan Doyle."
368. "Oscar Wilde and a Death of No Importance." Kirkus Reviews 76, no. 4 (2008): 4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "Oscar Wilde and a Death of No Importance," by Gyles Brandreth. Includes passing references to Doyle. "...When a beautiful boy of the streets is brutally murdered and then his body disappears, Wilde enlists the investigative help of Robert Sherard, his faithful biographer, and Arthur Conan Doyle, a brilliant young author Wilde has just met. 'The challenge--and the excitement--has been to create a truthful portrait of Wilde, an atmospheric evocation of London and Paris in the late 1880s and an exciting murder mystery all at the same time,' says the author. 'Being a biographer has helped, I think. I want my portrait of Oscar Wilde--and Conan Doyle and their circle--to be accurate, truthful, human, sometime humorous and revealing.'..."
369. "Oscar Wilde and a Death of No Importance." Publishers Weekly 254, no. 40 (2007): 38-38.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Short review of the book by Gyles Brandreth (Touchstone), $14 paper (368p) ISBN 978-1-4168-3483-9 with a passing reference to Doyle. "Oscar Wilde makes a stylish sleuth in this is clever series debut from Brandreth, a British author best known as a biographer (John Gielgud: An Actor's Life, etc.). Narrating the tale from his old age, poet Robert Sherard enjoys recalling the summer of 1889, when his friend Wilde was still celebrated and happily married. After discovering the butchered body of handsome young Billy Wood, Wilde fetches Sherard and his new friend Arthur Conan Doyle, but upon returning to the scene, they find neither body nor blood...."
370. "Oscar Wilde and a Death of no Importance." Kirkus Reviews 75, no. 23 (2007): 1220-1220.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "Oscar Wilde and a Death of No Importance," by Gyles Brandreth.
371. "Oscar Wilde and a Game Called Murder." Publishers Weekly 255, no. 27 (2008): 40-40.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "Oscar Wilde and a Game Called Murder," by Gyles Brandreth. "...At a May 1892 meeting of the Socrates Club, a group founded by Wilde and including such luminaries as Arthur Conan Doyle and Bram Stoker, the members play "murder," a game that involves writing

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

the name of a "victim" on a piece of paper and trying to guess who chose whom and why...."

372. "Oscar Wilde and a Game Called Murder." Kirkus Reviews 76, no. 14 (2008): 43-43.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "Oscar Wilde and a Game Called Murder," by Gyles Brandreth. "As in Oscar Wilde and a Death of No Importance (2008), he enlists the assistance of Doyle, who ironically plays Watson to the playwright's Holmes."
373. Fletcher, Connie. "Oscar Wilde and a Death of No Importance." Booklist 104, no. 5 (2007): 29.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book "Oscar Wilde and a Death of No Importance" by Gyles Brandreth. "In this wow of a history-mystery, Brandreth (a former MP, BBC broadcaster, and biographer) gives us nothing less than the most credible Sherlock Holmes since the master of deductive reasoning toppled into Reichenbach Falls--except the uncannily brilliant sleuth is not Holmes but Oscar Wilde. Wilde gets to demonstrate his Holmesian knack for discovering the telling detail to his new friend Arthur Conan Doyle, whose recent 'Study in Scarlet' has skyrocketed him to fame. The mystery that engages Wilde is the murder of a 16-year-old artists' model and male prostitute, Billy Wood (whose demise was the inspiration for The Portrait of Dorian Gray), with whom Wilde had an appointment. Wilde discovers the naked body of the model in the middle of a squalid flat; when he, enlisting Doyle as witness, returns later, the scene has been entirely cleaned and the body removed...."
374. ———. "Oscar Wilde and a Game Called Murder." Booklist 104, no. 22 (2008): 46-47.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book "Oscar Wilde and a Game Called Murder" by Gyles Brandreth. "...Brandreth heightens the effect by having one of Wilde's friends, Arthur Conan Doyle, play the role of dumbfounded Watson to Wilde's brilliant Sherlock. Sharing the Watson role is narrator-poet Robert Sherard, who writes of Wilde's exploits..."
375. Gunn, Drewey Wayne. "Oscar Wilde and a Death of no Importance." Lambda Book Report 16, no. 1 (2008): 24-24.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "Oscar Wilde and a Death of No Importance," by Gyles Brandreth.
376. ———. "Oscar Wilde and a Game Called Murder." Lambda Book Report 16, no. 3 (2008): 31-31.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "Oscar Wilde and a Game Called Murder," by Gyles Brandreth. Includes a reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...Since another one of the main characters is Arthur Conan Doyle, Sherlock Holmes fans get the added pleasure of an extended conceit that some of Oscar's best lines become the source for dialogue Holmes will subsequently deliver in Doyle's stories...."
377. Vicarel, Jo Ann. "Oscar Wilde and a Death of No Importance." Library Journal 132, no. 18 (2007): 48-48.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "Oscar Wilde and a Death of No Importance," by Gyles Brandreth. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. Brandreth, Gyles. Oscar Wilde and a Death of No Importance. Touchstone: S. & S. Jan. 2008. c.347p. ISBN 978-1-4165-3483-9. pap. $14. "In 1889 London, writer Oscar Wilde finds the corpse of a male artist's model in a house used by men for assignations. Wilde later returns with friends Robert Sherard and Arthur Conan Doyle, but the body has vanished, the room cleaned, and the police declare that nothing has happened...."

05A SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE -- FICTION -- ROGOW, ROBERTA (1)

378. Klett, Rex E., and Eric Bryant. "Book reviews: Fiction." Library Journal 123, no. 8 (1998): 143.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book The Problem of the Missing Miss, by Roberta Rogow. (St. Martin's. May 1998. c.272p. ISBN 0-312-18553-7. $21.95.) "First novelist Rogow pairs an aging Charles Dodgson (a.k.a. Lewis Carroll) and a youthful, impetuous Dr. Arthur Conan Doyle (willing to pursue a mystery at the expense of his honeymoon). They meet in late 19th-century Brighton, where Lord Marbury's daughter, meant to spend some time with Dodgson, is abducted by opponents of the upcoming Criminal Amendment Bill. The abduction spawns murder, but Doyle and Dodgson have difficulty convincing police that the daughter is in danger. Part of the fun here lies in the reluctant partnership, but there are other spunky characters to watch as well. A good Victorian historical."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

05A SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE -- LETTERS (8)

379. "Arthur Conan Doyle: A Life in Letters." Publishers Weekly 254, no. 32 (2007): 52-52.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book Arthur Conan Doyle: A Life in Letters, edited by Jon Lellenberg, Daniel Stashower and Charles Foley.
380. "Arthur Conan Doyle: A Life in Letters." Kirkus Reviews 75, no. 18 (2007): 973-973.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "Arthur Conan Doyle: A Life in Letters," by Jon Lellenberg and edited by Daniel Stashower and Charles Foley.
381. "Arthur Conan Doyle: A Life in Letters." Library Journal 132, no. 20 (2007): 114.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of Arthur Conan Doyle: A Life in Letters. Penguin Pr: Penguin Group (USA). 2007. c.608p. ed. by Jon Lellenberg & others, index. ISBN 978-1-59420-135-6. $37.95.
382. "A man divided." Economist 385, no. 8549 (2007): 98-99.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article reviews the books "Conan Doyle: The Man Who Created Sherlock Holmes," by Andrew Lycett and "Arthur Conan Doyle: A Life in Letters," edited by Jon Lellenberg.
383. "The Mythmaker." New Republic 238, no. 4 (2008): 46-50.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "Arthur Conan Doyle: A Life in Letters," by Jon Lellenberg, Daniel Stashower and Charles Foley.
384. "The World of Paperbacks." Contemporary Review 290, no. 1691 (2008): 521-524.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Lists a few titles related to Doyle and Holmes. "Also from Phoenix we have...Andrew Lycett's Conan Doyle: The Man Who Created Sherlock Holmes (GBP10.99) whose hardback edition was hailed in this journal as 'the best and . . . certainly the fullest' biography of the writer...Vintage Classics have brought out Arthur Conan Doyle's famous novel. The Hound of the Baskervilles and have included with it not only the short story, The Adventure of the Speckled Band, which Doyle judged his best story, but an introduction by Ruth Rendell and all for GBP5.99....The life of Arthur Conan Doyle is arguably best seen in his correspondence and Harper Perennial has brought out Arthur Conan Doyle: A Life in Letters (GBP12.99), edited by Jon Lellenberg, Daniel Stashower and Charles Foley. The review of the hardback edition praised this 'valuable collection', based on Doyle's letters to his mother, letters which were 'frank and revealing'and which showed his 'many and varied interests'...."
385. Rodgers, Marion Elizabeth. "A. Conan Doyle." The Washington Times, December 16, 2007: B6.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of Arthur Conan Doyle: A Life in Letters by Jon Lellenberg, Daniel Stashower, Charles Foley. "Even if you are not a member of the Baker Street Irregulars, that popular society of Sherlock Holmes enthusiasts, you will find this collection of previously unpublished letters from Holmes' creator fascinating reading. For while much is known about Holmes - 'the world's most famous man who never was' - less has been revealed about Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, whose life rivaled that of any fiction. As a physician, sportsman, war correspondent, military historian, crusader for social justice and spokesman for spiritualism, his days were full of drama...."
386. Sims, Michael. "Beyond Baker Street; Remembering Conan Doyle only as the inventor of Sherlock Holmes is a crime." The Washington Post, January 27, 2008: T9.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of The Man Who Created Sherlock Holmes: The Life and Times of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, by Andrew Lycett (Free Press. 557 pp. $30) and Arthur Conan Doyle: A Life in Letters, edited by Jon Lellenberg, Daniel Stashower and Charles Foley (Penguin Press. 706 pp. $37.95).

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

05A SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE -- RESIDENCES -- EAST SUSSEX -- CROWBOROUGH (3)

387. Bull, Andy. "Travel: Home from Holmes; Deep in Conan Doyle country, something stirs. No hellhound, no mystery; it's a festival." The Independent (London), June 20, 1998: 21.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Even for Sherlock Holmes, this would have been a real two-pipe puzzler. After all, the peeling sign on the side door at the Crowborough Cross declared that this was the Conan Doyle Bar. So it would be reasonable to deduce - given the generally accepted concept of the theme pub, and that that the little hilltop Sussex town of Crowborough will play host in just two weeks' time to the annual Sherlock Holmes Festival - that there would be a spot of branding inside...."
388. Longrigg, Clare. "Game's afoot to woo tourists." The Guardian (London), July 5, 1997: 5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Literary theme parks and spin-offs are a blossoming business in the tourist-starved British hinterland. After Hardy's Wessex, Dickens's London and the Brontes' Yorkshire, a new stop has been added to the tour: Conan Doyle's Crowborough. This weekend, the Sherlock Holmes festival will claim the Victorian detective for its own...."
389. McGrory, Daniel. "Conan Doyle's town detects its fortune." The Times (London), July 5, 1997: 8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "A Sussex town with ambitions to be a big tourist attraction will double its population this weekend as 25,000 visitors descend to celebrate the creator of Sherlock Holmes. The great detective might have been puzzled at why Crowborough waited so long to cash in on its connections with Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, who lived there during his last 23 years. Julian Roup, who conceived the idea of the world's only annual Sherlock Holmes festival, said: 'Interest in England's greatest sleuth just gets bigger every year and we are sitting on a literary brand name worth millions that is worshipped the world over - and until recently have done nothing about it. For years Baker Street has cashed in and its links are purely fictitious. We are sitting on the real thing.'..."

05A SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE -- RESIDENCES -- EDINBURGH (1)

390. Jamieson, Teddy. "Return to the Lost World of Conan Doyle; If you want to retrace the footsteps of Sherlock Holmes's creator in his native Edinburgh, you'll need to do a little detective work." The Herald (Glasgow), January 31, 2009: 12.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...Me, I'm trying to get my head round Conan Doyle's Edinburgh and [Allan] Foster, who's hugely knowledgeable and entertaining company, is the man to help me. Sherlock Holmes's creator was born in the city (in 1859, making this the 150th anniversary of his birth) and studied medicine here before leaving Scotland. Foster knows where Conan Doyle bought his books and where he took a drink. And this bright blue Monday morning he's agreed to show me around the Edinburgh that the author knew...."

05A SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE -- RESIDENCES -- EDINBURGH -- LIBERTON BANK HOUSE (18)

391. "Big Mac Not Palatable to Sherlock Holmes Fans." Chicago Tribune, Dec 9, 1999: 18.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "An 18th Century Scottish mansion where Sir Arthur Conan Doyle once lived was saved from a Big Mac attack Wednesday when the city of Edinburgh slapped a preservation order on it. Fans of the Sherlock Holmes creator, alarmed to discover that McDonald's planned to build a burger restaurant on the site, appealed to city hall and won...."
392. "Food Notes." Sunday Gazette - Mail, Dec 29, 1999: 3.D.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "In this case, you could say McDonald's didn't have a clue. An 18th century Scottish mansion where Sir Arthur Conan Doyle once lived was saved from a Big Mac attack when the city of Edinburgh slapped a preservation order on it. Fans of the Sherlock Holmes creator, alarmed to discover that McDonald's planned to build a burger restaurant on the site, appealed to city hall and won. 'This is wonderful

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

news,' said Richard Lancelyn Green, a Conan Doyle expert and former chairman of the London-based Sherlock Holmes Society. 'Sherlock Holmes still has his magic, it seems.'"

393. "Gourmandise." Buffalo News, Jan 9, 2000: E.3.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Fans of the Sherlock Holmes creator, alarmed to discover that McDonald's planned to build a burger restaurant on the site, appealed to City Hall and won. 'This is wonderful news,' said Richard Lancelyn Green, a Conan Doyle expert and former chairman of the London-based Sherlock Holmes Society. 'Sherlock Holmes still has his magic, it seems.'"

394. "Holmes Creator's House Saved." The Toronto Star, January 1, 2000: 1.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "An 18th-century Scottish mansion where Sir [Arthur Conan Doyle] once lived has been saved from a Big Mac attack. The city of Edinburgh has slapped a preservation order on the house after an appeal from fans of the Sherlock Holmes creator, alarmed to discover that McDonald's planned to build a burger restaurant on the site...."

395. "McDonalds Toy with Conan Plan." Daily Mail (London), January 15, 2000: 31.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Burger chain McDonald's last night accepted for the first time that a historic Scottish house due to be flattened for a fast food restaurant was once the home of Sherlock Holmes' creator Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. In a statement the company said after advice from archaeological and heritage experts it agreed Conan Doyle had lived in the house between the ages of five and seven. But despite the acceptance of the 'cultural value of this heritage asset' the company has not abandoned plans to sell hamburgers from the site of the 18th century house at Nether Liberton, Edinburgh...."

396. "No place for Holmes." The Evening Standard (London), December 7, 1999: 12.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The motive would puzzle even Sherlock Holmes. The oldest known home of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle is being demolished to make way for a McDonald's. The fact that the stone cottage in Edinburgh once housed the writer who gave us the world's most celebrated opium-smoker hasn't saved it from being sacrificed on the altar of 'progress'...."

397. "Outrage as McDonald's Eyes Home of Sherlock Holmes' Creator." Birmingham Post, December 6, 1999: 6.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Sherlock Holmes fans yesterday protested at plans to demolish the oldest surviving home of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and replace it with a burger restaurant. The house where the creator of the fictional detective spent part of his childhood faces the threat of being demolished to make way for a McDonald's restaurant, they said. Campaigners have banded together to persuade Edinburgh council to refuse the application when it is considered next year...."

398. "Scottish mansion wins preservation; escapes plans for a McDonald's." Journal Record (Oklahoma City, OK), Dec 10, 1999: 1.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "An 18th-century Scottish mansion where Sir Arthur Conan Doyle once lived was saved from a Big Mac attack Wednesday when the city of Edinburgh slapped a preservation order on it. Fans of the Sherlock Holmes creator, alarmed to discover that McDonald's planned to build a burger restaurant on the site, appealed to city hall and won. 'This is wonderful news,' said Richard Lancelyn Green, a Conan Doyle expert and former chairman of the London-based Sherlock Holmes Society. 'Sherlock Holmes still has his magic, it seems.'"

399. "Sherlock Holmes creator's home saved from McDonald's." Pantagraph (Bloomington, IL), Dec 9, 1999: C.4.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "An 18th-century Scottish mansion where Sir Arthur Conan Doyle once lived was saved from a Big Mac attack Wednesday when the city of Edinburgh slapped a preservation order on it. Fans of the Sherlock Holmes creator, alarmed to discover that McDonald's planned to build a burger restaurant on the site, appealed to city hall and won. 'This is wonderful news,' said Richard Lancelyn Green, a Conan Doyle expert and former chairman of the London-based Sherlock Holmes Society. 'Sherlock Holmes still has his magic, it seems.'"

400. "'Sherlock Holmes still has his magic,' and Edinburgh still has author's home." Star Tribune (Minneapolis), Dec 9,

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

1999: 09.A.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "An 18th-century Scottish mansion where Sir Arthur Conan Doyle once lived was saved from a Big Mac attack Wednesday when the city of Edinburgh slapped a preservation order on it. Fans of the creator of Sherlock Holmes, alarmed to discover that McDonald's planned to build a restaurant on the site, appealed to City Hall and won. 'This is wonderful news,' said Richard Lancelyn Green, a Conan Doyle expert and former chairman of the London-based Sherlock Holmes Society. 'Sherlock Holmes still has his magic, it seems.'"

401. "Value deal: Holmes defeats an arch-villain." York Daily Record, Dec 29, 1999: D.01.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "An 18th-century Scottish mansion where Sir Arthur Conan Doyle once lived was saved from a Big Mac attack when the city of Edinburgh slapped a preservation order on it. Fans of the Sherlock Holmes creator, alarmed to discover that McDonald's planned to build a burger restaurant on the site, appealed to city hall and won. 'This is wonderful news,' said Richard Lancelyn Green, a Conan Doyle expert and former chairman of the London-based Sherlock Holmes Society. 'Sherlock Holmes still has his magic, it seems.' So does good, old red meat. Agricultural officials say consumers are returning to meat counters, buying more pork and beef to put on their tables as a strong economy puts more money in their pockets to spend at the grocery store."

402. Ferguson, Brian. "Another string to the bow of Holmes's legacy." The Scotsman, January 14, 2009: 3.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "For more than 170 years, a sycamore stood in the garden where the young Arthur Conan Doyle was inspired to write his first stories. As a schoolboy, the creator of Sherlock Holmes would clamber on the branches of the tree in the grounds of Liberton Bank House in Edinburgh. But now the sycamore has to be cut down because of disease, to the dismay of the staff and pupils at the special school that has recently moved into the 18th-century building. However, a memorial to the tree and its links to Conan Doyle is to be created. Dunedin School has commissioned the creation of a violin from the sycamore's wood, in tribute to Doyle's celebrated detective and his penchant for playing the instrument. It is hoped the GBP 1,800 violin, to be created by the Edinburgh-based instrument maker Steve Burnett, will be completed in time for the 150th anniversary of Conan Doyle's birth in May...."

403. Grant, Clare. "Conan barbarians; Fight on against plan to flatten author's home." Daily Mail (London), December 6, 1999: 35.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "It is a three-pipe mystery worthy of the great Sherlock Holmes himself. Despite his world-renown, the former home of the great detective's creator, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, could be demolished to make way for a McDonald's restaurant. Edinburgh City Council has already allowed his birthplace to be demolished and replaced with a roundabout. Then it gave permission for the great man's second home to be converted to a ladies' toilet. Now it is considering plans to knock down his boyhood home, Liberton Bank House, for the U.S.-based burger chain's latest outlet...."

404. Gray, Chris. "Conan Doyle Fans Detect Victory in the Case of the Childhood Home." The Independent (London), May 30, 2001: 11.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Fans OF Sir Arthur Conan Doyle are on the verge of winning a battle to stop McDonald's building an outlet next to his childhood home. The author lived at Liberton Bank House in Edinburgh with his mother during the 1860s while his father, Charles Altamont Doyle, was institutionalised because he had epilepsy. The Sherlock Holmes Society hope the cottage, which is derelict and stands next to a post-war shopping centre, can be turned into a small museum. They believe it will never be restored if the McDonald's outlet is built...."

405. Leeman, Sue. "Edinburgh preserves Conan Doyle home." Tulsa World, Dec 9, 1999: 9.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "An 18th-century Scottish mansion where Sir Arthur Conan Doyle once lived was saved from a Big Mac attack Wednesday when the city of Edinburgh slapped a preservation order on it. Fans of the Sherlock Holmes creator, alarmed to discover that McDonald's planned to build a burger restaurant on the site, appealed to city hall and won. 'This is wonderful news,' said Richard Lancelyn Green, a Conan Doyle expert and former chairman of the London-based Sherlock Holmes Society. 'Sherlock Holmes still has his magic, it seems.' Article appeared in a number of other newspapers, e.g. Austin American Statesman, The

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Oregonian, The Ottawa Citizen, etc.

406. ———. "No happy meals for Sherlock Holmes." Austin American Statesman (Austin, TX), Dec 9, 1999: D.7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "An 18th-century Scottish mansion where Sir Arthur Conan Doyle once lived was saved from a Big Mac attack Wednesday when the city of Edinburgh slapped a preservation order on it. Fans of the Sherlock Holmes creator, alarmed to discover that McDonald's planned to build a burger restaurant on the site, appealed to city hall and won. 'This is wonderful news,' said Richard Lancelyn Green, a Conan Doyle expert and former chairman of the London-based Sherlock Holmes Society. 'Sherlock Holmes still has his magic, it seems.' McDonald's said it had only recently learned that Conan Doyle lived at the Liberton Bank House during the 1860s, from the ages of 5 to 7, but had gone ahead with plans to develop the site owned by Pearl Assurance."
407. ———. "Sherlock Holmes writer's home saved from Golden Arches." Fort Worth Star - Telegram, Dec 9, 1999: 18.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "An 18th-century Scottish mansion where Sir Arthur Conan Doyle once lived was saved from a Big Mac attack yesterday when Edinburgh slapped a preservation order on it. Fans of the Sherlock Holmes creator, alarmed to discover that McDonald's planned to build a burger restaurant on the site, appealed to city hall and won. 'This is wonderful news,' said Richard Lancelyn Green, a Conan Doyle expert and former chairman of the Sherlock Holmes Society, which is based in London. 'Sherlock Holmes still has his magic, it seems.'..."
408. Rodley, Aidan. "McDonald's ideal Holmes exhibition?" Daily Mail (London), August 5, 2000: 11.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The McDonald's fast food chain say they will include Sherlock Holmes memorabilia as part of their design if they are allowed to develop a restaurant on the site where Sherlock Holmes' creator Sir Arthur Conan Doyle once lived. The burger giant has put forward amended designs for a 75-seater restaurant at Liberton Bank House, Edinburgh, where the author lived as a boy in the 1860s. The plans includes displays of Holmes exhibits in the proposed restaurant. The company sparked an outcry last year when it announced plans to destroy the house. The Edinburgh City Council put a preservation order on the building and Historic Scotland opted to re-list it. The latest plan promises to incorporate the building into the design of the restaurant. McDonald's has claimed the plans are a reasonable compromise, but Dr Allen Simpson, co-ordinator of the campaign to save the building, said it was unacceptable. Dr Simpson said he expected the people of Edinburgh to be outraged when the McDonald's plans were made public. He said: 'The question the council will have to face is whether the building of McDonald's would degrade the setting of the house. What we have to bear in mind is that this city has so few associations left with Conan Doyle.' The house where Conan Doyle was born in 1859 was demolished to make way for a roundabout. A spokesman for McDonald's said: 'Our plans seem to us to be a very reasonable compromise. 'The Cameron Toll site is, aside from the Liberton Bank House issue, a perfect location for us.'

05A SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE -- RESIDENCES -- SURREY -- UNDERSHAW (7)

409. "One Hundred Years Ago: "...a considerable mansion" (ACD)." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 1, no. 1 (1997): 2.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses Doyle's home, Undershaw. Includes two photographs, one of Undershaw during construction and the other of Doyle's other home, Windlesham (miscaptioned as Undershaw in the article).
410. Barnes, Julian. "Sherlock Holmes and the case of the property developers." The Guardian (online edition: The Guardian Unlimited), July 8, 2006.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Article discusses the attempt of the Victorian Society, by application to English Heritage, to have Doyle's house, Undershaw, in Hindhead, Surrey listed as Grade I in response to a planning application to break up Undershaw into several smaller homes.
411. Davies, Catriona. "Sherlock Holmes heritage threatened by homes plan." The Daily Telegraph (London), July 6,

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- 2006: 5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Article discusses the attempt of the Victorian Society, by application to English Heritage, to have Doyle's house, Undershaw, in Hindhead, Surrey listed as Grade I in response to a planning application to break up Undershaw into several smaller homes.
412. ———. "Sherlock Holmes heritage threatened by homes plan." The Daily Telegraph (London), July 6, 2006: 5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Developers and conservationists are in dispute over plans to convert Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's Surrey house, where he wrote The Hound of the Baskervilles and The Return of Sherlock Holmes, into four homes. Campaigners say that the unique history of Undershaw, built at Hindhead in 1897, is under threat if permission is granted to divide it...."
413. King, Linda. "A Postcard of ACD's House Hindhead (From the Collection of Linda King)." Shoso-In Bulletin 5, no. (1995): 109.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
414. Marriott, Guy, Michael Whelan, Christopher Roder, Steven Rothman, Roger Johnson, Jon L. Lellenberg, and Daniel Stashower. "Reply: Letters and emails: It's no mystery why Conan Doyle's house must be preserved." The Guardian (London), July 17, 2006: 29.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "We write in support of the Victorian Society's appeal to English Heritage to raise the listed status of Arthur Conan Doyle's house Undershaw in Hindhead, Surrey, to Grade I (Sherlock Holmes and the case of the property developers, July 8). Representing the worldwide interest in Conan Doyle and Sherlock Holmes, we recognise that even though the recent application for listed building consent has been withdrawn, the house still desperately needs the protection that the higher grading will bring...."
415. Miller, Phil, and Kurt Bayer. "Anger at refusal to list Conan Doyle's house." The Herald (Glasgow), February 7, 2007: 5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The Scottish crime writer Ian Rankin has accused Tessa Jowell, the Culture Minister, of 'literary snobbery' over her refusal to protect the former home of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, the creator of Sherlock Holmes. Ms Jowell's department of culture, media and sport (DCMS) has decided not to give Grade I-listed status to Undershaw, the Surrey home Conan Doyle built for his ill wife and where he wrote The Hound of the Baskervilles in 1902...."

05A SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE -- RESIDENCES -- SURREY -- WINDLESHAM (1)

416. "One Hundred Years Ago: "...a considerable mansion" (ACD)." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 1, no. 1 (1997): 2.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses Doyle's home, Undershaw. Includes two photographs, one of Undershaw during construction and the other of Doyle's other home, Windlesham (miscaptioned as Undershaw in the article).

05B SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE -- GEORGE EDALJI, OSCAR SLATER AND OTHER CASES (24)

417. "Books for Christmas." Community Care, no. 12/8 (2005): 44-44.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article presents information on several books, including Untold Stories by Alan Bennett, Arthur and George by Julian Barnes, Munch by Himself by Iris Muller Westermann, Kite Runner by Khaled Hosseini, Never Let Me Go by Kazuo Ishiguro, Leadership by Peter Gilbert and Human Traces by Sebastian Faulks.
418. "Conan Doyle, Detective: True Crimes Investigated by the Creator of Sherlock Holmes." Publishers Weekly 253, no. 38 (2006): 55-55.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "Conan Doyle, Detective: True Crimes Investigated by the Creator of Sherlock Holmes," by Peter Costello.

419. "Conan Doyle, man of action." The Gold Coast Bulletin, Apr 22, 2006: 18.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Reading about the infamous Dreyfus Case, the celebrated incident in which writer Emile Zola came to the aid of a French military officer wrongly accused of treason, author [Julian Barnes] discovered parallels to an incident in the life of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, creator of Sherlock Holmes. While Conan Doyle believed that Edalji was the victim of bigoted police, Edalji himself did not see it as an issue of colour, something that made the story all the more interesting for Barnes. Barnes' research involved reading about Conan Doyle and relying on tour guides to evoke certain settings for the story. Conan Doyle is said to have come up with endings for his complex whodunnits before writing them and Barnes recalls using a similar approach."

420. Berry, John Stevens. "The Strange Case of George Edalji." Shoso-In Bulletin 5, no. (1995): 106-108.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

421. Chapman, Paul M. "Review--The Oscar Slater Murder Story: New Light on a Classic Miscarriage of Justice by Richard Whittington-Egan." The Ritual, no. 27 (2001): 58-59.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

422. Dunn, Dave, Trevor S. Raymond, and Clifford S. Goldfarb. "Bookshelf: Reviews of Forensic Detective: How I Cracked the World's Toughest Cases, Joe Sherlock: Kid Detective, and Conan Doyle and the Parson's Son: The George Edalji Case." Canadian Holmes 30, no. 1 (2006): 9-12.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

423. Feay, Suzi. "Notes & Theories: She's buying a stairway to heaven and other ghost stories." The Independent on Sunday, Jul 24, 2005: 46.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "I'm interviewing [Julian Barnes] on stage at the Ways With Words festival about his new novel Arthur and George. Its protagonist, Arthur Conan Doyle, tackles a celebrated Victorian miscarriage of justice la mode Sherlock Holmes. The Edalji case, featuring a mild-mannered Birmingham solicitor accused of cattle mutilation, was every bit as significant to British cultural life and the legal system as the Dreyfus case was to France. But there is another, weirder strand to this complex and interesting novel, and I've amused Barnes and clearly ruffled at least one audience member by referring to Doyle's ardent spiritualist beliefs as 'batty'. Doyle was a devout believer in table-rapping, ectoplasm and voices beyond the grave, and was famously hoaxed by two schoolgirls who said they'd been photographing fairies...."

424. Hall, Catherine. "Asians in Britain: 400 Years of History (review)." Journal of Colonialism and Colonial History 4, no. 1 (2003).

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a reference to Doyle. "This is not the book to read for the latest post-colonial interpretations, and indeed it neglects much recent literature. But Visram has pieced together a wealth of material which gives us important insights into the long relation between South Asia and Britain. Many of her stories stay in the mind and disrupt easy assumptions. Take the case of George Edalji, a solicitor in Birmingham at the end of the nineteenth century. The son of an Indian Anglican vicar in Staffordshire, who had received his living (a rural mining village) courtesy of his English wife's family connections, he was educated at a local grammar school and at Mason College, later to become Birmingham University. A brilliant student, he won Law Society prizes and was able to establish his own practice in Birmingham in 1899. His family, however, had never been accepted and were subjected to years of racial harassment in the form of hoaxes and anonymous letters. In 1903 George Edalji was arrested, charged with maiming animals which had been mutilated in his home village. Despite a convincing alibi he was found guilty, sentenced to seven years penal servitude and struck off the Solicitors' register. The family began a long campaign for his release and after three years he was freed but without explanation. Eventually cleared by a Special Commission established after wide publicity, ranging from petitions signed by thousands in the Midlands to the support of Arthur Conan Doyle, he was eventually cleared and reinstated in his profession. The case reminds us of the long history of mixed race relationships, of the presence of South Asian professionals in Birmingham long before the post-war migration, of the persistence of racial persecution in this country, and of the ways in which it has been challenged, not only by South Asians themselves but also by their white British supporters."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

425. Hanks, Robert. "Books: Elementary, my dear Barnes; Julian Barnes's new novel resurrects Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and a real-life mystery." The Independent (London), Jul 8, 2005: 20-21.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of Arthur & George. "...The quality in Arthur & George I liked the most apart, of course, from Barnes's preternaturally smooth and readable prose was the way it avoids condescension to the past, always going with the grain of the characters' beliefs. One aspect of this is Barnes's treatment of Conan Doyle's sex life, never bowing to the modern orthodoxy that regards Victorian morals as purely a matter of repression and hypocrisy. Another is his treatment of religion. Barnes himself says he has never had 'even glimmerings' of belief, but he presents without irony George's devout Anglicanism and Conan Doyle's wackier spiritualist creed...."
426. Hoffert, Barbara. "Fiction." Library Journal 130, no. 18 (2005): 63.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // An annotated bibliography of fiction titles is provided. Includes Barnes, Julian. Arthur & George. Knopf. 2005. c.391p. ISBN 0-307-26310-X. $24.95. "As all Sherlockians know, in 1906 Arthur Conan Doyle took on the case of George Edalji, a reserved young lawyer, half Scottish and half Indian, who was wrongly accused of mutilating animals--and in the process helped set up Britain's Court of Appeals. Perhaps it is not so surprising that the author of Flaubert's Parrot would choose to reconstruct not just this case but the lives of both participants; what is surprising is the almost deadpan way he does it--and that his approach works so well. Barnes tells the life stories of Arthur and George with almost clinical precision, alternating between them from school age on. The storm gathers slowly; one learns the details of the mutilations and how the case was built so incongruously against the upright and deeply myopic George, even as Arthur is whiling away his time as famed writer and romancer of Miss Jean Leckie. The book picks up like a whirlwind when Arthur and George meet at last; and though a few early passages can seem a bit leisurely, it finally make powerful sense to see how these men arrived where they did. A beautifully modulated work; highly recommended." Barbara Hoffert, Library Journal
427. ———. "Prepub Alert." Library Journal 130, no. 14 (2005): 114-116.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews several books that have yet to be published including Barnes, Julian. Arthur & George. Knopf. Jan. 2006. 384p. ISBN 0-307-26310-X. $24.95. "George grows up a poor vicar's son and eventually crosses paths with Arthur, who grows up to create Sherlock Holmes. With a 100,000-copy first printing and a ten-city tour."
428. Judd, Elizabeth. "Arthur & George." Atlantic 297, no. 1 (2006): 179-179.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A review of Julian Barnes' Arthur & George.
429. Kakutani, Michiko. "Sherlock's Creator Gives Sleuthing a Try." New York Times, January 10, 2006: E1-E8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The author reviews the book "Arthur & George," by Julian Barnes.
430. Kehe, Marjorie. "How would Sherlock Holmes fare in real life?" Christian Science Monitor, Jan 17, 2006: 13-16.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of "Arthur & George" by Julian Barnes.
431. Kemp, Peter. "Conan Doyle to the rescue." Sunday Times (London), June 26, 2005: 37.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...When cattle in the vicinity are viciously slashed, things take an even more macabre turn. Soon the press is clamouring about The Great Wyrley Outrages. It sounds like a case for Sherlock Holmes. And, indeed, the sleuth who eventually sets out to disentangle the gruesome affair is Sherlock Holmes's creator, Arthur Conan Doyle. Unlike Holmes's exploits, though, the situation at the centre of Julian Barnes's richly accomplished new novel isn't fantasy but fact. Taking a real-life whodunit, Arthur & George transforms it into a dazzling exercise in detective fiction of more kinds than one...."
432. Kington, Miles. "When the Writer Becomes the Star." The Independent (London), July 25, 2005: 32.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...'Well,' said Pranger, 'it's very odd when the writer becomes the star. Almost always, the fictional creation outshines the creator. Harry Potter overshadows Rowling. James Bond is big, Ian

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Fleming is small. Who remembers who created Tarzan? And until now Conan Doyle has been blotted out by the wretched Sherlock Holmes. But suddenly, Conan Doyle has bounced back. There was a novel which came out the other day by Julian Barnes, all about a real-life case in which Conan Doyle really did help to prove that a man had been wrongfully imprisoned. Conan Doyle as true life Sherlock Holmes. Good story. Surprised it hasn't been turned into a musical by Lloyd Webber or Ben Elton. And then there is this renewed attempt to prove that Conan Doyle was a murderer.'..."

433. Levy, Paul. "Personal Journal; Review / Book: Strong Novels Vie For Man Booker." Wall Street Journal, Oct 7, 2005: P.1.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...The favorite, at 5 to 4, is Julian Barnes's supremely well-constructed 'Arthur & George' (Jonathan Cape, 352 pages, GBP 17.99). A true story of Arthur Conan Doyle, the creator of Sherlock Holmes, and his involvement in the real-life mystery of George Edalji, a gentle, half-Parsee lawyer accused of brutality to animals, this is one of Mr. Barnes's richly complex fictions, like his 'Flaubert's Parrot' or 'A History of the World in 101/2 Chapters,' rather than the more straightforward works (which I also love, such as 'Before She Met Me' or 'Talking It Over'). For my money, Mr. Barnes is the best novelist of his talented generation; we're in the hands of a master, but there is something bloodless about this tightly plotted, completely controlled narrative, with its on-purpose, single loose end that tells the reader that not everything, including Conan Doyle's being a sucker for spiritualism, is as tidy as it seems...."

434. Masters, Rosalind. "ACD and the Stonor Case." The Ritual, no. 15 (1995): 31-35.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

435. O'Hagan, Simon. "Books: the Game's Afoot! it could be a Case for Sherlock Holmes ; Arthur & George by Julian Barnes Cape GBP17.99 GBP16.99 (P&P)." Independent on Sunday (London), July 3, 2005: 23.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of the book. "...Indeed, it's one of Barnes's best, a beautiful and engrossing work which brings together some classic Barnesian themes (love, identity), introduces some new ones (spirituality, guilt and innocence), and hangs them all on a real-life miscarriage of justice from 100 years ago that was always going to be a gift for the first writer to spot its potential for re-imagining...."

436. Scrivener, Richard. "Reading for Pleasure." Bookseller, no. 5213 (2006): 24-24.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article presents views of the author on the book "Arthur and George," by Julian Barnes. "'Arthur and George' is two intertwined biographies, of English writer Arthur Conan Doyle and writer George Edalji, wrongly imprisoned for seven years on charges of livestock mutilation. Barnes' forensic writing deftly introduces to two men who inhabit different worlds in the same country. Arthur, while not cut out for greatness, has the opportunities to experience life through travel, education and war, while George is restricted to a quiet existence as the obedient son of a Midlands vicar."

437. Solomon, Deborah. "Rewriting History." New York Times Magazine 155, no. 53432 (2005): 17-17.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article presents a series of questions and answers with Julian Barnes. The author discusses his new book "Arthur & George," based on the true story of George Edjali, who was accused of a crime and defended by Arthur Conan Doyle. Barnes also talk about writing mysteries under the pseudonym Dan Kavanagh.

438. Taylor, Ihsan. "Paperback Row." New York Times, Jan 14, 2007: 24.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Arthur & George, by Julian Barnes. (Vintage International, $14.95.) The Arthur in Barnes's extraordinary novel is Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, the creator of Sherlock Holmes. The other title character is George Edalji, a half-Indian solicitor who was convicted of a series of livestock mutilations in his rural parish in 1903. Barnes dissects early-20th-century English society as he spins the real-life detective story of how Arthur took up George's case and tried to exonerate him. (Doyle's work on the case helped lead to the creation of a Court of Criminal Appeal in 1907.) "Arthur & George" was a Man Booker Prize finalist in 2005; our reviewer, Terrence Rafferty, called it a "cracking good yarn." [Abstract from publisher]

439. Wyatt, Neal, and Jeff Ayers. "Do the Time, Read the Crime." Library Journal 132, no. 14 (2007): 184-184.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Lists a number of true crime books including one related to Doyle. "Sir Arthur

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Conan Doyle, the creator of Sherlock Holmes, and George Edalji, a man accused of writing threatening letters, cross paths in Julian Barnes's Booker-nominated Arthur & George (Vintage. 2007. ISBN 978-1-4000-9703-6. pap. $14.95). Edalji was convicted in 1903 on the basis of his race (his father was Parsi) rather than hard evidence. Doyle hears about the case and tries to prove Edalji's innocence. The actual case resulted in the establishment of the British Court of Appeals."

440. Zaleski, Jeff, and Peter Cannon. "Mystery Notes." Publishers Weekly 248, no. 39 (2001): 73.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews several books on mystery. The True Crime Files of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, edited by Stephen Hines; The Sedgemoor Strangler and Other Stories of Crime, by Peter Lovesey; The Black Coat: A 1948 Murder Mystery Comedy, by Constance and Gwenth Little; The Mouse in the Mountain, by Norbert Davis.

05D SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE -- MEDICAL PRACTICE AND MEDICAL WRITINGS (10)

441. "Cecil Helman." Lancet 361, no. 9376 (2003): 2252.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Growing up in a family of a dozen doctors in South Africa, the author, Cecil Helman, learned early on that medicine was not just about science. In medical practice, one never quite knows who might walk through the door next: the problems they may bring, the stories they may tell...." Passing reference to Doyle: "As Dr Foster, the general practitioner in Arthur Conan Doyle's story A Medical Document, puts it: 'There's no need for fiction in medicine, for the facts will always beat anything you can fancy.'"
442. "Relations of Literature and Science, 1991-1992." Configurations 2, no. 2 (1994): 373-431.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes references to Doyle and Holmes. Roden, A. E., et al. "Humanism and Values in the Medical Short Stories of Arthur Conan Doyle." South Med J 85 (May 1992): 528-537; Westmoreland, B.F. "Arthur Conan Doyle, Joseph Bell, and Sherlock Holmes: A Neurologic Connection." Arch Neurol 48 (1991): 325-329.; Oderwald, A. K. "The Physician and Sherlock Holmes." J R Soc Med 84 (1991): 151-152; Roszell, Calvert. "The Devil's Foot and the Dweller at the Threshold." BSJ 41 (1991): 100-103.
443. Brody, Howard. "Book review--'Conan Doyle's Tales of Medical Humanism and Values,' edited by Alvin E. Rodin and Jack D. Key." Baker Street Miscellanea, no. 70 (1992): 35-37.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
444. Donaldson-Evans, Mary. "Medical Progress and Social Reality: A Reader in Nineteenth-Century Medicine and Literature (review)." Nineteenth Century French Studies 30, no. 1 (2001): 176-177.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews Furst, Lilian R., ed. Medical Progress and Social Reality: A Reader in Nineteenth-Century Medicine and Literature. Albany: State U of New York P, 2000. Pp. 314. ISBN 0-7914-4804-5 Doyle mentioned within contents of the book under review. "...In all but two cases, the texts are excerpted from longer works. Two short stories ('The Steel Windpipe,' by Mikhail Bulgakov, and 'The Doctors of Hoyland,' by Arthur Conan Doyle) are reproduced in their entirety...."
445. Goldman, John. "Chronic myeloid leukemia - Therapy in the 20th and 21st centuries." Leukemia & lymphoma 48, no. 12 (2007): 2287-2288.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article discusses the effective therapy for chronic myeloid leukemia (CML). The second reference points to a work by Doyle. Conan Doyle A. Notes on a case of leucocythaemia. Lancet 25 March 1882;490.
446. Krasner, James. "Arthur Conan Doyle as Doctor and Writer." Mosaic: A Journal for the Interdisciplinary Study of Literature 33, no. 4 (2000): 19.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Examines the nature of the medical and detective fiction of Arthur Conan Doyle, a doctor turned writer. Value of narrative approach to engagements between doctor and patient; Utilization of storytelling in medical practice by medical ethicists; Factors influencing the writings of Doyle; Depiction of the different features of medical life in Doyle's works.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

447. Markel, Howard. "The Medical Detectives." New England Journal of Medicine 353, no. 23 (2005): 2426-2428.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article discusses medical history in Germany. A conference in August 1890, which was sponsored by Kaiser Wilhelm II, offered physicians a program of lectures. Dr. Robert Koch, a University of Berlin professor who discovered the causes of anthrax, tuberculosis, and cholera, was a celebrated speaker at the event. Arthur Conan Doyle describes the excitement over Koch's remedy for tuberculosis, "Koch's lymph," in his 1924 autobiography. Conan Doyle's efforts to meet Koch and his colleague, Dr. Ernst von Bergmann, at the University of Berlin are detailed. Koch's lymph, which is now referred to as tuberculin, was a diagnostic tool before the development of the purified-protein-derivative test.
448. Pearce, D. N. "The illness of Dr George Turnavine Budd and its influence on the literary career of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle." Journal of Medical Biography 3, no. 4 (1995): 236-238.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
449. Saler, Michael T. "Round the Red Lamp." TLS, no. 5460 (2007): 26-26.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "Round the Red Lamp & Other Medical Writings," by Arthur Conan Doyle, edited by Robert Darby.
450. Silverstein, Arthur M. "Dr. Arthur Conan Doyle and the Case of Congenital Syphilis." Perspectives in Biology and Medicine 49, no. 2 (2006): 209-219.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "In 1894, Dr. Arthur Conan Doyle wrote 'The Third Generation,' a short story involving the transmission of congenital syphilis from generation to generation. Analysts of his writings have interpreted the pathogenetic mechanism involved in modern terms: infection of mother by father and then transplacental infection of the fetus. However, a review of the contemporary literature and the history of the concepts of congenital and 'hereditary' syphilis demonstrates that the late 19th-century understanding of the process involved a Lamarckian transmission of paternal infection, via the sperm at the moment of conception. It was undoubtedly this concept that Doyle learned in medical school in the late 1870s and that provided the background to his story."

05E SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE -- OTHER WRITINGS (46)

451. "100 Years Ago: For a Song?". Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 2, no. 1 (1998): 2.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Highlights publication of Songs of Action, a collection of poetry and "The Song of the Bow," sheet music based on the same ballad of the outland bowmen found in Doyle's The White Company.
452. "'Boxed In' Semantic Indifference to Atrocity." Case Western Reserve Journal of International Law 40, no. 1 (2008): 137-145.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Under King Leopold II of Belgium, an economic enterprise evolved in the Congo that, by the turn of the twentieth century, saw the deaths of untold millions. Largely ignored, it took the likes of novelists, such as Joseph Conrad, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, and Mark Twain to call attention to what was taking place in central Africa...."
453. "Editorial." Antioch Review 66, no. 2 (2008): 205-206.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...There is even an excellent anthology of work about medicine that Iain Bamforth brought together in 2003 under the rubric The Body in the Library: A Literary Anthology of Modern Medicine. It contained a varied array of essays, commentaries, and poems from writers as diverse as Anton Chekhov (a physician), Conan Doyle (another doctor), George Orwell (Eric Blair), Philip Larkin (librarian), and Susan Sontag (who died recently)...." The Doyle piece in Bamforth's anthology is "Curse of Eve."
454. "Holmes 'First Draft' is Printed." Birmingham Evening Mail, March 31, 2001: 9.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "A short story thought to be the first ever written by Sherlock Holmes creator Sir

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Arthur Conan Doyle has been published for the first time. The Haunted Grange of Goresythorpe was originally rejected for publication by an Edinburgh-based magazine almost 125 years ago, when Conan Doyle was an 18-year-old medical student. The hand-written book, which featured an early version of the author's most famous creation, Sherlock Holmes, remained in the archive of Blackwoods Magazine because Doyle did not include a stamped self-addressed envelope when he sent it in...."

455. "In Short." New York Times, Mar 4, 1984: A.22.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Uncollected Stories: The Unknown Conan Doyle. Compiled and introduced by John Michael Gibson and Richard Lancelyn Green. (Doubleday, $14.95.) This attractive collection of magazine stories demonstrates once again that Sherlock Holmes was by no means the only thing Arthur Conan Doyle was up to during his half-century career. Although tales like 'Uncle Jeremy's Household' and 'The Cabman's Story' have enticing hints of Holmesian ratiocination, most of these 33 excursions into melodrama, horror, history and satire travel far beyond the circumscribed world of drawing room mystery....the book contains enough forgotten stories to make it valuable...."

456. "Mystery Notes." Publishers Weekly 251, no. 14 (2004): 45-46.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a list of mystery books. Murder Is No Mitzvah: Short Mysteries About Jewish Occasions, edited by Abigail Browning, collects a dozen Jewish-themed crime stories, 11 of which first appeared in either Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine or Alfred Hitchcock's Mystery Magazine. The one classic tale, "The Jew's Breastplate," is by Arthur Conan Doyle. (St. Martin's Minotaur/Dunne, $23.95 288p ISBN 0-312-32506-1)

457. "Publishing, Library Science, Bibliography." Reference & Research Book News 23, no. 3 (2008): 336-342.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews several books including Sherlock Holmes on stage: a chronological encyclopedia of plays featuring the great detective. Kabatchnik, Amnon. Scarverow Pr., ©2008 197 p. $55.00 "Retired from teaching theater at various prestigious US universities, Kabatchnik cites and describes each of the four plays Arthur Conan Doyle himself wrote about the Victorian London detective he created, along with 38 written by others, some of them one-act plays. Each article describes the context in which the play was written, points out references and other connections to the published stories, summarizes the action, discusses the production history and reception, and identifies the playwright."

458. "Recent Work in Critical Theory: Feminist and Gender Studies." Style 34, no. 4 (2000): 598.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Provides information on several books on feminist and gender studies. Includes Paula M. Krebs' Gender, Race, and the Writing of Empire (Cambridge University Press, 1999). "Through the writings of Arthur Conan Doyle, Olive Schreiner, H. Rider Haggard, and Rudyard Kipling, Krebs addresses the Boer War of 1899-1902 and the struggles to maintain an imperialist hegemony in a twentieth-century world."

459. "SF/Fantasy/Horror Notes." Publishers Weekly 247, no. 44 (2000): 52.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents list of books released in November and December 2000 in the United States, including The Mammoth Book of Haunted House Stories. "Peter Haining has edited The Mammoth Book of Haunted House Stories, which includes stories by such classic authors as M.R. James, L.P. Hartley and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and by such modern masters as Ramsey Campbell, Basil Copper and James Herbert. As to be expected from a distinguished anthologist like Haining, this is a top-drawer collection." (Carroll & Graf, $11.95 paper 512p ISBN 0-7867-0791-7)

460. "What's going on: Theatre." Performing Arts & Entertainment in Canada 32, no. 2 (1999): 43.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents updates on theater in Canada. Includes the Shaw Festival production of Doyle's Waterloo.

461. Allen, Moira. "@Deadline." Writer 114, no. 6 (2001): 12.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Covers issues related to writing and writers as of June 2001. Includes reference to the publication of The Haunted Grange of Goresythorpe by Doyle.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

462. Axel-Lute, Melanie. "Masterworks of Crime & Mystery (Book)." Library Journal 107, no. 17 (1982): 1899.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'Masterworks of Crime and Mystery,' by Arthur Conan Doyle.
"These are non-Sherlock Holmes stories, some of them only marginally criminal or mysterious, and probably more interesting to students of literature than to casual mystery readers. On the whole, however, an interesting, unusual, occasionally humorous collection."
463. Bland, Joellen. "The Mummy." Plays 60, no. 5 (2001): 55.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents the play 'The Mummy.' "From a story by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle Adapted for round-the-table reading..."
464. Blumberg, Jess. "Abandoned Ship." Smithsonian 38, no. 8 (2007): 20-24.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article focuses on the abandoned ship Mary Celeste, which was found 400 miles east of the Azores on December 5, 1872 by the British Brig Dei Gratia. A discussion of various theories, including those that focused on mutiny, pirates, sea monsters and killer water spouts, is presented. A 2007 investigation into the mystery which was performed by Anne MacGregor and Phil Richardson, which resulted in the documentary "The True Story of the Mary Celeste", which was partly funded by Smithsonian Networks, is discussed. Includes references to Doyle. "...Arthur Conan Doyle's 1884 short story based on the case posited a capture by a vengeful ex-slave...The story of the Mary Celeste might have drifted into history if Conan Doyle hadn't published 'J. Habakuk Jephson's Statement' in 1884; his sensationalistic account, printed in Cornhill Magazine, set off waves of theorizing about the ship's fate. Even Attorney General Solly-Flood revisited the case, writing summaries of his interviews and notes. But the mystery remained unsolved...."
465. Bold, Valentina. "The Year's Publications 2003: a Selected List." Scottish Studies Review 5, no. 1 (2004): 136-152.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a list of Scottish publications in 2003. Included in list are: Arthur Conan Doyle. The Tragedy of the Korosco. London: Hesperus. ISBN 1 8439 1039 X pbk; Lawrence Frank. Victorian Detective Fiction and the Nature of Evidence: The Scientific Investigations of Poe, Dickens and Doyle. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan. ISBN 1 4039 1139 8 hbk.
466. Briefel, Aviva. "Hands of Beauty, Hands of Horror: Fear and Egyptian Art at the Fin de Siècle." Victorian Studies 50, no. 2 (2008): 263-271.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This essay examines the gothicization of Egyptian manual productions in late-Victorian mummy narratives. Includes a reference to Doyle. "...Victorian observers were fascinated by the intricate manual labor required to eviscerate, embalm, and adorn the body and ornament its sarcophagus and various accoutrements. When a group of Oxford scholars in Arthur Conan Doyle's short story 'Lot No. 249' (1894) discovers a mummy, one of them expresses his admiration for the embalmer's skill: 'A very conscientious worker he must have been. I wonder how many modern works will survive four thousand years?'....I want to suggest that the aesthetic horror of the hand in mummy narratives emanates from its ambiguous position as an artifact that is itself a source of production. The hand reminds its viewers both of the impressive (and now obsolete) manual craftsmanship that produced it and of the hand's own creative capacities. It is a human-made thing that exhibits its own ability to make. As one of the characters in Conan Doyle's 'Lot No. 249' observes regarding the mummy, 'Perhaps these very hands helped to build the stones into the pyramids'...."
467. Chabon, Michael. "You Must Read This: Charmed by a dashing brigadier." 2008, no. Jan 31: 1.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Author Michael Chabon writes about one of Doyle's other creations, Brigadier Gerard. An excerpt from the article: "...But did you know that in between gleefully killing off Holmes and somewhat reluctantly reviving him, Arthur Conan Doyle created another great fictional character, one who easily rivals Holmes -- if not for intelligence, then for heroism, bravery and dash? A character who exceeds Holmes in the one trait in which the great detective, by his own admission, was always deficient: a rich and lovable humanity. This hero, a handsome, charming and resourceful cavalry officer serving in the Grand Army of Napoleon, has only one tragic flaw, though in his own eyes, of course, it is his glory and his single greatest advantage in life: He is a Frenchman. His name is Brigadier Etienne Gerard, and he starred in 17 short stories that Conan Doyle wrote, with a palpable sense of liberation, after pushing Holmes off that Alpine ledge...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Includes an excerpt from chapter one of The Exploits and Adventures of Brigadier Gerard.

468. Chandran, K. Narayana. "Reviews." Studies in Short Fiction 31, no. 3 (1994): 514.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the books 'Folktales From India: A Selection of Oral Tales From Twenty-two Languages,' edited by A.K. Ramanujan and 'The Penguin Book of Indian Ghost Stories,' edited by Ruskin Bond. Includes a reference to Doyle. "...Ruskin Bond collects 21 ghost stories, nine of them by non-Indians (mostly British) and the rest by Indian-English writers. All of the stories are set in India except A. Conan Doyle's "Brown Hand" in which an Indian ghost stalks the foggy streets of London..."
469. Clausson, Nils. "The Simple Art of Stealing: The Case of Raymond Chandler's Purloined 'Rats behind the Wainscoting.'" ANQ 19, no. 3 (2006): 32-34.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This essay states that novelist Raymond Chandler had borrowed some of his ideas for the novel 'The Big Sleep' from 'The Mystery of Cloomber,' a novella by Arthur Conan Doyle. Rats behind the wainscoting, one of the most famous images in Chandler's novel 'The Big Sleep' was taken from 'The Mystery of Cloomber.' 'The Big Sleep' is about the Sternwoods, a doomed family over whom death hovers ominously. What Chandler borrowed from Doyle's novella is the mood of inevitable doom that is beyond the characters' power to prevent or even understand.
470. Connors, Theresa, and Mark Annichiarico. "Audio reviews." Library Journal 121, no. 13 (1996): 134.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the sound recording 'The Lost World,' by Arthur Conan Doyle.
471. Davies, David Stuart. "Review--'The Blood-Stone Tragedy' by Arthur Conan Doyle, edited by Christopher and Barbara Roden." The Musgrave Papers, no. 8 (1995): 117.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
472. Elliott, Doug, and Trevor S. Raymond. "'Bookshelf': Reviews of The Annotated Lost World and The Unpublished Solar Pons." Canadian Holmes 20, no. 1 (1996): 29-33.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
473. Feigelman, Jennifer. "Graphic Novels." School Library Journal 51, no. 11 (2005): 177.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a review with a reference to Holmes and Doyle. Pomplun, Tom, ed. Graphic Classics: Arthur Conan Doyle. vol 2. 2nd ed. illus. by Rick Geary, et al. 144p. Eureka. 2005. pap. $11.95. ISBN 0-9746648-5-5. Gr 8 Up "Doyle's prose and poetry are brought to life in this exciting volume. It has some overlap from the first volume (Eureka, 2002), but also includes some truly outstanding new tales. In 'The Ghosts of Goresthorpe Grange,' a man believes that his house is occupied by spirits and seeks out the help of a medium. Ultimately, he is drugged and swindled, and the dreamlike style of the art reinforces this mood. In 'Two Great Brown-Pericord Motor,' two men create an invention and become fiercely jealous and protective of it, until disaster erupts. This volume also contains two Sherlock Holmes stories and thrilling tales of sea adventures. Though each one is illustrated by a different artist, the writing ties the collection together nicely. Unlike the earlier volume, this one utilizes a consistent comic format throughout. The artists have deftly captured the themes and moods of each piece in the black-and-white illustrations done in a wide range of styles and techniques. This assortment of tales may attract new readers to Doyle's work."
474. Hall, John. "The Maggot in the Brain: Conan Doyle's 'The Parasite'." The Ritual, no. 26 (2000): 52-58.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
475. Harmidarow, Walter, Doug Wrigglesworth, and Trevor S. Raymond. "'Bookshelf': Reviews of The Scroll of the Dead, The Case Files of Sherlock Holmes: The Dying Detective and Waterloo: a Case-Book on Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's Historical Play." Canadian Holmes 22, no. 2 (1998): 42-44.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
476. Hayman, Randy. "Tips for Lost Students." Science Fiction Studies 32, no. 3 (2005): 516-518.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book "The Lost World," by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

477. Jones, Thomas. "Short Cuts." London Review of Books 27, no. 4 (2005): 22-22.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses issues on the inclusion of the story "J. Habakuk Jephson's Statement" by Arthur Conan Doyle in the appendix of the book "Mary Celeste: The Greatest Mystery of the Sea," by Paul Begg. Overview of the "Statement"; Theme of the book; Influence of the book on modern literature.
478. Leeson, D. M. "Playing at War: The British Military Manoeuvres of 1898." War in History 15, no. 4 (2008): 432-461.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "For more than a century now the British army has been criticized for its performance in the South African War of 1899-1902. In recent years, however, this consensus has been challenged: revisionist historians have argued that criticism of the late Victorian army and its commanders has been unfairly harsh. But a detailed study of the military manoeuvres held on Salisbury Plain in September 1898 indicates that the army's critics have not been so unfair after all. The results of these exercises were decidedly mixed, and generals such as Sir Redvers Buller went on to repeat their mistakes in South Africa the following year." [Abstract from author]. Includes a reference to Doyle. "...Clearly, the British Army did not fully appreciate the 'appalling power' of its new machine weapons. Indeed, some British officers conducted operations as if their infantry and artillery were still armed with muzzle-loading smooth-bore muskets and cannon. 'In the Salisbury Plain manoeuvres of 1898,' wrote Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, 'I saw with my own eyes lines of infantry standing and firing upon each other at short ranges without rebuke either from their officers or from the umpires.'..." The citation is from Doyle's The Great Boer War (London, 1900), p. 517.
479. Lovisi, Gary. "Lost Works of 'The Lost World'." Shoso-In Bulletin 12, no. (2002): 184-185.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
480. ———. "The Lost World and Professor Challenger in Paperback." Shoso-In Bulletin 11, no. (2001): 39-43.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
481. Morrison, Philip. "Dinosaur Tracks and Traces/The Lost World & The Poison Belt: Professor Challenger Adventures by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle (Book)." Scientific American 261, no. 3 (1989): 188.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'Dinosaur Tracks and Traces,' edited by David D. Gillette and Martin G. Lockley.
482. Rogers, Michael. "Book Reviews Classic Returns." Library Journal 126, no. 11 (2001): 108.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews several reprinted books. 'An Irresistible Impulse,' by Barbara Delinsky; 'Exploits and Adventures of Brigadier Gerard,' by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle; 'The Bride of Lammermoor,' by Sir Walter Scott; 'The House of Windsor,' by Andrew Roberts; 'Augustus: The Golden Age of Rome,' and 'Hannibal,' by G.P. Baker; Others.
483. ———. "Book reviews: Classic returns." Library Journal 117, no. 6 (1992): 154.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'The Horror of the Heights & Other Tales of Suspense,' by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. Chronicle, 1992. ISBN 0-8118-0144-6.
484. ———. "Classic Returns." Library Journal 123, no. 18 (1998): 130.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents numerous brief reviews of reprinted books. 'The Lost World,' by Arthur Conan Doyle; 'Take Five,' by D. Keith Mano; 'Valperga,' by Mary Shelley.
485. ———. "A Duet with an Occasional Chorus. (Book)." Library Journal 115, no. 7 (1990): 129-129.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book "A Duet With an Occasional Chorus," by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. (Gaslight Pub., distributed by Vanguard Pr. [Conan Doyle Centennial Series] 1990. ISBN 0-934468-48-6)
486. ———. "The Foundling/The Return/The Mystery of Cloomber." Library Journal 130, no. 6 (2005): 134-134.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews three books. "The Foundling," by Charlotte Bronte; "The Return," by Joseph Conrad; "The Mystery of Cloomber," by Arthur Conan Doyle.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

487. ———. "The Lost World / When the World Screamed & Other Stories. (Book)." Library Journal 115, no. 17 (1990): 110-110.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews two books about the spirit world by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. "The Lost World" (Academy Chicago, 1990. ISBN 0-89733-331-4); "When the World Screamed & Other Stories." (Chronicle, 1990. ISBN 0-87701-652-6)
488. ———. "Our African Winter/Expedition to the Zambesi/My Early Travels and Adventures in America and Asia... (Book)." Library Journal 127, no. 2 (2002): 138.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews several books of travel writing. 'Our African Winter,' by Arthur Conan Doyle; 'Expedition to the Zambesi,' by David Livingstone and Charles Livingstone; 'My Early Travels and Adventures in America and Asia,' by Henry M. Stanley; 'The Great Navigators of the 18th Century,' by Jules Verne.
489. ———. "Pirates of Venus/The Poison Belt (Book)." Library Journal 127, no. 4 (2002): 146.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews two science fiction books. 'Pirates of Venus,' by Edgar Rice Burroughs; 'The Poison Belt,' by Arthur Conan Doyle.
490. ———. "Round the Five Stories. (Book)." Library Journal 116, no. 13 (1991): 151-151.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book "Round the Fire Stories," by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. Chronicle, 1991. ISBN 0-87701-883-9.
491. ———. "Through the Magic Door (Book review)." Library Journal 125, no. 12 (2000): 148.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'Through the Magic Door,' by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle.
492. Smith, R. Dixon. "Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and The Lost World." Canadian Holmes 25, no. 2 (2001): 28-31.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
493. Smothers, Bonnie. "News and views." Booklist 92, no. 13 (1996): 1111.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses developments related to literature as of March 1, 1996. Release of a new edition of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's 'The Annotated Lost World'; Lecture given by film editor Walter Murch in Sydney, Australia; HarperCollinsWorld's publication of the diaries of Samuel Pepys.
494. Southworth, Bruce E. "100 Years Ago." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 3, no. 2 (1999): 2.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Some observations on the non-Sherlockian book by Doyle, A Duet With an Occasional Chorus, the storm that arose between Doyle and the critic Robert William Nicoll, and various editions held by the Collections.
495. Thompson, T. Jack. "Light on the Dark Continent: The Photography of Alice Seely Harris and the Congo Atrocities of the Early Twentieth Century." International Bulletin of Missionary Research 26, no. 4 (2002): 146.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the mission photography of Alice Seely Harris, an English missionary with the Congo Balolo Mission, concerning the Congo Atrocities of the early twentieth century. Her family background; Contributions of her photography to reforms in Congo; Description of her missionary photographs. Contains a couple of references to Doyle. "...A host of personalities, many of them well-known internationally, helped to bring the Congo atrocities to the attention of a wider public. Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, famous as the creator of Sherlock Holmes, wrote a pamphlet, The Crime of the Congo....What was unusual was the international nature of the campaign against Leopold's rule. The campaign was due to the work of many people, some of whom have been mentioned in passing. Several of them, such as Mark Twain and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, were already figures of international repute; others such as E. D. Morel and William H. Shepherd became famous as a result of the campaign...."
496. Wade, Robert. "Spadework." The San Diego Union, Mar 18, 1984: 6.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Sir Arthur Conan Doyle is universally known as the creator of Sherlock Holmes. And of little else. Yet the Holmes stories are only the tip of the Doyle iceberg; there exists a whole body of other works, hitherto mostly submerged. But no longer, because [John Michael Gibson] and [Richard Lancelyn Green], who produced the first complete Doyle bibliography, have again teamed to revive 33 of his short stories never previously published in book form and 10 of them only recently identified as his work....They're not all winners, of course, but all show the hand of a born storyteller and trace the development of a major -- and often underrated -- author. It's a valuable piece of scholarship but don't let that scare you off. It's fun, too."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

05F SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE -- THE PILTDOWN MAN (3)

497. "The great deception." Discover 21, no. 1 (2000): 57.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Cites the scientific hoax involving a doctored human skull discovered at Piltdown Common in Sussex, England in 1912. Doyle mentioned.

498. Frullani, Anita. "The piltdown man forgery." British Heritage 19, no. 4 (1998): 16.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on the discovery of the Piltdown Man at the Piltdown quarry in Sussex, England, by amateur geologist Charles Dawson. Indication that Piltdown Man established Britain's importance in the study of human evolution; What the findings consisted of; Belief that Piltdown Man was an ancestor of modern man; Identification of persons who took part in the findings; Information on other findings; Indepth look at the discoveries. Includes a reference to Doyle. "...Nearly everyone ever associated with Piltdown Man, from Arthur Smith Woodward to the more obvious culprit, Charles Dawson, was accused of perpetrating the hoax. One surprising allegation claimed that the mastermind was author Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, who was known to have visited the site, located near his home. Accusers pointed to references found in his writings concerning fossil skulls, a diagram that resembled a golf course near Piltdown, and various other supposed connections to the Piltdown Hoax. In particular, some have suggested that he left a cryptic confession in the opening lines of his novel, The Lost World: I have wrought my simple plan If I give one hour of joy To the boy who's half a man Or the man who's half a boy. The theory is something of a stretch, since Conan Doyle published this book in 1912, prior to the discovery of Piltdown Man, and the lines' simple meaning is fairly clear: He hoped his book would appeal to young and old alike...."

499. Maxted, Lawrence R. "Video." Library Journal 130, no. 16 (2005): 117.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // An annotated bibliography of recently released video titles is provided, one with a reference to Doyle and Holmes. The Boldest Hoax: The Story of Piltdown Man. color & b/w. 60 min. Kate Bartlett, BBC Prod., NOVA, dist. by WGBH-Boston Video, 800-949-8670; shop.wgbh.org. 2005. VHS ISBN 1-59375-288-1. $19.95; DVD ISBN 1-59375-289-X. $19.95. "Determined to be a hoax in 1953, the fossils known collectively as Piltdown Man made a sensation when discovered in 1912 in southeastern England. This documentary, seen on the PBS series NOVA, concentrates on trying to establish who had the access, means, and motive to fake the fossils and then stay quiet while scientific careers were wasted studying them. The documentary includes as suspects Sherlock Holmes creator Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, Sir Arthur Smith Woodward and Martin Hinton of Britain's Natural History Museum, and the fossils' discoverer, Charles Dawson. Using dramatic re enactments, period footage, and interviews with experts, the documentary examines each suspect and makes an educated judgment as to who was the likely perpetrator. Piltdown Man is perhaps the most famous example of how science can be duped. This program does a fine job of placing the hoax in its historical context and providing insight into the scientific method, all while telling an intriguing story. Highly recommended."

05G SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE -- SPIRITUALISM AND FAIRIES(51)

500. "Books Received." Folklore 118, no. 3 (2007): 356-363.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A list of books received by the journal is presented, including Conan Doyle, Sir Arthur. The Coming of the Fairies. Introduction by John M. Lynch. Lincoln, Nebr.: Bison Books, 2006. Extraordinary World series. xv, 189 pp. Illus. $9.95 (pbk). ISBN 0-8032-6655-3, ISBN-13: 978-0803266551.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

501. "Great American Skeptics." Skeptic 14, no. 3 (2008): 81-91.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article provides information on the great American skeptics. Includes a section on Houdini and Arthur Conan Doyle (p. 84).
502. "Photography of the Paranormal." USA Today Magazine 134, no. 2726 (2005): 64-68.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article provides information on the exhibition "The Perfect Medium: Photography and the Occult." The exhibit brings together some 120 photographs culled from public and private archives throughout Europe and North America, focusing primarily on the period from the 1860s through World War II, when occult and paranormal phenomena were a hot topic of debate and supporters and skeptics summoned photographs as evidence. Approaching the material from a historical perspective, the exhibition presents the photographs on their own terms, without authoritative comment as to their veracity. Included in the exhibition will be Mumler's portrait of Fanny Conant, a well-known Boston medium, who appears in the photograph with her control spirit. The Perfect Medium is organized in three sections, emphasizing different roles photography has played in its encounters with the occult. The article notes that "As the Spiritualist movement gained momentum in the late 19th century, spirit photography became a hotly debated topic, attracting the attention of major intellectual figures, including psychologist William James, scientists Alfred Russell Wallace and Charles Richet, and author Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, the latter best known for his tales of Sherlock Holmes."
503. Alexander, David. "Early ghostbusters." Skeptic 4, no. 4 (1996): 42.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents information on the early works of spirit paintings and how the mystery behind such paintings were revealed. Includes reference to Doyle and Holmes. "Spiritualism was championed by many of the leading lights of the age, including the naturalist Alfred Russel Wallace, the physicists William Crookes and Oliver Lodge, and even Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, who demonstrated none of his literary alter-ego's legendary deductive reasoning skills when confronting the supernatural. (Doyle gave hundreds of thousands of pounds to the British Society for Psychical Research and thought it would be for his support and defense of spiritualism that he would be remembered, not his creation of Sherlock Holmes.)"
504. Alves, Abel. "Humanity's Place in Nature, 1863 - 1928: Horror, Curiosity and the Expeditions of Huxley, Wallace, Blavatsky and Lovecraft." Theology & Science 6, no. 1 (2008): 73-88.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a reference to Doyle. "...Even as Sherlock Holmes' creator, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, in the 1920s was promoting through a series of lectures on spiritualism in the United States the notion that one can contact the dead, Lovecraft was writing letters recoiling at the metaphysical notions of spiritualism and Theosophy, as well as Christian fundamentalism. While some people might 'give tremendous weight to the cunningly doctored reports of 'occult' phenomena popularized by men like Lodge, Doyle, and Flammarion,' there were others who 'refuse to think about such things at all...'"
505. Baker, William, and Kenneth Womack. "Recent Work in Critical Theory." Style 33, no. 4 (1999): 508.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a bibliography annotates of published books based primarily on materials coming into the Northern Illinois University libraries between August 1998 and August 1999. Includes entries with reference to Doyle and Holmes. Silver, Carole G. Strange Secret Peoples: Fairies and Victorian Consciousness. Oxford: Oxford UP, 1999. "Silver examines the hidden web of connections between the Victorian fascination with fairies and the dominant preoccupations of Victorian culture. Using works by such writers and artists as Thomas Carlyle, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, Charlotte Mew, and Aubrey Beardsley, among others, Silver assesses the anthropological, folkloric, legal, historical, and medical aspects of the place of fairies in the Victorian consciousness. Silver identifies a pervasive eroticism and a sense of sexual anxiety in the Victorian social, literary, and cultural approach to the world of fairies and folklore." Kendrick, Stephen. Holy Clues: The Gospel According to Sherlock Holmes. New York: Pantheon, 1999. "Kendrick argues that Sherlock Holmes functions as a spiritual guide and master, as a character whose Zen-like techniques of awareness and observation provide religious insight for modern, cynical readers. In addition to exploring the stories of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle for religious and metaphysical lessons, Kendrick demonstrates the ways in which the methods of investigating crimes are the same methods that yield religious insight when applied to the world and to the human heart. Kendrick draws upon both Eastern and Western religious tradition while addressing issues of justice and mercy, good and evil, guilt and innocence."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

506. Beydt, Bruce. "The Adventure of the Cottingley Fairies." British Heritage 25, no. 2 (2004): 20-25.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "This article describes an incident in which two girls in England who claimed to have seen fairies and also had photographic evidence to prove it. One of the most respected men in England -- Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, the creator of Sherlock Holmes -- believed that the girls could literally see and photograph fairies that frolicked in their back yard.... The girls, Frances Griffiths and Elsie Wright struck to their story until as late as the 1980s, when they finally admitted that four of the five famous photographs, at least, were fakes."
507. Bray, Christopher. "Is there anybody there?" New Statesman 137, no. 4900 (2008): 58-59.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "Servants of the Supernatural: the Night Side of the Victorian Mind," by Antonio Melechi. Includes a reference to Doyle. "...Meanwhile, in the decidedly less pious London of the 1870s, the conjuror John Nevil Maskelyne had his work cut out for him convincing people the mediums were talking hooley. You might be able to replicate their miracles, he was told, but that doesn't mean the spiritualists get their effects the same way. A few years later, no less a figure than Sir Arthur Conan Doyle - who in the shape of Sherlock Holmes was creating one of the enduring emblems of the rationalist enlightenment -- would be a sucker for the sorcerers. His friend Harry Houdini had an explanation for every huckster's hocus-pocus, but Doyle was having none of it. His wife was dead and he needed to believe there were people who could help him commune with her...."
508. Carlson, Scott. "Do-It-Yourself Journalism." Chronicle of Higher Education 50, no. 27 (2004): A48-A48.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the collection of zines by several librarians in Minneapolis Community and Technical College in Minneapolis, Minnesota. Includes a reference to Doyle. "...Other zines in the college's collection are just plain odd. Totally amateur and absolutely earnest, Voices From Spirit Magazine caters to those who talk with the dead. The March 1988 issue includes an interview from beyond with Arthur Conan Doyle, which reads like a celebrity feature you might find in Entertainment Weekly. Nearly the entire interview goes by before the mediums bother to ask how Doyle is passing his time in the spirit world. 'I am a representative in our local parliament,' he replies...."
509. Cary, Alice. "Harry Houdini: Best of a vanishing breed." Biography 2, no. 10 (1998): 94.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Profiles that late Hungarian magician, Harry Houdini. Includes Inset, "Houdini's duel with Doyle."
510. Chism, Stephen J. "'The very Happiest Tiding': Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's Correspondence with Arkansas Spiritualists." Arkansas Historical Quarterly 59, no. 3 (2000): 299-310.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "In 1919, Fayetteville, Arkansas, spiritualist Lessie Stringfellow Read and her adoptive mother, Alice Stringfellow, contacted Sir Arthur Conan Doyle in hopes of receiving assistance in publishing Leslie's Letters to His Mother, eventually published by the Fayetteville Democrat in 1926. Said to be a product of automatic writing, the book consisted of messages allegedly received between 1886 and 1912 from Alice's son, Leslie, who had died in 1886, and described the afterlife from his point of view as a new arrival. While Doyle is famous for his Sherlock Holmes mysteries, he had a keen interest in spiritualism throughout his career and, by 1919, had become England's foremost public advocate for it. Surviving correspondence indicates that he believed the document to be authentic and was impressed not only because it reflected ideas and images from other spiritualist writings, but because it described the afterlife in very specific terms."
511. Cohen, Emily Jane. "The fairy machine." Art Issues, no. 51 (1998): 24-29.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Discusses the late 19th and early 20th century quest to produce photographic evidence of the existence of fairies, with particular reference to the images faked by two girls, Elsie Wright and Frances Griffiths, in Cottingley, England, in 1917. The author notes the interest of Arthur Conan Doyle in the Cottingley fairy photographs, outlines his theories regarding them, and comments on the recent film Fairy Tale: a True Story by Charles Sturridge. She concludes by examining the place of electricity in the depiction of fairies and in art works by Marinetti, Picabia and Raoul Dufy."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

512. Cox, Jim. "A Journey of Spiritualism." Baker Street West 14, no. 2 (1998): 14-19.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
513. Crawley, Geoffrey. "Fairy tales, and true stories." British Journal of Photography, no. 7165 (1998): 12-13.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "A discussion of the story of the Cottingley Fairies, the greatest photo hoax of all time. The photographs were taken in 1917 by two young girls, Elsie Wright and Frances Griffiths, and included an image of Frances behind an array of cut-out fairies in a glen. They came to public notice when published by the novelist Arthur Conan Doyle in the December 1920 issue of Strand magazine; Doyle had an abiding interest in the paranormal. The images were actually taken using a Midg box quarterplate magazine camera and a developing and contact printing kit."
514. ———. "Photographing fairies." British Journal of Photography, no. (2000): 71-74.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The writer describes his involvement in a project to expose the 20th century's longest-running photography hoax--the Cottingley fairy photographs. He details how the five pictures of fairies were staged in 1917 and 1921 by two girls, Elsie Wright and Frances Griffiths, using cardboard figures. Recalling how he later became friends with the elderly Elsie, he explains how the girls were reluctant to expose the fraud for fear of showing up the famous men who became interested in the case, particularly Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, then an accomplished photographer. Noting the longevity of the hoax and of media interest in it, he describes how the hoax came to an end with confessions from the two women in the 1980s."
515. ———. "Pixies, not pixels." British Journal of Photography, no. 7166 (1998): 12-13.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "By 1920, the hoax of Conan Doyle's pictures of the Cottingley Fairies divided Britain into believers and skeptics. The pictures were taken by two girls who claimed that they had seen the fairies. In the baffling final picture, the Fairy Sunbath, the girls conveniently placed six fairy cutouts along a grassy bank. The girls' story defied disproof until 1983."
516. Crowley, John R. "Seeking Psychic and Spiritual Truth." Journal of Religion & Psychical Research 18, no. 2 (1995): 71.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Part II. Discusses three attempts at proving paranormal experiences. Citation to Doyle in the notes.
517. Curry, Andrew, Holly J. Morris, Art Samuels, Maggie Shrou, Anne Bradley, Nora Keating, Amy Kost, Lee Neville, and Sheila Thalhimer. "Hoaxes of the Ages." U.S. News & World Report 129, no. 4 (2000): 74.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a list of archaeological discoveries which were later discovered to be hoaxes. Includes reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...There were fairies in the garden in pictures taken in 1917 by two girls, 10 and 16, in Cottingley, England. Experts determined the photos had not been tampered with. Sherlock Holmes creator Sir Arthur Conan Doyle saw the images as proof little people were returning to the world and defended them in his book The Coming of the Fairies...."
518. Ferguson, Christine. "Eugenics and the Afterlife: Lombroso, Doyle, and the Spiritualist Purification of the Race." Journal of Victorian Culture 12, no. 1 (2007): 64-85.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The article examines the fulfillment of eugenicist Francis Galton's desire for a merging of religion and eugenics within the occult movement that he himself had explored throughout his career, which is the modern spiritualism. In making this argument, the author intends to balance the celebratory tendency of some of the recent scholarship on Victorian spiritualism with a discussion of its ideological complicity with both positive and negative eugenics." Includes multiple references to Doyle and Holmes.
519. Flores, Enrique, and Arthur Conan Doyle. "The photomedium and spirit photography." Luna Córnea, no. 10 (1996): 10-17.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reproduces a text on spiritualist photography by the British author Arthur Conan Doyle. The author introduces the extract from Conan Doyle's The History of Spiritualism, published in 1927, and comments on the two possible types of spirit photography. Conan Doyle discusses William Crookes's photographs of an apparition summoned by the medium Florence Cook, offers an explanation of how spirit photography might be possible, and describes his own experiments with the photomedium William Hope.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

520. Goldman, David. "A Real-life Fairy Tale." Biography 4, no. 4 (2000): 28.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Relates how trick photographs made by Elsie Griffiths and Frances Wright made the people of London, England, believed in the existence of fairies and gnomes during the 1920s. Writer Arthur Conan Doyle's role in convincing the public regarding the authenticity of the pictures.
521. Gomel, Elana. "Altered States: Sex, Nation, Drugs, and Self-Transformation in Victorian Spiritualism/Possessed Victorians: Extra Spheres in Nineteenth-Century Mystical Writings." Victorian Studies 49, no. 4 (2007): 751-753.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews two books including "Altered States: Sex, Nation, Drugs, and Self-Transformation in Victorian Spiritualism," by Marlene Tromp and "Possessed Victorians: Extra Spheres in Nineteenth-Century Mystical Writings," by Sarah W. Willburn. Opens with a reference to Doyle. "'The psychic cloud' (to use Arthur Conan Doyle's expression) that rained revelations upon the enraptured sitters in Victorian Spiritualist séances, refuses to be dispelled by the light of skepticism...."
522. Harper, Margaret Mills. "Nemo: George Yeats and her Automatic Script." New Literary History 33, no. 2 (2002): 291-314.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a reference to Doyle. "...Spiritualism was also changing as the Victorian period faded into the Edwardian and Europe slouched toward the transformations of the Great War, waning and then reasserting itself in the 1890s and through the War. The renewal featured a greater emphasis on voices, either spoken or written, and correspondingly somewhat less on physical phenomena, so that Arthur Conan Doyle could suggest in 1926 that 'materialisation may have been more common in the past than in the present,' and that 'in these days complete materialisation is very rare.'..." The note for this passage (12) continues the Doyle reference: Arthur Conan Doyle, The History of Spiritualism (New York, 1926), vol. 2, pp. 209-10. Doyle's wife Jean, it should be remembered, had conducted automatic writing a few years earlier. See Pheneas Speaks; direct spirit communications in the family circle, reported by Arthur Conan Doyle (London, 1927). See also Ruth Brandon, The Spiritualists: The Passion for the Occult in the Nineteenth and Twentieth Centuries (New York, 1983), p. 226.
523. Harvey, John. "The Photographic Medium: Representation, Reconstitution, Consciousness, and Collaboration in Early-Twentieth-Century Spiritualism." Technoetic Arts: A Journal of Speculative Research 2, no. 2 (2004): 109-123.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes multiples references to Doyle. "This paper discusses the image of the ghost as adapted by and to photography. It focuses on the evolution of the photographic ghost in relation to a distinctive manifestation of psychic photography (or spirit photography) prevalent during the early twentieth century. Psychic investigators observed that in some photographs the faces of spirits that developed on the glass-plate negatives appeared to have been handmade.... This paper examines the unique and overlooked interaction between science and spirit, apparatus and appearances, and matter and minds, involving and connecting attendant and (purportedly) remote psyches."
524. Heydt, Bruce. "Genius Gone Awry." British Heritage 25, no. 2 (2004): 4-4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "This article introduces a series of articles published in the May 2004 edition of the journal "British Heritage." This issue features two stories appealing to those who enjoy looking into the past and second-guessing their intellectual superiors. Both are tales of men of genius whose wits momentarily let them down. One, Isambard Kingdom Brunel, was a brilliant engineer whose vision of how to build a better mousetrap--or railway in this case--proved an embarrassing failure. The other, Arthur Conan Doyle, was a literary genius whose powers of reasoning often matched those of his fictional creation, Sherlock Holmes--but who on one occasion was duped by two mischievous little girls."
525. Huntington, Tom. "The man who believed in fairies." Smithsonian 28, no. 6 (1997): 104.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses author Sir Author Conan Doyle's belief in Spiritualism. How his reputation suffered due to his belief in fairies; The birth of Modern Spiritualism in 1848 in Hydesville, New York; Biographical data for Doyle; Doyle's tour of America to promote Spiritualism; Doyle's correspondence with Harry Houdini; The powerful force that is faith.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

526. Krauss, Rolf H. "Sherlock Holmes, die Fotografie und die Elfen." Jahrbuch für Moderne Kunst, no. 40 (1993).
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the 'Cottingley fairies' case of 1917 and the interest of Arthur Conan Doyle in the photographs taken by two young Yorkshire girls of each other with apparently supernatural beings. The author describes the conjectures of theosophists and photographers until 1990 when Joe Cooper, in his book The Case of the Cottingley Fairies (London: Robert Hale), revealed how the photographs had been faked.
527. MacIntyre, F. Gwynplaine. "The Land of Mist, by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle (1926)." Fantasy & Science Fiction 110, no. 2 (2006): 162-162.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Provides an overview of the book "The Land of Mist," by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. Theme of the book; Concept of spiritualism addressed in the book.
528. Milmo, Bycahal. "Unpublished Images of the Fairies that Fooled the World Go on Sale." The Independent (London), February 16, 2001: 5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "They fooled the author of the Sherlock Holmes novels and created a myth which persisted for 60 years that a colony of 12-inch fairies was to be found dancing at the end of a garden in West Yorkshire. Part of the series of blurry photographs of what became known as the Cottingley Fairies resurfaced yesterday, with unpublished images of the two schoolgirls whose innocent prank duped the world. An archive of prints and negatives taken in 1917 by Elsie Wright, 15, and her cousin, Frances Griffiths, 10, showing them playing with 'fairies', goes up for sale next month at a London auction house...."
529. Milner, Richard. "Charles Darwin and associates, ghostbusters." Scientific American 275, no. 4 (1996): 96.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the controversy over the trial of 19th century spiritualist Henry Slade which involved noted naturalists Charles Darwin and Alfred Russell Wallace. Zoologist Edwin Ray Lankester's suit against Slade for criminal fraud; Darwin's support for the prosecution; Wallace's defense of Slade; Courtroom trial of Slade. Includes a reference to Doyle. "...The Slade trial was to become one of the strangest courtroom cases in Victorian England. Some saw it as a public arena where science could score a devastating triumph over superstition. For others, it was the declaration of war between professional purveyors of the 'paranormal' and the fraternity of honest stage magicians. Arthur Conan Doyle, the zealous spiritualist whose fictional detective, Sherlock Holmes, was logic personified, characterized it as 'the persecution [rather than prosecution] of Slade.'..."
530. Monroe, John Warne. "Cartes de visite from the Other World: Spiritism and the Discourse of Laicism in the Early Third Republic." French Historical Studies 26, no. 1 (2003): 119-153.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Doyle mentioned in note 29: For a skeptical discussion of Hudson's photographs, see John Beattie's articles in Photographic News 17 (1873): 334, 371, 383, 406-7, 443-44. For rather less skeptical but considerably more comprehensive histories of British and American spirit photography in the nineteenth and early twentieth centuries, see James Coates, Photographing the Invisible: Practical Studies in Spirit Photography, Spirit Portraiture, and Other Rare but Allied Phenomena (London, 1911); Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, The Case for Spirit Photography (London, 1922); and J. Traill Taylor, The Veil Lifted: Modern Developments in Spirit Photography (London, 1894).
531. Nickels, James B. "Psychic Research in a Winnipeg Family: Reminiscences of Dr. Glen F. Hamilton." Manitoba History, no. (2007): 51-60.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article presents an overview of Thomas Glendenning Hamilton and his psychic research. Hamilton is known for his studies in the field of parapsychology covering topics related to the Ouija board, mental telepathy, table rapping, table tipping, bell-box ringing, supernormal lights, dictatorial spirit guides, and trance personalities. Information about the studies conducted by Hamilton are offered. Includes references to Doyle along with a color photograph. "Occasionally, famous people arrived in Winnipeg and came to Hamilton House, some attending sittings and some even taking their own photographs of the proceedings. Three of the most noted visitors were Sir Arthur Conan Doyle (1-3 July 1923), who wrote the Sherlock Holmes stories, Dr. and Mrs. L. R. G. Crandon (21-24 December 1926), who were associated with the Houdini versus Margery controversy, and the Right Honourable William Lyon Mackenzie King (20 August

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- 1933), who was former Prime Minister of Canada, then Leader of the Opposition, and soon to return once more as Prime Minister. In May, June, and July of 1932, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle returned once more to Hamilton House--through séances--because he died on 7 July 1930...." Photograph caption reads: "The late Sir Arthur Conan Doyle appeared in a teleplasmic protrusion from Mary Marshall's nose during a séance at Hamilton House on 27 June 1932."
532. Owen, Alex. "Borderland forms': Arthur Conan Doyle, Albion's daughters, and the politics of the Cottingley fairies." History workshop, no. 38 (1994): 48-85.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Owen looks at incidents surrounding photographs taken in 1917 by two English girls from the Yorkshire village of Cottingley. In photos taken of each other, the girls are shown playing with fairies. These photos were championed as genuine by Conan Doyle who published them in the Strand magazine in Dec 1920. Owen argues that Cottingley was one of the last manifestations of a glorious Victorian and Edwardian fairy tradition, and a highly-publicized incident in a broader interwar engagement with mysticism and the occult. He explores these themes, paying particular attention to the historical context that gave the Cottingley fairies their validity, and the blurring of the boundaries between rationalism, fantasy and spirituality that facilitated belief in a 20th c. fairyland. He contends that the issues are intimately bound up with social questions. Cottingley affords a fleeting glimpse of the interior worlds of two early-20th-c. working-class girlhoods, and the way in which the fanciful realizations of childhood were appropriated and recast by a small group of middle-class men. Power relations are a crucial part of the untold story, and social and gender anxieties constitute one of its major underlying tensions."
533. Polidoro, Massimo. "Houdini v. the blond witch of Lime Street." Skeptic 5, no. 3 (1997): 90.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Features Mina Stinson and her demonstrations on the power of mind over matter in 1923. Discovery of Mina's powers by her husband Le Roy Godard Crandon; Renaming of Mina as Margery; Séances with magician Harry Houdini. Includes multiple references to Doyle.
534. Princenthal, Nancy. "Willing Spirits: Art of the Paranormal." Art in America 94, no. 2 (2006): 104-115.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article focuses on "The Perfect Medium: Photography and the Occult," an exhibition of spirit photography at the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York City. Some of the works featured in the exhibit include pocket-sized gilt-edged framed formal portraits and bigger and bolder images from the early decades of the 20th century. The event showed that photography can indeed serve as an ideal form for catching ghosts and spirits. Includes references to Doyle. "...Among the exhibition's photographs of this period were two from the famous Cottingley Fairies series, produced in 1925 by the 16-year-old Elsie Wright and her 10-year-old cousin Frances Griffiths, and vigorously supported by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle (who maintained a substantial collection of spirit photographs and once conducted a demonstration of a spirit-photo session at Carnegie Hall in which audience members were reported to have shouted out and swooned; these decorous, achingly sweet concoctions continued to compel belief (and pilgrimages to the wooded site of the fairies' supposed visit) until 1981, when Elsie died and Frances confessed to copying the winged sprites from an illustrated book. Such was Conan Doyle's power in the spirit photography movement that his death was almost immediately followed by his appearance in a host of occult photographs. Most bittersweet (though perhaps less touching than funny) is a 1931 portrait by William Hope of Conan Doyle's stolid-looking son Denis, literally haunted by his inescapable father....Also on view at Burgin, along with an assortment of purported spirit photographs and various publications pro and con, were playbills of 'Anti-Spiritualist Entertainments' from 1879, a booklet called 'Spirit Rapping Made Easy,' a catalogue for magician's props including 'materialized hands...fine for spiritualist séances' and a poster for an entertainment that reads 'Is Arthur Conan Doyle Right? Can the Dead Talk to the Living?' illustrated by an enormous ghostly arm reaching down to write on a magic slate while a pert Gibson girl looks on, agog...."
535. Randi, James. "Fairies, frauds, & fuss." Skeptic 5, no. 3 (1997): 10.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the motion picture 'Fairy Tale: A True Story,' from Paramount Studios. Includes multiple references to Doyle and a photograph of Doyle and Houdini.
536. Rivkin, Stevin E. "A Reconstruction of Houdini's Famous Show Exposing Séance Fraud." Skeptic 14, no. 1 (2008): 14-21.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article focuses on Harry Houdini's seance exposure show and lecture on November 14, 1924 in Charleston, West Virginia. Includes references to Doyle. "...When the famous author Sir Arthur Conan Doyle attacked Houdini in the newspapers for his criticism of spiritualism, Houdini responded by issuing a challenge in newspapers and from the stage for Margery to appear with him and prove her powers in her own hometown. (She did not accept.)...Many thought Houdini himself had the powers of a medium, and that he could actually vanish and re-materialize when he made his famous escapes. Included among the believers were leading spiritualist and author Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and professor of physics and psychic researcher Sir Oliver Lodge--even though Houdini had personally told them his illusions and tricks were done by natural means....'Let me tell you one of the most interesting stories showing the fraud of spirit letters. Mrs. Conan Doyle gave a séance several years ago in Atlantic City and sat down and wrote in beautiful English a 32 page letter professing to come from my mother. My mother never spoke a word of English in her life.' he said....'

537. Ryan, Paul. "Ghosts in the machine: Conan Doyle and spirit photography." Luna Córnea, no. 10 (1996): 18-21.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Traces the history of spiritualist photography, with reference to the work of William Hope. The author states that spirit photography originated in the U.S.A., notes the popularity of spirit photographers including William H. Mumler in the 1860s following the Civil War and Mrs. Deane in Britain in the aftermath of the First World War, and describes the usual format of such photographs. He observes that spirit photography was supported by a number of celebrities including Arthur Conan Doyle, who undertook experiments with Hope and published articles in defence of spirit photography. The author describes attempts to discredit Hope's work, which was finally exposed as a trick in 1933, and notes that, despite this, advocates of spirit photography still defend its validity."
538. Sorel, Nancy Caldwell. "Harry Houdini and Arthur Conan Doyle." Atlantic Monthly 273, no. 1 (1994): 103.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Features the first encounter between Harry Houdini and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. Doyle's obsession with the supernatural; Celebrity status of Doyle and Houdini; Contact between the two; Seance conducted to contact Houdini's mother.
539. Stanford, Peter. "Knock, knock. Who's there? A dead man's spirit." New Statesman 131, no. 4582 (2002): 32.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Relates the experience of attending a seance at the British Spiritualist Association in London, England. Discussion of mortality and the concept of Heaven; Topic of spiritualism; Way that the spiritual medium targets people in the audience to give messages to. Includes references to Doyle
540. Stashower, Daniel. "The Medium & the Magician." American History 34, no. 3 (1999): 38.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the controversy between Harry Houdini and spiritualist Mina Crandon. Information on Mina Crandon; Views of Houdini on Crandon's psychic ability; Description of Crandon's seance attended by Houdini. Includes multiple references to Doyle.
541. Stuttaford, Andrew. "Feywatch." National Review 50, no. 25 (1998): 52-52.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the exhibition "Victorian Fairy Painting" at the Frick Collection in New York City in 1998. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...It is no coincidence that a number of the most striking works on display at the Frick are by painters who were outsiders. The greatest of them all, Richard Dadd, murdered his father. His obsessively detailed masterpiece, The Fairy Feller's Master Stroke, was the product of nine years' work in a lunatic asylum. That's also where Charles Doyle (father of the creator of Sherlock Holmes) ended up. His Self-Portrait, A Meditation, shows a man all too aware that the spirits surrounding him are the product of a troubled mind...."
542. Swiss, Jamy Ian. "Bigger than life even in death." Skeptical 6, no. 1 (1998): 99.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the two books about magician Harry Houdini written by Ken Silverman. 'Houdini!!!: The Career of Erich Weiss'; 'Notes to Houdini!!!.' Includes references to Doyle.
543. Trout, Steven. "Christ in Flanders?: Another Look at Rudyard Kipling's 'The Gardener'." Studies in Short Fiction 35, no. 2 (1998): 169.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents criticisms on the short story, 'The Gardener,' by Rudyard Kipling.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Connections between Kipling's character and Christ; Expression of powerful Christian myth; Reflection of Kipling's anguish over the death of his son, John Kipling. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...As custodians of the fallen, dedicated to redeeming the waste of war through commemoration and responsible for transferring tracts of shell-torn wasteland into English gardens, such men invited absorption into myths of regeneration and resurrection, especially during a decade when, as Jay Winter has demonstrated, faith in spiritualism and the miraculous swept across Britain. At the same time that Kipling described Christ in Flanders, Conan Doyle's campaign to convince skeptics of the credibility of séances and mediums (a crusade born of his own wartime loss) had inspired thousands of mourners to attempt communication with the Beyond...."

544. Tymn, Michael E. "Mediumship: Direct Connection to a Level of the Afterlife, Telepathy, or Fraud?" Journal of Religion & Psychical Research 25, no. 3 (2002): 123.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // For some 65 years -- from about 1870 until around 1935 -- mediumship was thoroughly and meticulously investigated by a number of highly-regarded scientists and scholars. All concluded that genuine mediums exist -- the "white crows" that prove all crows are not black, as William James put it. Nearly all those who recognized the reality of mediumship came to see it as offering proof of the survival of consciousness at death. Based on the conclusions of the overwhelming majority of these learned men, the question asked in this Ashby competition teas answered long ago. As they say in the legal profession, res judicata -- it has been decided. And yet, we still doubt. This article summarizes the approach, methods, and conclusions of the famous researchers of the late 19th and early 20th Centuries and attempts to explain why their conclusions are still questioned to this day. [Abstract from author] Includes references to Doyle.
545. Weisberg, Barbara M. "They spoke with the dead." American Heritage 50, no. 5 (1999): 84.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Features Kate and Maggie Fox, hoax spiritualists based in Hydesville, New York. Family life; Beginnings of spiritual awareness; Impact on the public consciousness; Investigation of their authenticity. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...By the time Maggie died, spiritualism had already waned in the United States, but its influence had grown internationally. Britain in particular was a center; the movement reached a peak there after World War I, as it had in the United States after the Civil War. Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, a fervent spiritualist, fiercely defended mediums against the attacks of Harry Houdini, the renowned magician who delighted in exposing their tricks...."
546. Wheen, Francis. "Francis Wheen: If you believe in fairies, clap your hands!" The Guardian (Manchester), Dec 18, 1994: No page citation.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "'At one time such beings were frequently seen and perhaps would be still,' [Patrick Harpur] writes sadly, 'were it not that belief in them is now considered risible.' This is borne out by Paul Sieveking, editor of that wonderful magazine Fortean Times ('The Journal Of Strange Phenomena'). He told me last week that fairies 'don't turn up as sightings very much, though we did have one woman who claimed to have seen one in Ireland in the 1950s. But they're few and far between.' It was not ever thus. As recently as the 1930s, the correspondence columns of John O'London's Weekly carried many letters from 'sane and sensible grown-ups' relating their encounters with gnomes, elves, goblins and sprites. Even the great and the good weren't ashamed to answer [Peter Pan]'s question in the affirmative: W B Yeats was an inveterate leprechaun-lover, and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle 'the self-styled personification of robust British common sense' wrote an article for the Christmas issue of the Strand magazine in 1920 under the startling headline: 'Fairies Photographed: An Epoch-Making Event.' The photographs, which had been taken by two girls in the Yorkshire village of Cottingley, were indeed remarkable evidence, not of the existence of fairies, but of Conan Doyle's gullibility. One showed young Elsie Wright reaching out to shake the hand of a small gnome; in the other, her cousin Frances Griffiths gazed into the camera while a group of winged fairies, playing on their panpipes, danced cheerfully in the foreground. Anyone with two brain cells to rub together could have guessed that the pictures were faked, not least because of the uncanny resemblance of the girls' supernatural playmates to the popular Victorian and Edwardian images created by illustrators such as Arthur Rackham, Richard Dadd and 'Dicky' Doyle, Sir Arthur's own father. Many years later, in 1983, Elsie belatedly confessed that the 'fairies' were in fact cardboard cut-outs of watercolours that she had painted herself. By then, however, poor old Conan Doyle was long dead, having gone to his grave still insisting that there really were fairies at the bottom of the garden." [Abstract of longer article.]

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

547. Wokler, Robert. "The subtextual reincarnation of Voltaire and Rousseau." American Scholar 67, no. 2 (1998): 55.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the work of Theodore Besterman and Ralph Leigh in annotating and assembling the letters of philosophers Voltaire and Rousseau. Information on Besterman; Account on 'Correspondence of Voltaire,' by Besterman; Information on Leigh; Review given by Leigh to the work of Besterman; Work relationship of Besterman and Leigh. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...A student of parapsychology, Theodore Besterman was appointed, while still a young man, first the editor and then the chief investigating officer of the Society for Psychical Research in London. By the mid-1930s, his works on crystal gazing, divining rods, and mediums had established his reputation as one of the world's foremost authorities on mental telepathy and clairvoyance. In true Voltairean fashion, however, he was convinced that nearly all of the paranormal phenomena reported in his own journal were quackery, and his determination to expose most fortune-tellers as charlatans so enraged Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and the Society's other unshakeable believers in the existence of fairies that, before he resigned himself, Besterman managed to drive out most of the Society's members, leaving only the skeptics and scientists inside...."
548. Wood, Peter H. "Sherlock Holmes, Arthur Conan Doyle and H. P. Lovecraft: Three Attitudes to the Spiritual World." Canadian Holmes 29, no. 1 (2005): 14-23.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
549. Wright, Sarah. "Gregorio Marañón and 'the cult of sex': effeminacy and intersexuality in 'The Psychopathology of Don Juan' (1924)." Bulletin of Spanish Studies 81, no. 6 (2004): 717-738.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the contemporary paradigms of masculinity in the play "La plasmatoria," written by Pedro Muñoz Seca. Interrogation of Spanish masculinity, anxiety about the hyper-erotics of the age; Misconceptions in the popular imagination regarding the reading of Don Juan's sexuality; Accounts on the science of psychoanalysis. Includes references to Doyle (p. 719). "...The critic Jorge de la Cueva, reviewing the opening performance in El Debate, cites the psychic inventions of Thomas Alva Edison and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle as possible prototypes for Muñoz Seca's machine. In his memoir, The Diary and Sundry Observations of Thomas Alva Edison, Edison revealed that he had been assembling a machine (a valve) that could make contact with the spirit-world by recording paranormal sonic events. In 1932, two years after Conan Doyle's death, the photograph, 'Conan Doyle's Return' fashioned the writer's psychic reappearance in the form of 'ectoplasm' exuding from the nose of the medium Mrs Mary Marshall during a séance...."
550. Wynne, Catherine. "Arthur Conan Doyle and Psychic Photographs." History of Photography 22, no. 4 (1998): 385.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on spirit photography advocated by Arthur Conan Doyle. Ideas depicted in the cartoon published in the journal 'Punch'; Involvement in an inquiry regarding photos of fairies; Discussion on Holmesian philosophy.

05H SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE -- GRANT ALLEN (4)

551. Campbell, Patrick. "Grant Allen: The Bootmaker Connection." Canadian Holmes 26, no. 3 (2003): 21-23.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
552. Falk, Lilian. "Letter to the Editor, 'Grant Allen'." Canadian Holmes 26, no. 4 (2003): 5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
553. Greenwood, Therese. "Arthur Conan Doyle, Grant Allen and Wolfe Island." Canadian Holmes 26, no. 3 (2003): 19-21.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
554. Sveum, Richard J. "100 Years Ago." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 4, no. 1 (2000): 2.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Highlights the publication of the final installment of Grant Allen's "Hilda Wade" and makes some additional observations on Allen and Doyle's friendship with Allen.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

06A WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- GENERAL AND MISCELLANEOUS (360)

555. "American Literature." Reference & Research Book News 22, no. 2 (2007): 260-266.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A list of items related to American literature that were published in several journals is presented including: The Origins of the American detective story. Panek, LeRoy Lad. McFarland & Co., ©2006. 227 p. $35.00 (pa). This volume traces the development of American detective fiction and its evolution from the nineteenth to the twentieth century. Panek explores factors that contributed to it, such as the popularity of Sherlock Holmes, the rise and fall of the police and detectives in society, the publication of treatises on criminality, the birth of 'crusading' newspaper reporters, the beginning of forensic science, and changes in rules of evidence and judicial procedures. He also discusses the role of women and other characters. Panek (English, McDaniel College) has written several books about crime fiction."
556. "Artists in the Canon." Baker Street West 19, no. 2 (2003): 39-41.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
557. "Baker Street Inventory." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 1 (1994): 58-61.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews The Oxford Sherlock Holmes, The Universal Sherlock Holmes, The Really Ragged Shaw, Baker Street and Beyond, Baker Street Briefs, Sherlock in Love, and Otto Penzler's Sherlock Holmes Library Series.
558. "Baker Street Inventory." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 2 (1994): 125-126.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Notes on The Wind and the Wizard by Richard Roberts, Otto Penzler's Mysterious Bookshop catalog, and You Know My Method by J. K. Van Dover.
559. "Baker Street Inventory." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 3 (1994): 183-184.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Provides information on Back to Baker Street, Sherlock Holmes: Screen and Sound Guide, 'A Case of Hide 'N' Tea,' 'Quotations for Baker Street,' and the fourth issue of The Whitechappel Gazette.
560. "Baker Street Inventory." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 4 (1994): 240-241.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Information on The Death of an Old Man Rice: A True Story of Criminal Justice in America by Martin L. Friedland, The New Good Old Index by William D. Goodrich, My Dear Watson: Being the Annals of Sherlock Holmes by Angus McClaren (David Hammer), The Musgrave Papers issue number 7, and The Whitechapel Gazette number 5.
561. "Book fetches pounds 15,000 at auction." Daily Post (Liverpool), May 21, 2008: 8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "A first edition of a Sherlock Holmes story discovered in an Oxfam shop has sold for more than pounds 15,000 after a bidding war between buyers in the US and the UK yesterday. The rare first edition of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's first Sherlock Holmes story, A Study In Scarlet, broke its upper reserve price of pounds 9,000 to fetch pounds 15,500 at the Bonhams Auction in Oxford. The story was discovered inside a book called Beeton's Christmas Annual for 1887 by two volunteers at an Oxfam shop in Harrogate, North Yorkshire...."
562. "Books." Science news 171, no. 23 (2007): 367-367.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article reviews the books "Mind In Life: Biology, Phenomenology, and the Sciences of the Mind," by Evan Thompson, "The Science of Sherlock Holmes: From Baskerville Hall to the Valley of Fear, the Real Forensics behind the Great Detective's Greatest Cases," by E. J. Wagner and "The Happiness Trip: A Scientific Journey," by Eduardo Punset.
563. "Bookshelf." Canadian Holmes 26, no. 4 (2003): 44-47.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews of Index to Canadian Holmes Volumes 1-25 (1973-2002), Beaton's Christmas Annual, The Norwegian Explorers of Minnesota Christmas Annual 2002, the Hounds Collection,

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine

564. "Brief Mention." American Literature 74, no. 3 (2002): 687-701.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes reference to Doyle. The Devil Himself: Villainy in Detective Fiction and Film. Ed. Stacy Gillis and Philippa Gates. Westport, Conn.: Greenwood. 2002. viii, 217 pp. $62.00. "What does the fictional villain reveal about the cultural context that created him or her? With essays on topics such as 'The Arch-Villainess in Victorian Popular Fiction,' 'The Conflict of the Imperial and the Anti-Imperial in Conan Doyle,' and 'The Bond Villains and Cold War Heroism,' this collection endeavors to answer that question. Texts under discussion range from Charles Brockden Brown's Weiland (1798) to the 1995 film Seven."
565. "Cheat's Guide to the Classics: 2." Daily Mail (London), July 30, 1999: 59.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Short summary of The Hound of the Baskervilles, Doyle, and Hound movies.
566. "China in the Cases of Sherlock Holmes." Shoso-In Bulletin 9, no. (1999): 53-55.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Translated by Margarine Lau.
567. "The Classics, Revisited." School Library Journal 52, no.: 9-9.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book series "Scholastic Classics" published by Scholastic that features illustrations and forewords by well-known children's and young adult authors such as Eoin Colfer on Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes," Katherine Paterson on Jane Austen's "Pride and Prejudice," Jack Gantos on J. M. Barrie's "Peter Pan," and Philip Pullman on Edgar Allan Poe's "The Raven and Other Poems and Stories."
568. "Columnist's Choice." Booklist 102, no. 9/10 (2006): 78-78.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article presents the author's top ten list of series, sets, and multivolume works from 2005 and earlier. Topping the list are "The Complete Calvin and Hobbes," by Bill Watterson, "The Complete Peanuts," by Charles Schulz, "The New Annotated Sherlock Holmes," edited by Leslie S. Klinger, "Oxford Illustrated Dickens," and the "Oxford Illustrated Jane Austen."
569. "A dispute that would challenge Holmes himself." The Ottawa Citizen, September 16, 1999: F3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses Doyle copyright issues. "Almost 70 years after the death of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, the creator of Sherlock Holmes, England's greatest fictional detective is poised for a comeback. A new series of Holmes stories, written by modern authors, is likely to follow the conclusion of one of Conan Doyle's most impenetrable mysteries -- the case of his disputed copyrights. After a six-year legal wrangle for control of Conan Doyle's literary legacy, the New York state supreme court delivered a verdict last year on a bruising copyright case that began with a British bankruptcy and was complicated by an American divorce. And now a Hungarian former socialite who runs a guesthouse in New York's Catskill mountains claims she owns the rights to not only the fictional cast of Holmes characters such as Dr. Watson, but also the likenesses and images associated with the detective, right down to his famous deerstalker hat and distinctive pipe. The copyright that 60-year-old Andrea Plunket claims gives her control to the Holmes legacy is due to expire next year, but she is trying to extend her grip by licensing the characters and registering them as trademarks...."
570. "English-Language Literatures." Reference & Research Book News 23, no. 2 (2008): 329-341.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews several books including London eyes; reflections in text and image. Ed. by Gail Cunningham and Stephen Barbe. (Polygons; cultural diversities and intersections) Berghahn Books, ©2007 228 p. $60.00 978-1-84545-407-4. "This collection of 12 nimble essays holds London in space and time in the Victorian and Edwardian era and again in the modern age, commenting through text and image. Victorian London topics include the rise of the suburbs, John Thomson's London in photographs, the displacement of urban man in Sherlock Holmes, the Aesthetic set, agoraphobia and the Bildungsroman in Dorothy Richardson's Pilgrimage, and Conrad's The Secret Agent on foot in literature and film. Modern London takes its turn as a blur on film and as an altered landscape in Britain's 1960s auteur cinema, represented in the lack (or not) of a map, as the dystopia of the film city, as container of class and suburban trajectories in gay London, and as the soul in Derek Jarman's Soho."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

571. "English-Language Literatures." Reference & Research Book News 22, no. 2 (2007): 253-260.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A list of items related to English language literatures that were published in several journals is presented. Includes some articles with reference to Doyle and Holmes including: The narcissism of empire; loss, rage, and revenge in Thomas De Quincey, Robert Louis Stevenson, Arthur Conan Doyle, Rudyard Kipling, and Isak Dinesen. Simmons, Diane. Sussex Academic Press, ©2007 148 p., $57.50. "The five Victorian writers were instrumental in popularizing the imperial agenda of power and dominance, says Simmons (English, City U. of New York-Manhattan Community College), but were themselves deeply scarred, and as adults bolstered their fragile emotional states through fantasies of empire. She looks not only as the youthful experiences of the writers themselves, but also at child rearing attitudes during the British imperial period. Distributed in the US by ISBS." Modernist literature; challenging fictions. Mahaffey, Vicki. Blackwell Publishing, ©2007 242 p. $74.95 "Mahaffey (modern literature, U. of York) dares reader's to think of modern fiction not only as challenging to read but as a challenge to the fictions by which they live. She confronts a range of authors, from Doyle to Joyce, Woolf, Eliot, Djuna Barnes, Wilde and Rhys to explore modern occupations in partnering, whether as Holmes and Watson, author and reader, lover and loved, or husband and wife, in opacity and the uncontrollable urge to block understanding, and in those dark reaches within the reader's soul that are in fact the most opaque features of all. Combining commentary on literary works with that on art, gender, and society's restless for meaning after the decline of the need to be understood, Mahaffey provides a far-seeking and challenging read for those who nevertheless must be further challenged by the work in hand." Heidegger's bicycle; interfering with Victorian texts. Ebbatson, Roger. (Critical inventions) Sussex Academic Press, ©2006 172 p. $67.50 "Ebbatson (Loughborough U.) juxtaposes German philosopher Heidegger's notion of existence as a practical investment in the world that allows things to show up--among them a bicycle too rickety to ride--with the murder of a cycling German teacher named Herr Heidegger in the Sherlock Holmes canon. In each, he argues, the echo or mask is broken or cut adrift so that, for example, Holmes' forensic skill on an English moorside foreshadows the evil of the Final Solution so beloved by Heidegger a half century later. Distributed in the US by ISBS."

572. "From the Editor's Commonplace Book." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 3 (1994): 186-187.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Comments on the fire that struck "The Shadows of the Elm" in Santa Fe, New Mexico, the Fortesque Symposium, the 2nd annual "Games Afloat Sherlockian Symposium," the Sherlock Holmes Society of London Christmas card, and the "Third Occasional Sherlockian Cruise."

573. "Language, Literature." Reference & Research Book News 22, no. 3 (2007): 236-251.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews several books including one with a passing reference to Holmes. Much Ado About Nonexistence; fiction and reference. Martinich, A.P. and Avrum Stroll. Rowman & Littlefield, ©2007 147 p. $29.95 (pa) "Martinich (philosophy, U. of Texas, Austin) and Stroll (philosophy, U. of California at San Diego) present existing and novel theories of fiction, discussing how that genre is distinct from history, pretending, and makebelieve, and how philosophers embrace or reject the axiom of existence when discussing 'non-existent' entities such as the characters Hamlet and Sherlock Holmes. The authors' theory of fiction is based on the speech act theory of H.G. Grice, and the volume also includes critical discussions of two versions of the theory of definite descriptions: those of Frege and Russell."

574. "Letters." Canadian Holmes 17, no. 3 (1994): 49-51.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Letters to the editor.

575. "Letters to Baker Street." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 1 (1994): 56-57.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Letters from Donald K. Pollock, Wayne and Francine Swift, Robert A. Moss

576. "Letters to Baker Street." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 2 (1994): 118-119.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Letters from Jon Lellenberg, Tina Rhea, and Brad Keefauver.

577. "Miscellaneous Book Awards." World Almanac & Book of Facts, no. (2008): 256-256.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article announces the recipients of book awards in 2007 including and Edgar awards for Best Critical/Biographical: The Science of Sherlock Holmes: From Baskerville Hall to the Valley of Fear, E. J. Wagner; Best Play: Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure, Steven Dietz.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

578. "The New Annotated Sherlock Holmes (Book)." Publishers Weekly 251, no. 36 (2004): 48-48.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book "The New Annotated Sherlock Holmes," by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, compiled by Leslie S. Klinger.
579. "A Night in an Opium Den." The Ritual, no. 28 (2001): 33-37.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
580. "Sherlockian Periodicals Received." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 2 (1994): 120-122.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // List of current publications received, along with editorial contact information.
581. "That great cesspool." Economist 354, no. 8162 (2000): 8-8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'London 1900: The Imperial Metropolis,' by Jonathan Schneer. References to both Holmes and Doyle.
582. "Two Chinese Prefaces of the Canon." Shoso-In Bulletin 7, no. (1997): 7-11.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Translated by Margarine Lau.
583. "Wired up: Classic Books." The Independent (London), January 16, 1999: 81.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Comments on a few literary web sites including: members.tripod.com/msherman/holmes.html "Slightly closer to the present day - indeed so much that some of the work is still legally protected - are the adventures of Sherlock Holmes. Although all the stories are out of copyright in Britain, the 12 short stories published after 1919 are still protected in the US, which means that they are unavailable on this site. Although the chore of reading dense text off a computer screen has become less gruelling over recent years, it can still be a chore to wade through long stories. But if 'free' is your thing, this site is still difficult to beat. It also contains many original illustrations from the Strand magazine where the stories were originally published, as well as links to other Sherlock Holmes sites...."
584. Accardo, Pasquale. "The Hedgehog and the Fox: Higher Criticism, Canonical Fundamentalism, and the Transcendental Anthropology of Sherlock Holmes." Shoso-In Bulletin 7, no. (1997): 50-56.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
585. Addy, John. "Review--The Bedside, Bathtub, Armchair Companion to Sherlock Holmes by Dick Riley and Pam McAllister." The Ritual, no. 23 (1999): 56-57.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
586. Allen-Mills, Tony. "Curious case of the return of Sherlock." The Sunday Times (London), March 15, 1998: 14.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Almost 70 years after the death of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, the creator of Sherlock Holmes, England's greatest fictional detective is poised for a literary comeback. A new series of Holmes stories, written by modern authors, is likely to follow the conclusion of one of Conan Doyle's most impenetrable mysteries - the case of his disputed copyrights. After a six-year legal wrangle for control of Conan Doyle's literary legacy, Judge Eliot Wilk of the New York state supreme court delivered his verdict last week on a bruising copyright case that began with a British bankruptcy and was complicated by an American divorce...."
587. Appleby, Louis. "Doctoring the evidence: Famed physician was model for Sherlock Holmes." The Ottawa Citizen, August 20, 1995: C2.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...Our chief at that moment resembled no one more than Sherlock Holmes. No one, that is, except Joseph Bell. Bell was the most brilliant of Edinburgh's teachers of medicine in the second half of the 19th century, when that city's medicine led the world. Arthur Conan Doyle was among his students...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

588. Ashman, Mike. "Friday Review: Singing Detectives." The Guardian (London), September 17, 2004: 7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Inspector Morse likes his Wagner, Sherlock Holmes was a mean violinist and Philip Marlowe discussed pianists with police officers. Mike Ashman investigates the curious connection between crime and classical music....What is it with detective stories and classical music? From The Woman in White, via the adventures of Sherlock Holmes, Lord Peter Wimsey and Tintin, to Inspector Morse and the gay sleuths of Phillip Scott or Grant Michaels, there are hundreds of novels in which the two come together...."
589. Austin, John M. "Letter to the Editor ('Escott and Agatha')." Shoso-In Bulletin 6, no. (1996): 156.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
590. Aykroyd, Clarissa et al. "'Bookshelf' Reviews of A Letter of Mary, The Sherlock Holmes Victorian Cookbook, The Shoso-in Bulletin, Five Sherlockian Walks in London and Mr. Doyle and Dr. Bell." Canadian Holmes 21, no. 2 (1997): 32-35.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
591. Aykroyd, Lucas, Clifford S. Goldfarb, and Brian S. Brodie. "'Bookshelf' Reviews of The Abominable Wife and Other Unrecorded Cases of Mr. Sherlock Holmes, The Spenserian Holmes: Being the Annotated Manuscript of the Hell of the Baskervilles, Teller of Tales: The Life of Arthur Conan Doyle and The Hounds Collection: Volume IV." Canadian Holmes 23, no. 1 (1999): 38-42.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
592. Baker, Jody. "Mrs. Baynes and the Afghan Wars." Shoso-In Bulletin 9, no. (1999): 45-57.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
593. Baker, William, and Kenneth Womack. "Recent Work in Critical Theory." Style 33, no. 4 (1999): 508.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a bibliography annotates of published books based primarily on materials coming into the Northern Illinois University libraries between August 1998 and August 1999. Includes entries with reference to Doyle and Holmes. Silver, Carole G. Strange Secret Peoples: Fairies and Victorian Consciousness. Oxford: Oxford UP, 1999. "Silver examines the hidden web of connections between the Victorian fascination with fairies and the dominant preoccupations of Victorian culture. Using works by such writers and artists as Thomas Carlyle, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, Charlotte Mew, and Aubrey Beardsley, among others, Silver assesses the anthropological, folkloric, legal, historical, and medical aspects of the place of fairies in the Victorian consciousness. Silver identifies a pervasive eroticism and a sense of sexual anxiety in the Victorian social, literary, and cultural approach to the world of fairies and folklore." Kendrick, Stephen. Holy Clues: The Gospel According to Sherlock Holmes. New York: Pantheon, 1999. "Kendrick argues that Sherlock Holmes functions as a spiritual guide and master, as a character whose Zen-like techniques of awareness and observation provide religious insight for modern, cynical readers. In addition to exploring the stories of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle for religious and metaphysical lessons, Kendrick demonstrates the ways in which the methods of investigating crimes are the same methods that yield religious insight when applied to the world and to the human heart. Kendrick draws upon both Eastern and Western religious tradition while addressing issues of justice and mercy, good and evil, guilt and innocence."
594. ———. "Recent Work in Critical Theory." Style 32, no. 4 (1998): 535.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a bibliography of published books based on materials coming into Northern Illinois University libraries between August 1997 and August 1998. Includes entries for Doyle and reference to Holmes. Booth, Martin. The Doctor, the Detective, and Arthur Conan Doyle: A Biography of Arthur Conan Doyle. London: Hodder and Stoughton, 1997. "Booth offers a new study of the biographical and literary lives of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. Booth devotes particular attention to Conan Doyle's formative years in which he suffered a poverty-stricken childhood at the hands of an alcoholic father. After abandoning his medical training, Conan Doyle finally pursued the literary career which earned him great wealth and fame. Booth also discusses the qualities that ensured Conan Doyle's success, including his enormous self-confidence and stubbornness, as well as his refusal to pass up any opportunity for adventure." Kestner, Joseph A. Sherlock's Men: Masculinity, Conan Doyle, and Cultural History. Aldershot: Ashgate, 1997. "Kestner

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- examines constructions of masculinity throughout Conan Doyle's nine volumes of short stories from 1887 through 1927 and the publication of The Case Book of Sherlock Holmes. In addition to discussing the manner in which popular culture conveys the masculine gender, Kestner demonstrates Conan Doyle's interest in addressing masculinity in social, historical, legal, literary, educational, marital, and aesthetic contexts. Kestner explores such concepts as the notion of the gentleman, the role of reason, the nature of heroism, the ideology of chivalry, and the functions of law and punishment." McDonald, Peter D. British Literary Culture and Publishing Practice, 1880-1914. Cambridge: Cambridge UP, 1997. "McDonald examines the radical transformation of British literary culture from 1880 to 1914. Using works by such figures as Joseph Conrad, Arnold Bennet, and Arthur Conan Doyle, McDonald discusses the cultural politics inherent in the period. McDonald demonstrates that the discursive qualities of their texts cannot be fully appreciated without understanding the material conditions of their production." Thoms, Peter. Narrative and Power in Nineteenth-Century Detective Fiction. Athens: Ohio UP, 1998. "Thoms argues that some of the most significant nineteenth-century works of detective fiction not only helped to establish the genre, but also to subvert its structural conventions as well. Using works by Godwin, Poe, Dickens, Collins, and Conan Doyle, Thoms contends that the detective's figurative writing emerges out of a desire to exert control over others and occasionally over himself. Additionally, Thoms reveals the manner in which early detective fiction grapples with the very issue of storytelling itself."
595. ———. "Recent work in critical theory." Style 28, no. 4 (1994): 549.
 NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a bibliography of recent works in critical theory, including reference to Doyle. Greenslade, William. Degeneration, Culture, and the Novel, 1880-1940. Cambridge: Cambridge UP, 1994. "Greenslade confronts the late nineteenth-century belief among many affluent and educated people that destitution, insanity, criminality, and homosexuality were symptoms of the degeneration of the human race. Drawing upon the contrasting, progressive texts by such writers as Hardy, Gissing, Conan Doyle, Conrad, Wells, Forster, and Woolf, Greenslade examines the propagation of 'degenerationism' in the work of popular authors such as Warwick Deeping and John Buchan." Paul, Robert S. Whatever Happened to Sherlock Holmes?: Detective Fiction, Popular Theology, and Society. Carbondale: Southern Illinois UP, 1991. "Paul examines the immense popularity of detective fiction, particularly among the most intellectual readers, and offers close readings of works by Edgar Allan Poe, Wilkie Collins, and Conan Doyle, among others. Paul also explores the work of contemporary writers in an effort to understand their revelations about modern culture, its religion, and its ethical standards."
596. Barnes, Jon. "The Rivals of Sherlock Holmes." TLS, no. 5494 (2008): 30-30.
 NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "The Rivals of Sherlock Holmes: An Anthology of Crime Stories 1890-1914," edited by Nick Rennison.
597. Bassett, Troy J., and Christina M. Walter. "Booksellers and Bestsellers: British Book Sales as Documented by The Bookman, 1891-1906." Book History 4, no. (2001): 205-236.
 NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes multiple references to Doyle.
598. Beam, Thelma, and Clarissa Aykroyd. "'Bookshelf' Reviews of The Hound's Collection Volume 5 and A Study in Celluloid: A Producer's Account of Jeremy Brett as Sherlock Holmes." Canadian Holmes 24, no. 2 (2000): 31-33.
 NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
599. Begley, Sharon. "Critical Thinking: Part Skill, Part Mindset And Totally Up to You." Wall Street Journal - Eastern Edition, 10/20, 2006: B1-B1.
 NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article discusses the difference between having critical thinking skills and applying them. The writer offers an example from the book "The Science of Sherlock Holmes" by E.J Wagner. Cognitive psychologist D. Alan Bensley at Frostberg State College in Maryland argues that application of critical thinking is determined by character traits not intelligence.
600. Bell, A. Craig. "The rise and fall of the detective novel." Contemporary Review 272, no. 1587 (1998): 197.
 NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Explores the popularity and decline of the detective fiction, with multiple

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

references to Doyle and Holmes.

601. Bell, Ian F. A. "Membranes: Metaphors of Invasion in Nineteenth-Century Literature, Science, and Politics (review)." Modernism/modernity 8, no. 2 (2001): 375-377.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes multiple references to Doyle and Holmes.
602. Benedict, David. "Edinburgh Festival: Good heavens, they're alive!" The Independent (London), August 25, 1998: 12.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Sherlock Holmes and Doctor Watson are more than 100 years old and still in the detective business. In an exclusive interview, David Benedict talks to the World's Greatest Detective and his chum....As visitors to the University of Minnesota (repository of the world's largest collection of Sherlock Holmes memorabilia) will attest, there's the nasty business of the needles: Holmes is a self- confessed addict....Maggie Fox and Sue Ryding, aka Lip Service, play Holmes and Watson in 'Move Over Moriarty at the Assembly Rooms...."
603. Berdan, Marshall S. "On Certain Evidence of Hibernophobia in the Canon." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 49, no. 2 (1999): 7-18.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
604. ———. "A Three-Continent Problem." Shoso-In Bulletin 14, no. (2004): 26-30.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
605. Berlyne, Alex. "There's No Police Like Holmes." The Jerusalem Post, August 22, 1997: 27.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...Judging by the endless stream of dotty pronouncements that issues forth from this Home for the Bewildered, any Member of the Flat Earth Society has about the same grasp of reality as the average Member of the Knesset. The only place that can compare with our legislative assembly's free-floating fantasies, however, is London's Baker Street which has to be seen to be believed. Recently there was some talk of turning Hechal Shlomo into a sort of theme park - presumably featuring Mickey Mouse with peyot. Let the north end of Baker Street serve us as a dreadful warning. The Sherlock Holmes Hotel, for example, includes 'Dr. Watson's Bar and Lounge,' and 'Moriarty's Restaurant.' A double room can set you back 170 while The Reichenbach Suite is 200 a night - which seems to indicate that the owners are nowhere near as daft as the guests...."
606. Blau, Peter E. "Book review--'A Sherlock Holmes Handbook' by Christopher Redmond." Baker Street Miscellanea, no. 75 (1994): 43-44.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
607. Bowen, Richard. "Further Lessons in Baritsu." The Ritual, no. 20 (1997): 22-26.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
608. Brady, Michael J. "The Inspiration for the Boy Scouts: Sherlock Holmes, Wiggins and The Baker Street Irregulars." Shoso-In Bulletin 8, no. (1998): 78-89.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
609. ———. "Philosophy 110 Critical Thinking With a Sherlockian Twist." Shoso-In Bulletin 10, no. (2000): 138-148.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
610. Brodie, Brian S. "'Bookshelf' Review of The Parlour Games of Sherlock Holmes." Canadian Holmes 21, no. 1 (1997): 45.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
611. Brodie, Brian S., and Mark Alberstat. "'Bookshelf' Reviews of The Case Files of Sherlock Holmes: The Speckled Band and Shades of Sherlock." Canadian Holmes 21, no. 3 (1998): 46-47.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

612. Brown, Craig. "Clued up; Avast tome that pores over every detail of Sherlock Holmes's life means you'll always be." Mail on Sunday (London), January 1, 2006: 59.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of The New Annotated Sherlock Holmes by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, edited with notes by Leslie S. Klinger. "...The Annotated Sherlock Holmes is a mad and magnificent undertaking: 3,500 beautiful pages, spread across three weighty volumes, containing every Sherlock Holmes story ever written, hundreds of apposite pictures, ranging from film stills to maps to contemporary illustrations, plus acres of witty and scholarly (and how rarely those two adjectives go together!) notes...."
613. Brown, Richard. "More 'Sherlockholmesing' in Joyce's Ulysses." Notes & Queries 55, no. 1 (2008): 66-68.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A literary criticism of the book "Ulysses," by James Joyce is presented. It explores various references to the Sherlock Holmes stories of Arthur Conan Doyle surrounding the secret letter from Martha Clifford to "Ulysses" hero Leopold Bloom in the 'Sirens' episode. The common theme of extra-martial indiscretions in 'Sirens' and the Sherlock Holmes stories in question is highlighted and the author attempts to trace the origins of Sherlock Holmes stories in Joyce's cultural framework.
614. Browne, Ray B. "Book Reviews." Journal of American Culture 21, no. 3 (1998): 103.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book The Secret Marriage of Sherlock Holmes and Other Eccentric Readings, by Michael Atkinson.
615. Burr, Robert C. "Review--Commanding Views From the Empty House edited by William R. Cochran and Gordon R. Speck." The Holmes & Watson Report 1, no. 1 (1997): 15.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A delightful anthology of essays, puzzles, cartoons, and even a play, by the members of one of the most active and dedicated Sherlockian societies, The Occupants of the Empty House.
616. Calamai, Peter, Peter H. Wood, Trevor S. Raymond, and Cameron Hollyer. "'Bookshelf' Reviews of As It Might Have Been, The Final Solution, The Adventure of the Awful Apparition, City of Ice, Call Me True: A Biography of True Davidson and The Baker Street Irregulars in The War of the Worlds Mystery." Canadian Holmes 23, no. 2 (1999): 31-36.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
617. Calhoon, Kenneth S. "The detective and the witch: Local knowledge and the aesthetic pre-history of detection." Comparative Literature 47, no. 4 (1995): 307.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the predilection among certain narrative theorists for the classical detective story. Includes multiple references to Doyle and Holmes.
618. Campbell, Mark. "Hot on Sherlock Holmes's Trail; Mark Campbell Sniffs Out the London Haunts of Conan Doyle's Legendary Sleuth." The Independent (London), October 27, 2001: 7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "One of the most famous literary addresses in London is 221b Baker Street. There's only one problem - the cosy rooms of amateur detective Sherlock Holmes and his friend, John H Watson, don't actually exist. The 'real' 221b, subsumed by the head office of the Abbey National, is not a worthy place of veneration. However, down the street in the Sherlock Holmes Museum..., you'll find a mock 221b frontage and a frighteningly accurate rendition of the dark and cluttered Victorian interior of Conan Doyle's stories. But for every fictitious address in the Canon (the official term for the four novels and 56 short stories featuring Holmes and Watson), you'll find plenty of bona fide locations in the capital. To begin with, turn the corner into Wigmore Street and you pass the post office that Holmes magically deduced Watson had visited in The Sign of Four (1890)...."
619. Campbell, Patrick. "Author! Author! A Selection of Pseudoepigraphical Sherlockinisms." Canadian Holmes 22, no. 1 (1998): 26-28.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
620. Carlile, David. "The Notorious Wilson - A Literary Influence?" The Nezire Zanmai International 2, no. (1992):

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

58.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
621. Case, James. "Paradoxes Involving Conflicts of Interest." American Mathematical Monthly 107, no. 1 (2000): 33.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses paradoxes involving conflicts of interest in the book 'The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes.'
622. Chadwick, Peter. "Review--Canines in the Canon, or a Hound in Huddersfield." The Ritual, no. 27 (2001): 50-52.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
623. Chambers, Tod. "Sick detectives." Lancet 364, no. (2004): 56-57.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Highlights mystery novels and films that feature detectives who are limited by their own physical or mental states. Includes multiple references to Doyle and Holmes.
624. Champkin, Julian. "Elementary! This is the real Sherlock Holmes." Daily Mail (London), May 20, 1999: 13.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...And if that sounds like Sherlock Holmes, it is because the young medical student was Arthur Conan Doyle and his teacher was Dr Joseph Bell - the man who inspired the creation of the great fictional detective. But new research seems to show that Bell was rather more than just an Edinburgh doctor - he may have been a real-life detective....But now the BBC would have us believe otherwise. David Pirie, script editor for a BBC series on Bell to be shown in the autumn, claims to have evidence that Bell was not only a doctor when Conan Doyle met him - he was a consulting detective as well...."
625. Chapman, Paul M. "A Literary Mosaic: Arthur Conan Doyle as Literary Pioneer and Synthesizer." The Ritual, no. 27 (2001): 34-46.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
626. ———. "Review--'The Doctor, The Detective and Arthur Conan Doyle' by Martin Booth." The Ritual, no. 20 (1997): 66-68.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
627. ———. "Review--The Maiwand Luncheon Monograph." The Ritual, no. 26 (2000): 66-67.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
628. ———. "Review--The Penguin Sherlock Holmes." The Ritual, no. 28 (2001): 51-53.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
629. ———. "Review--'The Victorian Underworld' by Donald Thomas." The Ritual, no. 22 (1998): 75-76.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
630. Cheng, Henry P. "Sherlock Holmes in China." Shoso-In Bulletin 12, no. (2002): 32-35.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
631. Cochran, William R. "The Editor's Gas-lamp: 1895 plus 100." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 4 (1994): 197-198.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Some reflections on Vincent Starrett, his sonnet "221B," and the BSI.
632. ———. "The Editor's Gas-lamp: A Thought About That Thought." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 2 (1994): 69-70.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Thoughts on The Final Problem, Walter P. Armstrong's article about this tale, and The Adventure of the Empty House.
633. ———. "A Review of The New Annotated Sherlock Holmes: The Novels by Leslie Klinger." The Camden House Journal 27, no. 10 (2005): insert.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

634. Cohen, Edward H. "Victorian Bibliography for 1998." Victorian Studies 42, no. 4 (1999): 719-873.
 NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes multiple references to Doyle and Holmes.
635. ———. "Victorian Bibliography for 1999." Victorian Studies 43, no. 4 (2001): 699-839.
 NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes Doyle references. --Baccolini, Raffaella, Carla Comellini, & Vita Fortunati, eds. Culture di lingua inglese a confronto. Bologna: CLUEB, 1998. 256 pp. Includes Barrie, Doyle, and Stevenson; --Baxter, Kent B. "Identity in Crisis: Modernism and the Texts of Adolescence." DAIA 59:2972. Includes Doyle and Kipling; --Calanchi, Alessandra. Quattro studi in rosso: I confini del privato maxchile nella narrativa vittoriana. Cesena: Societa Editrice "Il Ponte Vecchio," 1997. 216 pp. Includes Collins, Doyle, and Stevenson; --Cockerell, Hugh. "Tobacco and Victorian Literature," in IIIsc, Lock, Reynolds, & Tansey, pp. 89-99. Includes Dickens, Doyle, and A. Trollope; --Drever, Tiffany E. "Medical Mysteries: Dragging the Victorian Hysteria into the Machine Age." DAIA 59:3827. Includes Collins, Dickens, and Doyle; --Fraser, Robert W. Victorian Quest Romance: Stevenson, Haggard, Kipling, and Conan Doyle. Plymouth: Northcote, 1998. 93 pp.; --Hendershot, Cyndy. The Animal Within: Masculinity and the Gothic. Ann Arbor: U of Michigan P, 1998. 281 pp. Includes C. Bronte, Conrad, Doyle, Stevenson, and Stoker; --Hennessey, Rosemary, & Chrys Ingraham, eds. Materialist Feminism: A Reader in Class, Difference, and Women's Lives. London: Routledge, 1997. 430 pp. Includes Doyle; --Krebs, Paula M. Gender, Race, and the Writing of Empire: Public Discourse and the Boer War. Cambridge UP. 205 pp. Includes Doyle, Haggard, Kipling, and Schreiner; --Otis, Laura. Membranes: Metaphors of Invasion in Nineteenth-Century Literature, Science, and Politics. Baltimore: Johns Hopkins UP. 210 pp. Includes Doyle; --Ramirez, Luz E. "Empire and Americanism: British Representations of Latin America." DAIA 59: 3468. Includes Conrad and Doyle; --Reitz, Caroline W. "The Necessary Detective: Police, Empire and Victorian National Identity." DAIA 60:1576. Includes Burton, Collins, Dickens, Doyle, and Kipling; --Baker Street Inventory." BSJ Mar:59-63; Jun:53- 55; Sep:58-61; Dec:59-61. --Calanchi, Alessandra. "'Others Will Follow': Lo strano caso di Jekyll, Hyde e Sherlock Holmes." RdSV 3, 5(1998):133-43. --Calanchi, Alessandra. "Rovinare le sacre simbiosi: Rosencrantz, Guildenstern e Sherlock Holmes." Poetiche: Letteratura ed Altro 4/5(1996):145-55. --Edwards, Owen Dudley. "Arthur Conan Doyle," in V, Winks & Corrigan, pp. 301-30. --Frank, Lawrence. "The Hound of the Baskervilles, the Man on the Tor, and a Metaphor for the Mind." NCL 54:336-72. --Genis, Aleksandr. "Zakon i poriadok: Moi Sherlock Holmes." Znamia Dec:195-201. --Goldfarb, Clifford. The Great Shadow: Arthur Conan Doyle, Brigadier Gerard and Napoleon. Ashcroft, BC: Calabash, 1997. 232 pp. Rev. by N. Dames in VPR 32:181-82. --Hennessey, Rosemary, & Rajeswri Mohan. "The Construction of Women in Three Popular Texts of Empire: Toward a Critique of Materialist Feminism," in V, Hennessey & Ingraham, pp. 186-206. Includes "The Speckled Band." --Holland-Toll, Linda J. "Holmes the Prole: Or, a Marxist, Definitely Manque." Clues 20, 1:37-48. --Jenkins, William D. The Adventure of the Detected Detective: Sherlock Holmes in James Joyce's "Finnegan's Wake". Westport, CT: Greenwood, 1998. 149 pp. --Jurkowska-Krupa, Beata. "Modes of Storytelling: A Rhetorical Analysis of Film and Television Adaptations of Arthur Conan Doyle's The Hound of the Baskervilles and Leo Tolstoy's Anna Karenina." DAIA 59:3265. --Keep, Christopher, & Don Randall. "Addiction, Empire, and Narrative in Arthur Conan Doyle's The Sign of Four." Novel 32:207-21. --Kestner, J. Sherlock's Men. . . . See VB 1997, 794. Rev. by E. Lauterbach in ELT 42:212-16; by R. Jann in VS 42:314-16. --McConchie, R. W. "Privileged and Displaced Persons: Henry Lawson in Sherlock Holmes's England." CE&S 21, 2:83-100. --Otis, Laura. Membranes: Metaphors of Invasion in Nineteenth-Century Literature, Science, and Politics. Baltimore: Johns Hopkins UP. 210 pp. Includes Doyle. --Schumacher, Hans. "Sherlock Holmes und der Höllenhund: Mythologie der Detektivgeschichte," in V, Chiarini, Kruse, & Todini, pp. 265-84. --Stashower, Daniel. Teller of Tales: The Life of Arthur Conan Doyle. London: Pan; NY: Holt. 512 pp. Rev. by A. Lejeune in NRev 31 May:68-69.
636. Cooke, Catherine. "Letter to the Editor." Varieties of Ash 2, no. 1 (1994): 20.
 NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
637. Dalrymple, Theodore. "Holmes and his commentators." The New Criterion 24, no. 3 (2005): 4-8.
 NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Avid Sherlock Holmes fan Theodore Dalrymple takes issue with the annotations in three canonical editions of Arthur Conan Doyle's work. The three are William S. Baring-Gould's of 1967; the Oxford Sherlock Holmes of 1993; and the just published The New Annotated Sherlock Holmes: The Novels,

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

edited by Leslie S. Klinger.

638. Davies, David Stuart. "Review--'Nightmare: the Birth of Horror' by Christopher Frayling." The Ritual, no. 19 (1997): 66.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
639. ———. "Review--'The Sherlock Holmes Handbook' by Christopher Redmond." The Ritual, no. 13 (1994): 44-45.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
640. ———. "Review--'The Worth of the Game' by David L. Hammer." The Musgrave Papers, no. 6 (1993): 108.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
641. ———. "Ten Years of Musgravia." The Musgrave Papers, no. 8 (1995): 16-21.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
642. Davies, David Stuart, Paul M. Chapman, and Kathryn White. "Pastiche or Not Pastiche--that is the question." The Ritual, no. 18 (1996): 16-26.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
643. Derbyshire, David. "Holmes was right, women will rescue the photos first." The Daily Telegraph (London), December 27, 2004: 11.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "A piece of folklore that helped Sherlock Holmes solve one of his earliest and most famous cases still holds true after a century: women will choose to save the photograph of a loved one above anything else from a burning house. A survey has shown that, given the choice of saving just one precious thing from their home, most women will rescue a family picture. The findings confirm the plot twist of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's A Scandal in Bohemia, the first of the Sherlock Holmes short stories which was published in The Strand magazine in 1891...."
644. Dirda, Michael. "Book World; Clues to Sherlock Holmes." The Washington Post, April 11, 1994: B02.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of The Game is Afoot: Parodies, Pastiche & Ponderings of Sherlock Holmes. Edited by Marvin Kaye. St. Martin's. 512 pp. $24.95
645. Dorn, William S. "'I Have Been Looking Up the Dates...'" Baker Street West 16, no. 2 (2000): 17-21.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
646. ———. "Sundry Overlooked Dates in the Canon." Baker Street West 19, no. 1 (2003): 17-19, 35.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
647. Doyle, Michael. "Who Wrote the Canon?" The Musgrave Papers, no. 6 (1993): 64-70.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
648. Dubshin, Daniel. "Letter to the Editor ('A Letter From Mr. Dubshin')." Shoso-In Bulletin 9, no. (1999): 193.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
649. Dunn, Dave, Trevor S. Raymond, and Clifford S. Goldfarb. "Bookshelf: Reviews of Forensic Detective: How I Cracked the World's Toughest Cases, Joe Sherlock: Kid Detective, and Conan Doyle and the Parson's Son: The George Edalji Case." Canadian Holmes 30, no. 1 (2006): 9-12.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
650. Eddis, Charles. "Letter to the Editor, 'Meyers, Toronto'." Canadian Holmes 24, no. 3 (2001): 44.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
651. ———. "Meyers, Toronto: A family perspective." Canadian Holmes 23, no. 4 (2000): 10-17.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

652. Elliott, Doug. "Bookshelf: A review of A Sherlock Holmes Handbook by Christopher Redmond." Canadian Holmes 17, no. 2 (1993): 24-25.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
653. Elliott, Doug et al. "'Bookshelves': Reviews of Out of the Shadows, More Tales from the Cyber Kennel, Some Danger Involved, The Arcanum, and Violets and Vitriol." Canadian Holmes 28, no. 2 (2004): 22-26.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
654. Elliott, Philip. "Letter to the Editor." Canadian Holmes 19, no. 4 (1996): 37.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
655. Elliott, Philip, and Brian Neil Gibson. "Bookshelf: reviews of The Encyclopedia Sherlockiana (Brunson), The Case of the Cotingly Fairies, The Sherlock Holmes Crossword Puzzle Book, Except the Dying, The Napoleon of Crime, Buster Keaton's Sherlock Jr., Secret Tales of the Arctic Trails: Stories of Crime and Adventure in Canada's Far North, Sidelights on Holmes, and The Chronicles of Sherlock Holmes." Canadian Holmes 22, no. 1 (1998): 32-39.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
656. Ellis, Arthur. "Sherlock guide for the young." Toronto Star, Feb 2, 1986: B.6.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Two Toronto teens, brothers Andy and Bill Paton, have written a primer to Holmes for young readers that's an ideal companion to the stories themselves. It's called The Sherlock Holmes ABC Book (Simon and Pierre, $9.95) and proceeds to background some of the more pertinent Sherlockian lore, from A (Irene Adler, the one woman whom Holmes admired) to Z (the Regent's Park Zoo, not far from Holmes' fictional 221-B Baker Street digs). The book is profusely illustrated with Sidney Paget drawings that accompanied the original Holmes stories in the Strand magazine. Bravo to the brothers Paton. Editor Richard Lancelyn Green has brought together the works of such writers as Ronald Knox, Vincent Starrett, Julian Symons and Adrian Conan Doyle, all of them cleverly using references, characters and chronology from the canon to create their ersatz Holmes. Most entertaining of these yarns is that of Symons, a master crime novelist in his own right, who depicts Holmes in retirement, sans [Watson], solving a mysterious affair of the heart for an importuning young lady...."
657. Etchells, Stan. "Letter to the Editor, 'The Gallant Murray'." Canadian Holmes 17, no. 1 (1993): 39-40.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
658. Falk, Lilian. "The Canadian Who Depicted the First Meeting of Dr. Watson and Mr. Sherlock Holmes." Canadian Holmes 26, no. 2 (2002): 8-13.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
659. ———. "Letter to the Editor, 'Grant Allen'." Canadian Holmes 26, no. 4 (2003): 5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
660. ———. "Letter to the Editor, 'Sighting of Holmes in Jerusalem'." Canadian Holmes 28, no. 4 (2005): 43.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
661. Feinberg, Arthur W. "Observations: Mentor Sherlock." Newsday, no. (1986): 9.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Without real question, the most famous detective in literature is Sherlock Holmes. The stories of the fictional sleuth's amazing deductions have fascinated generations of readers since they were first published almost a hundred years ago. The detective's fame spread worldwide after the stories appeared on film and stage and interest in him shows no signs of abating...."
662. Fordyce, Rachel. "Dissertations of Note." Children's Literature 32, no. (2004): 270-284.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Compilation of recent doctoral dissertations of note, including one with a reference to Doyle: Halloran, Jennifer Ann. "Keeping the Peace: Detective Fiction and the British Imperial Project,

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- 1844-1939." Ph.D. diss. The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, 2002. 205 pp. DAI 63: 931A.
"Among other authors, Halloran looks at the works of Poe, Dickens, and Arthur Conan Doyle and shows that the three historical periods they represent produced 'a type of fictional detective who reflected and reinforced the same fantasies of control found in the contemporary discourses of empire, such as travel writing, exploration, narratives, and memoirs.'"
663. Fuller, Graham. "The Game's Afoot: Dr. Watson gives his verdict on a must-have Sherlock Holmes edition." Daily News (New York), January 9, 2005: 19.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of Les Klinger's The New Annotated Sherlock Holmes. "...That quibble aside, I am led to believe this is the most important edition dedicated to our collaboration since William S. Baring-Gould's The Annotated Sherlock Holmes' of 1967. Reading the stories again, I conclude that, above and beyond their enormous criminological value, they paint an extraordinarily rich picture of the Victorian and Edwardian eras, a notion enhanced by the copious photographs and amusing illustrations by Mr. Paget and others. (The cinematic 'stills' will indubitably annoy you.)..."
664. Gibson, Brian Neil. "Letter to the Editor, 'Ploys'." Canadian Holmes 21, no. 3 (1998): 48.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
665. ———. "Letter to the Editor, 'Unnecessary'." Canadian Holmes 18, no. 2 (1994): 33.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
666. Giffin, Glenn. "An uncommon world atlas sets tone for useful texts; [Rockies Edition]." Denver Post, Dec 4, 1994: F10.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The jacket cover has huge appeal right off, but the title will entice everyone: Encyclopedia Sherlockiana. By Matthew E. Bunson, this promises 'the complete A-to-Z Guide to the World of the Great Detective' (Macmillan, $25). Great fun! From Abbas Parva to Zucco, George, this delivers the goods. Did you know that American-Montenegrin detective Nero Wolfe has been speculated about as possibly being the son of Mycroft Holmes? There's also a handy index of Sherlock Holmes Societies, including 'Dr. Watson's Neglected Patients' in Littleton and 'St. Bartholomew's Chemical Laboratory' in Arvada."
667. Glenn, Joshua. "Posner V. Sherlock." The Boston Globe, October 10, 2004: D2.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Richard Posner's scathing reviews of everything from feminist legal theory to the 9/11 commission report have earned him a reputation as a kind of literary hanging judge. Now, the eminent jurist and legal scholar has taken aim at a new target - Sherlock Holmes. In a review of The New Annotated Sherlock Holmes: The Complete Short Stories' (Norton) in the Oct. 11 issue of The New Republic, Posner heaps scorn upon the forensic methods of Conan Doyle's fictional sleuth...."
668. Goldfarb, Clifford S. "Holmes: The game is truly afoot." The Globe and Mail (Toronto), December 18, 2004: D6.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of Les Klinger's The New Annotated Sherlock Holmes. "...Les Klinger is a Los Angeles tax lawyer and a highly respected Sherlockian scholar. He set out to produce The Sherlock Holmes Reference Library, a nine-volume work intended for serious devotees, summarizing the literature on each of the stories. Partway through this process, which still has three volumes to go, Klinger undertook to produce a more popular work, intended to appeal to the general reader. The result is the very attractive, massive two-volume (1,945 pages) The New Annotated Sherlock Holmes, containing all 56 short stories, in the order in which they were published in The Strand Magazine between 1891 and 1927. A third volume, containing the four novels, will be published in late 2005...."
669. ———. "Letter to the Editor." Canadian Holmes 21, no. 4 (1998): 30.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
670. Goldsmith, William. "Death and Resurrection in the Canon." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 52, no. 1 (2002): 42-44.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

671. Goodrich, William D. "Letter to the Editor, 'Yes, we are!'" Canadian Holmes 25, no. 1 (2001): 45.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
672. Gordon, Greg. "The game's afoot." The Sunday Times (London), April 6, 2008: 4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "With deer wandering by their windows and nothing but wild bird song to disturb them, Stephen and Carol Anne Brown thought they'd found their perfect rural idyll when they bought Mauricewood House 12 years ago. Little did they know that they had also purchased a piece of literary history. Selling agents may covet it on account of its accessibility, aspect and top notch amenities, but, for literary scholars, Mauricewood is better known as the home of Dr Joseph Bell, the Victorian physician credited with inspiring Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes. Now for sale at offers over Pounds 1.1m, Mauricewood is a grand Victorian mansion set in wooded grounds of 3 acres at Milton Bridge, just nine miles from central Edinburgh. The house lies at the foot of the Pentland Hills, with woodland to either side of the approach road and open countryside beyond...."
673. Green, Richard Lancelyn. "The Classics Reassessed 3 - 'Sherlock Holmes: Fact or Fiction' by T. S. Blakeney." The Sherlock Holmes Journal 23, no. 2 (1997): 56-58.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
674. Gunson, Eilidh. "Advice to Victorian Brides." The Ritual, no. 17 (1996): 16-18.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
675. Hall, John. "Review--'From Baltimore to Baker Street' by William Hyder." The Ritual, no. 17 (1996): 72-79.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "A past Gasogene of The Six Napoleons of Baltimore offers Sherlockian essays and dramatic readings that combine erudition with humour - and occasionally challenge such revered scholars as Vincent Starrett, Michael Harrison, and William S. Baring-Gould."
676. ———. "Review--'Sherlock Holmes Stories: - Politically Correct?' by Hugh Steele Scullion." The Musgrave Papers, no. 9 (1996): 127-130.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
677. ———. "Review--Write on Sherlock." The Ritual, no. 18 (1996): 60-63.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
678. Hammer, David L. "The Victorian Perspective." The Musgrave Papers, no. 10 (1997): 72-76.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
679. Hanson, Gwyneth. "Some Observations On...(A Practical Handbook on Holmes and Beekeeping)." The Ritual, no. 19 (1997): 3-5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
680. Harding, Terry. "The Development of Detective Policing in Victorian Times (and Sherlock Holmes' Contribution Thereto)." The Ritual, no. 22 (1998): 9-12.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
681. Hargreaves, Tracy. "'We Other Victorians': Literary Victorian Afterlives." Journal of Victorian Culture 13, no. 2 (2008): 278-286.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The article explores how 20th century writers have portrayed Victorians and the Victorian period. It examines the works of authors such as Virginia Woolfe and John Galsworthy and discusses the social, political and family issues that were raised in the 20th century regarding life in the Victorian period. It discusses the representation of Victorian life on television in the 1950s and 1960s and what the afterlife of the Victorian period has allowed social and cultural commentators to reexamine about the values and morals of the Victorians." Includes a reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...The classic text has been re-imagined.... Emily Brontë resurfaces in Jane Urquhart's Changing Heaven: A Novel, Clare Boylan's Emma Brown: A Novel From the Unfinished Manuscript of Charlotte Bronte appeared in 2004, Maryse Conde transplants Wuthering

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Heights to Windward Heights, Emma Tennant imagines Heathcliff's Tale, Caleb Carr and Jamyang Norbu add to the Sherlock Holmes canon (The Italian Secretary: A Further Adventure of Sherlock Holmes and Sherlock Holmes: The Missing Years respectively) as of course did Julian Barnes in Arthur and George. Wilkie Collins and Charles Dickens were intertextually present in Sarah Waters' Fingersmith...."

682. Harrington, Hugh T. "Letter to the Editor, 'Missing Missives'." Canadian Holmes 20, no. 1 (1996): 35.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
683. Hart, Jennifer. "Never Say Die: Sherlock Holmes and the Reichenbach Falls." The Washington Post, March 3, 2002: G12.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Letter to the editor. "To the Editor: Paul Richard's excellent story on J.M.W. Turner [Sunday Arts, Feb. 17] notes: 'In 1810 -- more than half a century before Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Moriarty plunged to their deaths there -- Turner sketched in Switzerland the dread Reichenbach Falls.' As nitpicky Holmesians know, in 'The Final Problem' (1893), Holmes and Moriarty do struggle in hand-to-hand combat on the edge of the falls and supposedly die there. Arthur Conan Doyle was tired of cranking out detective stories and had decided to use this epic battle between good and evil to kill off Holmes in a heroic way...."
684. Healey, Tim. "Further Notes on Doyle's Sources." The Ritual, no. 24 (1999): 46-47.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
685. ———. "Glosses on the Ultimate Sherlock Holmes Encyclopaedia." The Ritual, no. 22 (1998): 14-20.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
686. ———. "The Lancet: The Cutting Edge of Nineteenth Century Medical Journalism, Part One." The Ritual, no. 28 (2001): 16-22.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
687. ———. "More Thoughts on the Glosses." The Ritual, no. 24 (1999): 48-49.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
688. Healey, Tim, M. C. Black, Michael Cox, and John M. Austin. "Glosses on the Ultimate Sherlock Holmes Encyclopedia: Reaction and Response." The Ritual, no. 23 (1999): 15-20.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
689. Heifetz, Carl L. "Letter to the Editor (as G. Norton)." The Holmes & Watson Report 8, no. 1 (2004): 17, 20.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
690. Herbert, Paul. "'Insensibly one begins to twist facts to suit theories, instead of theories to suit facts': a response to Leslie S. Klinger's 'From Prussia with Love'." The Ritual, no. 23 (1999): 36-38.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
691. Hickling, Alfred. "Saturday Review: A four-pipe poseur: Alfred Hickling on the definitive guide to Holmes: The New Annotated Sherlock Holmes edited by Leslie S Klinger 1,878pp, Norton, GBP35." The Guardian (London), December 4, 2004: 9.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Ever since Holmes made his debut in Arthur Conan Doyle's novel A Study in Scarlet in 1887, there has been no shortage of bizarre theories to explain the perplexing inconsistencies of the detective's career. Did he tumble to his death at the Reichenbach Falls? Where was he educated? Did he know Freud? And just how many wives had Dr Watson? These are questions that have tickled the imaginations of Holmes addicts since approximately 1911, when the the first piece of Sherlockian scholarship was published by Father Ronald Knox, who proposed to apply the detective's own methods of deduction to the narrative....A small army of narrative sleuths has been sifting through the canon ever since, on the basis that there is nothing scholars love more than a giant, contradictory codex in which nothing adds up. The first notable attempt to present an overall digest of Sherlockian suppositions came with the publication of William S Baring-Gould's monumental Annotated Sherlock Holmes in 1967, which is still considered to be the standard work of reference. A more recent milestone was reached with the 1993 publication of the Oxford Sherlock Holmes, the most authoritative modern edition of the texts, though its editor, Owen Dudley Edwards, insists on regarding the stories as fictions created by Conan Doyle, a position that makes him, in the eyes of certain Sherlockians, a bit of a killjoy. Leslie S Klinger's enormous New Annotated Sherlock Holmes now arrives to remedy that position.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

692. Hirayama, Yuichi. "Letter to the Editor." Canadian Holmes 24, no. 4 (2001): 34.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
693. ———. "Prophecies of Nostradamus and the Canon, Part 1." Shoso-In Bulletin 5, no. (1995): 97-100.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
694. ———. "Prophecies of Nostradamus and the Canon, Part 2." Shoso-In Bulletin 6, no. (1996): 124-127.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
695. ———. "Some Problems on 'Conan Doyle Syndrome'." Shoso-In Bulletin 13, no. (2003): 25-29.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
696. Hobbs, Don. "Review--2001: A Sherlockian Odyssey: A Journey Among the Shaw 100." The Holmes & Watson Report 5, no. 4 (2001): 14.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
697. ———. "Review--A Sherlock Holmes Almanac compiled by Svend Petersen." The Holmes & Watson Report 7, no. 2 (2003): 23.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
698. ———. "Review--Sherlock Holmes' Strangest Cases by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle." The Holmes & Watson Report 6, no. 1 (2002): 13.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
699. ———. "Review--Sir Paul McCartney Concert, Dallas, TX--May 10, 2002." The Holmes & Watson Report 6, no. 3 (2002): 26.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
700. Holliday, John. "Letter to the Editor." The Holmes & Watson Report 2, no. 3 (1998): 19-23.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
701. Holly, Raymond L. "Bible Citations in the Sherlockian Canon." The Camden House Journal 15, no. 8 (1993): 2-3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
702. Holt, Thaddeus. "You Have Been in Afghanistan, I Perceive." MHQ: The Quarterly Journal of Military History, no. (1994).
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article concludes that the fatal battle of Maiwand provided Conan Doyle with the names of both Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson.
703. Household, Nicki, Jason Cowley, Sue Gee, and Helen Davidson. "New in Paperback." The Times (London), December 17, 1994: no page citation.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of A Sherlock Holmes Compendium, Edited by Peter Haining, Warner Books, Pounds 6.99. "...Testament to the enduring appeal of Conan Doyle's magically readable stories is the bizarre cult that still surrounds his greatest creation, Sherlock Holmes. Like all good literary enthusiasts, the world of 'Sherlockiana' seems to attract its share of eccentrics and mavericks, many of whom are given a platform in this compendium. The scope of the essays, ranging from speculation on the real gender of Holmes to a compelling newspaper profile of Conan Doyle by Bram Stoker, is impressive. There is also much that is

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- hilarious, including a Holmes horoscope. Dotty yet harmless, this is strictly for the enthusiast...."
704. Hoveyda, Nourieh. "Evidence-based medicine in Sherlock Holmes' footsteps." Evidence-Based Medicine 13, no. 4 (2008): 124-124.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "Evidence-based medicine in Sherlock Holmes' footsteps," by J. Nordenstrom.
705. Ishii, Keiichiro. "Book Review (Bibliographic Information About Certain Persian Publication of Sherlock Holmes)." Shoso-In Bulletin 10, no. (2000): 196-200.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
706. Izban, Donald B. "The Canon." Shoso-In Bulletin 8, no. (1998): 102.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
707. ———. "The Canon, Too." Shoso-In Bulletin 8, no. (1998): 103.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
708. ———. "In Honor of the Sixty Sherlock Holmes Cases in Sixty Short Lines." Shoso-In Bulletin 10, no. (2000): 71-74.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
709. Jackson, Lorne. "Homing in on Holmes; Books, Leslie S. Klinger, The Annotated Sherlock Holmes - Volume III (Norton, pounds 30)." Sunday Mercury, January 15, 2006: 6.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "That famously obsessive-compulsive detective, Sherlock Holmes, has always attracted his fair share of obsessive-compulsive fans....But even the most ardent Sherlockian is likely to be overpowered by the Annotated Sherlock Holmes, which wallows in the minutiae surrounding the master detective. The third and final volume contains all the novels that Conan Doyle wrote about the pipe-puffing sleuth (*2). Of course, the books are available elsewhere, and at a cheaper price. What makes this edition, and two previous ones, indispensable is the addition of maps, film images, contemporary illustrations and a free-for-all of fabulous footnotes (*3) (*4). Leslie S Klinger, the editor of the voluptuous volume, is the pedant's pedant, having pored over the Holmes canon with a pin-prick passion for painstaking detail...."
710. ———. "How trail of The Hound led to Brum; Unmasked: the Baskerville who inspired Sherlock Holmes classic." Sunday Mercury, February 26, 2006: 14.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "A leading Sherlock Holmes expert claims The Hound Of The Baskervilles might never have been written if Arthur Conan Doyle had not lived in Birmingham. Leslie Klinger says the creator of the famous Baker Street sleuth copied the name from the influential 18th century Birmingham printer, John Baskerville. Although studying for his medical degree in Edinburgh, Doyle spent several months working in the West Midlands from 1879 until 1882. Based in Aston, he took up a temporary medical assistantship with a local general practitioner. And while living in the area, he is believed to have come across the name of Baskerville...."
711. Johnson, Roger. "Review--'Sidelights on Holmes' by John Hall." The Ritual, no. 21 (1998): 65-66.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
712. Jordan, Anne. "Review--'Sherlock Holmes: Fact or Fiction' by T. S. Blakeney; '221B: Studies in Sherlock Holmes' by Vincent Starrett." The Ritual, no. 13 (1994): 47-48.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
713. Jungman, Robert P. "Sherlock Holmes: The World's First Scoutmaster." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 4 (1994): 204-11.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents the argument that it was Holmes, not Lord Baden-Powell, who founded the Scouting movement; that Holmes' writings found their way into print through the book, Scouting for Boys, and that Baden-Powell and Holmes collaborated during World War I and beyond.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

714. Kanfer, S. "The game is still afoot." Time 130, no. 7 (1987): 76.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Essay exploring the enduring affection of the public for the immortal stories of Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson, by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle.
715. Karlson, Kate, and Trevor S. Raymond. "Bookshelf: Reviews of Serpentine Muse-ings and The New Annotated Sherlock Holmes." Canadian Holmes 28, no. 3 (2005): 35-41.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
716. Kean, Michael H. "Letter to the Editor." Baker Street Miscellanea, no. 74 (1994): 49.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
717. ———. "Letter to the Editor." Baker Street Miscellanea, no. 70 (1992): 33.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
718. ———. "Saxe Coburg Square--Finally!" Shoso-In Bulletin 5, no. (1995): 89-93.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
719. Keefauver, Brad. "Winding Your Way Down on Baker Street." Shoso-In Bulletin 14, no. (2004): 82-84.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
720. Kerr, Jack. "Letter to the Editor." The Holmes & Watson Report 1, no. 7 (1998): 30-31.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
721. Kerr, John A., Sr. "Letter to the Editor, 'Sherlock Holmes meets...'" Canadian Holmes 21, no. 1 (1997): 44.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
722. Kimball, Miles A. "'A Benefactor of the Race': Sherlock Holmes, Voyeurism, and Victorian Readers." Kentucky Philological Review 9, no. (1994): 16-22.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
723. Kittle, C. Frederick. "Sherlock Holmes." The New York Times, June 5, 1994: A25.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Letter to the Editor: "Your charming and informative article 'Sherlock Holmes Inc.' by Paul Hofmann (May 1) was marred ever so lightly by the statement that after Conan Doyle was knighted, he 'bought an old castle in the town of Lucens . . .' Not so. The Chateau of Lucens, a beautiful 12th-century castle, was obtained by Sir Arthur's son, Adrian Conan Doyle, assisted by the Swiss Government, some 30 years after Doyle's death. It then became the Arthur Conan Doyle Museum, and some compared the baronial splendor of this castle to the Orson Welles set for 'Citizen Kane.'..."
724. Klinger, Leslie S. "Letter to the Editor, 'Reverberations'." Canadian Holmes 28, no. 3 (2005): 47.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
725. ———. "A New Golden Age of Sherlockian Scholarship." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 53, no. 3 (2003): 48-51.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
726. ———. "Paging Through the Canon." Wigmore Street Post Office Journal 12, no. (1998): 12-14.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
727. ———. "The Path of the Colonel's Bullet." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 51, no. 2 (2001): 41-44.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
728. ———. "Sifting the Writings upon the Writings." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- 52, no. 2 (2002): 47-54.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
729. ———. "What Is It That We Love in Sherlock Holmes? Re-Examined." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 53, no. 4 (2003): 6-7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
730. ———. "What Kind of Person Reads Playboy? Sherlock Holmes? An Interview with Hugh M. Hefner." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 50, no. 2 (2000): 18-25.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
731. Klinger, Leslie S., Barbara Roden, and Peter Calamai. "Letters to the Editor, re: 'The Curious Incidents of the Shoehorns that Were Not There'." Canadian Holmes 29, no. 1 (2005): 4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
732. Kobayashi, Tsukasa, and Akane Higashiyama. "Doyle's Unconscious Exposed in the Holmes Stories (translated by Harold Brown from Esperanto)." Shoso-In Bulletin 8, no. (1998): 181-185.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
733. Kuhn, Laura. "Letter to the Editor, 'Award in WA'." Canadian Holmes 26, no. 3 (2003): 5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
734. Lambert, Lisa. "Letter to the Editor ('Numerology, Spanish Holmes')." Shoso-In Bulletin 6, no. (1996): 157.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
735. Lane, Thomas D. "The Writings upon the Importance of Factual Errors in Writings." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 4 (1994): 212-22.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Framed within the context of a college class in mystery and detective fiction, the author (and students) provide some interesting observations on the literary criticism of the Writings on the Writings.
736. Langworth, Richard M. "Letter to the Editor, 'Gratuitous'." Canadian Holmes 17, no. 3 (1994): 50-51.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
737. Larson, Jeanette. "Case Closed: Tracking Down New Mysteries." Book Links 16, no. 3 (2007): 16-19.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews several mystery books for elementary students including "Behind the Curtain," by Peter Abrahams, "Room One: A Mystery or Two," by Andrew Clements, and "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes," Sir Arthur Conan Doyle.
738. Lauterbach, Edward S. "The Oxford Sherlock Holmes: A Review Essay." English Literature in Transition (1880-1920) 37, no. 4 (1994): 502-08.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
739. Leith, Sam. "A man of many dressing-gowns." Spectator 296, no. 9200 (2004): 36.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book "The New Annotated Sherlock Holmes," edited by Leslie Klinger.
740. Lesh, Richard D. "The Baghdad-Maiwand Connection." Shoso-In Bulletin 13, no. (2003): 30.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
741. ———. "Watson, Come Here; I want You: In Afghanistan." The Nezire Zanmai International 2, no. (1992): 76-79.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

742. Levin, Alfred A. "Oh Come Now--My Dear Watson." Shoso-In Bulletin 3, no. (1993): 73-77.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
743. Levin, Martin. "Holmes eternal." The Globe and Mail (Toronto), April 23, 2005: D17.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Arthur Conan Doyle believed in fairies, ectoplasmic emanations and spirits beyond the grave. Still, this credulous man also gave us a rationalist immortal in Sherlock Holmes. The Sherlockian canon, 56 stories and four novels, is, despite more internal contradictions than Marx's capitalism, still read and revered by millions, has spawned countless films and television series, and numberless imitations, homages and pastiches. The unabated fascination with the great consulting detective since his first appearance in A Study in Scarlet in Beeton's Christmas Annual of 1887 shows a staying power unmatched among his sleuthing rivals...." A number of currents works, e.g. Klinger's annotated, Chabon's Final Solution, are noted.
744. Levine, Michael G. "The vanishing point: Sherlock Holmes and the ends of perspective." Criticism 39, no. 2 (1997): 249.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the author's interpretation of vanishing points in the context of detective fiction. Webster's dictionary definition of a vanishing point; Reference to vanishing points in fictions written by Arthur Conan Doyle; Reference to texts and literature that contain vanishing points.
745. Lewis, Lou. "'Silver Blaze': The Dick Francis Connection." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 54, no. 2 (2004): 34-37.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
746. Lezard, Nicholas. "Sherlock Holmes was on the wrong side of town, finds Nicholas Lezard." The Guardian (London), September 18, 1999: 11.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of Atlas of the European Novel, 1800-1900, by Franco Moretti (Verso, pounds 12). "How many times do you think Sherlock Holmes goes to the East End? Ten times? A dozen? Fifteen? No: once, exactly. I find this hard to believe, but Moretti asserts it so pugnaciously - and it's not the kind of claim you make lightly, as anyone who has tangled with Sherlockians knows - that I have to defer to his research. This is a book which makes maps out of where books are set, or, rather, overlays geography with the loci of fiction, and sees what kind of patterns can be made. In the case of Sherlock Holmes's London, the fascinating thing is what happens when the detective's movements are superimposed on Charles Booth's real map of London, published in 1889. It's hugely detailed: each block of dwellings is colour-coded according to social class (there are seven: the richest are coloured gold, the poorest and most dangerous black, a scheme which is 'either quite naive or very very ironic', as Moretti drily puts it.) A map of Holmes's investigations is the exact inverse of Booth's. Murders are more likely to happen, in Conan Doyle's London, where in reality they are least likely to happen...."
747. Lindvall, Robert. "Sherlock Holmes's Biggest Case." Shoso-In Bulletin 14, no. (2004): 85-89.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
748. ———. "Very Sincerely Yours, Sherlock Holmes." Shoso-In Bulletin 12, no. (2002): 60-64.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
749. Lovisi, Gary. "Forever Holmes? A Look at Penzler Books' new 'Sherlock Holmes Library'." Shoso-In Bulletin 5, no. (1995): 110-112.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
750. Luman, Richard. "Recovering the lost history of Sherlock Holmes." The Chronicle of Higher Education 36, no. (1990).
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
751. Lycett, Andrew. "...and Clues from a Master Detective." The Times (London), September 29, 2007: 15.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...The ingredients that make this consulting detective's exploits as fresh today as

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

when they were written (mostly more than a century ago) are an engaging mixture of character, incident, dialogue and plot -the last providing the structure that allows the stories to unfold. The first person to analyse this was Ronald Knox, who initiated the mock serious scrutiny of the 'canon' in 1911 when he addressed the Gryphon Club in Oxford on Studies in the Literature of Sherlock Holmes...."

752. Lydon, Michael. "Holmes Re-examined: A Personal Ramble Through the Canon." The Musgrave Papers, no. 12 (1999): 15-38.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

753. MacGregor, Marilyn. "Plumming Sherlock Holmes." Shoso-In Bulletin 5, no. (1995): 23-26.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

754. Malec, Andrew. "Letter to the Editor." Baker Street Miscellanea, no. 70 (1992): 32-33.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

755. Malion, Brian. "Deconstructing Baker Street or 221b Faker Street." Baker Street West 17, no. 2 (2001): 33-35.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

756. Malmio, Kristina. "'He Strongly Envied Sherlock Holmes. But He Decided Not to Take Him to His Model.' A Discursive Approach to the 'Self' in an Early Self-Reflexive Finnish Detective Novel." Scandinavian Studies 80, no. 4 (2008): 455-476.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes multiple references to Holmes and Doyle.

757. Marchand, Philip. "Holmes anything but hard-boiled." The Toronto Star, November 27, 2004: J10.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...Memory Book is Engel's eleventh Cooperman novel. He has also written two other novels, one of which was titled Mr. Doyle And Dr. Bell. In that book, Arthur Conan Doyle, and the medical professor who inspired Doyle's creation of Sherlock Holmes, solved a crime together. It was an interesting departure for Engel. Basically Engel is of the hard-boiled school of crime fiction - his Cooperman, despite his amiable peculiarities, is a true successor to Sam Spade and Philip Marlowe. Hard-boiled private eyes don't usually have much use for the great detective with the deer-stalking cap. I was reminded of this fact by the recent publication, by W. W. Norton, of a two volume set titled The New Annotated Sherlock Holmes. This edition is for the reader who wants to understand every obscure reference in every Sherlock Holmes story...."

758. Masters, Rosalind. "Review--'140 Varieties' Musgrave Monograph Number Five by John Hall." The Ritual, no. 14 (1994): 62.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

759. McAleer, John. "The immortal Mr. Holmes." Chicago Tribune, Nov 7, 1993: 1.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book "The Oxford Sherlock Holmes," with stories written by Arthur Conan Doyle and edited by Owen Dudley Edwards, Christopher Roden, Richard Lancelyn Green and W. W. Robson.

760. McCallister, David R. "The Canon's Invisible Gang." Varieties of Ash 2, no. 1 (1994): 35-44.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

761. ———. "Sherlock Holmes and Hari Seldon: Canonical Antecedents of Asimov's Theory of Psychohistory." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 45, no. 3 (1995): 162-166.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

762. ———. "Sherlock Holmes 'Hated Rivals'." Baker Street Miscellanea, no. 72 (1992): 14-18.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

763. McCausland, Dayna. "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes." Canadian Holmes 17, no. 3 (1994): 13.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews The Adventure of Sherlock Holmes from The Oxford Sherlock Holmes.

764. McGee, Tom. "Letter to the Editor ('Haiku From America')." Shoso-In Bulletin 5, no. (1995): 145.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

765. McGrath, Charles. "Sherlock Holmes's eternal appeal." The International Herald Tribune, May 24, 2005: 10.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Mention of recent works on Holmes including Klinger's Annotated and Carr's Italian Secretary, among others. "Sherlock Holmes, the subject of a spate of recent books, has enjoyed what must surely be the most extensive afterlife of any character in fiction. To begin with, he survived the attempt of his own creator, Arthur Conan Doyle, to kill him off in the 1893 story 'The Final Problem,' the one that begins with Watson writing, 'It is with a heavy heart that I take up my pen'..."

766. ———. "What Makes Him The Supersleuth?" New York Times, May 20, 2005: E.2:27.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Nearly identical article to that in the International Herald Tribune. "...Holmes has since become a one-man entertainment complex. He has been the subject of at least 100 movies and nearly as many plays and radio dramas, and he has inspired an entire library's worth of books. There have been countless sequels and knockoffs -- among them Nicholas Meyer's trilogy, which paired Holmes with figures like Freud, Oscar Wilde and the Phantom of the Opera; Laurie R. King's Mary Russell novels, about a young heiress who teams up with the retired Holmes; and "A Samba for Sherlock," by the Brazilian writer and television personality Jo Soares, which transports a fumbling, nearsighted Holmes to Rio to solve the case of a stolen violin. There is also a vast and ever-growing trove of serious and semiserious Holmes scholarship...."

767. McKuras, Julie. "50 Years Ago." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 4, no. 3 (2000): 3.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Provides some background and information on Jay Finley Christ and his 1950 publication "The Missing Three." It was printed in a small 4-page pamphlet titled Christmas 1950, and published by Christ's own Fanlight Press. Includes a photograph of Jay Finley Christ.

768. ———. "100 Years Ago." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 4, no. 3 (2000): 2, 8.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Provides information on 'The Making of Sherlock Holmes' by A.M. in the 1900 issue of The Young Man. Information is also given on Dr. Joseph Bell, one of Doyle's medical school professors in Edinburgh and a model for Sherlock Holmes.

769. McWilliams, Brendan. "Storms played elemental role for Sherlock." The Irish Times, September 29, 2000: 24.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "It was in the latter days of September, and the equinoctial gales had set in with exceptional violence. All day the wind had screamed and the rain had beaten against the windows, so that even here in the heart of great, hand-made London we were forced to raise our minds for the instant from the routine of life and to recognise the presence of those great elemental forces which shriek at mankind through the bars of his civilisation, like untamed beasts in a cage.' Those who have researched the events which followed this autumnal scene have concluded they took place exactly 113 years ago, on September 29th and 30th, 1887. They comprise one of the most celebrated cases of Mr Sherlock Holmes, and are meticulously described in his inimitable style by Dr Watson in The Five Orange Pips...."

770. Merrell, David W. "'Home, James': A Case of Domestic Identity." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 53, no. 2 (2003): 24-28.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

771. Merrill, Edward. "Knowledge of Construction-Nil." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 46, no. 3 (1996): 41-46.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

772. Meyer, Charles A. "Mortality and Morbidity in Baker Street." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 54, no. 1 (2004): 47-49.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

773. Meyer, Karl E. "The Curious Incident of the Sleuth in the Meantime." The New York Times, January 19, 2000: E1.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Of the singular mysteries addressed by Sherlock Holmes, perhaps none is more intriguing than "The Case of the Undying Detective." His creator, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, vowed to kill him in the 1890's and turned to the archcriminal Professor Moriarty to do the job. 'You won't! You can't! You musn't!' the author's mother protested. Holmes survived, only to face rival creations by others who shamelessly copied his methods, and a legion of parodists who trifled with his name. Nevertheless Holmes is entering a third century, standing taller than ever. Several hundred Americans and a sprinkling of foreign guests gathered in Manhattan over the weekend to salute the master detective on his 146th birthday. For more than half a century this has been an annual rite, organized by the Baker Street Irregulars, the organization of Holmes devotees...."
774. Meyers, Don. "Holmes, Watson & Stamford: Was there a Method to Young Stamford's Madness?" Shoso-In Bulletin 5, no. (1995): 87-88.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
775. Miller, Laura. "Zelig on Baker Street." New York Times Book Review 154, no. 52998 (2004): 31-31.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents an essay on Sherlock Holmes and his many resurrections since his invention some 150 years ago. Contention that the book "Curious Incident of the Dog in The Night-Time," by Mark Haddon, not only gets its title from author Arthur Conan Doyle but also parallels the way that trusty Watson could notice facts without grasping their meaning; "The Hamilton Case," by Michelle de Kretser which also makes mention of Holmes; "Final Solution," by Michael Chabon where an elderly unnamed man (suggested to be Holmes) is brought out of retirement to solve a case; Criticism of "The New Annotated Sherlock Holmes edited by Leslie S. Klinger who is a confirmed Sherlockian; How the campiness of the stories remains a winning feature after all this time.
776. Miller, Phil. "Curious Case of Sherlock Holmes and a Trademark." The Scotsman, April 13, 2000: 9.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The name of the world's most famous literary detective, Sherlock Holmes, could become a trademark, if a controversial move by a New York-based businesswoman is successful. Andrea Plunket, who has administered the rights to the copyright of the Holmes works of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle since 1976, has lodged a bid with European authorities for the right to control the name and image of the legendary sleuth. The actions of Mrs Plunket, who was once the mistress of Claus van Bulow, the Danish aristocrat who was tried and acquitted of the murder of his wife in the 1980s, has angered aficionados of the fictional detective and alarmed the publishing world...."
777. Mitchell, Andrea L. "New Books." Addiction 103, no. 2 (2008): 339-342.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article presents a list of books published during the month of February 2008, including "Bacchus at Baker Street: Sherlock Holmes and Victorian Drinking Lore" by Patricia Guy. iUniverse, Inc. 2007, 150 pp, $13.95, ISBN-10: 0595455751, ISBN-13: 978-0595455751 (paperback)
778. Mitchell, John H. "Letter to the Editor, 'Not an Oxymoron'." Canadian Holmes 17, no. 1 (1993): 40.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
779. Monahan, Eric. "A Beginner's Guide to Holmes and Watson." Shoso-In Bulletin 13, no. (2003): 80-81, 150.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
780. ———. "A New Role-Model for Sherlock Holmes?" Shoso-In Bulletin 5, no. (1995): 73-76.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
781. Monahan, Jerome. "An elementary lesson in success." The Times Educational Supplement, no. (2005): 14-15.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The writer traces the success of the Sherlock Holmes detective stories written by Arthur Conan Doyle.
782. Moore, Helen. "A Japanese Interpretation of Sherlock Holmes." Canadian Holmes 24, no. 2 (2000): 14-25.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

783. ———. "Letter to the Editor, 'Artwork from Japan'." Canadian Holmes 25, no. 1 (2001): 44.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
784. Moran, Joe. "Letter to the Editor." The Holmes & Watson Report 2, no. 3 (1998): 24.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
785. ———. "Letter to the Editor." The Holmes & Watson Report 2, no. 4 (1998): 29.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
786. Murdock, Karen. "Lost in Tobacco and Zeugma: Some Devices of Classical Rhetoric and Sherlockian Canon." Canadian Holmes 27, no. 4 (2004): 3-14.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
787. Mynatt, Barbee T., Laura Marie Leventhal, Keith Instone, John Farhat, and Diane S. Rohlman. "Hypertext or book: which is better for answering questions?" ACM Conference on Human Factors in Computing Systems - CHI '92, May 3-7 1992, no. (1992): 19-25.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "An important issue in the evolution of hypertext is the design of such systems to optimally support user tasks such as asking questions. Few studies have systematically compared the use of hypertext to books in seeking information, and those that have been done have not found a consistent superiority for hypertext. In addition, designers developing hypertext books have few guidelines. In the present study, users performed information-seeking tasks and answered a variety of types of questions about Sherlock Holmes stories using either a conventional paper encyclopedia or a hypertext encyclopedia. The questions varied on the amount of information needed to derive an answer (fact or inference), the location of the question's key phrase in the hypertext (entry title or entry content), and the format of the information (text or map). Accuracy and time were recorded. The hypertext group excelled in answering fact questions where the information was embedded in a text entry. The book group excelled only in answering fact questions based on maps. In spite of having far more experience using books, the book group was not significantly faster overall and did not perform as well on an incidental learning task. Our results suggest that a hypertext book with a nonlinear structure and including a variety of navigational tools can equal or surpass conventional books as an information-seeking medium, even with minimal training." Hypertext used was HyperHolmes: The Electronic Encyclopedia Sherlockianaw incorporates information from Jack Tracy's Encyclopaedia Sherlockiana (1977). The Encyclopedia Sherlockiana is an alphabetically arranged list of keywords and key phrases related to the Sherlock Holmes stories. Each keyword or key phrase has an accompanying description, and possibly references to other entries in the encyclopedia. The book is not indexed and entries are found strictly alphabetically. Tracy's book is considered by Sherlockians to be the definitive encyclopedia of information on Sherlock Holmes as depicted in Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's stories.
788. Myrsiades, Linda. "Introduction." College Literature 35, no. 3 (2008): 1-1.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article discusses various articles within the issue including Paula J. Reiter's "Doctors, Detectives, and the Professional Ideal: The Trial of Thomas Neill Cream and the Mastery of Sherlock Holmes"
789. Narasimhana, Balajii. "Celebrating the 150th birthday of Sherlock Holmes." Shoso-In Bulletin 14, no. (2004): 21-22.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
790. Narita, Kei-ichi. "On the apparent absence of Mother Goose in the Canon." The Nezire Zanmai International 2, no. (1992): 80-88.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
791. Nawotka, Edward. "Sherlock Holmes stories, and much more." The Gazette (Montreal), January 22, 2005: H6.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of The New Annotated Sherlock Holmes: The Complete Short Stories, Edited by Leslie Klinger, Norton, 1,878 pages.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

792. Nicki Household, Jason Cowley Sue Gee, and Davidson Helen. "New in Paperback;Books." The Times (London), Dec 17, 1994.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...A Sherlock Holmes Compendium, edited by Peter Haining, Warner Books, Pounds 6.99 Testament to the enduring appeal of Conan Doyle's magically readable stories is the bizarre cult that still surrounds his greatest creation, Sherlock Holmes. Like all good literary enthusiasms, the world of 'Sherlockiana' seems to attract its share of eccentrics and mavericks, many of whom are given a platform in this compendium. The scope of the essays, ranging from speculation on the real gender of Holmes to a compelling newspaper profile of Conan Doyle by Bram Stoker, is impressive. There is also much that is hilarious, including a Holmes horoscope. Dotty yet harmless, this is strictly for the enthusiast...."
793. Nosowicz, Dorota. "Comment: 10 Key Things About...Sherlock Holmes." The Observer, September 19, 1999: 27.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Elementary, dear reader, and not before time. The esteemed sculptor, Mr John Doubleday, will unveil his latest statue outside Baker Street Underground railway station in London's district of Marylebone on Thursday. It is a likeness of the greatest detective ever, Mr Sherlock Holmes, whose lodgings were at 221B Baker Street, where now resides the Abbey National celebrating 150 years of financial ministration. 1. Nascence: In 1887, the legend of Sherlock Holmes and Dr Thomas Watson was born in Beeton's Christmas Annual...."
794. Nydell, Margaret. "On the Chaldean Influences in Cornish." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 45, no. 1 (1995): 24-30.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
795. Olding, Alan C. "Letter to the Editor ('George R. Sims')." Shoso-In Bulletin 4, no. (1994): 124.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
796. Olson, Kiki. "Mysteries." St. Petersburg Times (Florida), August 22, 1999: 4D.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Brief review of Holy Clues: The Gospel According to Sherlock Holmes, by Stephen Kendrick (Pantheon, $21). "This is not a 'whodunit,' but it is a must-read for fans of the world's greatest consulting detective, Sherlock Holmes. Stephen Kendrick, the minister of the Universalist church of West Hartford, Conn., has dissected the Holmes stories to extract the religious and metaphysical lessons they offer...."
797. Palladino, Paolo. "Ginzburg in Harlem: History, Structure and the Politics of Primitivism." Culture, Theory & Critique 49, no. 2 (2008): 203-217.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The historian Carlo Ginzburg is renowned for his critique of modern, scientific reason and his articulation of an alternative form of knowledge which he labels 'conjectural'. This form of knowledge, supposedly more attuned to the historian's interest in the singular and specific fragment, as opposed to the abstract and universal concept, is so rooted in the practices of the prehistoric hunter that Ginzburg sometimes describes it as a 'venatic' form of deduction, binding 'the human animal closely to other animal species'. In this essay, I explore the ramifications of this alternative form of knowledge, attending especially to its relationship to the modernist theme of 'primitivism'. I do so by juxtaposing Ginzburg's critical appraisal of Arthur Conan Doyle's most famous literary invention, Sherlock Holmes, and Rudolph Fisher's own literary invention, John Archer, the physician who sometimes aids criminal investigations in African American Harlem. I argue that the differences between Archer and Holmes draw attention to some troubling implications of Ginzburg's historiographical argument. Folding this analysis on itself, however, I also suggest that what might be at stake, when Ginzburg insists so troublingly on the importance of the singular, venatic trace, is the evocation of Walter Benjamin's understanding of the historical 'event'." [Abstract from author]
798. Parry, Rosemary C. "Review--'The Oxford Sherlock Holmes: The Return of Sherlock Holmes' edited with an introduction by Richard Lancelyn Green." The Ritual, no. 12 (1993): 57-59.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
799. Pointer, Michael. "Review--'Sleuths, Sidekicks and Stooges' by Joseph Green and Jim Finch." The Ritual, no. 20

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- (1997): 62-63.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
800. Pollak, Michael. "Unraveling the Mysteries of Sherlock Holmes." The New York Times, December 2, 1999: G13.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "What would Sherlock have thought of the Internet? Its spreadsheets would have been invaluable time-savers (for correlating soil colors and granulations by London neighborhoods, for instance; or trouser threads by manufacturer and tailor). He would have found it quite useful as a library and a correspondence tool, if only for cataloging and exposing the mistakes of others. As a code-breaker, it would have been entirely unnecessary; his own intellect was enough. As biography, he would have declared it absolute rubbish. But that is only what Sherlock Holmes himself would have thought. For more than a century, Holmes devotees have been enthusiastically filling the gaps left by the incomplete journals of Dr. John H. Watson, Holmes's friend and chronicler, and they have lost no time putting their speculations online. Sherlockian trivia is legendary, and since 'obsessive' would be Holmes's middle name if he had one, there is no shortage of Web sites. One of the most comprehensive sites is at Yoxley Old Place..."
801. Pollock, Donald K. "Book Review--'The Worth of the Game, Being a Final Guide to the England of Sherlock Holmes' by David L. Hammer." Baker Street Miscellanea, no. 74 (1994): 52.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
802. ———. "A Study in Villainy." The Musgrave Papers, no. 8 (1995): 29-35.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
803. Powell, Adam. "Where did Conan Doyle first meet Sherlock and Moriarty? Elementary school my dear Watson; Solved, mystery that baffled Holmes fans." Daily Mail (London), June 24, 2002: 31.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Their names are inseparably linked in literary history. Sherlock Holmes and Professor Moriarty - the world's greatest detective and the evil genius whose name has become a byword for a criminal mastermind. But until now the inspiration for Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's two greatest creations has remained a mystery. However a simple glance at the attendance register for Stonyhurst College in 1868 has revealed that the then plain Arthur Doyle spent three years at school with a Patrick Sherlock and two Moriarty brothers, John and Michael. The logic, as Holmes would say, is elementary...."
804. Prepolec, Charles. "Letter to the Editor, 'Twas Moriarty's gremlins...'" Canadian Holmes 27, no. 1 (2003): 3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
805. Przybilka, Thomas. "Book Review (A New Sherlock Holmes Publisher)." Shoso-In Bulletin 6, no. (1996): 152-155.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
806. ———. "Lexikon der Kriminalliterature (LKL) and Sherlock Holmes." Shoso-In Bulletin 7, no. (1997): 58-60.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
807. Pugh, Brian W. "Letter to the Editor, 'That Hound'." Canadian Holmes 26, no. 4 (2003): 5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
808. Rabe, William T. "The Tru Historie of Mary Morstan's Companions." The Nezire Zanmai International 2, no. (1992): 6-8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
809. Rahn, B. J. "Dorothy L. Sayers and Sherlock Holmes: The French Connection." The Musgrave Papers, no. 12 (1999): 51.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
810. Ramanan, Sundaram V. "Cardiovascular Disease in The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes." Archives of Internal Medicine 161, no. 5 (2001): 701.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the description of cardiovascular system disorders in the book 'The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes,' by Arthur Conan Doyle. Aortic aneurysms; Advanced left ventricular failure; Cardiac neurosis; Neurocardiogenic syncope; Cardiac and respiratory effects of the poisonous coelenterate Cyanea capillata.

811. Randall, Warren. "Contain Yourself, Mr. Holmes!": A Report on Who Drinks from What." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 53, no. 1 (2003): 33-37.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

812. Randall, Warren, Robert C. Burr, and Steven T. Doyle. "Letters To Baker Street." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 3 (1994): 190-191.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Letters to the editor from Randall, Burr, and Doyle.

813. Rawlings, Ray. "Letter to the Editor, 'Andrew Bonar Law'." Canadian Holmes 18, no. 2 (1994): 33.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

814. ———. "Letter to the Editor, 'Holmes in Song'." Canadian Holmes 26, no. 3 (2003): 4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

815. ———. "Letter to the Editor, 'The Baskerville Fiasco'." Canadian Holmes 17, no. 2 (1993): 32-33.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

816. Raymond, Trevor S. "Introduction." Canadian Holmes 17, no. 3 (1994): 11.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Introduces three reviews from volumes of the Oxford Sherlock Holmes.

817. ———. "Letter to the Editor." Baker Street Miscellanea, no. 74 (1994): 49.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

818. Redfearn, Auberon. "Canonical School Reports and Assorted Assessments." The Ritual, no. 22 (1998): 37-40.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

819. ———. "Canonical School Reports and Assorted Assessments, Part One." The Ritual, no. 21 (1998): 16-18.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

820. ———. "News of Your Friend or, Three Years of the Past: A Hiatus Diary (Part One)." The Musgrave Papers, no. 6 (1993): 48-52.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

821. ———. "News of Your Friend or, Three Years of the Past: A Hiatus Diary (Part Two)." The Musgrave Papers, no. 7 (1994): 37-42.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

822. ———. "A Strange Tangle Indeed: Further Original Insights into the Canon." The Musgrave Papers, no. 10 (1997): 124-127.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

823. ———. "Those Missing Links (which make up the whole of that remarkable chain)." The Musgrave Papers, no. 13 (2000): 114-118.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

824. Redmond, Christopher. "Footnotes for Bootmakers or Annotations on the New Annotated: a review of The New Annotated Sherlock Holmes." Canadian Holmes 29, no. 2 (2005): 46-51.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

825. ———. "Letter to the Editor." The Holmes & Watson Report 1, no. 7 (1998): 30.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
826. Redmond, Donald A. "From Mapleton to Capleton with Silver Blaze." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 51, no. 4 (2001): 35-38.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
827. ———. "Index to Volume 44 (New Series), 1994." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 4 (1994): 251-255.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // An index to this volume of the BSJ.
828. ———. "Sherlockian Plotnotes XII: The Circular Reds, XIII: Of Precipices and Survivability." Baker Street Miscellanea, no. 70 (1992): 28-31.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
829. ———. "Sherlockian Plotnotes XIV: The Body on the Lines, XV: The Amateur Mendicant." Baker Street Miscellanea, no. 72 (1992): 24-32.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
830. ———. "Sherlockian Plotnotes XVI: Lepers in London and South Africa, XVII: The Hound and the Hounded." Baker Street Miscellanea, no. 73 (1993): 39.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
831. Reed, James. "A medical perspective on the adventures of Sherlock Holmes." Journal of Medical Ethics. Print; 27, no. 2 (2001): 76-81.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The adventures of Sherlock Holmes, although primarily famous as stories of detection of crime, offer a considerable amount to interest the medical reader. There are many medical references in the stories, and the influence of Conan Doyle's medical background is clearly seen in the main characters. Aspects of the stories also reflect Conan Doyle's medical career, and also something of his attitude towards the profession. From Holmes's sayings and accounts of his methods, parallels can be drawn between Holmesian deduction and the diagnostic process. It is concluded, however, that deduction cannot be used as a direct paradigm since medical problems are rarely soluble through a process of logic alone."
832. Regan, Jim. "On the trail of the world's greatest consulting detective." Christian Science Monitor, December 28, 2005: 25.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Stanford University has a New Year's gift for you - and not just some virtual keepsake that disappears as soon as you move on to the next website, but a real, physical collection that can, if you so desire, be delivered to your mailbox and enjoyed in the relaxed solitude of your offline time. The Discovering Sherlock Holmes project wants to acquaint (or reacquaint) you with the life and times of world's greatest consulting detective, and it's making that introduction with the help of a few century-old stories - online and on paper...."
833. Reiter, Paula J. "Doctors, Detectives, and the Professional Ideal: The Trial of Thomas Neill Cream and the Mastery of Sherlock Holmes." College Literature 35, no. 3 (2008): 57-95.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The 1892 trial of serial killer Dr. Thomas Neill Cream put both Cream and the professionals involved in the case on trial. The judge simultaneously presided over Cream's conviction and the exoneration of the professionals. Controlling the terms of professionalism and repairing the damage to the professional image that this scandalous case caused became a critical subtext to the trial. The Cream murder trial and The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes both grapple with questions of professional conduct, status, and worth becoming influential (if unrecognized) voices in the ongoing discourse surrounding Victorian male professionalism. The remarkable popularity of the Sherlock Holmes series is closely tied to the Holmesian performance of a professional ideal. Each tale encapsulates both a model of expertise and an implicit critique of men not fulfilling this model, thus contributing to the growing cultural power of the nineteenth-century professional male." [Abstract from author]

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

834. Reitz, Caroline. "Detective Fiction and the Rise of Forensic Science (review)." Victorian Studies 45, no. 1 (2003): 192-194.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of Detective Fiction and the Rise of Forensic Science, by Ronald R. Thomas; pp. xvii + 341. Cambridge and New York: Cambridge University Press, 2000, GBP40.00, $60.00. Includes multiple references to Doyle.
835. Rhea, Tina. "Letter to the Editor." Baker Street Miscellanea, no. 70 (1992): 34.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
836. Ripley, Mike. "Books: the Return of the Hound; One of English Fiction's most Celebrated Books Celebrates its Centenary this Month. Post Crime Book Mike Ripley Looks at the Publications Surrounding the Event." Birmingham Post, August 4, 2001: 53.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...To celebrate the centenary of The Hound of the Baskervilles, Penguin books have produced attractive (and reasonably priced) re- issues of the entire Holmes canon and in addition, Doyle's science fiction adventure The Lost World, to which homage is paid in the continuing Jurassic Park saga. There is also a new biography of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle: Teller of Tales by Daniel Stashower (Penguin, pounds 8.99). But for the real Holmes fan - and there are dedicated 'Holmesians' in virtually every country on earth - the truly unmissable commemorative volume must be Starring Sherlock Holmes by David Stuart Davies (Titan Books, pounds 29.99), a leading authority on all things Sherlockian and the editor of the Sherlock Holmes Detective Magazine...."
837. Roden, Christopher. "Letter to the Editor." The Holmes & Watson Report 3, no. 3 (1999): 29.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
838. ———. "On the Shoulders of Giants: Jack Tracy and The Encyclopaedia Sherlockiana." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana, no. (2001): 3-63.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
839. Rogers, Michael. "Book reviews: Classic returns." Library Journal 118, no. 21 (1993): 181.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the novels 'The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes,' 'The Case-Book of Sherlock Holmes,' 'His Last Bow,' 'The Hound of the Baskervilles,' 'The Memoirs of Sherlock Holmes,' 'The Return of Sherlock Holmes,' 'The Sign of Four,' 'A Study in Scarlet' and 'The Valley of Fear,' all by Arthur Conan Doyle. Oxford University Press, 1993.
840. ———. "Classic Returns." Library Journal 131, no. 12 (2006): 122-122.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article presents reviews of suggested fiction and nonfiction books including "Sherlock Holmes: The Man and His World," by H. R. F. Keating. Castle. 2006. 160p. illus. index. ISBN 0-7858-2112-0 [ISBN 978-0-7858-2112-0]. $9.99. "Keating's 1979 study of Holmes, the so-called man who never lived and who will never die, traces the times in which the world's first consulting detective and his trusty Boswell lived. Buttressed with 136 photos and drawings, including many of Sidney Paget's original illustrations from the serialized Conan Doyle stories, the text illuminates all references to places and things within London and the English countryside as well as foreign locales the author made throughout the short stories and novels and how they fit into the Holmes/Watson canon as well as in Victorian times. Great fun for fans and equally good term paper fodder."
841. ———. "The Complete Sherlock Holmes (Book)." Library Journal 128, no. 19 (2003): 103-103.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book "The Complete Sherlock Holmes," by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle.
842. ———. "The Complete Sherlock Holmes (Book)." Library Journal 128, no. 16 (2003): 123-123.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book "The Complete Sherlock Holmes" Vol.1, by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle.
843. Rothstein, Edward. "Shelf Life; A Case for Sherlock: The Double Helix of Crime Fiction and Science." The New

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

York Times, March 4, 2000: B11.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of Detective Fiction and the Rise of Forensic Science by Ronald R. Thomas. Illustrated. 341 pages. Cambridge University Press. $59.95. "...The detective story really is partly a tale about race and nationality, imperialism and bourgeois life: Sherlock Holmes's villains are from the far corners of the British Empire (including the barely civilized United States); Poe's villain in 'Rue Morgue' is not even human. So preoccupations with these political themes also run through this dense, smart book as well. But Ronald R. Thomas, professor of English at Trinity College in Hartford, also steps back from the crime scene, following tracks left by Poe and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, Dashiell Hammett and Raymond Chandler, Joseph Conrad and Mark Twain, scrutinizing how the development of forensic science was intertwined with the evolution of the detective story...."

844. Rouby, Jason. "On the Identification of Person by the Comparison of Their Ears." Shoso-In Bulletin 7, no. (1997): 107-108.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

845. Samson, Antonio R. "Fence Sitter." BusinessWorld, August 29, 2000: 1.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Recently, I read again the adventures of Sherlock Holmes, famous detective resident of Baker Street and main character in one trail-blazing whodunit form. Arthur Conan Doyle's adventures have a comforting formula. A case is brought to Holmes - usually in the company of Watson, his doctor friend (Elementary, my dear Watson, which he never really says in any of the stories) and narrator of the series...."

846. Sarjeant, William A. S. "Criminous Clerihews." Canadian Holmes 17, no. 4 (1994): 15-22.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "A Master Bootmaker and a member of The Casebook of Saskatoon here offers both Sherlockians and admirers of other famous sleuths a delightful collection [of clerihews]. Benét's Reader's Encyclopedia defines clerihew as 'a comic four-line verse made up of two couplets. . . . They are often satiric or ridiculous biographies of famous people, the lines being a succession of non sequiturs.' The first line is usually the name of the person on whom the following lines comment."

847. Schultz, Robert S. "Of Busts and Bullets (or at Least One of Each)." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 51, no. 2 (2001): 45-46.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

848. ———. "Upon the Dating of Blood Stains." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 52, no. 4 (2002): 34-40.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

849. Senter, R. Joel. "Letter to the Editor ('A Computer Analysis of the Canon and Martha')." Shoso-In Bulletin 4, no. (1994): 124-125.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

850. Seton, Tony. "The Return of Francois le Villard." Shoso-In Bulletin 6, no. (1996): 100-116.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

851. Shaw, John Bennett. "Letter to the Editor (Letter from 'JBS')." Shoso-In Bulletin 5, no. (1995): 146.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

852. Shaw, John Bennett, and Karen Murdock. "The First 'Shaw 100'." Canadian Holmes 29, no. 2 (2005): 18-37.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

853. Shiffman, Stu. "On the Coptic Patriarchs." Shoso-In Bulletin 13, no. (2003): 82-83.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

854. ———. "Sound of the Baskervilles White Paper Number 1: The Battle of Maiwand." Shoso-In Bulletin 7, no.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- (1997): 32-37.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
855. ———. "Sound of the Baskervilles White Paper Number 2: Contents of an Ancient British Burrow." Shoso-In Bulletin 7, no. (1997): 112-117.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
856. ———. "Were Holmes and Watson at the 1909 Seattle 'Alaska-Yukon-Pacific' Exposition?" Shoso-In Bulletin 8, no. (1998): 106-107.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
857. Silverman, Kenneth. "The Handcuff King." The New York Times, October 30, 1994: A55.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Letter to the Editor: "Tom De Haven, who reviewed William Hjortsberg's novel 'Nevermore' (Oct. 2), remarked that the author's heroes, Harry Houdini and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, represent 'a most unlikely pair of chums-turned-crimebusters.' Actually, from the time of Houdini's first fame, around 1900, his astounding feats made him seem almost a fictional character, and he was routinely compared to the almost-real Sherlock Holmes...."
858. Silverstein, Albert. "The Search for Forbidden Knowledge: Holmes, Moriarty, and the Faust Legend." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 56, no. 1 (2006): 29-40.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
859. Simmons, Diane. "The curse of empire: Grandiosity and guilt in the stories of Arthur Conan Doyle." Psychoanalytic Review. Electronic; 89, no. 4 (2002): 533-556.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Argues that during the later years of empire, English popular literature took on the task of managing a repressed but corrosive guilt over imperial "loot," a constant battle against a feared "curse" of empire. One of the writers to step up to that challenge was Arthur Conan Doyle, whose phenomenally popular detective, Sherlock Holmes, not only provides near magical solutions to problems besetting the English, but also explains guilt in terms of foreign contamination. The author explores the view of the imperial relationship as a narcissistic one in which it is the dual sense of self--the alternation between grandiosity on one hand, and a terrified sense of guilt, loss, and vulnerability to destruction on the other--that is the hallmark of narcissistic disturbance. A further understanding of this disturbance may provide a tool with which to probe the psychology of the British imperial public and finally the role of Sherlock Holmes in managing imperial duality. If the dangers in the Sherlock Holmes stories described by the author reveal a narcissistic vulnerability, then this vulnerability is balanced by a study in grandiosity, the omniscient and omnipotent detective Sherlock Holmes.
860. Skene-Melvin, David et al. "Bookshelf." Canadian Holmes 27, no. 2 (2003): 33-41.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews of The Oriental Casebook of Sherlock Holmes, The Adventure of Samuel Blackthorne, Starring Sherlock Holmes, Lend Me Our Ears, and Shakespearean and Other Literary Investigations with the Master Sleuth (and Conan Doyle)
861. Smedgaard, Paul B. "The Goose as a Comparative Measure of Economic Value." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 54, no. 4 (2004): 22-23.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
862. Smith, Alexander McCall. "Implausible, inconsistent, unforgettable." The Times (London), December 23, 2006: 6.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "By the normal rules of detective fiction, Arthur Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes stories should have been an abject failure. Everything about their creation was wrong. The author's heart was never in the enterprise--he disliked his principal character and very pointedly disposed of him. The resulting disappointment among Holmes's fans left Conan Doyle unmoved, even if he eventually relented; as far as he was concerned, getting Holmes out of the way would enable him to continue with what he really wanted to do--to write historical novels...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

863. Smith, Edward S., Jr. "A Toast to the Worst Real Estate in the Canon." The Holmes & Watson Report 2, no. 3 (1998): 35-36.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
864. Smith, Godfrey. "Godfrey Smith column." The Sunday Times (London), April 10, 1994: no page citation.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "In all the welter of anniversaries we're passing through, one notable in our annals has been overlooked. Exactly 100 years ago last Tuesday, Sherlock Holmes came back from the dead. It's hard now to realise quite how traumatic his demise after an epic struggle with Moriarty, the Napoleon of crime, at the Reichenbach Falls had been. Men were seen going about London with black mourning bands...."
865. Somers, F. A. X. "Sherlock Holmes in 'Northstar'." Shoso-In Bulletin 5, no. (1995): 113-143.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
866. Soupcoff, Marni. "Friday Zeitgeist." National Post (Canada), July 18, 2008: A12.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "I know the deerstalker is a hunting hat with earflaps, and I know it's primarily associated with fictional detective Sherlock Holmes, but I'm not sure why people have been Googling it so much lately. The best guess I can offer is that the hat owes its renewed prominence to the limited imaginations of reporters sharing the news that Robert Downey Jr. will play the role of Sherlock Holmes in a future movie...."
867. Southworth, Bruce E. "Book Review--'The Pictorial History of Sherlock Holmes' by Michael Pointer." Baker Street Miscellanea, no. 70 (1992): 37-38.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
868. Spivak, Peter. "Letter to the Editor." Varieties of Ash 2, no. 1 (1994): 19-20.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
869. Sprague, Bill. "Sherlock Holmes : Deducing a Character." The New York Times, February 1, 2009: 4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "To the Editor: Re "Is That You, Sherlock?" by Sarah Lyall [Jan. 25]: I would have thought it impossible to write an extensive piece about a dramatization of Sherlock Holmes without mentioning Jeremy Brett. He appeared on the television series, but he certainly set the standard by which the portrayal of the character must be judged. The notion of Holmes as a 19th-century James Bond is disconcerting....Holmes is a respectable Victorian with values appropriate to his situation. He is certainly a respecter of British institutions but hardly a stodgy person; in fact he's rather eccentric, as Watson's accounts make clear. He appreciates classical music and is a good violinist. He's also skilled in the arts of self-defense and is proficient with firearms. If Sherlock Holmes morphs into Jack Bauer, we Baker Street Irregulars camp followers will be disappointed."
870. Stampe, Mia. "The Universal Holmes 'I hear of Sherlock everywhere' even in space." Shoso-In Bulletin 11, no. (2001): 76-85.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
871. Stinson, Regina. "A Canonical Number Conondrum." The Holmes & Watson Report 7, no. 6 (2004): 29-32.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
872. Stock, Randall. "Perfect Reproductions: Some Notes on Canonical Manuscripts." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 53, no. 2 (2003): 46-48.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
873. ———. "Rating the Canon." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 49, no. 4 (1999): 5-35.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
874. Sullivan, Greg. "Letter to the editor." The Holmes & Watson Report 2, no. 4 (1998): 29-32.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

875. ———. "Letters to the Editor." The Holmes & Watson Report 4, no. 5 (2000): 25-28.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
876. Sussman, Herbert L. "Arthur Conan Doyle and the Meaning of Masculinity, and: Conrad and Masculinity (review)." Victorian Studies 44, no. 3 (2002): 536-539.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of Arthur Conan Doyle and the Meaning of Masculinity, by Diana Barsham; pp. viii + 312. Aldershot and Brookfield, VT: Ashgate, 2000, GBP49.50, $69.95; and Conrad and Masculinity, by Andrew Michael Roberts; pp. xi + 250. Basingstoke and New York: Palgrave, 2001, GBP45.00, $55.00. Multiple references to Doyle and Holmes.
877. Sveum, Richard J. "100 Years Ago." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 3, no. 3 (1999): 2.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on John Kendrick Bangs, his connections with Doyle, and some of his writings from 1899. These include The Dreamers, A Club and "Sherlock Holmes Again" in Harpers Weekly.
878. Taube, Michael. "CSI: Sherlock Holmes?" Christian Science Monitor, Apr 11, 2006: 14.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of The Science of Sherlock Holmes by E.J. Wagner. John Wiley & Sons, 244 pp., $24.95.
879. Tayler, Christopher. "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes Christopher Tayler detects plot holes, red herrings and thin jokes." The Sunday Telegraph (London), January 1, 2006: 38.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of Les Klinger's New Annotated Sherlock Holmes and Nick Rennison's biography of Holmes. "...But unless you're a fully paid-up member of the Baker Street Irregulars, both of these books reveal more about the spending power of the subculture they're aimed at than they do about Watson, Holmes and their creator. Klinger's high-end three-volume edition will set you back at least 70 quid, which, judiciously spent, could pay for the authoritative, non-Sherlockian Oxford paperbacks as well as a second-hand copy of Stevenson's The Suicide Club - which has an even better Mormon interlude than A Study in Scarlet - and maybe a copy of Raffles, The Amateur Cracksman."
880. Thomson, Ian. "The detective's dark side Ian Thomson delights in Conan Doyle's masterpiece, 'The Hound of the Baskervilles'." The Daily Telegraph (London), December 30, 2006: 23.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // An appreciation for the novel and other observations on Doyle and Holmes. "...Doyle's troubled relationship with his creation was fraught with dark, father-son undercurrents, and was far from elementary. What other fictional detective has become so charmingly real to his readers as the occupant of 221b Baker Street? The revival of Sherlock Holmes is a treat. Meanwhile, a spectral bogey hound continues to prowl the Baskerville moors, reappearing to each new generation of Holmes readers as the Fido from hell."
881. Tinsley, Stan, and Debbie Tinsley. "Celebration of Death in Victorian Times." The Camden House Journal 23, no. 10 (2001): 2-5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
882. Tobin, Vera. "Ways of reading Sherlock Holmes: the entrenchment of discourse blends." Language & Literature 15, no. 1 (2006): 73-90.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Current work on conceptual integration and literary texts often features detailed analysis of a single reading of a text in terms of the conceptual integration networks involved in constructing that interpretation. However, a single linguistic form can inspire manifold readings. This article takes a historical view of the conceptual blends involved in a range of different literary interpretations generated by different groups of readers of a single set of texts, the Sherlock Holmes detective stories by Arthur Conan Doyle. First, it examines the case of the numerous and diverse historical readers who took these fictional texts to be non-fiction, and how their conceptions mirror and diverge from the ways readers become immersed in texts they know to be fiction. This is followed by an analysis of the early 'Sherlockian' essays, criticism operating under the pretense of a historical Holmes and a historical Watson who recorded his adventures with varying accuracy. In the Sherlockian tradition, something very like the naïve believer stance independently emerges from this playful and parodic novel blend. The history of this stance among its practitioners is then shown to be an example of the routinization of a blend within a discourse community. These complex discourse blends turn out to have much the same capacity for entrenchment and semantic change as any grammatical construction. [Abstract from author]

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

883. Torrese, Dante M. "Letter to the Editor." The Holmes & Watson Report 2, no. 3 (1998): 18-19.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
884. Trelford, Donald. "Sport: Plot thickens in Watson mystery." The Daily Telegraph (London), Dec 8, 1994: 32.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Blackheath. James C. Powell, of Maidenhead, has even sent me a photograph of "[Watson]'s" Blackheath shirt hanging, among other memorabilia, in the Holmes; Another reader makes a point that helps to explain my initial confusion. The key reference, it may be recalled, is in Conan Doyle's story, The Sussex Vampire, where "Big Bob Ferguson, the finest threequarter Richmond ever had", says he once threw Watson "over the ropes into the crowd at the old Deer Park".; Wisden wrote of [William Mycroft], a left-armer: "Possessing great physical strength, he combined pace and spin in a remarkable degree." However, it added darkly, "his fast yorker, with which he used to get so many wickets, was open to serious question on the point of fairness". Would Conan Doyle have based [Holmes]'s brother on a cheat?
885. Trice, Roberta. "Space and crime." Abitare, no. 355 (1996): 190-193.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The writer discusses the correspondence between architectural and mental space in crime novels. She argues that spatial symmetries and typological configurations create suspense through such elements as false mirrors and listening panels. She goes on to demonstrate examples of this in the work of such writers as Agatha Christie and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle.
886. Tuan, Yi-fu. "The landscapes of Sherlock Holmes." Journal of Geography 84, no. (1985): 56-60.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
887. Tugend, Alina. "What was behind Sherlock Holmes's sleuthing? Elementary!" Chronicle of Higher Education 42, no. 37 (1996): A47.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Profiles a course in London, England on the science in Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes stories. The course as part of the Missouri London Program, a study-abroad program sponsored by 10 Missouri colleges; The scientific interest of Holmes, Conan Doyle's fictional detective; Study of stories including 'Sign of Four' and 'Study in Scarlet'; James O'Brien, the course's teacher; Students' response.
888. Uno studio in, Holmes. "'A week later I found myself in Florence.'" Shoso-In Bulletin 10, no. (2000): 130-132.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
889. Upton, Jean. "Review--'The Oxford Sherlock Holmes: The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes' edited with an introduction by Richard Lancelyn Green." The Ritual, no. 12 (1993): 49-52.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
890. van der Linde, Gerhard. "Shaped in the image of reason." Diogenes (Blackwell Publishing Limited) 44, no. 2 (1996): 155.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Looks at the fictional [sic] literary character Sherlock Holmes, focusing on how he used cognitive rationality as a tool for problem solving. Reference to other characters in novels about Holmes; Details on the book 'The Sign of Four,' by Arthur Conan Doyle.
891. Vanderburgh, George A. "Bookshelf: The Memoirs of Sherlock Holmes and The Case Book of Sherlock Holmes." Canadian Holmes 17, no. 4 (1994): 31-32.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of "The Memoirs of Sherlock Holmes" and "The Case Book of Sherlock Holmes" from The Oxford Sherlock Holmes.
892. Weingarten, Marc. "Case of the Lawyer With a Sherlock Holmes Bent." The New York Times, December 30, 2004: E1.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Portrait of Klinger and review of his "New Annotated Sherlock Holmes." "Leslie S. Klinger is not one of those Sherlock Holmes obsessives who feel compelled to actually live as if they were distant relatives of the fictional detective. He doesn't greet visitors wearing a deerstalker hat and an Inverness cape, and his cheerful contemporary home in Malibu, Calif., is a far cry from the Victorian lodging house at 221B Baker Street where Holmes and his trusty sidekick, Dr. John Watson, lived in London. But as Holmes himself could attest, first impressions can be deceiving. Step into Mr. Klinger's home office and you will find the evidence of his abiding passion: Thousands of books about one of the world's most famous crime busters. This is the raw material for Mr. Klinger's project 'The New Annotated Sherlock Holmes,' a two-volume, 10-pound collection of all 56 Holmes short stories by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, complete with Mr. Klinger's exhaustive footnotes...."

893. ———. "A lawyer's Sherlockian pursuit." The International Herald Tribune, January 14, 2005: 9.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Leslie Klinger is not one of those Sherlock Holmes obsessives who feel compelled to actually live as if they were distant relatives of the fictional detective. He doesn't greet visitors wearing a deerstalker hat and an Inverness cape, and his cheerful contemporary home in Malibu, California, is a far cry from the Victorian lodging house at 221B Baker St. where Holmes and his trusty sidekick, Dr. John Watson, lived in London. But as Holmes himself could attest, first impressions can be deceiving. Step into Klinger's home office and you will find the evidence of his abiding passion: Thousands of books about one of the world's most famous crime busters. This is the raw material for Klinger's project 'The New Annotated Sherlock Holmes,' a hefty two-volume collection of all 56 Holmes short stories by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, complete with Klinger's exhaustive footnotes...."
894. Weller, Philip. "All in the Eye of the Narrator (Some Considerations of Watsonian Impersonation)." Shoso-In Bulletin 8, no. (1998): 109-116.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
895. ———. "All in the Eye of the Narrator (Some Considerations of Watsonian Impersonation)." Shoso-In Bulletin 4, no. (1994): 41-46.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
896. Wells, David H. "Further gloom in the building societies' challenging new world." Management Accounting: Magazine for Chartered Management Accountants 72, no. 1: 28.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the plight of Abbey National and other building societies in Great Britain in the aftermath of the Building Societies Act of 1986. Continuation of mutuality and legal framework debate; Financial results and balance sheet changes; Contribution of the main activities; Development of newer activities. Includes passing references to Doyle and Holmes. "...In every year since the passing of the Building Societies Act 1986, Abbey National has been involved in some kinds of controversy. These included the fierce debate over its conversion to a public limited company, the fairness of allocation of free shares to members, the mystery of its 400,000 lost share certificates, the purchase of Scottish Mutual Assurance and its continuing links with Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's fictitious Sherlock Holmes....Visitors to the fictitious home of Sherlock Holmes at 221b Baker Street, London--and the postmen delivering mail to the sleuth--would have been further mystified. Abbey National's Head Office is at 215-229 Baker Street and it has had many secretaries dealing with his correspondence for over 50 years. However, a new museum for the detective has opened at 239 Baker Street. It is called 221b Baker Street and is claimed to fit the description of Holmes's house...."
897. Wheatcroft, Geoffrey. "The New Annotated Sherlock Holmes." Wall Street Journal - Eastern Edition 2005: P10.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book "The New Annotated Sherlock Holmes," edited by Leslie S. Klinger.
898. Wheen, Francis. "Francis Wheen Reveals the Elementary Truth Behind the Capture of the Jackal." The Observer, September 4, 1994: 4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A short, humorous piece on various borrowings and literary connections related to Holmes, taking as a starting point a quotation from a recent news account: "A French academic has just published a merciless study of Sherlock Holmes, exposing the great sleuth's educational, social and politically

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- incorrect failings, which is bound to cause deep offence among Holmes's touchy idolisers." (The Guardian)
899. White, Kathryn. "Review--'Baker Street and Beyond: Essays on Sherlock Holmes' by Lord Donegall." The Ritual, no. 13 (1994): 46-47.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
900. ———. "Review--'Myth and Modern Man in Sherlock Holmes: Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and the Uses of Nostalgia' by David S. Payne." The Musgrave Papers, no. 6 (1993): 111-113.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
901. ———. "Review--'The Before-Breakfast Pipe' by David Hammer." The Musgrave Papers, no. 8 (1995): 118-119.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
902. ———. "Review--'The Maker of the Omnibus: The Lives of English Writers Compared' by Jack Hodges." The Ritual, no. 11 (1993): 50-51.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
903. ———. "Review--'The Oxford Sherlock Holmes: The Memoirs of Sherlock Holmes' edited with an introduction by Christopher Roden." The Ritual, no. 12 (1993): 53-55.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
904. ———. "Review--'The Sherlock Holmes Encyclopaedia' by Matthew E. Bunson." The Ritual, no. 15 (1995): 50-51.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
905. Whitlam, Carol M. "Review--'I Remember the Date Very Well: a chronology of the Sherlock Holmes stories' by John Hall." The Ritual, no. 12 (1993): 35-36.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
906. Whittington-Egan, Richard. "Living with and Annotating Sherlock Holmes." Contemporary Review 286, no. 1669 (2005): 95-101.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article focuses on a fictitious character [sic], Sherlock Homes, with reference to the book "The New Annotated Sherlock Holmes," edited with a foreword and notes by Leslie S. Klinger. The book consists of two volumes and it is a collection of 56 short stories. The original edition of this books was edited by William S. Baring-Gould. In the original (1968) edition, Baring-Gould elected to go nap on his own personal and controversial concept of the chronology of the stories, Klinger decided to relegate all such data to a most useful Chronological Table at the end of Volume One. Something in the region of two thousand annotations are scattered broadcast throughout the book, lifting the curtain on the modes, manners and events of Victorian England, and ventilating, and where necessary explaining, Sherlockian theoretical constructs past and present.
907. Wilkins, Alasdair. "22 cases of Sherlock Holmes in science fiction." no. (2009).
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // He may already be the most iconic character in detective fiction, but who says Sherlock Holmes doesn't have a place in science fiction as well? We explore some of the Victorian sleuth's most fantastic adventures.
908. Wood, Peter H., and Trevor S. Raymond. "Bookshelf." Canadian Holmes 21, no. 4 (1998): 31-33.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews of Absolute Discretion, A Volta de Sherlock Holmes (The Return of Sherlock Holmes) and O Xango de Baker Street (A Samba for Sherlock)
909. Woods, Carol P. "Letter to the Editor ('Maiwand')." Shoso-In Bulletin 9, no. (1999): 195.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
910. Yamamae, Yuzuru. "A Brief History and Current Scene of Mystery Novels in Japan...and Sherlock Holmes."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Shoso-In Bulletin 8, no. (1998): 170-172.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

911. You, Wenjia. "When Sherlock Holmes and Freud meet: Psychoanalysis and the mystery story." PsyArt: An Online Journal for the Psychological Study of the Arts Electronic, no. 980715 (1998).

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Posted date: September 7, 1998. "Many scholars mention the use of Freudian psychology in literary works, but very few scrutinize the interplay between the literary and the psychological texts involved. This paper explores how the mystery story can incorporate psychoanalysis into its essential components, such as the crime, the clues, and the detective. I set up a theoretical framework in which the key elements of the mystery story may appropriate psychoanalysis, and I generalize how psychoanalysis may influence the mystery story as a subgenre. Then I offer 2 case studies of Marnie and The Seven-Per-Cent Solution, which both use a large amount of psychoanalysis. I examine how these two works incorporate psychoanalysis and measure their formal qualities against my theoretical conjectures." [Abstract from author]

912. Zaino, Nick A., III. "Quick Picks." The Boston Globe, October 17, 2007: SID3.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Long before there was 'CSI' or 'Law & Order,' readers were engrossed in the world of forensics through Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes novels and short stories. Holmes's exploits were influential in Victorian Era criminalistics, as E.J. Wagner explains in his Edgar award-winning book 'The Science of Sherlock Holmes.' Wagner will be on hand tonight at 7 to give a lecture called 'From the Crime Scene to the Courtroom - Superstition, Science, & Sherlock Holmes' in the lobby of the Museum of Science. He'll sign his book afterward...."

913. Zaldin, Donald. "The Bicycle in the Canon and its Revolutionary Effect on 19th Century Culture." Canadian Holmes 23, no. 1 (1999): 9-20.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

914. ———. "The Sign of the Five: Tragedy in Sibling relationships in and out of the Canon." Canadian Holmes 27, no. 4 (2004): 19-29.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

06B WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- TALES (32)

915. "The Casebook of Sherlock Holmes Volume 2." Publishers Weekly 255, no. 21 (2008): 59-59.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "The Casebook of Sherlock Holmes," Volume 2, by Arthur Conan Doyle. Read by David Timson. Naxos AudioBooks, unabridged, four CDs, 5.5 hrs., $28.98 ISBN 978-962-634-862-8. "After 10 years, 57 stories, four novels and 60 CDs, David Timson's monumental task of recording every word of Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes stories for Naxos concludes. Timson even contributes a Holmes-Watson adventure of his own, 'The Wonderful Toy.' Timson reads energetically, throwing himself into the stories' spirit of elegant deduction and head-long adventure. The dulcet tones of Timson's Watson are frequently interrupted by a panoply of other voices: Cockney ladies of the night, harried businessmen and, of course, the clipped public school staccato of Holmes himself."

916. "The New Annotated Sherlock Holmes: The Novels." Publishers Weekly 252, no. 35 (2005): 37.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book "The New Annotated Sherlock Holmes: The Novels," by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, edited by Leslie S. Klinger.

917. Arnold, Sue. "Review: Audio: Sue Arnold's Choice: The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes." The Guardian (London), October 4, 2008: 9.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of the audiobook The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes: Six Unabridged Stories, Vol 1, by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, read by Edward Hardwicke. (7hrs, CSA Word, GBP19.99)

918. Baker, Simon. "The Character Who Refused to Die." Spectator 299, no. 9254/9255 (2005): 64-64.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews books "The New Annotated Sherlock Holmes, Volume III: The

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- Novels," by Arthur Conan Doyle and "Sherlock Holmes: The Unauthorized Biography," by Nick Rennison.
919. Baskin, Barbara. "Media: Audiobooks." Booklist 97, no. 2 (2000): 263.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews two audio books written by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. 'The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes II'; 'The Case Book of Sherlock Holmes.'
920. Beam, Thelma. "Bookshelf: The Return of Sherlock Holmes." Canadian Holmes 17, no. 4 (1994): 32-33.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews "The Return of Sherlock Holmes" from The Oxford Sherlock Holmes.
921. Bollen, Rebecca. "The New Annotated Sherlock Holmes. 2 vols. (Book)." Library Journal 129, no. 19 (2004): 60-60.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book "The New Annotated Sherlock Holmes," by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle.
922. Burns, Ann, and Theresa Connors. "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes VI (Book)." Library Journal 129, no. 1 (2004): 183-183.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the audiobook "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes VI," by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle.
923. Chapman, Paul M. "Review--'The Sherlock Holmes Reference Library: The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes' by Leslie S. Klinger." The Ritual, no. 22 (1998): 71-72.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
924. ———. "Review--'The Sherlock Holmes Reference Library: The Memoirs of Sherlock Holmes' by Leslie S. Klinger." The Ritual, no. 25 (2000): 63-64.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
925. Coghill, Bob. "Bookshelf: His Last Bow." Canadian Holmes 17, no. 4 (1994): 34-36.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
926. Connors, Theresa. "Audio reviews." Library Journal 119, no. 17 (1994): 102.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the sound recording 'Memoirs of Sherlock Holmes. Volume 2: Four More Classic Stories,' by Arthur Conan Doyle, read by Clive Merrison, Michael Williamson, Peter Davison and others.
927. Connors, Theresa, and Mark Annichiarico. "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes." Library Journal 122, no. 3 (1997): 174-174.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the sound recording 'The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes,' volume 1, by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle.
928. Cox, Michael, and Nicholas Utechin. "Review--The Oxford Sherlock Holmes, The Case-book of Sherlock Holmes, edited with an introduction by W. W. Robson." The Ritual, no. 12 (1993): 66-67.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
929. Darlington, Frank, George A. Vanderburgh, Thelma Beam, Doug Wigglesworth, Bob Coghill, and Trevor S. Raymond. "'Bookshelf' Reviews of Oxford's The Sign of the Four, The Memoirs of Sherlock Holmes, The Case Book of Sherlock Holmes, The Return of Sherlock Holmes, The Valley of Fear, His Last Bow and The Books of Michael Harrison." Canadian Holmes 17, no. 4 (1994): 30-36.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
930. Davies, David Stuart. "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes--Another stab at them!" The Ritual, no. 18 (1996): 3-10.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

931. ———. "Review--'The Folio Society Sherlock Holmes Short Stories'." The Musgrave Papers, no. 6 (1993): 113-114.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
932. Feigelman, Jennifer. "Graphic Classics: Arthur Conan Doyle." School Library Journal 51, no. 11 (2005): 177-177.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book "Graphic Classics: Arthur Conan Doyle," vol. 2, edited by Tom Pomplun, illustrated by Rick Geary.
933. ———. "Graphic Novels." School Library Journal 51, no. 11 (2005): 177.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a review with a reference to Holmes and Doyle. Pomplun, Tom, ed. Graphic Classics: Arthur Conan Doyle. vol 2. 2nd ed. illus. by Rick Geary, et al. 144p. Eureka. 2005. pap. $11.95. ISBN 0-9746648-5-5. Gr 8 Up "Doyle's prose and poetry are brought to life in this exciting volume. It has some overlap from the first volume (Eureka, 2002), but also includes some truly outstanding new tales. In 'The Ghosts of Goresthorpe Grange,' a man believes that his house is occupied by spirits and seeks out the help of a medium. Ultimately, he is drugged and swindled, and the dreamlike style of the art reinforces this mood. In 'Two Great Brown-Pericord Motor,' two men create an invention and become fiercely jealous and protective of it, until disaster erupts. This volume also contains two Sherlock Holmes stories and thrilling tales of sea adventures. Though each one is illustrated by a different artist, the writing ties the collection together nicely. Unlike the earlier volume, this one utilizes a consistent comic format throughout. The artists have deftly captured the themes and moods of each piece in the black-and-white illustrations done in a wide range of styles and techniques. This assortment of tales may attract new readers to Doyle's work."
934. Goldsmith, Francisca, and Phyllis Levy Mandell. "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes IV." School Library Journal 47, no. 9 (2001): 76.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the audiobook 'The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes IV.'
935. Gray, Patrick. "The New Annotated Sherlock Holmes." Touchstone: A Journal of Mere Christianity 19, no. 1 (2006): 51-52.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book "The New Annotated Sherlock Holmes," written by Arthur Conan Doyle and edited by Leslie S. Klinger.
936. Green, Richard Lancelyn. "'The Return of Sherlock Holmes' Introduction." The Musgrave Papers, no. 13 (2000): 9-13.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
937. Hall, John. "The Date of the Case." The Musgrave Papers, no. 14 (2001): 62-64.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
938. ———. "Letter to the editor ('The many meanings of 'Study')." Shoso-In Bulletin 5, no. (1995): 144-145.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
939. ———. "Review--'The Oxford Sherlock Holmes: His Last Bow' edited with an introduction by Owen Dudley Edwards." The Ritual, no. 12 (1993): 63-65.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
940. Kean, Michael H. "Hare, Hounds and Horses." Shoso-In Bulletin 7, no. (1997): 168-169.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
941. Posner, Richard A. "CSI: Baker Street." New Republic 231, no. 15 (2004): 47-49.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book The New Annotated Sherlock Holmes: The Complete Short Stories, by Arthur Conan Doyle, edited by Leslie S. Klinger.
942. Roden, Barbara. "The Memoirs of Sherlock Holmes, Introduction." The Musgrave Papers, no. 11 (1998): 9-13.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

943. Rogers, Michael. "Audio reviews." Library Journal 123, no. 3 (1998): 183.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews books on audiotape, including The Memoirs of Sherlock Holmes, by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. 6 cassettes. 9 hrs. BDD Audio. 1997. ISBN 0-553-47954-7. $29.95
944. Scott, Whitney. "Adult books: Mystery." Booklist 94, no. 6 (1997): 547.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'The Mammoth Book of New Sherlock Holmes Adventures,' by Mike Ashley.
945. Sullivan, Greg. "Review--Sherlock Holmes' Strangest Cases by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle." The Holmes & Watson Report 6, no. 1 (2002): 29.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
946. Weller, Philip. "Barking Up the Wrong Yew Tree." Shoso-In Bulletin 9, no. (1999): 175-192.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

06B WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- TALES -- ABBEY GRANGE (3)

947. "Murder Short & Sweet." Kirkus Reviews 76, no. 18 (2008): 980-980.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "Murder Short & Sweet," edited by Paul D. Staudohar. "Arranged in no particular order, these 25, winnowed from an archive of thousands similarly gore-drenched, compose an anthology that had every chance to be better than it is....Stanley Ellin, Lawrence Block and Ellery Queen provide solid entries, but you've seen them all before. Also represented are those anthology warhorses Poe, Conan Doyle, Christie, Sayers and Dahl. No clinkers among them, of course, but their very inevitability gives the collection that unfortunate thrice-told feeling." The selected Doyle contribution is "The Adventure of Abbey Grange."
948. Booth, Matthew. "The Abbey Grange Vox populi, vox Dei." The Musgrave Papers, no. 13 (2000): 101-105.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
949. Lellenberg, Jon L. "Striking Close to Home: 'The Adventure of the Abbey Grange'." The Musgrave Papers, no. 7 (1994): 61-71.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

06B WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- TALES -- BERYL CORONET (3)

950. Hall, John. "Whatever Her Sins Are: A Study of Motive in 'the Beryl Coronet'." The Musgrave Papers, no. 9 (1996): 81-91.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
951. Holly, Raymond L. "The Missing Beryl." The Camden House Journal 22, no. 10 (2000): 2-3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
952. Singleton, Paul. "Gems from 'The Beryl Coronet'." The Holmes & Watson Report 7, no. 6 (2004): 4-7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

06B WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- TALES -- BLACK PETER (2)

953. Campbell, Patrick. "Death in the Coop? A quiz on 'The Adventure of Black Peter'." Canadian Holmes 30, no. 3 (2007): 49.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

954. Eustace, Grant. "Black Peter': A Tale From the Dark Side." The Musgrave Papers, no. 13 (2000): 51-55.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

06B WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- TALES -- BLANCHED SOLDIER(2)

955. Dale, Richard. "Sherlock Holmes O.H.M.S., The Blanched Soldier, and the Second Anglo-Boer War: The Case of the Post-Hiatus Hiatus." The Camden House Journal 19, no. 6 (1997): 2-4.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

956. Heifetz, Carl L. "Regarding the True Aetiology of the Skin-Lightening Syndrome in 'The Adventure of the Blanched Soldier'." The Holmes & Watson Report 1, no. 7 (1998): 42-48.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

06B WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- TALES -- BLUE CARBUNCLE (9)

957. "50 Years Ago." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 2, no. 4 (1998): 4.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Highlights the 1948 publication of The Adventure of the Blue Carbuncle by the Baker Street Irregulars.

958. "Arguments through the ages ; Conan Doyle: 'On the contrary, Watson, you can see everything'." Star Tribune (Minneapolis), Nov 4, 2002: 17.A.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Editor's note: Sir Arthur Conan Doyle (1859-1930), himself an amateur detective, is best known as the creator of the fictional consulting detective Sherlock Holmes and his associate, Dr. John Watson. Conan Doyle was so successful in constructing the character of Holmes that he came to be resented by fans who saw him as proof that their hero was mere fiction. Holmes, like Conan Doyle, was adept at deducing facts from seemingly inconsequential clues, a talent he demonstrated in such stories as 'The Adventure of the Blue Carbuncle,' excerpted here. In this passage, Holmes and Watson are discussing the identity of a man who, assaulted while carrying home a goose, fled the scene - leaving behind his hat and the goose."

959. Duke, Michael. "'Upon the Second Morning After Christmas'." Shoso-In Bulletin 12, no. (2002): 102-109.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

960. Hedberg, Lloyd R., Jr. "Musings Upon the Adventure of the Blue Carbuncle: Unmasking the Story Within the Story or Real Villains Revealed." Shoso-In Bulletin 13, no. (2003): 84-92, 118.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

961. Holly, Raymond L. "A Comparison of 'Blue Carbuncle' and 'Speckled Band'." The Camden House Journal 18, no. 1 (1996): 2-3.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

962. Hyder, William. "The Blue Carbuncle: Loose Ends and Moral Ambiguities." The Musgrave Papers, no. 9 (1996): 57-63.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

963. Scovil, Jeffrey A. "The mysterious garnet." Earth 3, no. 5 (1994): 64.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses various aspects of garnet. Coloration; Types; Mineral composition; Uses. Includes references to Doyle and Holmes. "Sherlock Holmes is at the top of his form in 'The Adventure of the Blue Carbuncle.' In the morning, while Holmes is still in his purple dressing gown, an acquaintance bursts in to announce that he has found a brilliant blue gem lodged in the crop of a Christmas goose. This isn't just any gem, either. It is the famous blue carbuncle recently stolen from the Countess of Morcar. Does this mystery daunt the unflappable sleuth? On the contrary, dear reader. By supertime, he has figured out who stole the gem and how the hapless goose came to swallow it and has even apprehended and pardoned the thief. Not bad for a few hours' work. Unfortunately, the keen Holmes and his creator Arthur Conan Doyle do overlook one important detail in the story. There is no such thing as a blue carbuncle. Carbuncle comes from a Latin word meaning "small glowing ember" and originally referred to any dark, fiery red stone. But by Victorian times, the word came to refer only to garnet. And while garnets do come in nearly every other color, they never occur in blue....It's unfortunate that nature has never made a purely blue carbuncle, but that's just the way the chemistry worked out. As Holmes himself might say, 'It's elemental, my dear Watson.'

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

964. Walker, Lynn E. "Irresolution and the Quest in 'The Blue Carbuncle'." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 53, no. 4 (2003): 29-32.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

965. Waterhouse, William C. "What Was the Blue Carbuncle?" Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 54, no. 4 (2004): 19-21.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

06B WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- TALES -- BOSCOMBE VALLEY MYSTERY (5)

966. Hall, John. "The Boscombe Valley Mystery." Shoso-In Bulletin 13, no. (2003): 14-16.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

967. Olding, Alan C. "Ballarat Revisited." Shoso-In Bulletin 8, no. (1998): 27-29.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

968. ———. "A Brief History of Ballarat." Shoso-In Bulletin 5, no. (1995): 12-18.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

969. Solberg, Andrew L. "The Importance of Petrarch and Meredith in 'The Boscombe Valley Mystery'." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 47, no. 4 (1997): 35-37.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

970. Utechin, Nicholas. "The Boscombe Valley Mystery." The Musgrave Papers, no. 9 (1996): 22-25.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

06B WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- TALES -- BRUCE-PARTINGTON PLANS (4)

971. Aiken, Bruce. "In Re Bruce-Partington Plans." Canadian Holmes 18, no. 3 (1995): 4-9.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

972. Fildes, Christopher. "Sherlock Holmes solves the intractable problem of the black hole in the Aldgate area." The Daily Telegraph (London), March 3, 2001: 32.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "It was Sherlock Holmes who first identified the black hole in the Aldgate area. By now it is engulfing ministers and mayors and money, but in his time it had already swallowed the Bruce-Partington plans for the Royal Navy's latest submarine....More recently the black hole in the Aldgate area has proved itself capable of reducing signals and services to anti-matter, much to the dread of passengers whose daily journeys take them, or are meant to take them, to the City. Desperately, London Underground has sought to blame this on the interaction of new equipment and old track...."

973. Kean, Michael H. "Who Was Bruce-Partington: A Work in Progress." Shoso-In Bulletin 6, no. (1996): 44-49.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

974. Smith, Samuel. "The Bruce-Partington Submarine: A Question of Historicity." The Camden House Journal 23, no. 4 (2001): 2-5.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

06B WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- TALES -- CARDBOARD BOX (3)

975. Gibson, Brian Neil. "Friends, Sherlockians, countrymen, lend me your ears. . . or Holmes, the Ripper and 'The Cardboard Box'." Canadian Holmes 19, no. 2 (1995): 7-10.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

976. Green, Richard Lancelyn. "The Adventure of the Cardboard Box." The Musgrave Papers, no. 6 (1993): 41-47.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

977. Metress, Christopher. "Thinking the Unthinkable: Reopening Conan Doyle's 'Cardboard Box.'" Midwest Quarterly 42, no. 2 (2001): 183.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Explores how the superficiality of reason is exposed in 'The Cardboard Box,' a Sherlock Holmes detective story by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. Justification made by Doyle about the suppression of 'The Cardboard Box' tale; Core purpose of Doyle's series of Holmes stories; Similarities between the tale's characters, Holmes and Jim Browner.

06B WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- TALES -- CASE OF IDENTITY (4)

978. Davies, David Stuart. "A Case of Infidelity: Exposing 'A Case of Identity'." The Musgrave Papers, no. 9 (1996): 18-21.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

979. Dorn, William S. "When Was the Gasfitters' Ball?" Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 53, no. 1 (2003): 41-43.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

980. Kestner, Joseph A. "'Real' men: Construction of masculinity in the Sherlock Holmes narratives." Studies in the Literary Imagination 29, no. 1 (1996): 73.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents an analysis of several Sherlock Holmes stories by Arthur Conan Doyle, and his attempt to construct masculinity. Discussion of several of the Holmes narratives about art; Excerpts from 'Copper Beeches,' 'The Empty House' and 'A Case of Identity'; Construction of masculinity; Views on realism.

981. Monahan, Eric. "Thoughts on The Case of Identity." Shoso-In Bulletin 6, no. (1996): 58-59.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

06B WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- TALES -- CHARLES AUGUSTUS MILVERTON (5)

982. Chapman, Paul M. "The Original Charles Augustus." The Ritual, no. 20 (1997): 27-30.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

983. Linsenmeyer, John. "Why Charles Augustus Milverton Should Be Canonized and Not Cannon-Balled." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 50, no. 1 (2000): 36-40.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

984. Macnee, Angela. "Charles Augustus Milverton: The Body in the Study." The Musgrave Papers, no. 13 (2000): 69-71.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
985. Shaw, John Bennett. "A Quiz on the Adventure of Charles Augustus Milverton." Canadian Holmes 18, no. 3 (1995): 46-47.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
986. ———. "A Quiz on the Adventure of Charles Augustus Milverton." Canadian Holmes 18, no. 2 (1994): 31.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

06B WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- TALES -- COPPER BEECHES (5)

987. Chapman, Paul M. "The Woman in Electric Blue, 'The Adventure of the Copper Beeches,' the Sensation Tradition and Wilkie Collins." The Musgrave Papers, no. 9 (1996): 93-101.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
988. Keefauver, Brad. "The Mystery of Violet Hunter." Shoso-In Bulletin 7, no. (1997): 13-15.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
989. Kellog, Richard. "Whatever Happened to Edward Rucastle?" Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 55, no. 1 (2005): 54-56.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
990. Kestner, Joseph A. "'Real' men: Construction of masculinity in the Sherlock Holmes narratives." Studies in the Literary Imagination 29, no. 1 (1996): 73.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents an analysis of several Sherlock Holmes stories by Arthur Conan Doyle, and his attempt to construct masculinity. Discussion of several of the Holmes narratives about art; Excerpts from 'Copper Beeches,' 'The Empty House' and 'A Case of Identity'; Construction of masculinity; Views on realism.
991. Stinson, Regina. "Shades of Violet." The Holmes & Watson Report 7, no. 4 (2003): 14-15.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Written as Violet Hunter

06B WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- TALES -- CREEPING MAN (2)

992. Bogomoletz, Wladimir V. "The Creeping Man: Some Canonical and Medical Aspects." The Musgrave Papers, no. 12 (1999): 68-76.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
993. Holmes, Bruce. "Sherlock Holmes Predicted AIDS." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 1 (1994): 17-19.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A discussion of The Adventure of the Creeping Man and Holmes observations on Professor Presbury's injections of monkey serum.

06B WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- TALES -- CROOKED MAN (3)

994. Chapman, Paul M. "'The Crooked Man': The Depths of Deception." The Musgrave Papers, no. 11 (1998): 71-77.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

995. Crelling, Jack. "Soldiers in The Crooked Man." The Camden House Journal 28, no. 4 (2006): 2-3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

996. Healey, Tim. "The Crooked Man Re-visited." The Ritual, no. 24 (1999): 10-15.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

06B WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- TALES -- DANCING MEN (3)

997. Smith, Samuel. "The Source of the Dancing Men." The Camden House Journal 23, no. 11 (2001): 2-5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
998. Sugiyama, Shigeru. "Lo, Here Lie Calves! The First 'Dancing Men' Message." Shoso-In Bulletin 4, no. (1994): 74-75.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
999. Upton, Jean, and Roger Johnson. "'The Dancing Men': The Emigration of Elsie or What's a Nice Kid Like You Doing in a Place Like This?" The Musgrave Papers, no. 13 (2000): 37-42.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

06B WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- TALES -- DEVIL'S FOOT (6)

1000. "Relations of Literature and Science, 1991-1992." Configurations 2, no. 2 (1994): 373-431.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes references to Doyle and Holmes. Roden, A. E., et al. "Humanism and Values in the Medical Short Stories of Arthur Conan Doyle." South Med J 85 (May 1992): 528-537; Westmoreland, B.F. "Arthur Conan Doyle, Joseph Bell, and Sherlock Holmes: A Neurologic Connection." Arch Neurol 48 (1991): 325-329.; Oderwald, A. K. "The Physician and Sherlock Holmes." J R Soc Med 84 (1991): 151-152; Roszell, Calvert. "The Devil's Foot and the Dweller at the Threshold." BSJ 41 (1991): 100-103.
1001. King, Linda. "Letter to the Editor (The Location of DEVI)." The Nezire Zanmai International 2, no. (1992): 90-91.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1002. Lithner, Klas. "The Devil's Foot and Hanoi Shan." Shoso-In Bulletin 6, no. (1996): 50-52.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1003. ———. "Dr. Sterndale's Brothers." Shoso-In Bulletin 5, no. (1995): 43-46.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1004. Monahan, Eric. "Redruth Revisited." Shoso-In Bulletin 10, no. (2000): 133-137.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1005. Tinning, Herbert P. "A Devilish Exegesis, Part V." The Nezire Zanmai International 2, no. (1992): 73-75.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

06B WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- TALES -- DYING DETECTIVE (4)

1006. Harmidarow, Walter, Doug Wrigglesworth, and Trevor S. Raymond. "'Bookshelf': Reviews of The Scroll of the Dead, The Case Files of Sherlock Holmes: The Dying Detective and Waterloo: a Case-Book on Sir Arthur

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- Conan Doyle's Historical Play." Canadian Holmes 22, no. 2 (1998): 42-44.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1007. Richards, Jeffrey. "Review--'The Case Files of Sherlock Holmes: The Dying Detective' edited by Christopher and Barbara Roden." The Ritual, no. 22 (1998): 68-70.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1008. Sodeman, William A., Jr. "Sherlock Holmes and tropical medicine: A centennial appraisal." American Journal of Tropical Medicine & Hygiene 50, no. 1 (1994): 99-101.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Sir Arthur Conan Doyle incorporated an unidentified tropical disease as a murder weapon in the Sherlock Holmes story, "The Dying Detective," written in 1913. Documentary and circumstantial evidence suggests that the disease mentioned was melioidosis. The description of the newly identified disease occurred shortly before Doyle's death. Doyle's other works at the time reflect a consistent interest in tropical disease.
1009. Speck, Gordon R. "A Note on Domestic Staples in 'The Dying Detective'." The Camden House Journal 17, no. 2 (1995): 2-3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
- 06B WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- TALES -- EMPTY HOUSE (8)
1010. Felix, Faerthen. "The Hidden Accomplice in 'The Empty House'." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 53, no. 1 (2003): 22-24.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1011. Fell, Christine. "Review--'I looked in at Mecca...' Musgrave Monograph Number Four' by Anne Jordan." The Ritual, no. 12 (1993): 40-41.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1012. Hall, John. "'The Empty House', All London was Interested." The Musgrave Papers, no. 13 (2000): 15-29.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1013. Kestner, Joseph A. "'Real' men: Construction of masculinity in the Sherlock Holmes narratives." Studies in the Literary Imagination 29, no. 1 (1996): 73.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents an analysis of several Sherlock Holmes stories by Arthur Conan Doyle, and his attempt to construct masculinity. Discussion of several of the Holmes narratives about art; Excerpts from 'Copper Beeches,' 'The Empty House' and 'A Case of Identity'; Construction of masculinity; Views on realism.
1014. Lithner, Klas. "A Garroter by Trade." Shoso-In Bulletin 4, no. (1994): 119-123.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1015. Merrell, David W. "An 'Unwonted Tidiness': Reichenbach Revealed." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 52, no. 2 (2002): 14-22.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1016. Monahan, Eric. "Lhasa at the Turn of the Century." Shoso-In Bulletin 6, no. (1996): 33-34.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1017. Solberg, Andrew L. "What Were Catullus and the Origin of Tree Worship Doing in the Empty House?" Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 45, no. 1 (1995): 18-23.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

06B WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- TALES -- ENGINEER'S THUMB (3)

1018. Batail, Jacques. "The Engineer's Thumb or Sherlock Holmes on the trail of 'the uncanny.'" International Journal of Psycho-Analysis 78, no. 4 (1997): 801-812.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Freud identified 'primal phantasies' (life in the womb, 'primal scene,' seduction, castration). It is argued that 'The Engineer's Thumb,' a short story from The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes, draws its uncanniness from the fact that it is underpinned by all the primal phantasies described by Freud. 'The Engineer's Thumb' therefore illustrates what analytical interpretation can contribute to the understanding of certain literary works..... In addition, in this short story, Conan Doyle, by setting up a 'talking cure,' anticipates the creation of psychoanalysis and highlights in a striking way certain aspects of what was to become psychoanalytical treatment."
1019. Eustace, Grant. "The Engineer's Thumb." The Musgrave Papers, no. 9 (1996): 69-73.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1020. Olding, Alan C. "The Madness of Colonel Warburton (The Engineer's Thumb)." The Nezire Zanmai International 2, no. (1992): 38-42.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

06B WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- TALES -- FINAL PROBLEM (8)

1021. "Travel: Grand Tour; Holmes falls for Moriarty (literally)." Independent on Sunday (London), May 5, 2002: 24.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Great writers and their adventures in Literature. This week, Arthur Conan Doyle kills off his hero....Arthur Conan Doyle, below, later resurrected his most famous character after protests from fans. Includes a brief biographical sketch of Doyle, an excerpt from "The Final Problem" and tourist information on London and tours to Switzerland.
1022. Campbell, Patty. "The young adult perplex: visiting the locale of The Final Problem." Wilson Library Bulletin 62, no. (1987): 66-67.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1023. Davies, David Stuart. "'The Final Problem': Time With Watson." The Musgrave Papers, no. 11 (1998): 103-107.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1024. Geisser, Markus. "The Death of Sherlock Holmes, or the final destination of the Final Problem Reconsidered." Shoso-In Bulletin 6, no. (1996): 129-133.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1025. Kehoe, John. "The Case of the Murderous Author." Biography 4, no. 5 (2000): 114.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Focuses on the reasons for the attempts of author Arthur Conan Doyle to kill his fictitious character [sic], Sherlock Holmes. Background of the character's creation and development; Public outcry over the publication of the book 'The Final Problem,' which related Holmes' death."
1026. Meckley, Philip S. "'No Possible Conclusion Could Be More Congenial Than This': Soteriology and Death in 'The Final Problem'." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 49, no. 3 (1999): 30-34.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1027. Meer, Michael A. "'In the Journal de Geneve upon May 6th, 1891': The very final problem?" Shoso-In Bulletin 9, no. (1999): 118-122.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

1028. Woods, Carol P. "The Final Final Problem." Shoso-In Bulletin 7, no. (1997): 188-190.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

06B WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- TALES -- FIVE ORANGE PIPS (7)

1029. Edwards, Owen Dudley. "The Five Orange Pips." The Musgrave Papers, no. 9 (1996): 27-45.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1030. Ewing, Geoff. "The Relationships Between 'Silver Blaze' and 'The Five Orange Pips'." Canadian Holmes 29, no. 1 (2005): 12-13.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1031. Hall, John. "Pips, pearls and scandal (Notes on the dates of FIVE, SCAN and SIGN)." Shoso-In Bulletin 3, no. (1993): 35-39.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1032. Hirayama, Yuichi. "The Idle Killers of the KKK." Shoso-In Bulletin 12, no. (2002): 95-97.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1033. Hirayama, Yuichi, and John Hall. "Questions on 'The Five Orange Pips'." Shoso-In Bulletin 13, no. (2003): 71-74.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1034. Klinger, Leslie S. "The Dating of The Five Orange Pips." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 45, no. 2 (1995): 70-79.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1035. Winer, Lise. "The Five Orange Pips: A Case of Codes." The Camden House Journal 16, no. 12 (1994): 2-3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

06B WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- TALES -- GLORIA SCOTT (3)

1036. Crelling, Jack. "The Nautical Holmes -- Some Notes of The Adventure of the Gloria Scott." The Camden House Journal 25, no. 6 (2003): 2-5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1037. Klinger, Leslie S. "The Mystery of the 'Gloria Scott'." Passengers' Log 1, no. 1 (1997): 9-10.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1038. Monty, W. Scott, II. "'The Gloria Scott': What It Means to Me, or Don't Knox It 'Till You've Tried It." The Musgrave Papers, no. 11 (1998): 49-55.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

06B WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- TALES -- GOLDEN PINCE-NEZ (4)

1039. Bogomoletz, Wladimir V. "A Russian Golden Pince-Nez: Sergius, Anna, Alexis and the others." Shoso-In Bulletin 11, no. (2001): 138-151.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1040. Chapman, Paul M. "'The Golden Pince-Nez' Romantics and Revolutionists." The Musgrave Papers, no. 13

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

(2000): 89-95.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

1041. Silverstein, Albert. "Eros and Death: The True Meaning of the Golden Pince-Nez." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 47, no. 2 (1997): 37-44.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

1042. Speck, Gordon R. "Through the Golden Pince-nez." The Camden House Journal 22, no. 11 (2000): 2-3.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

06B WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- TALES -- GREEK INTERPRETER (4)

1043. Meyer, Charles A. "An Investigation into the Greek Interpreter." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 55, no. 1 (2005): 43-45.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

1044. Raymond, Trevor S. "The Greek Interpreter: A sort of an introduction." Canadian Holmes 30, no. 1 (2006): 51-55.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

1045. Rice, Susan. "'The Greek Interpreter': Wag the Dog in the Night-time." The Musgrave Papers, no. 11 (1998): 85-91.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

1046. Skinion, Cathrine, and John Skinion. "Sociological Implications of Male Groupings as Exemplified in 'The Greek Interpreter'." The Camden House Journal 15, no. 11 (1993): 2-3.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

06B WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- TALES -- HIS LAST BOW (8)

1047. Boot, William. "The shop that could not Foyle Holmes." Bookseller, no. 5086 (2003): 19.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article presents the portion of story omitted from Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's final volume of Sherlock Holmes stories, 'His Last Bow.'

1048. Brady, Michael J. "The Irish Civil War of 1914 In reference to His Last Bow." Shoso-In Bulletin 7, no. (1997): 39-44.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

1049. Burns, Ann, and Theresa Connors. "His Last Bow." Library Journal 125, no. 8 (2000): 168.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the audio tape 'His Last Bow,' by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle.

1050. Cochran, William R. "Unveiling the Veiled Author of 'His Last Bow'." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 54, no. 4 (2004): 28-34.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

1051. ———. "When the World Went All Awry: A Brief Discussion of LAST." The Camden House Journal 19, no. 11 (1997): 2-3.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

1052. Gopnik, Adam. "The Big One." New Yorker 80, no. 23 (2004): 78-85.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews books about world wars. The Guns of August, by Barbara Tuchman;

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Europe's Last Summer, by David Fromkin; Cataclysm: The First World War as Political Tragedy, by David Stevenson. Includes a reference to Holmes. "...It was common in the past century to see the war as a blunder into which the masses were herded like sheep while the poets and philosophers grieved in vain. The new histories suggest that the war was welcomed in 1914, and particularly by the literate classes, as a necessary act of hygiene, a chance to restore seriousness of purpose after the two trivial decades of the Edwardian Belle Epoque. The bourgeois atomization of society--with its pursuit of private pleasures at the expense of common cause, its celebration of goods at the expense of honor--would be repaired by a unifying new national purpose. Chesterton and Sherlock Holmes, in different ways, recapture the mood of dissatisfaction with the bourgeois, the decadent, the trifling, and the petty. (In 'His Last Bow,' Holmes's last adventure, which is set in the summer of 1914, Holmes says to Watson, 'It will be cold and bitter, Watson, and a good many of us may wither before its blast. But it's God's own wind none the less, and a cleaner, better, stronger land will lie in the sunshine when the storm has cleared.') These were not words forced on a pliant population; they were words rising from a dynamic ideology. Even Thomas Mann used the vocabulary sympathetically: war was a moral necessity, 'both a purging and a liberation.' In England, particularly, any vestiges of the era of Wilde would be swept away at last, and the reign of Kipling secured...."

1053. Narita, Kei-ichi. "Identifying the Author of 'His Last Bow': Toward a Computational Analysis of the Canon." Shoso-In Bulletin 3, no. (1993): 80-96.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

1054. Olding, Alan C. "'All That the Good Zeppelin Promises Us' Baron von Herling -- His Last Bow." Shoso-In Bulletin 6, no. (1996): 118-121.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

06B WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- TALES -- HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES (97)

1055. "Campus Round-Up." Times Higher Education, 11/20, 2008: 12-13.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This section offers news briefs on issues related to higher education in Great Britain as of November 2008....Third-year publishing students at Napier University in Edinburgh, England has republished a new edition of Arthur Conan Doyle's novel 'The Hound of the Baskervilles'...."
1056. "Fall 2008 Hardcovers." Publishers Weekly 255, no. 26 (2008): 40-121.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews several books including one from Bloomsbury USA--Sherlock Holmes Was Wrong: Reopening the Case of the Hound of the Baskervilles (Nov., $20) by Pierre Bayard "playfully recreates the classic detective story." 50,000 first printing.
1057. "Holmes at his very best in dark tale of a hound from hell." Daily Mail (London), February 20, 2004: 56.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...At the beginning of his investigative career, the denizens of Scotland Yard may have been sceptical. Not any more. 'I saw at once from the reverential way in which Lestrade gazed at my companion that he had learned a great deal since the days when they had first worked together.' In the real world there never has been an amateur detective whose brilliance leaves policemen in a state of perpetual bafflement. Conan Doyle invented the species. Holmes defined the character. A Study in Scarlet defined the genre and The Hound of the Baskervilles developed it to perfection."
1058. "L'Affaire du chien des Baskerville." World Literature Today 82, no. 3 (2008): 73-74.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A review by Warren Motte, University of Colorado, of Pierre Bayard. L'Affaire du chien des Baskerville. Paris. Minuit. 2008. 166 pages. 14.50. isbn 978-2-7073-2021-6. "Having already succored the falsely accused in Shakespeare's Hamlet and Christie's The Murder of Roger Ackroyd, Pierre Bayard now addresses himself to a miscarriage of justice in Conan Doyle. It is the third volume of his 'detective criticism' cycle -- a series of works that seeks to rock the foundations of the genre -- in which Bayard places some of the most renowned and cherished hermeneuts in our fictional culture dramatically on trial...."
1059. "Librarians Choose A Century of Good Books." Library Journal 123, no. 19 (1998): 34.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a chart of the 150 best 20th century fiction books voted on by readers of 'Library Journal.' Includes The Hound of the Baskervilles.

1060. "A Man of Many Mysteries." Wall Street Journal - Eastern Edition, 09/20/, 2000: A24.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the accusations of writer Rodger Garrick-Steele that novelist Sir Arthur Conan Doyle stole the idea for the 1901 Sherlock Holmes novel 'The Hound of the Baskervilles' from his friend Bertram Fletcher Robinson. Reaction from the Sherlock Holmes Society.

1061. "Sherlock Holmes Was Wrong: Reopening the Case of the Hound of the Baskervilles." Publishers Weekly 255, no. 35 (2008): 45-45.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "Sherlock Holmes Was Wrong: Reopening the Case of the Hound of the Baskervilles," by Pierre Bayard and translated by Charlotte Mandell. Bloomsbury, $20 (208p) ISBN 978-1-59691-605-0. "French literature professor and psychoanalyst Bayard (How to Talk About Books You Haven't Read) returns to the close reading and iconoclastic analysis of classic detective fiction he did in Who Killed Roger Ackroyd? with this audacious revisionist view of one of the best-known mysteries of all time. As always, Bayard playfully counters the ways literary academics read with the way real people read as he explains his theory of 'detective criticism.' Arguing that Sherlock Holmes often drew false conclusions, Bayard picks apart the apparently airtight case Holmes assembled in The Hound of the Baskervilles and offers an alternative solution. He goes a step further than with the Agatha Christie whodunit by suggesting that Holmes erred in his identification not only of the murderer but of the murder victim. Readers may be more impressed with Bayard's cleverness than his tongue-in-cheek arguments, but his logic will lead many to hope that his opinion on who really killed Hamlet's father (in Enquête sur Hamlet) will be translated into English as well."

1062. "Sherlock Holmes, Paleographer." Biblical Archaeology Review 30, no. 5 (2004): 19-19.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the fictional [sic] character Sherlock Holmes' activities in paleography as contained in the book "The Hound of the Baskervilles" by Arthur Conan Doyle. Definition of paleography; Excerpt of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" which attests to Holmes as a paleographer.

1063. "Was the creator of Sherlock Holmes a scheming poisoner?". Daily Mail (London), July 25, 2005: 72.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...Mr [Spiring] said: 'We're not saying she was necessarily a coconspirator, more of a patsy.' Holmes experts have dismissed the claims as 'bunkum'. Sarah Bromet, a distant relative of Sir [Arthur Conan Doyle], said: 'Even if Mr [Fletcher Robinson] did die in the most horrific way possible, how could you ever prove that Conan Doyle was behind it?' In his book, Mr [Rodger Garrick-Steele], who moved into Park Hill House in the 1980s, claims Sir Arthur colluded with his publishers to deny Mr Robinson recognition for devising the plot and supplying much of the local detail...."

1064. "The World of Paperbacks." Contemporary Review 290, no. 1691 (2008): 521-524.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Lists a few titles related to Doyle and Holmes. "Also from Phoenix we have...Andrew Lycett's Conan Doyle: The Man Who Created Sherlock Holmes (GBP10.99) whose hardback edition was hailed in this journal as 'the best and . . . certainly the fullest' biography of the writer...Vintage Classics have brought out Arthur Conan Doyle's famous novel. The Hound of the Baskervilles and have included with it not only the short story, The Adventure of the Speckled Band, which Doyle judged his best story, but an introduction by Ruth Rendell and all for GBP5.99....The life of Arthur Conan Doyle is arguably best seen in his correspondence and Harper Perennial has brought out Arthur Conan Doyle: A Life in Letters (GBP12.99), edited by Jon Lellenberg, Daniel Stashower and Charles Foley. The review of the hardback edition praised this 'valuable collection', based on Doyle's letters to his mother, letters which were 'frank and revealing'and which showed his 'many and varied interests'...."

1065. Arnold, Neala. "Murder & Mystery/Travel & Adventure." School Library Journal 53, no. 7 (2007): 126-126.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the books "Murder & Mystery," adapted by Shannon and Suzette Haden Elgin, illustrated by Mike Vosburg and Dan Spiegle and "Travel & Adventure," adapted by Seymour Reit, illustrated by Ernie Colon and Richard Rockwell. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "Each book includes adaptations of three classic stories that were first printed in Boys' Life. Much-abbreviated versions of The Hound of the Baskervilles, Macbeth, and The Legend of Sleepy Hollow appear in Murder. Travel includes The Travels of Marco Polo, Moby-Dick, and Gulliver's Travels. Each one is only about 15 pages long and moves quickly, with little narrative to provide context beyond the dialogue and images. Because of this, some of the selections may be confusing to readers unfamiliar with the original works. The artwork is action-filled and attention-grabbing. Any bloodshed in Murder takes place 'offstage.' Images are well chosen. Lady Macbeth's bloodstained hands and Banquo's ghost are sufficient to create a sense of horror and suspense. The colors and type help to set the mood for each tale. Brief biographical information about the classic writers includes an account of how the work was received during its time. There is at least one inaccuracy: Sir Arthur Conan Doyle could hardly have died before he was born. Overall, these volumes are satisfying additions."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

1066. Arthur, Joanna. "The Seventeenth Century Hound." The Ritual, no. 18 (1996): 38-44.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1067. Aykroyd, Clarissa, and Bob Coghill. "The Hound on Stage." Canadian Holmes 25, no. 1 (2001): 53-55.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1068. Baker, Jody. "Baynes on - Mr. and Mrs. Stapleton." Shoso-In Bulletin 8, no. (1998): 139-140.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1069. Bartelt, Kathryn R. "Sherlock Holmes Was Wrong: Reopening the Case of the Hound of the Baskervilles." Library Journal 133, no. 17 (2008): 69-69.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "Sherlock Holmes Was Wrong: Reopening the Case of the Hound of the Baskervilles," by Pierre Bayard, translated by Charlotte Mandell.
1070. Batten, Jack. "If Robert Service had written The Hound of the Baskervilles." Canadian Holmes 25, no. 1 (2001): 26-29.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1071. Beare, Geraldine. "'The Hound of the Baskervilles': Background, Inspiration and Connections." The Musgrave Papers, no. 14 (2001): 20-26.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1072. Berdan, Marshall S. "Costa a Little Less Rica - or - How Rodger Stapleton, Jr. Followed in His Father's Footsteps and Made Costa Rica Too Hot to Hold Him." Shoso-In Bulletin 12, no. (2002): 36-42.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1073. Black, Elliott M. "Beryl Stapleton." Shoso-In Bulletin 7, no. (1997): 25.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1074. Brady, James. "Derisive snickers from Europe." Advertising Age 76, no. 40 (2005): 50-50.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents news briefs on the advertising industry as of October 2005. Includes a reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...London's Times did a two-page expose suggesting Sherlock Holmes' creator, Conan Doyle, plagiarized 'Hound of the Baskervilles' from Daily Express Editor Fletcher Robinson and may have bumped Fletcher off, 'with a massive dose of laudanum,' in 1907. Fleet Street strikes again!..."
1075. Brett, Simon. "Return to Baker Street." Daily Mail (London), October 31, 2003: 58.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "I hadn't touched a copy of The Hound Of The Baskervilles since my schooldays. I had enjoyed it then - which was surprising, since it was an O- level set text - but to reread the book recently was unalloyed pleasure. I was once again immediately immersed in the ghoulish, misty shadows of Dartmoor, and in Sherlock Holmes's race against time to save the new heir to Baskerville Hall from the ghastly fate which had destroyed his predecessors. But while I was reading, I was also deeply struck by how much Conan Doyle had got right by the time this Sherlock Holmes adventure was published in 1902, and by how much his creation has influenced all subsequent crime fiction...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

1076. Burke, James. "Barryville or Baskermore? A Clarification of the Facts." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 51, no. 2 (2001): 33-40.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1077. Calamai, Peter. "Despatches from the Moor: Newspapers and The Hound of the Baskervilles." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 51, no. 4 (2001): 5-11.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1078. Callan, Paul. "House of Horror on Welsh Border; Hotel of the Baskervilles." The Mirror, July 31, 2001: 6.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Baskerville Hall suddenly looms, grey and gloomy, from the end of an avenue of towering trees. There is an eerie, even forbidding look about the big house - as though it has witnessed something terrible. It is not too surprising. Baskerville Hall - now the Baskerville Hall Hotel, near the Welsh border village of Clyro, and Hay-on-Wye - was the real life country house that featured in Sherlock Holmes's most famous adventure, The Hound of the Baskervilles. The story, which made its author, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, a rich man, is 100 years old...."
1079. Cavendish, Richard. "Publication of The Hound of the Baskervilles." History Today 52, no. 3 (2002): 57.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Recalls the publication of the book 'The Hound of the Baskervilles: Another Adventure of Sherlock Holmes,' by Arthur Conan Doyle, on March 25, 1902.
1080. Chapman, Paul M. "'A Real Creeper': The Hound of the Baskervilles and the Gothic Tradition." The Musgrave Papers, no. 14 (2001): 13-19.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1081. Clausson, Nils. "Degeneration, Fin-de-Siecle Gothic, and the Science of Detection: Arthur Conan Doyle's The Hound of the Baskervilles and the Emergence of the Modern Detective Story." Journal of Narrative Theory 35, no. 1 (2005): 60-87.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1082. Connor, Neil. "Baskerville Claim Rubbished." Birmingham Post, June 2, 2004: 4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Claims that one of the most famous Sherlock Holmes' tales had its origins in the Midlands have provoked a furore among tourist officials in Devon. The Hound of of Baskervilles is traditionally known to have been set on the foggy landscapes of Dartmoor. But thriller writer Phil Rickman has caused anger by claiming that Herefordshire may have played an important part in Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's story. Speculation about the Midland roots are 50-years-old, but Rickman's claims, which are due to be published in a magazine dedicated to the detective, have also received an angry response from fans of Sherlock Holmes...."
1083. Connors, Theresa, and Mark Annichiarico. "Audio reviews." Library Journal 121, no. 6 (1996): 138.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the sound recording 'The Hound of the Baskervilles,' by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle.
1084. Cook, William. "The dog that barked in the night." New Statesman 130, no. 4568 (2001): 118.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'The Hounds of the Baskervilles,' by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle.
1085. Cooke, Catherine. "Illustrating the Hound." The Musgrave Papers, no. 14 (2001): 36-44.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1086. Cooper, Sam W. "The Curs of the Baskerville." The Nezire Zanmai International 2, no. (1992): 20.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1087. Dahlinger, Susan E., and Leslie S. Klinger. "Arthur Conan Doyle, Fletcher Robinson & The Hound." Canadian Holmes 25, no. 1 (2001): 7-16.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

1088. Darling, Donald. "Some Thoughts on The Hound of the Baskervilles." The Camden House Journal 27, no. 7 (2005): 2-7.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

1089. Davies, David Stuart. "Review--'The Oxford Sherlock Holmes: The Hound of the Baskervilles,' edited with an introduction by W. W. Robson." The Ritual, no. 12 (1993): 55-56.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

1090. ———. "Suspense in The Hound of the Baskervilles." The Ritual, no. 15 (1995): 3-7.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

1091. Dunn, Dave. "From Reading The Hound of the Baskervilles -- A Bootmaker Reflects." Canadian Holmes 25, no. 1 (2001): 52.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

1092. ———. "If Edgar Allen Poe had written The Hound of the Baskervilles." Canadian Holmes 25, no. 1 (2001): 46-47.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

1093. Folsom, Henry T. "The Dating of The Hound of the Baskervilles." The Nezire Zanmai International 2, no. (1992): 68-71.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

1094. Frank, Lawrence. "The Hound of the Baskervilles, the Man on the Tor, and a metaphor for the mind." Nineteenth-Century Literature 54, no. 3 (1999): 336.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Examines a dramatization of a nineteenth-century debate between opposing naturalistic accounts of the human mind reflected in The Hound of Baskervilles, by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. Influence of Darwinian thought on the 'Man of the Tor' episode; Metaphor of mind offered by the episode; Association of enlightenment rationalism with Romantic consciousness.

1095. Frayling, Christopher. "The Greatest Shaggy Dog." Independent on Sunday (London), July 1, 2001: 8.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The Hound of the Baskervilles is 100 years old. Now recognised as a classic, this Sherlock Holmes crime caper has never lost its bite. What gives the novel its enduring appeal? Christopher Frayling investigates."

1096. Glowka, Arthur Wayne, Megan Melancon, Adrian Fairchild, Leona Gray, Zachary Haley, Niyatee Kher, Holly Leskovics, Leah Stanley, and Danielle C. Wyckoff. "Among the New Words." American Speech 78, no. 1 (2003): 93-102.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents new words or phrases in the English language. Among them is one that references Doyle. Baskerville effect; Hound of the Baskervilles effect n [from Arthur Conan Doyle's The Hound of the Baskervilles] Death caused by fear 2001 Dec 24 Washington Post A7 (Lexis-Nexis) In Mandarin, Cantonese and Japanese, the words 'death' and 'four' are pronounced nearly identically. As a result, the number four causes anxiety and stress among many Chinese and Japanese.... The researchers found there were 13 percent more deaths from heart attacks among Americans of Chinese and Japanese descent on the fourth day of the month than would have been expected....'We call this mortality peak the 'Baskerville effect,' the researchers wrote in the Dec. 22-29 issue of British Medical Journal [sic]. 2002 Jan 7 Cheryl Clark San Diego Union-Tribune B1 (Lexis-Nexis) His paper, published last month in the British Medical Journal [sic], is titled 'The Hound of the Baskervilles Effect: Natural Experiment on the Influence of Psychological Stress on Timing of Death.' Mar 4 Bill Hendrick Atlanta Journal-Constitution 1C (Lexis-Nexis) Phillips and his colleagues dubbed their finding 'the Hound of the Baskervilles effect,' and it was published under that title in the respected British Medical Journal [sic].

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

1097. Grant, Graham. "Could Sherlock Holmes' creator also be a killer?; Expert claims Conan Doyle stole classic plot then murdered real author." Daily Mail (London), July 26, 2008: 47.
 NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // It has all the ingredients you would expect of a classic Sherlock Holmes story. A national newspaper editor dies suddenly and a knight of the realm is suspected of his murder, triggered by infidelity, blackmail and fear of exposure. But according to one psychologist, author and Holmes enthusiast, this is no fictional plot - and the killer was none other than Holmes' Edinburgh-born creator, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. Dr Rodger Garrick-Steele claims Sir Arthur stole the idea for his most famous Holmes novel, The Hound of the Baskervilles, from his friend Fletcher Robinson - then had him poisoned when he threatened to reveal the truth...."
1098. Green, Richard Lancelyn. "The Hound of the Baskervilles, Part One." The Sherlock Holmes Journal 25, no. 3 (2001): 85-91.
 NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1099. ———. "The Hound of the Baskervilles, Part Two." The Sherlock Holmes Journal 25, no. 4 (2002): 123-128.
 NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1100. Hall, John. "The Curse of the Baskervilles." The Musgrave Papers, no. 14 (2001): 56-61.
 NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1101. ———. "A Writer's Notes on the Hound." The Musgrave Papers, no. 14 (2001): 27-28.
 NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1102. Hargan, Jim. "Dartmoor of the Baskervilles." British Heritage 19, no. 5 (1998): 52.
 NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Provides information on the hounds of Dartmoor, with reference to The Hound of the Baskervilles. When Conan Doyle first heard about the hounds; Folk tales surrounding the hounds of Dartmoor; How Conan Doyle set about writing a book about this folk tale; Places of interest in Dartmoor.
1103. Harper, Jennifer, and the Washington Times. "Writer pegs author of Sherlock Holmes as plagiarist, killer; 'Baskervilles' claim irks Doyle devotees." The Washington Times, October 03, 2000: A2.
 NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "What's this? Sir Arthur Conan Doyle . . . a murderer? The plot has thickened considerably for those who cherish the clever civility of Sherlock Holmes, celebrated detective and pipe-puffing icon. His creator has been accused of murder - along with mischief, plagiarism, deception and some hanky-panky, too. Doyle would be mortified, most likely, to learn that a fellow Englishman believed he stole the plot for 'The Hound of the Baskervilles' from another writer, then poisoned that very writer and ran off with his wife back in 1907. But this is what researcher Rodger Garrick-Steele believes, and he has been accumulating circumstantial evidence for 11 years...."
1104. Healy, Philip. "A busman and his holiday." Adults Learning 20, no. 3 (2008): 24-25.
 NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article describes how summer school from the perspective of both tutor and learner confirms adult learning and its role in civil society. Includes references to Doyle and Holmes. "...This year I've seen the summer school from both sides: as tutor and as student. In July, I taught a course on late Victorian and Edwardian detective stories in Oxford, and in August I attended the Greek and Latin summer workshop at University of Wales, Lampeter. This is the story of a busman and his holiday. 'The Oxford Experience' summer school, run by the University's Department for Continuing Education, is held at Christ Church. There were a dozen students from around the world in my class, including a German crime writer, who kept me on my toes as I led the week's discussion on the detective story. Most had done their preparatory reading -- The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes, The Hound of the Baskervilles and The Oxford Book of Victorian Detective Stories, an anthology of stories by Conan Doyle's contemporaries and precursors....No discussion of the late Victorian and Edwardian detective story is complete without recognising the material role played by magazine publishing and advertising. We looked at copies of The Strand from 1891, which first published the individual stories of The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes. There is a tremendous immediacy in handling these original magazines, not least in the illustrations and the amusing language of advertisements circa 1890. The Hound of the Baskervilles exists for most of us on screen as much as on the page. We looked at three film and TV adaptations -- the Basil Rathbone version of 1939, the 1965 Peter Cushing version, and the 2002 BBC version with Richard Roxburgh. Each adapted the story to the cinematic conventions of its day, the dramatic opening of the recent BBC adaptation being in the style of contemporary forensic crime series....In reading The Hound of the Baskervilles, we noted that the first third of the book is set in London, with the rest of the action taking place on Dartmoor, and how Conan Doyle uses this to mythic effect. The civilisation of the city is under constant threat from the elemental forces of evil. We are reminded of this in contemporary terms by the escaped convict on the moors, in historical terms by the account of Hugo Baskerville and the legend of the hound, and in prehistoric terms by the landscape itself, with its unforgiving rocky outcrops and the treacherous Grimpen Mire. The last even suggests the primordial soup from which life emerges just as it is also the cause of death for so many creatures, including, of course, the villain, Stapleton. Evolution may have thrown up the intelligence of a Sherlock Holmes, but the battle for the survival of civilisation, so the myth intimates, never ends. We came to this view after one class member described the Dartmoor section as having a 'spiritual' quality. She was responding, it transpired, to the book's stark nature symbolism, which gives it an authority far beyond that achieved by its fast-paced derring-do narrative...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

1105. Heptonstall, Geoffrey. "The English novel in the twentieth century: 5--John Fowles." Contemporary Review 268, no. 1564 (1996): 262.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Describes the life and works of literary author John Fowles. Education; Career history; Achievements; Comments on the essays 'The Tree' and 'Islands'; Debut novel 'The Collector'; Critique of Conan Doyle's 'The Hound of the Baskervilles'; 'The Magus'; 'Daniel Martin.'
1106. Hirayama, Yuichi. "Book Review (The Hound of Baskerville)." Shoso-In Bulletin 14, no. (2004): 150-161.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1107. ———. "The Hound Commentary in Japan." Shoso-In Bulletin 3, no. (1993): 15-22.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1108. Hobbs, Don. "Review--The Hound of the Baskervilles: Hunting the Dartmoor Legend by Philip Weller." The Holmes & Watson Report 5, no. 4 (2001): 17, 24.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1109. Hollyer, Cameron. "The Footnotes of a Gigantic Hound." Canadian Holmes 17, no. 3 (1994): 14-17.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of The Hound of the Baskervilles from The Oxford Sherlock Holmes.
1110. Hunt, A. Godfrey. "The Dartmoor Map: What can the Illustration tell us?" Shoso-In Bulletin 11, no. (2001): 48-49.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1111. ———. "The Influence of West Wickham Court on the Description of Baskerville Hall." Shoso-In Bulletin 11, no. (2001): 118-120.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1112. ———. "Lighting Baskerville Hall." Shoso-In Bulletin 12, no. (2002): 16-17.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1113. ———. "Twenty-three Hotels Cartwright Investigated." Shoso-In Bulletin 12, no. (2002): 91-92.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1114. ———. "Walking Speeds in the Dartmoor Region." Shoso-In Bulletin 12, no. (2002): 174-176.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1115. Hyder, William. "Scraps for the Hound." The Musgrave Papers, no. 14 (2001): 45-55.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

1116. Kean, Michael H. "The Hound of the Baskervilles: Wine, Women, and Song." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 51, no. 3 (2001): 34-40.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1117. Kinsella, Eileen. "The Case of the Scarce Dust Jacket." Wall Street Journal - Eastern Edition, 10/16/98, 1998: W14.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Provides information on the first edition of The Hound of the Baskervilles.
1118. Le Page, Sebastian. "The Hound is Cursed." Shoso-In Bulletin 11, no. (2001): 74-75.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1119. McCaffery, Laura Hibberts. "Growing the literacy collection." Wilson Library Bulletin 69, no. (1995): 46-8+.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A list of recreational and informational materials from the past few years for adult new readers, ESL students, and family literacy programs. Includes The Hound of the Baskervilles, adapted by Murray Shaw. Minneapolis: Carolrhoda/Lerner, 1993. 104p. $13.13 lib.bdg., pa$4.95. 0-87614-717-1, 0-87614-556-X. (Match Wits with Sherlock Holmes, 8). Fry Reading Level 6. "All the flavor of the Arthur Conan Doyle original remains in this easy-to-read, fast-paced adaptation."
1120. McLemee, Scott. "Losing Friends and Influencing People." Chronicle of Higher Education 48, no. 19 (2002): A12.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Profiles intellectual historian Richard Wolin. Criticisms on his book 'Heidegger's Children: Hannah Arendt, Karl Lowith, Hans Jonas, and Herbert Marcuse'; Interest in cultural criticism; List of philosophical works. Includes references to Doyle. "...Inspired by Arthur Conan Doyle's The Hound of the Baskervilles, in which Sir Charles Baskerville's fear of the hound leads him to die of a heart attack, David P. Phillips, a professor of sociology, and colleagues investigated whether fear could create a spike in death rates. They analyzed computerized death certificates of more than 47 million Americans who died from 1973 to 1998. The researchers were particularly interested in whether more Americans of Chinese or Japanese descent died of heart attacks on the fourth day of the month, because of superstitions many have inherited about the number four. (The Mandarin, Cantonese, and Japanese words for "four" bear nearly the same pronunciation as the words for "death.") Sure enough, cardiac deaths were 7.3 percent higher on the fourth day than on the other days of the first week of any month among Chinese- and Japanese-Americans, but not among whites, the researchers wrote in the British Medical Journal last month. For Chinese- and Japanese-Americans with chronic heart problems (like Conan Doyle's Sir Charles) the increase was even greater: 13 percent higher on the fourth day than on other days. Mr. Phillips calls the increase the "Baskerville effect." Finding a suitable real-life trigger for the Baskerville effect was not easy, reports Mr. Phillips. The trigger had to cause psychological stress among one group of people but not another without creating physical danger or changes in medical service. A lab test was untenable, the researchers write: "Doyle's intuition is consistent with many laboratory studies, which show cardiovascular changes following psychological stress. However, for ethical reasons, only nonfatal stressors can be studied in the laboratory. ..."
1121. McPherson, Lynn. "Sherlock Holmes Author 'Killed His Rival'." Sunday Mail, July 27, 2008: 11.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "It reads like the plot from one of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes novels. A top writer steals the idea for his most famous novel from a friend - then has him killed. But Holmes enthusiast Dr Rodger Garrick-Steele is convinced that's exactly what the legendary Scots writer did a century ago. He claims Conan Doyle stole the outline of The Hound Of The Baskervilles from his friend, former Daily Express editor Fletcher Robinson. And when Robinson threatened to expose the author, Conan Doyle had him poisoned...."
1122. McVeigh, Tracy. "Sleuth calls for Conan Doyle's love rival to be dug from grave: Behind the fictions penned by the creator of Sherlock Holmes lies a bizarre literary tale of intrigue and mystery." The Observer, October 15, 2000: 6.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Was Britain's greatest crime-writer and creator of the world's best-known detective novel also a killer and adulterer? The allegations have been dismissed as 'ludicrous' by the Sherlock Holmes Society, but now author Rodger Garrick-Steele is hoping to prove his case beyond doubt with the

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- proceeds of a film planned on the subject. For 11 years he has gathered evidence to show that Sir Arthur Conan Doyle actually poisoned a man whose work he then plagiarised. The modern-day sleuth plans to have the alleged victim's body exhumed and tested to prove his theory...."
1123. Mendick, Robert. "Was Conan Doyle a Killer and a Thief?; Scotland Yard Detectives to Investigate Allegation of Dark Secret Behind the Greatest of Sherlock Holmes' Mysteries." The Independent (London), September 10, 2000: 3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "When you have eliminated the impossible, whatever remains, however improbable, must be the truth.' Now the enduring maxim of that most cerebral of detectives Sherlock Holmes is being put to the test. It is a mystery as dark as any of those for which his creator Sir Arthur Conan Doyle is so justly celebrated - or is he? For Scotland Yard detectives are to investigate the death, almost a century ago, of a close acquaintance of the writer - and the man accused of murder is Conan Doyle himself. And the motive? According to the research, he stole the work, The Hound of the Baskervilles - and then poisoned the true author to cover up the plagiarism...."
1124. Miller, Andrew. "Books: I wish I'd written...; Andrew Miller on Conan Doyle's masterpiece." The Guardian (London), September 12, 1998: 11.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Few novels create an atmosphere of desperate adventure as compellingly as Conan Doyle's little masterpiece The Hound of the Baskervilles. Not a moment is lost in propelling us into the mystery of Sir Charles Baskerville's sudden death amid the eerie grandeur of Dartmoor, and in the following 174 pages there is enough adventure and derring-do for a book twice its length...."
1125. Monahan, Eric. "Baskerville Hall." The Musgrave Papers, no. 14 (2001): 29-32.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1126. Moss, Robert A. "Old Frankland: A Case of Identity." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 52, no. 1 (2002): 27-32.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1127. Niver, Harold E. "The Hound and I." The Musgrave Papers, no. 14 (2001): 65-67.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1128. Paton, Jennie C. "The Hound: Theatre of the Imagination." The Musgrave Papers, no. 14 (2001): 68-72.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1129. Pugh, Brian W. "The Weather and Atmosphere of Dartmoor in the Hound." Shosho-In Bulletin 14, no. (2004): 132-135.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1130. Richardson, David. "The Crank on the Moor: The Legacy of Mr. Frankland." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 53, no. 3 (2003): 22-24.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1131. ———. "The Crank on the Moor: The Legacy of Mr. Frankland." The Holmes & Watson Report 6, no. 3 (2002): 13-17.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1132. ———. "How Watson Raised the Lantern." The Holmes & Watson Report 7, no. 4 (2003): 21-24.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Written as Mr. Frankland.
1133. ———. "The Year of the Hound Continues." The Holmes & Watson Report 5, no. 2 (2001): 7-9.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1134. Rossakis, Constantine. "The First Colonial Hound: A Centenary Discovery." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- Quarterly of Sherlockiana* 53, no. 3 (2003): 17-21.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1135. Salvatori, Gianlucca. "The Blessing of the Baskervilles." Shoso-In Bulletin 12, no. (2002): 199-200.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1136. Saville, Guy. "The War of the Baskervilles; the World's Best-Known Detective Story is 100 Years Old this Summer, and so is a Dark Controversy about Who Actually Wrote It." The Independent (London), July 11, 2001: 1.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...As the celebrations of the book's centenary gather pace (other highlights include expeditions and enactments on Dartmoor, numerous new books on Conan Doyle, even a spoof version by Spike Milligan), a dark suspicion overshadows them: that its creation involved literary foul play...."
1137. Scott, James. "Happy anniversary: the Hound of the Baskervilles." The Sunday Herald, March 3, 2002: 9.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "It's one hundred years since Arthur Conan Doyle resurrected his hero Sherlock Holmes for the spine-chilling The Hound Of The Baskervilles. James Scott investigates the origins of a classic."
1138. Seskus, Tony. "Did Sir Arthur turn his hand to real murder on Dartmoor?" Daily Mail (London), September 11, 2000: 32.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Its demonic appearance and massive, slavering jaws struck terror into the hearts of the unfortunate Baskerville family, providing Sherlock Holmes with one of his most famous cases. But real-life detectives have now been drafted in to investigate claims that the man who provided the inspiration for The Hound of the Baskervilles was murdered by Holmes's creator, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. Author Rodger Garrick-Steele claims Edinburgh-born Doyle stole the story from Victorian journalist Bertram Fletcher Robinson, who was denied any recognition for his work. Mr Garrick-Steele 58, a psychologist who spent 11 years researching his latest book, claims Doyle then murdered his 36-year-old friend to prevent the truth coming to light...The Sherlock Holmes Society dismissed the poisoning theory as 'complete bunkum' but Doyle expert Christopher Frayling, rector of the Royal College of Art, said: 'If the evidence is properly sourced, I cannot wait to read it.'"
1139. Spano, Susan. "At home on the moors." New York Times, June 8, 1997: 6.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Provides information on the experience of the author, who visited the wild uplands of Dartmoor National Park in the West Country of England, said to be frequented by pixies and ghosts. History of the park; How it was depicted in the book 'Hound of Baskervilles,' by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. INSET: The bottom line.
1140. Stinson, Regina. "To Laura Lyons." The Holmes & Watson Report 5, no. 6 (2002): 23.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1141. Taylor-Ide, Jesse Oak. "Ritual and the Liminality of Sherlock Holmes in The Sign of Four and The Hound of the Baskervilles." English Literature in Transition (1880-1920) 48, no. 1 (2005): 55-70.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1142. Trump, Simon. "Conan Doyle Accused of Baskerville Betrayal." The Toronto Star, September 11, 2000: E 07.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Rodger Garrick-Steele, a writer from Dawlish, Devon, has spent 11 years researching a new book on [Arthur Conan Doyle]'s relationship with Bertram Fletcher Robinson, a journalist and the largely unsung co- author of The Hound Of The Baskervilles. He claims Conan Doyle colluded with his publishers to deny Fletcher Robinson recognition for devising the plot and supplying much of the local detail. Christopher Frayling, rector of the Royal College of Art and an authority on Conan Doyle, also believes Fletcher Robinson was unfairly treated...." Article also appeared in the Ottawa Citizen the previous day.
1143. ———. "Murderer of the Baskervilles: British author claims Sherlock Holmes' creator committed murder to cover up fact that he was helped by another writer. Simon Trump reports." The Ottawa Citizen, September 10,

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

2000: A9.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "It is a mystery worthy of Sherlock Holmes himself. Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, creator of the fictional detective, has been accused of betraying a fellow author to conceal the true authorship of one of his greatest works. Rodger Garrick-Steele, a writer from Dawlish, Devon, has spent 11 years researching a new book on Conan Doyle's relationship with Bertram Fletcher Robinson, a journalist and the largely unsung co- author of The Hound of the Baskervilles. He claims Mr. Conan Doyle colluded with his publishers to deny Mr. Fletcher Robinson recognition for devising the plot and supplying much of the local detail...."

1144. Walch, Abigail, Christie Aschwanden, Ramin Ganeshram, Maureen Kennedy, Elizabeth Krieger, Sara Schmidt, and Martha Scribner. "Healthy News." Health 16, no. 4 (2002): 23.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents updates on several studies related to health as of May 2001. Association of superstition with heart attacks; Measures that can be considered in preventing depression; Role of Lowering one's cholesterol in improving one's mood. Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "Breaking a mirror could result in more than bad luck. New research suggests that the stress associated with deeply held superstitious beliefs can trigger fatal heart attacks, especially in people with heart disease. Researchers from the University of California at San Diego studied more than 47 million death certificates from over 15 years and discovered that among Chinese and Japanese Americans, fatal heart attacks peaked significantly on the fourth day of the month, the equivalent of Friday the 13th in Chinese and Japanese cultures. No similar pattern in heart fatalities was found among Anglo subjects; the researchers suppose this could be because beliefs about unlucky numbers are taken more seriously in Chinese and Japanese cultures. The team has dubbed this scared-to-death phenomenon the 'Baskerville effect'--for Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's famous Sherlock Holmes novel The Hound of the Baskervilles, in which the character Sir Charles dies of a heart attack induced by fright...."

1145. Wallace, Arminta. "The hounding of Arthur Conan Doyle You have been warned. The 100th anniversary of the publication of The Hound of the Baskervilles is the excuse for a major Sherlock Holmes fest." The Irish Times, August 18, 2001: 63.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...Even now, the centenary of its publication is at the centre of a major Holmes fest. Penguin Books is bringing out a series of five Holmes stories, complete with new introductions by such literary luminaries as Peter Ackroyd and Iain Sinclair, along with a new biography of Arthur Conan Doyle. There will be - you have been warned - enactments on Dartmoor. But the shadow of the supernatural is not the only shadow which hangs over The Hound of the Baskervilles. Arguments have long raged over the book's authorship, and have surfaced again in the English papers this month. Did Conan Doyle write it himself, or was it a collaboration with another writer who was, following its enormous success, simply elbowed out of the way?..."

1146. Wellendowd, Violet. "A Sonnet for Stapleton: 'I was a Baskerville'." The Holmes & Watson Report 5, no. 5 (2001): 44.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

1147. Weller, Philip. "The Greeks Had Several Words for it. A Knoxian Analysis of the Hound of the Baskervilles." Shoso-In Bulletin 12, no. (2002): 85-90.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

1148. White, Kathryn. "Gothic Elements in The Hound of the Baskervilles." The Ritual, no. 15 (1995): 13-17.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

1149. Wiseman, Richard. "How We Discover the Big Truths in Small Things." Skeptic 13, no. 4 (2007): 24-31.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article discusses various magical and superstitious beliefs in the U.S. Mention is made of the "Baskerville effect", a label for cardiac death. "Nevertheless, Phillips and his team are confident that something strange is happening, and named the alleged effect after Charles Baskerville, a character in the Arthur Conan Doyle story The Hound of the Baskervilles, who suffers a fatal heart attack from extreme psychological stress."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

1150. Woods, Paula L. "Book Review; He's hounding Sherlock Holmes." Los Angeles Times, November 30, 2008: F11.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Expanding the scope of the 'detective criticism' he began in 2000's 'Who Killed Roger Ackroyd? The Mystery Behind the Agatha Christie Mystery,' French literature professor and psychoanalyst Pierre Bayard turns his attention to another canonical text of the genre, Arthur Conan Doyle's 'The Hound of the Baskervilles.' In 'Sherlock Holmes Was Wrong' (Bloomsbury: 196 pp., $20), Bayard analyzes 'the way the facts are presented, accepting no testimony without reservation and systematically calling into question everything' in and outside of the text...."
1151. Yates, Donald A. "A Vindication of Stapleton." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 52, no. 2 (2002): 40-46.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

06B WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- TALES -- ILLUSTRIOUS CLIENT (13)

1152. Aiken, Bruce. "Some Comments of Vitriol and Some Vitriolic Comments on ILLU." The Serpentine Muse 15, no. 3 (1999): 14-18.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1153. Bengtsson, Hans-Uno. "It Needs Careful Handling'." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 2 (1994): 82-90.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Some thoughts and observations on The Adventure of the Illustrious Client and Dr. Watson's 24-hour cramming on Chinese porcelain as a part of the tale.
1154. Cirone, Nino. "The Importance of Being Illustrious or Would the Real Illustrious Client Please Stand Up." Canadian Holmes 27, no. 1 (2003): 5-11.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1155. Clifford, Carolyn M. "'A loyal friend and a chivalrous gentleman': The Illustrious Client -- Identified at Last." Canadian Holmes 27, no. 3 (2004): 14-25.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1156. Dahlinger, Susan E. "Of 'The Illustrious Client'." Baker Street Miscellanea, no. 73 (1993): 12-15.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1157. Edwards, Owen Dudley. "Forensic Evidence from the Case-Book of Sherlock Holmes." Discover NLS-- Collections, Research, News and Events at the National Library of Scotland, no. 3 (2006): 14-17.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Renowned Conan Doyle scholar Owen Dudley Edwards dissects a recently acquired treasure and reveals the deft editorial surgery at work behind one of the writer's last Sherlock Holmes stories, 'The Illustrious Client.'" 1158. Elliott, Philip. "The Illustrious Client Revealed, or The Chivalrous Gentleman of Windsor." Canadian Holmes 27, no. 2 (2003): 20-22.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1159. Hirayama, Yuichi. "The Illustrious Client." Shoso-In Bulletin 14, no. (2004): 63-65.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1160. ———. "Who was 'The Illustrious Client'?" Canadian Holmes 26, no. 4 (2003): 33-35.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1161. Mason, Bill. "A Tale From the Crypt: Unearthing The Illustrious Client in Dracula." The Holmes & Watson Report 7, no. 2 (2003): 24-32.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

1162. Solberg, Andrew L. "The Intertwining Chronologies of The Illustrious Client and The Red Circle." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 1 (1994): 28-32.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Some observations on the chronology of these two adventures and their overlapping nature.
1163. Webb, Keith E. "Baron Gruner Receives an Answer." Shoso-In Bulletin 3, no. (1993): 6-7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1164. Winer, Lise. "'A Master and a Mister of Disguise' A Musing on 'The Adventure of the Illustrious Client.'" The Camden House Journal 19, no. 4 (1997): 2-5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

06B WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- TALES -- LADY FRANCES CARFAX (3)

1165. Brocklebank, Jonathan. "What price Conan Doyle? An elementary GBP250,000." Daily Mail (London), June 7, 2008: 41.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The slim volume contains only 28 pages and the story told on them is far from the author's most celebrated. But the 97-year-old manuscript in Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's own meticulous hand went on sale yesterday for [pounds]250,000. The short story, The Disappearance of Lady Frances Carfax, is one of 56 Sherlock Holmes mysteries written by the Edinburgh-born author, but manuscripts in his handwriting are rare and highly prized. The tale comes a long way down the list of favourite Sherlock Holmes adventures but experts say the handwritten text with pencilled corrections gives a fascinating insight into the working methods of the prolific author. Conan Doyle had the volume bound for himself in 1911, although the story was not seen by the public until it was serialised in the pages of The Strand magazine. It was later published in a collection of Sherlock Holmes short stories entitled His Last Bow. The book went on sale at the Antiquarian Book Fair in London with a price tag of [pounds]250,000 - but vendor Alex Hime, from Beverly Hills, California, said he might be prepared to consider a small reduction to a good customer...."
1166. Campbell, Mary. "The Disappearance of Lady Frances Carfax." Canadian Holmes 23, no. 1 (1999): 6-8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1167. Hill, Gideon. "Seeking the Suite of the Cure: An Inquiry into the Canonical Baden." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 54, no. 3 (2004): 25-27.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

06B WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- TALES -- LION'S MANE(3)

1168. Feldhamer, George. "Deep Waters Indeed: An Analysis of 'The Adventure of the Lion's Mane.'" The Camden House Journal 19, no. 10 (1997): 2-5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1169. Hiramaya, Yuichi, and Masako Mizuochi. "Another Solution of The Lion's Mane." The Nezire Zanmai International 2, no. (1992): 22-25.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1170. Lindvall, Robert. "Reflections on 'The Lion's Mane'." Shoso-In Bulletin 10, no. (2000): 50-52.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

06B WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- TALES -- MAN WITH THE TWISTED LIP (7)

1171. "The Watson Conundrum." Wilson Quarterly 28, no. 4 (2004): 11-11.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Analyzes the short story "The Man With the Twisted Lip," in "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes." Overview of the story; Conflict regarding the character John H. Watson in the story.
1172. Accardo, Pasquale. "The Unclear Saint: Reflections on the Phenomenon of Mirroring in 'The Man with the Twisted Lip'." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 50, no. 4 (2000): 14-16.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1173. Ballew, William. "How Rascally Was That Lascar?" Shoso-In Bulletin 6, no. (1996): 75-77.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1174. Dawson, Carrie. "'The Slaughterman of Wagga Wagga': Imposture, National Identity, and the Tichborne Affair." Australian Literary Studies 21, no. 4 (2004): 1-13.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Cited works include a reference to Doyle. Jaffe, Audrey. 'Detecting the Beggar: Arthur Conan Doyle, Henry Mayhew, and "The Man with the Twisted Lip".' Representations 31 (1990): 96-116.
1175. Healey, Tim. "Pillow Talk: a gloss on a word in 'The Man With the Twisted Lip'." The Ritual, no. 25 (2000): 11-12.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1176. Jaffe, Audrey. "Detecting the Beggar: Arthur Conan Doyle, Henry Mayhew, and 'The Man with the Twisted Lip'." Representations, no. 31, Special Issue: The Margins of Identity in Nineteenth-Century England (1990): 96-117.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1177. Roden, Barbara, and Christopher Roden. "An Untypical Adventure: Reflections on 'The Man With the Twisted Lip'." The Musgrave Papers, no. 9 (1996): 46-55.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

06B WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- TALES -- MAZARIN STONE (2)

1178. Berdan, Marshall S. "Adventure of the Mazarin Stone." Shoso-In Bulletin 8, no. (1998): 125-133.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1179. ———. "Curtains in Baker Street. Yet Another Solution to the Authorship of 'The Mazarin Stone'." Shoso-In Bulletin 8, no. (1998): 125-133.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

06B WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- TALES -- MISSING THREE-QUARTER (1)

1180. Davies, David Stuart. "The Missing Three-Quarter: Mining the Incidentals." The Musgrave Papers, no. 13 (2000): 97-99.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

06B WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- TALES -- MUSGRAVE RITUAL (9)

1181. Aykroyd, Lucas. "The Musgrave Ritual: Who was Rachel Howells?" Canadian Holmes 19, no. 1 (1995): 12-16.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

1182. Chapman, Paul M. "'These Relics Have a History': Sir Philip Musgrave and the English Civil Wars." The Ritual, no. 28 (2001): 42-48.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

1183. Doyle, Michael. "Sherlock Holmes and the Legacy of Rachel Howells." Canadian Holmes 19, no. 1 (1995): 17-41.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

1184. Doyle, Steven T. "Reflections on 'The Musgrave Ritual'." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 53, no. 2 (2003): 31-34.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

1185. Keefauver, Brad. "'The Musgrave Ritual': The Trapping of Richard Brunton." The Musgrave Papers, no. 11 (1998): 57-61.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

1186. Narayan, Sundar. "Some Observations on the Story of The Musgrave Ritual." The Camden House Journal 15, no. 5 (1993): 2-3.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

1187. Raymond, Trevor S. "Bookshelf." Canadian Holmes 20, no. 2 (1996): 42-45.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A review of The Case Files of Sherlock Holmes: The Musgrave Ritual.

1188. Richardson, David. "Ritual Murder: Some Uncomfortable Thoughts on the Musgrave Ritual." The Holmes & Watson Report 4, no. 6 (2001): 48-54.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

1189. Roden, Christopher. "The Brunton Connection." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 49, no. 2 (1999): 45-47.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

06B WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- TALES -- NAVAL TREATY (2)

1190. Klinger, Leslie S. "From Prussia with Love: Contemplating The Naval Treaty." The Musgrave Papers 11, no. (1998): 93-101.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

1191. Skinion, John. "Are there more Red Herrings in the Naval Treaty Than Fish in the Sea?" The Camden House Journal 15, no. 11 (1993): 2-3.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

06B WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- TALES -- NOBLE BACHELOR (4)

1192. Buddle, Judith. "The Ballad of Hatty Doran." Varieties of Ash 2, no. 1 (1994): 32-34.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

1193. Hyder, Harry N. "Hatty Doran and the Noble Bachelor." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 45, no. 1 (1995): 39-41.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

1194. Skinion, Signe. "The Adventure of the Noble Bachelor Who is the True Noble Bachelor?" The Camden House Journal 16, no. 7 (1994): 2-3.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

1195. Whitlam, Carol M. "The Noble Bachelor." The Musgrave Papers, no. 9 (1996): 75-80.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

06B WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- TALES -- NORWOOD BUILDER (1)

1196. Fetherstone, Sonia. "The Norwood Builder': A Case of False Advertising." The Musgrave Papers, no. 13 (2000): 31-35.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

06B WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- TALES -- PRIORY SCHOOL (3)

1197. Cirone, Nino. "The Priory School': A Three Pipe Story." The Musgrave Papers, no. 13 (2000): 57-67.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

1198. Dale, Richard. "Sherlock Holmes, the Old School Tie, and the Priory School: The Singular Case of the Nineteenth Century British Public School." The Camden House Journal 18, no. 12 (1996): 2-3.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

1199. Lewis, Lou. "The Adventure of the Priory School': Some Thoughts on Religion and Philosophy." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 52, no. 1 (2002): 39-41.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

06B WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- TALES -- RED CIRCLE (3)

1200. Gilliland, William. "The Adventure of the Red Circle Confuses Crime and Patriotism in Naples." The Camden House Journal 24, no. 10 (2002): 2-3.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

1201. Kobayashi, Junko, and Megumi Kobayashi. "The Red Circle Re-Read." The Nezire Zannai International 2, no. (1992): 30-31.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

1202. Solberg, Andrew L. "The Intertwining Chronologies of The Illustrious Client and The Red Circle." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 1 (1994): 28-32.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Some observations on the chronology of these two adventures and their overlapping nature.

06B WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- TALES -- RED-HEADED LEAGUE (7)

1203. Baker, Jody. "Mrs. Baynes on the Date of the Red Headed League." Shoso-In Bulletin 8, no. (1998): 160-162.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

1204. Hirayama, Yuichi. "John Clay's Grandfather." Shoso-In Bulletin 8, no. (1998): 159-161.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

1205. Jordan, Anne. "The Red-Headed League." The Musgrave Papers, no. 9 (1996): 13-17.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1206. Kean, Michael H. "Dating The Red-Headed League: A Secondary Analysis." Shoso-In Bulletin 4, no. (1994): 6-11.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1207. Klinger, Leslie S., and Timothy Bourke. "What Game was Afoot in The Red-Headed League?" The Sherlock Holmes Journal, no. (2000).
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1208. Michaud, Rosemary. "A Considerable Crime: The Red-Headed League Reconsidered." Shoso-In Bulletin 7, no. (1997): 145-150.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1209. Smith, Samuel. "The Mysteries of 'The Red-Headed League'." The Camden House Journal 26, no. 8 (2004): 2-3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

06B WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- TALES -- REIGATE SQUIRES (1)

1210. Booth, Matthew. "'The Reigate Squires': The Adventure of the Missing Opportunities." The Musgrave Papers, no. 11 (1998): 63-69.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

06B WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- TALES -- RESIDENT PATIENT (6)

1211. Aiken, Bruce. "Does 'The Resident Patient' Prove That There are Fictional Elements in the Sherlockian Canon?" Canadian Holmes 28, no. 4 (2005): 25-27.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1212. Curtis, Donald E. "An Examination of 'The Resident Patient'." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 50, no. 2 (2000): 41-43.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1213. Dalrymple, Theodore. "Sheer delight in doing evil." BMJ: British Medical Journal 334, no. 7607 (2007): 1325-1325.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article presents the author's reaction to having read the book "The Resident Patient," by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, which centers on a doctor named Trevelyan who visits Sherlock Holmes and Watson to discuss a patient named Blessington. A discussion of the story's plot, which centers on the fact that Blessington is really a criminal named Sutton, is presented. The author's involvement in being a witness in a case where a man hanged another man and attempted to make the incident look like suicide is discussed.
1214. Keefauver, Brad. "'The Resident Patient': the money trail." The Musgrave Papers, no. 11 (1998): 79-83.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1215. Murdock, Karen. "Cheating the Noose: A Speculation on the Silence of the Resident Patient." The Holmes & Watson Report 6, no. 4 (2002): 26-28.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1216. ———. "A Suspicious Photograph on the Mantelpiece, or How Did the Worthington Gang Track Down

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Blessington?" The Holmes & Watson Report 7, no. 6 (2004): 22-24.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

06B WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- TALES -- RETIRED COLOURMAN (2)

1217. Crelling, Jack. "Indelible Holmes: Some Notes on the Adventure of the Retired Colourman." The Camden House Journal 23, no. 12 (2001): 2-3.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

1218. Edwards, Ralph E. "Canon Queries: The Adventure of the Retired Colourman." Canadian Holmes 20, no. 1 (1996): 17-18.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

06B WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- TALES -- SCANDAL IN BOHEMIA (8)

1219. Coules, Bert. "Damn the man anyway: thoughts on 'A Scandal in Bohemia'." The Musgrave Papers, no. 9 (1996): 9-11.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

1220. Derbyshire, David. "Holmes was right, women will rescue the photos first." The Daily Telegraph (London), December 27, 2004: 11.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "A piece of folklore that helped Sherlock Holmes solve one of his earliest and most famous cases still holds true after a century: women will choose to save the photograph of a loved one above anything else from a burning house. A survey has shown that, given the choice of saving just one precious thing from their home, most women will rescue a family picture. The findings confirm the plot twist of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's A Scandal in Bohemia, the first of the Sherlock Holmes short stories which was published in The Strand magazine in 1891...."

1221. Doyle, Michael. "Bohemia -- The Scandal and the Woman." Canadian Holmes 26, no. 2 (2002): 26-36.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

1222. Griffith, James. "From a Certain Point of View in 'A Scandal in Bohemia': Outsmarting Mr. Sherlock Holmes." Victorian Newsletter 86, no. (1994): 7-9.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

1223. Hall, John. "Pips, pearls and scandal (Notes on the dates of FIVE, SCAN and SIGN)." Shoso-In Bulletin 3, no. (1993): 35-39.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

1224. Harmidarow, Walter. "Really, Dr. Watson? Disguise and the dating of 'A Scandal in Bohemia'." Canadian Holmes 23, no. 4 (2000): 6-8.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

1225. Hirayama, Yuichi. "The True Identity of King of Bohemia." Shoso-In Bulletin 7, no. (1997): 177-181.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

1226. Kellogg, Richard L. "The Androgynous Ms. Adler." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 2 (1994): 114-116.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Some thoughts on the person of Irene Adler.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

06B WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- TALES -- SECOND STAIN (8)

1227. Accardo, Pasquale. "Second Thoughts on the Second Stain." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 49, no. 1 (1999): 47-50.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1228. Block, Ira. "Who Is the Real Trelawney Hope?" Shoso-In Bulletin 10, no. (2000): 30-34.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1229. Gibbs, Joseph. "The Official Secrets Act and 'The Second Stain'." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 52, no. 4 (2002): 31-33.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1230. Heifetz, Carl L. "A 'Second Stain' Saves the Day." The Holmes & Watson Report 3, no. 6 (2000): 36-39.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1231. Hultgren, Joella D. "'The Second Stain' Explained: Did Holmes Suspect the Subterfuge?" Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 52, no. 4 (2002): 41-45.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1232. McClure, Michael W. "The Adventure of the Second Stain 'There Can Be No Second Stain'." Baker Street Miscellanea, no. 72 (1992): 19-23.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1233. Smith, Samuel. "The Mystery(s) of the Second Stain." The Camden House Journal 26, no. 1 (2004): 2-3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1234. White, Kathryn. "'The Second Stain': Sex, Lies and Red Tape." The Musgrave Papers, no. 13 (2000): 107-112.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

06B WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- TALES -- SHOSCOMBE OLD PLACE (1)

1235. Swift, Francine Morris. "Shoscombe Prince." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 45, no. 3 (1995): 147-156.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

06B WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- TALES -- SIGN OF THE FOUR (17)

1236. "100 Years Ago." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 2, no. 3 (1998): 2.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Highlights the 1898 publication of "The Sign of the Four" in Pitman's shorthand.
1237. Cirone, Nino. "What Really Happened to Mary Morstan?" Canadian Holmes 25, no. 4 (2002): 20-22.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1238. Connors, Theresa. "The Sign of Four (Book)." Library Journal 129, no. 16 (2004): 118-118.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the audiobook "The Sign of Four," by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle.
1239. Coules, Bert. "Review--The Oxford Sherlock Holmes, The Sign of Four edited with an introduction by Christopher Roden." The Ritual, no. 12 (1993): 46-48.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of the book.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

1240. Darlington, Frank. "Bookshelf: The Sign of The Four." Canadian Holmes 17, no. 4 (1994): 30-31.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of "The Sign of the Four" from The Oxford Sherlock Holmes.
1241. Darlington, Frank, George A. Vanderburgh, Thelma Beam, Doug Wrigglesworth, Bob Coghill, and Trevor S. Raymond. "'Bookshelf' Reviews of Oxford's The Sign of the Four, The Memoirs of Sherlock Holmes, The Case Book of Sherlock Holmes, The Return of Sherlock Holmes, The Valley of Fear, His Last Bow and The Books of Michael Harrison." Canadian Holmes 17, no. 4 (1994): 30-36.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1242. Frank, Lawrence. "Dreaming the Medusa: Imperialism, primitivism, and sexuality in Arthur Conan Doyle's The Sign of Four." Signs: Journal of Women in Culture & Society 22, no. 1 (1996): 52.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses author Arthur Conan Doyle's treatment of the issues of imperialism, primitivism and sexuality in his book The Sign of Four. Characterization of detective Sherlock Holmes; Characterization of women in Doyle's published works; Projection of a Victorian anxiety about women; Description of India and the Indian culture.
1243. Hall, John. "Pips, pearls and scandal (Notes on the dates of FIVE, SCAN and SIGN)." Shoso-In Bulletin 3, no. (1993): 35-39.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1244. Keep, Christopher, and Don Randall. "Addiction, Empire, and Narrative in Arthur Conan Doyle's The Sign of the Four." Novel: A Forum on Fiction 32, no. 2 (1999): 207.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Relates the book The Sign of the Four, by Conan Doyle, with the image of Great Britain as an empire and an exporter of addictive substances. What the fictitious character [sic] Sherlock Holmes represents; Impact of cocaine in medicine and Europe's colonial enterprise; Views of writer Jacques Derrida on the drug pharmakon."
1245. Law, Gary. "Books: The six greatest crime novels ever; Some crime novels are so good they keep you guessing right up until the last page; some are so bad they're a crime in themselves. So which ones are the true greats? Gary Law picks six of the best from the golden era of detective fiction." Belfast Telegraph, April 12, 2003: 1.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The six picked by the author, along with his comments, are: The Sign of Four, by Doyle; Raffles, by E. W. Hornung; Murder on the Orient Express, by Agatha Christie; The Postman Always Rings Twice, by James M. Cain; The Big Sleep, by Raymond Chandler; and I, The Jury, by Mickey Spillane.
1246. Liebman, Arthur, and David H. Galerstein. "The Sign of the Moonstone." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 2 (1994): 71-74.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Some observations on the influence of Wilkie Collins on Doyle and the parallels between Collins' The Moonstone and Doyle's The Sign of Four.
1247. Lithner, Klas. "The Sign of Four Through Japanese Eyes." Shoso-In Bulletin 8, no. (1998): 135-138.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1248. Marino, Joe. "A question of judgement: Jonathan Small, a re-appraisal." Shoso-In Bulletin 14, no. (2004): 119-131.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1249. McCloskey, Susan. "The Sign of the Four as a Sign of the Times." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 53, no. 3 (2003): 35-37.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1250. Pogrebin, Robin. "When Sherlock Got His Quirks." The New York Times, December 3, 1996: C13.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "It was a late summer evening in 1889 when Sir Arthur Conan Doyle sat down to dinner at the Langham Hotel in London with an American publishing agent who had come to commission new works of fiction for Lippincott's monthly magazine. Oscar Wilde was also at the table, and the young writers

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

engaged in mutual flattery. They also discussed such topics as future wars and what Doyle later called 'the cynical maxim that the good fortune of our friends made us discontented.' By the end of the meal, the publishing agent, J. M. Stoddart, had tacked down what he had traveled all the way from Philadelphia for: commitments from Doyle and Wilde that each would write a short novel for Lippincott's. As a result, Wilde produced 'The Picture of Dorian Gray' and Doyle the second appearance of Sherlock Holmes and Dr. John Watson, in 'The Sign of Four.' Doyle's handwritten final draft of that story, the oldest surviving complete Sherlock Holmes manuscript, will be auctioned tomorrow at Sotheby's for an anonymous seller. It is expected to bring $250,000 to $350,000...."

1251. Rossakis, Constantine. "Thaddeus Sholto: (Mis)Diagnosed." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 54, no. 1 (2004): 51-53.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1252. Taylor-Ide, Jesse Oak. "Ritual and the Liminality of Sherlock Holmes in The Sign of Four and The Hound of the Baskervilles." English Literature in Transition (1880-1920) 48, no. 1 (2005): 55-70.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

06B WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- TALES -- SILVER BLAZE (7)

1253. Ewing, Geoff. "The Relationships Between 'Silver Blaze' and 'The Five Orange Pips'." Canadian Holmes 29, no. 1 (2005): 12-13.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1254. Green, Richard Lancelyn. "'Silver Blaze': Sources and Solecisms." The Musgrave Papers, no. 11 (1998): 15-19.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1255. Gregory, Richard L. Nature 445, no. 7124 (2007): 152.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1256. Heifetz, Carl L. "Sherlock Holmes, Scientific Detective, Solves the Silver Blaze Horse-Napping Case." The Holmes & Watson Report 8, no. 3 (2004): 22-25.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1257. Martin, Ged. "Speaking volumes." Times Higher Education Supplement, no. (1994): 21.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'Silver Blaze,' by Arthur Conan Doyle.
1258. Senter, R. Joel. "Silver Blaze or Mr. Sherlock Holmes' Greatest Joke." Shoso-In Bulletin 5, no. (1995): 33.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1259. Weller, Philip. "A Thoroughbred Case: The Strengths and Weakness of Silver Blaze." The Ritual, no. 19 (1997): 30-33.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

06B WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- TALES -- SIX NAPOLEONS (4)

1260. Blair, Victor. "'The Six Napoleons' and Parallels Between Napoleon, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and Sherlock Holmes." Canadian Holmes 21, no. 4 (1998): 17-19.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1261. Hyder, William. "Parsley and Butter: The Abernethy Business." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 3 (1994): 152-160.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents some thoughts, theories, and speculation on Holmes, Watson, the Abernettys, and what exactly was meant by Holmes' statement of the parsley and butter.

1262. Shiffman, Stu. "A League of Their Own." The Holmes & Watson Report 7, no. 4 (2003): 52-63.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Written as Horace Harker.

1263. Singleton, Paul. "'The Six Napoleons': His First Last Bow." The Musgrave Papers, no. 13 (2000): 73-79.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

06B WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- TALES -- SOLITARY CYCLIST (2)

1264. Jordan, Anne. "'The Solitary Cyclist': Thoughts on the Case." The Musgrave Papers, no. 13 (2000): 45-49.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

1265. Olding, Alan C. "The Solitary Cyclist Rings a Little Bell." Shoso-In Bulletin 7, no. (1997): 121-123.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

06B WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- TALES -- SPECKLED BAND (6)

1266. Brodie, Brian S., and Mark Alberstat. "'Bookshelf' Reviews of The Case Files of Sherlock Holmes: The Speckled Band and Shades of Sherlock." Canadian Holmes 21, no. 3 (1998): 46-47.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

1267. Burr, Robert C. "Review--The Case Files of Sherlock Holmes: The Speckled Band edited by Christopher Roden and Barbara Roden." The Holmes & Watson Report 1, no. 3 (1997): 28.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

1268. Galerstein, David H. "The Monster of Stoke Moran." Baker Street Miscellanea, no. 73 (1993): 31-32.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

1269. Green, Richard Lancelyn. "The Shameful Secret of Stoke Moran: Speculations on 'The Speckled Band'." The Musgrave Papers, no. 9 (1996): 64-68.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

1270. Healey, Tim. "Review--'The Case Files of Sherlock Holmes: The Speckled Band' edited by Christopher Roden and Barbara Roden." The Ritual, no. 21 (1998): 67-68.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

1271. Holly, Raymond L. "A Comparison of 'Blue Carbuncle' and 'Speckled Band'." The Camden House Journal 18, no. 1 (1996): 2-3.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

06B WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- TALES -- STOCKBROKER'S CLERK (2)

1272. Crelling, Jack. "Diversified Speculations About The Stockbroker's Clerk." The Camden House Journal 27, no. 11 (2005): 2-3.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

1273. Fetherstone, Sonia. "'The Stockbroker's Clerk': The Singular Duos." The Musgrave Papers, no. 11 (1998): 41-47.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

06B WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- TALES -- STUDY IN SCARLET (15)

1274. Atkinson, Michael. "Type and text in "A Study in Scarlet": Repression and the textual unconscious; Jungian literary criticism." no. (1992): 328-342.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...relies primarily on Jung but draws as well upon Freud and deconstructive criticism to discuss how a text might be governed by an unconscious element that acts like the unconscious does in a personality, providing hidden motivation to explain behavior at the conscious level / uses this concept to examine not only Watson, Holmes, and other characters in Arthur Conan Doyle's first archetypal Sherlock Holmes mystery ["A Study in Scarlet"], but also the subgenre itself..."
1275. Freeman, Judith. "STUD Farm." The Holmes & Watson Report 8, no. 1 (2004): 26-32.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1276. Gibson, Brian Neil. "A Study In Scarlet." Canadian Holmes 17, no. 3 (1994): 11-12.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews A Study in Scarlet from The Oxford Sherlock Holmes.
1277. Hirayama, Yuichi. "Some Problems on the Translation of the Title of 'A Study in Scarlet'." Shoso-In Bulletin 4, no. (1994): 58-60.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1278. Hobbs, Don. "Review--A Study in Scarlet edited by Leslie Klinger." The Holmes & Watson Report 8, no. 3 (2004): 21.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1279. Hodgson, John A. "An allusion to Arthur Conan Doyle's A Study in Scarlet in The Picture of Dorian Gray." English Language Notes 34, no. 2 (1996): 41.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Talks about Oscar Wilde's allusion to Arthur Conan Doyle's 'A Study in Scarlet,' in the book 'The Picture of Dorian Gray.' Holmes' sustained debt to Wilde and other aesthetes of his day; Holmes' off-handed reference to 'art jargon'; Wilde's sensitivity to the detective overtones of his labyrinth motif.
1280. Huret, Gaston Corday, III. "The Ballad of Lucy Ferrier: for those who feel guilty about skipping Chapters 8-12 of Part II of A Study in Scarlet (translated by Don Hardenbrook)." Shoso-In Bulletin 5, no. (2005): 66-68.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1281. Randall, Warren. "Who Killed Enoch Drebbler? (The Death and Burial of Jefferson Hope)." Shoso-In Bulletin 13, no. (2003): 19-20.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1282. Redmond, Christopher. "A Study in Sin: Religious Hypocrisy and Fanaticism in (and Out of) A Study in Scarlet." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 54, no. 1 (2004): 31-37.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1283. Scheideman, Warren. "A Study in Scarlet: Canonical Theme and Structure." Canadian Holmes 17, no. 3 (1994): 20-26.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // An examination of "the adventure that started it all."
1284. Speck, Gordon R. "Three Men of Note and the Mormons in A Study in Scarlet." The Camden House Journal 16, no. 3 (1994): 2-3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1285. Sullivan, Greg. "Review--The Sherlock Holmes Reference Library: A Study in Scarlet edited by Leslie Klinger." The Holmes & Watson Report 5, no. 4 (2001): 21, 30.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

1286. Thomas, Katie-Louise. "Racial Alliance and Postal Networks in Conan Doyle's 'A Study in Scarlet.'" Journal of Colonialism & Colonial History 2, no. 1 (2001).
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Seeks to place Arthur Conan Doyle's A Study in Scarlet (1887) within the broader context of the notion that blood brotherhood transcended nation. According to this idea, in a process facilitated by the revolution in communications, Anglo-American racial "reunion" might lead to the foundation of an inter-imperial body politic. Doyle absorbed through fiction and other readings a deep interest in and knowledge of the United States. His writings also reflect his fear that the black races, the children of Britain's second empire, could strike back against and infect the mother country. His deep kinship with America was expressed in a "rhetorical imperative of racial unity"; this offered an antidote for the British, a means "to reclaim a white confederacy and re-stabilize their imperial position." These preoccupations are reflected in the text of A Study in Scarlet, in which the narrative is uncomfortably split between London and the American West. Though the cultural contexts are different, the character of Sherlock Holmes, the tracker of crime, has deep affinities with the pathfinders and pioneers of the American West.
1287. Utechin, Nicholas. "Review--'The Oxford Sherlock Holmes: A Study in Scarlet' edited with an introduction by Owen Dudley Edwards." The Ritual, no. 12 (1993): 44-45.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1288. Vizoskie, Ben. "Who Wrote the American Chapters of A Study in Scarlet?" Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 50, no. 2 (2000): 29-36.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

06B WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- TALES -- SUSSEX VAMPIRE (5)

1289. "The Adventure of the Sussex Vampire." Scholastic Voice 64, no. 16 (1980): 14-17, 23.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Illustrated.
1290. Crelling, Jack. "Sussex Vampire Déjà Vu." The Camden House Journal 29, no. 3 (2007): 2-5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1291. Healey, Tim. "Carlo, Hacky and the poison that wasn't: thoughts on 'The Sussex Vampire'." The Ritual, no. 27 (2001): 17-26.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1292. Kessel, Joseph T. "The Sussex Vampire Song." Canadian Holmes 27, no. 2 (2003): 14-15.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1293. Vandenbroek, Robyn Ryan. "Grades 5 & up: Fiction." School Library Journal 43, no. 2 (1997): 100.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews a number of books including one with a reference to Doyle. Cresswell, Helen, comp. Mystery Stories: An Intriguing Collection. illus. by Adrian Reynolds. 224p. CIP. Kingfisher. 1996. pap. $6.95. ISBN 0-7534-5025-9. LC 96-1435. "Cresswell has compiled 19 mystery stories from a variety of well-known and critically acclaimed authors. For those who enjoy traditional detective stories, there is Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's 'The Adventure of the Sussex Vampire.' Classic mystery buffs will appreciate Agatha Christie's 'The Adventures of Johnnie Waverly.' Those interested in a blend of realism and fantasy will enjoy the selections by Ray Bradbury and Dino Buzzati, and an excerpt from Emily Bronte's Wuthering Heights will appeal to fans of gothic romance. All of the plots are compelling and should spark the interest of reluctant readers. This is a haunting anthology with an interesting blend of genres, however, many of these stories do appear in other collections such as Diana Wynne Jones's Hidden Turnings (Greenwillow, 1990), making it an additional purchase."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

06B WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- TALES -- THOR BRIDGE (4)

1294. Gross, Adam, and Jerzy Kunz. "Suicidal shooting masked using a method described in Conan Doyle's Novel." American Journal of Forensic Medicine & Pathology 16, no. 2 (1995): 164-167.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The case of a suicide by gunshot is presented in which the person committing the suicide used a method described by Conan Doyle in one of his novels: conceal the weapon and make the suicide appear to be a homicide.
1295. King, Shannon. "Behavior Viewed With Disapprobation (or a THOR Thubject)." The Camden House Journal 18, no. 11 (1996): 2-3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1296. Prahlow, Joseph A., Scarlett Long, and Jeffrey J. Barnard. "A suicide disguised as a homicide: Return to Thor Bridge." American Journal of Forensic Medicine & Pathology 19, no. 2 (1998): 186-189.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Suicides staged as homicides are uncommon. We present a case of a self-inflicted gunshot wound of the chest disguised by the victim as a homicide, using a method described by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle in his Sherlock Holmes story, "The Problem of Thor Bridge."
1297. White, Kathryn. "The Problem of Thor Bridge." The Musgrave Papers, no. 10 (1997): 50-61.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

06B WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- TALES -- THREE GABLES (2)

1298. Dorn, William S. "Bill Dorn Continues His Fixation with Important Dates: Adventurous Appointments With The Three Gables." Baker Street West 1 6, no. 2 (2000): 22-24.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1299. Hedberg, Lloyd R., Jr. "Reconsidering Dakin on The Three Gables: A Response to D. Martin Dakin's Rejection of "The Adventure of the Three Gables" from the Canon; His Falsest Note of All." Shoso-In Bulletin 13, no. (2003): 55-70.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

06B WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- TALES -- THREE STUDENTS (4)

1300. "The Mammoth Book of Vintage Whodunnits." Kirkus Reviews 74, no. 1 (2006): 18-19.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "The Mammoth Book of Vintage Whodunnits," edited by Maxim Jakubowski. The review comments that "Readers will look in vain for Agatha Christie, Ellery Queen and John Dickson Carr, though Jakubowski includes a negligible locked-room puzzle by E. Charles Vivian, superfluous stories from Poe and Conan Doyle and unclassifiable curios by M.P. Shiel and C. Daly King." The Doyle story is "The Adventure of the Three Students."
1301. "Mystery Notes." Publishers Weekly 252, no. 50 (2005): 45-46.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Notes publication of The Mammoth Book of Vintage Who-dunnits, edited by Maxim Jakubowski. (Carroll & Graf, $13.95 paper 512p ISBN 1-59058-169-5) "The usual suspects are there of course, spinning their tales effortlessly and effectively, like Wilkie Collins with The Biter Bit, Baroness Orczy with The Dublin Mystery, Alexandre Dumas with Markheim, and the inevitable Edgar Allan Poe with The Purloined Letter and Arthur Conan Doyle with The Adventure of the Three Students -- not the best Sherlock Holmes mystery, but not a bad pick for this compilation...."
1302. Lydon, Michael. "The Three Students": An Awful Warning." The Musgrave Papers, no. 13 (2000): 81-87.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

1303. Speck, Gordon R. "Story and 'The Three Students'." The Camden House Journal 17, no. 8 (1995): 2-3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

06B WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- TALES -- VALLEY OF FEAR (14)

1304. Burke, James. "Connections." Scientific American 278, no. 1 (1998): 113.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Look at the views of James Burke as he relate to the question on who came up first with the idea of evolution. Includes reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...McParlan's work was not, however, to go totally unrecognized. In 1914 he became the internationally acclaimed hero of a novel entitled Valley of Fear. Well, he would have been such but for the fact that the author ended up naming the book's detective protagonist something else. McParlan's heroics were fictionally appropriated by (the already internationally famous) Sherlock Holmes. Given McParlan's fate, it's ironic that Valley of Fear was to be Sherlock's last case, too. After which his creator, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, turned to expressing himself through a different medium. The kind that sat around tables and got up to what I was playing at the other night. Because in 1914 Doyle stopped writing and took over where Wallace and Lodge had left off: he became a leading light in the Society for Psychic Research...."
1305. Crelling, Jack. "Some Points of Light in The Valley of Fear." The Camden House Journal 17, no. 4 (1995): 2-3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1306. Darlington, Frank, George A. Vanderburgh, Thelma Beam, Doug Wigglesworth, Bob Coghill, and Trevor S. Raymond. "'Bookshelf' Reviews of Oxford's The Sign of the Four, The Memoirs of Sherlock Holmes, The Case Book of Sherlock Holmes, The Return of Sherlock Holmes, The Valley of Fear, His Last Bow and The Books of Michael Harrison." Canadian Holmes 17, no. 4 (1994): 30-36.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1307. Gilliland, William. "A Timely Report on The Valley of Fear." The Camden House Journal 26, no. 12 (2004): 2-3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1308. Harris, Jay. "In The Valley of Fear." Shoso-In Bulletin 9, no. (1999): 19-24.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1309. Johnson, Roger. "Review--'The Oxford Sherlock Holmes: The Valley of Fear' edited with an introduction by Owen Dudley Edwards." The Ritual, no. 12 (1993): 60-63.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1310. Kenny, Kevin. "The Molly Maguires and The Valley of Fear." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 55, no. 2 (2005): 24-31.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1311. ———. "The Molly Maguires in popular culture." Journal of American Ethnic History 14, no. 4 (1995): 27.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Examines how the myth of the Molly Maguires was both elaborated and contested in popular fiction and in film. Semi-fiction approach; Albert Aiken's 'The Molly Maguires: or, The Black Diamond of Hazelton'; Daniel Doyle's 'Molly Maguire, the Terror of the Coal Fields'; 'Coal-Mine Tom or Fighting the Molly Maguires' by Sgt. O'Donnell; 'The Molly Detective'; Arthur Conan Doyle's 'The Valley of Fear'.
1312. Lovisi, Gary. "The First Harboiled Detective: The Strange Case of Birdy Edwards." Shoso-In Bulletin 4, no. (1994): 64-69.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

1313. ———. "The Molly Maguires: The Real Birdy Edwards in the Real Valley of Fear!" Shoso-In Bulletin 10, no. (2000): 57-62.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1314. Robinson, Robert E. "The So-Called Porlock Enigma." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 4 (1994): 223-224.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The author argues that the true identity of Porlock is none other than Professor Moriarty.
1315. Rouby, Jason. "Porlock Was a Woman: A Postulation Stoutly Defended." Shoso-In Bulletin 4, no. (1994): 51-53.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1316. Wood, Peter H. "Excellent Watson! ... An Almanac!" Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 1 (1994): 34-39.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Some thoughts on the dating of this tale, in reference to Whitaker's Almanack, the use codes and ciphers, and on the person known as Fred Porlock.
1317. Wrigglesworth, Doug. "Bookshelf: The Valley of Fear." Canadian Holmes 17, no. 4 (1994): 33-34.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews "The Valley of Fear" from The Oxford Sherlock Holmes.

06B WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- TALES -- VEILED LODGER (1)

1318. Wills-Wood, Chris. "The Veiled Lodger: a physical examination." The Ritual, no. 13 (1994): 22-23.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

06B WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- TALES -- WISTERIA LODGE (1)

1319. Bousquet, Robert J. "The Strange Tongue of the Mulatto of Wisteria Lodge: A Linguistic Investigation of the Mulatto's Speech." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 2 (1994): 75-81.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Some thoughts and observations on the unnamed mulatto who appears in this tale.

06B WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- TALES -- YELLOW FACE (4)

1320. Cuninghame, Henry. "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of Race." Journal of Popular Culture 28, no. 2 (1994): 113-125.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "This article discusses the case of racism in the Sherlock Holmes story, The Yellow Face. The publication of a short story defending the marriage of a black man to a white woman would not be too unusual for the 1990s, but the widespread distribution of a similar story in the 1890s is a historical oddity. One hundred years ago, the Sherlock Holmes stories were some of the most popular and widely read in print. The Yellow Face brought before the reading public the volatile topic of just such an interracial couple, the prejudice they encountered, and the precarious fate of their mulatto child. Because of some improbable and illogical developments in the narrative, this case ranks among some of the poorer in the Sherlock Holmes cannon when viewed strictly as a detective story. But when examined as a vehicle for delivering a didactic message on racial attitudes that was half-a-century ahead of its time, The Yellow Face reveals itself to be shrewdly constructed. In the opinion of mystery writer John Dickson Carr, only an ardent Sherlockian can find high merit in The Yellow Face. The story certainly supports the view that a didactic intention may undermine artistry, at least when the tale is evaluated solely as a mystery."
1321. Duke, Michael. "Lucy: 'A Little Coal-Black Negress' Emancipation and 'The Yellow Face'." Shoso-In Bulletin 10, no. (2000): 116-120.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

1322. Hall, John. "The Yellow Face' Through the Window." The Musgrave Papers, no. 11 (1998): 31-39.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

1323. Heifetz, Carl L. "A Scientific Lesson Learned From 'The Yellow Face'." The Holmes & Watson Report 8, no. 1 (2004): 33-36.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

06C WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- SHERLOCK HOLMES (174)

1324. "The evidence on Holmes." The Guardian (London), October 16, 1999: 21.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Five letters to the editor in response to an earlier article, ("The Plot Thickens," October 13) on Holmes.

1325. "Sherlock Holmes, Geometry Proofs, and Backward Reasoning." Mathematics Teacher 96, no. 8 (2003): 544-546.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents information on backward reasoning developed by Sherlock Holmes for searching knowledge and solving geometric proofs. Example of a problem on geometry; Benefit obtained from backward thinking skills; Application of backward reasoning on product development.

1326. "Sherlock Holmes: The Unauthorized Biography." Publishers Weekly 253, no. 35 (2006): 38-38.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "Sherlock Holmes: The Unauthorized Biography," by Nick Rennison.

1327. Accardo, Pasquale. "Yes, Virginia, There Is a Mrs. Sherlock Holmes." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 50, no. 1 (2000): 31-34.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

1328. Alberstat, Mark. "Sherlock Holmes and Rugby." Canadian Holmes 18, no. 3 (1995): 16-18.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

1329. André, Didierjean, and Gobet Fernand. "Sherlock Holmes -- an expert's view of expertise." British Journal of Psychology 99, no. 1 (2008): 109-125.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // In recent years, there has been an intense research effort to understand the cognitive processes and structures underlying expert behaviour. Work in different fields, including scientific domains, sports, games and mnemonics, has shown that there are vast differences in perceptual abilities between experts and novices, and that these differences may underpin other cognitive differences in learning, memory and problem solving. In this article, we evaluate the progress made in the last years through the eyes of an outstanding, albeit fictional, expert: Sherlock Holmes. We first use the Sherlock Holmes character to illustrate expert processes as described by current research and theories. In particular, the role of perception, as well as the nature and influence of expert knowledge, are all present in the description of Conan Doyle's hero. In the second part of the article, we discuss a number of issues that current research on expertise has barely addressed. These gaps include, for example, several forms of reasoning, the influence of emotions on cognition, and the effect of age on experts' knowledge and cognitive processes. Thus, although nearly 120-year-old, Conan Doyle's books show remarkable illustrations of expert behaviour, including the coverage of themes that have mostly been overlooked by current research. [Abstract from author]

1330. Andrews, Crispin. "Starter Holmes." The Times Educational Supplement, no. 4566 (2004): 14-15.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A unit of work on observation and logical deduction that invites students to emulate Sherlock Holmes, the fictional detective created by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, is provided.

1331. Armstrong, Walter P., Jr. "The Literary Holmes." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- 44, no. 3 (1994): 135-140.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents evidence that Watson revised his opinion of Holmes literary knowledge from his original "nil" to something more comprehensive.
1332. Ashworth, Peter. "Review--The Somnambulist and the Detective, Vincent Starrett and Sherlock Holmes Musgrave Monograph Number Ten by Susan Rice." The Ritual, no. 27 (2001): 56-57.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1333. Austin, John M. "Letter to the Editor ('Holmes and Prime Ministers')." Shoso-In Bulletin 6, no. (1996): 157.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1334. Aykroyd, Clarissa. "Did Sherlock Holmes have a Canadian Background?" Canadian Holmes 20, no. 3 (1997): 5-9.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1335. Baker, Simon. "The Character Who Refused to Die." Spectator 299, no. 9254/9255 (2005): 64-64.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews books "The New Annotated Sherlock Holmes, Volume III: The Novels," by Arthur Conan Doyle and "Sherlock Holmes: The Unauthorized Biography," by Nick Rennison.
1336. Ballew, Hunter. "Sherlock Holmes, master problem solver." Mathematics Teacher 87, no. (1994): 596-601.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The writer discusses the connections between Sherlock Holmes's methods and mathematical problem solving. Holmes investigated deductively, reasoned mathematically, used many different strategies, liked to solve mathematics problems, and often used a type of indirect proof. Like Holmes, students need to make observations and then test to see if these observations lead toward a solution. They should consider a problem, but they should take a break if they cannot see a solution after some time; they should gather data and look for patterns; they should question obvious facts; they should learn from errors by taking the time to look for them and correct them; and they should use indirect proofs. The writer suggests that mathematics teachers need to promote imagination, observation, and curiosity in students."
1337. Barnhardt, Randall. "The Detective & the Zoologist: Sherlock Holmes and George Edward Challenger." Canadian Holmes 24, no. 4 (2001): 5-7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1338. Barrett, Mike. "Review--My Dear Holmes: A Study in Sherlock by Gavin Brend." The Ritual, no. 14 (1994): 55-57.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1339. Bell, Joseph. "Mr. Sherlock Holmes (reprint)." The Musgrave Papers, no. 7 (1994): 83-87.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1340. Benstock, Bernard. "The 'Art' of Sherlock Holmes Elementary, My dear Watson." Baker Street Miscellanea, no. 75 (1994): 14-20.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1341. Berdan, Marshall S. "The Signs of the Two: What Chinese Astrology Tells us About the Characters of Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson, With Some Observations on the Dynamics of Their Binomial Relationship." Shoso-In Bulletin 10, no. (2000): 75-84.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1342. ———. "Two years in Tibet? Dear Me, Mr. Holmes." Shoso-In Bulletin 11, no. (2001): 63-73.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1343. Bergquist, John. "50 Years Ago." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 5, no. 3 (2001): 3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Some notes and observations on Gavin Brend and the 1951 publication of his My

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Dear Holmes, "the most complete 'biography' of Holmes to date."

1344. Betzner, Ray. "Sherlock Holmes-Coward? The Great Hiatus Reconsidered." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 50, no. 4 (2000): 28-30.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1345. ———. "Three Telegrams and a Funeral: Speculation on the Events Following the 'Death' of Sherlock Holmes." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 49, no. 4 (1999): 36-41.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1346. Bin Adam, Aziz. "Sherlock Holmes and the Tibetan Healing: Tibet Revisited." Shoso-In Bulletin 9, no. (1999): 10-12.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1347. Black, Edward. "Holmes's Formula for a Fellowship." The Scotsman, October 17, 2002: 3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "For Sherlock Holmes, the use of chemistry to help him catch his Victorian adversaries was elementary, but now the master sleuth has become the first fictional character to be awarded a scientific honorary fellowship for his pioneering efforts. Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's creation has been honoured by the Royal Society of Chemistry for his use of forensic science that was way ahead of its time and prefigured such modern techniques as DNA fingerprinting...."
1348. Blake, Robin. "Hutton-le-Moors." TLS, no. (2005): 15-15.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a letter to the editor about the birthplace and ancestral manor accorded to Sherlock Holmes by his latest biographer.
1349. Bogomoletz, Wladimir V. "Who Was François le Villard? Sherlock Holmes and the Paris Detective Service." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 51, no. 3 (2001): 14-23.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1350. Booth, Matthew. "Review--The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes by Michael and Mollie Hardwick." The Ritual, no. 11 (1993): 51.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1351. Boyer, Skip. "The Masonic Game is Afoot: Was Sherlock Holmes a Brother?" Shoso-In Bulletin 12, no. (2002): 98-101.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1352. Bradway, Jeffrey Alan. "Upon the True Provenance of Sherlock Holmes's Stradivarius." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 46, no. 3 (1996): 30-33.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1353. Brady, Michael J. "Sherlock Holmes The Father of Modern Critical Thinking." Shoso-In Bulletin 11, no. (2001): 121-126.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1354. Bruxner, Pamela. "Review -- Aspects of Holmes II: Scrutinizing Holmes, York 11-13 June 1993." The Musgrave Papers, no. 6 (1993): 98-103.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1355. Burns, Jeffrey. "Sherlock Holmes and Psychological Types." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 51, no. 1 (2001): 15-22.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1356. Burns, Timothy. "The Rationalism of Father Brown." Perspectives on Political Science 34, no. 1 (2005): 37-45.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents information on a study about the Father Brown stories by G. K. Chesterton with multiple references to Holmes.
1357. Butler, Allen. "Sherlock Holmes and Euclid's Fifth Postulate." Canadian Holmes 22, no. 2 (1998): 24-25.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1358. Campbell, Mary. "Sherlock Holmes and Scotland Yard." Canadian Holmes 26, no. 4 (2003): 28-32.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1359. ———. "Sherlock Holmes and Scotland Yard." Canadian Holmes 27, no. 1 (2003): 23-29.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1360. ———. "Sherlock Holmes: Diabetic." Canadian Holmes 21, no. 3 (1998): 4-19.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1361. Campbell, Paul J. "Reviews." Mathematics Magazine 69, no. 1 (1996): 76.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the article "Sherlock Holmes: Master Problem Solver," by Hunter Ballew in the November 1994 edition of the Mathematics Teacher.
1362. Cary, Alice. "Midnight Missions, Abducted Authors & Super Sleuths." Biography 5, no. 12 (2001): 26.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a question-and-answer advisory relating to celebrities. Includes one Q & A dealing with Doyle and Holmes. "Q: Is the character Sherlock Holmes based on a real detective? A: Not a detective, but he is based on a real person--a Scottish surgeon named Joseph Bell. The young Arthur Conan Doyle studied with Dr. Bell at the University of Edinburgh Medical School in 1877 and later worked as his assistant. Whenever Bell met a patient, he would use his powers of observation and deduction to determine the person's medical problem before examination or questioning. Often Dr. Bell would startle patients by correctly guessing their habits, occupation, nationality, and sometimes even their name. Conan Doyle noted: 'Dr. Bell would sit in his receiving room... and diagnose the people as they came in, before they even opened their mouths. He would tell them details of their past life; and hardly would he ever make a mistake.' Conan Doyle dedicated The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes to his mentor and literary inspiration."
1363. Caudell, Marcia. "Sherlock Holmes and Women of the '90s: A Feminist Perspective." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 50, no. 4 (2000): 37-43.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1364. Chabot, Bruce G. "Was Sherlock Holmes a Mason?" Shoso-In Bulletin 8, no. (1998): 117-120.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1365. Cheng, Henry P. "Chinese Articles on Sherlock Holmes." Shoso-In Bulletin 14, no. (2004): 50-52.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1366. ———. "P.I.: Sherlock Holmes' Profession." Shoso-In Bulletin 11, no. (2001): 112-117.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1367. Cobern-Kullman, Dana. "Sherlock Holmes: The Unauthorized Biography." School Library Journal 53, no. 2 (2007): 149-149.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews "Sherlock Holmes: The Unauthorized Biography," by Nicholas Rennison.
1368. Convoy, Scott. "Elementary." The Guardian (London), October 14, 1999: 23.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Letter to the editor. "Was Sherlock Holmes French?' asks John Henley (The plot thickens, G2 October 13) because he refuses a knighthood and accepts the Legion d'Honneur - 'would a true Englishman do that?' No, but a Scotsman would. He speaks perfect French, always the most-favoured foreign language of educated Scots. His grandmother was French - it doesn't take much to picture his grandfather, a Jacobean Scot perhaps (remember the auld alliance). He wears a deerstalker and a macfarlane coat. Oh, and his creator was a Scotsman. You are left with the not at all improbable likelihood that Holmes was Scottish. N'est-ce pas?"

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

1369. Coppola, Joseph A. "Optics and Sherlock Holmes: A Detective's Tool." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 45, no. 2 (1995): 106-113.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1370. Couchman, Jason. "Sherlock Holmes and Opium Use: Detecting Holmes's Mystery Narcotic." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 3 (1994): 149-51.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A discussion of Holmes use of the drug as related in some of the tales.
1371. Crelling, Jack. "Sherlock Holmes: The Roommate From Hell?" The Camden House Journal 16, no. 4 (1994): 2-3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1372. ———. "Sherlock Holmes: The Roommate From Hell? Part II." The Camden House Journal 16, no. 5 (1994): 2-3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1373. Crom, Scott. "Holmes as Thinker versus Holmes as Logician." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 2 (1994): 91-96.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Offers some clarifications on deductive and inductive reasoning, logic, and Holmes views on his own methods.
1374. Curchin, L. A. "Sherlock Holmes: Classicist." Canadian Holmes 22, no. 2 (1998): 9-10.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1375. Dahlinger, Susan E. "The Sherlock Holmes We Never Knew." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 49, no. 3 (1999): 7-27.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1376. Dale, Doris. "What is Sherlock Holmes's Favorite Color? A Preliminary Study." The Camden House Journal 16, no. 10 (1994): 2-5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1377. Darak, Greg. "Grit in a Sensitive Instrument." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 2 (1994): 98-107.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Some thoughts on Holmes' attitude toward the world of emotions, countering the stereotypical view of Holmes as a cold and rational machine.
1378. Davies, David Stuart. "Keeping up appearances: an investigation into Sherlock Holmes' use of disguise." The Musgrave Papers, no. 7 (1994): 49-60.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1379. Diamond, Susan Z. "The Noblest Bachelor: An Interview with Mr. Sherlock Holmes." Varieties of Ash 2, no. 1 (1994): 25-31.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1380. Dirda, Michael. "'On Glancing Over My Notes': Some Reflections on Sherlock Holmes and the Baker Street Irregulars." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 50, no. 2 (2000): 6-17.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1381. Dorler, Susan. "Analysis of Sherlock Holmes's handwriting." Varieties of Ash 2, no. 1 (1994): 56-58.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

1382. Doyle, Michael. "Sherlock Holmes and the Legacy of Rachel Howells." Canadian Holmes 19, no. 1 (1995): 17-41.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1383. Edington, Shane R. "Sherlock Holmes and Criminal Procedure." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 49, no. 3 (1999): 45-51.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1384. Fell, Christine. "Review--'Back to Baker Street: An Appreciation of Sherlock Holmes and London' edited by Roger Johnson and Jean Upton." The Musgrave Papers, no. 7 (1994): 116.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1385. ———. "Review--'The Baker Street Irregular: The Unauthorized Biography of Sherlock Holmes' by Austin Mitchelson." The Musgrave Papers, no. 7 (1994): 120-121.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1386. Fish, Ronald E. "Sherlock Holmes--Freemason?" The Holmes & Watson Report 3, no. 5 (1999): 27-34.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1387. Fouassier, E. "Sherlock Holmes, Watson and cocaine. A literary contribution to the history of drug addiction." Rev Hist Pharm (Paris) 41, no. 300 (1994): 65-70.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // From 1887 to 1927, Conan Doyle devoted fifty-six short stories and four novels to the extraordinary investigations of Sherlock Holmes. Special passages from these works, gathered here in the form of long extracts, evoke the passion of the celebrated detective for cocaine and constitute rather generally an original sort of evidence on the emergence of drug addicts in Europe at the end of the 19th century.
1388. France, F. Dennis. "Sherlock Holmes's Deductive Reasoning and the Medical Profession." Shoso-In Bulletin 9, no. (1999): 6-9.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1389. Fry, Samuel Edwin. "The Influence of Mr. Sherlock Holmes on 20th Century Arctic Exploration." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 46, no. 3 (1996): 22-29.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1390. Gibson, Brian Neil. "The Ploys of Sherlock Holmes." Canadian Holmes 21, no. 1 (1997): 6-17.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1391. Goodrich, William D. "Sherlock Holmes: Shakespeare Scholar or The Game's Afoot." Baker Street Miscellanea, no. 76 (1994): 12-18.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1392. Hall, John. "Holmes and Lestrade." The Ritual, no. 22 (1998): 6-8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1393. ———. "Sherlock Holmes & A. J. Raffles." The Musgrave Papers, no. 12 (1999): 100-114.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1394. ———. "The Sporting Achievements of Mr. Sherlock Holmes." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 46, no. 1 (1996): 43-51.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1395. Hall, John, and Yuichi Hirayama. "Questions on Holmes." Shoso-In Bulletin 11, no. (2001): 25-31.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

1396. Harding, Terry. "The Development of Detective Policing in Victorian Times (and Sherlock Holmes' Contribution Thereto)." The Ritual, no. 22 (1998): 9-12.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1397. Harrington, Hugh T. "The Birthplace of Sherlock Holmes." The Holmes & Watson Report 3, no. 1 (1999): 17-19.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1398. ———. "Sherlock Holmes's Mother." The Holmes & Watson Report 3, no. 2 (1999): 4-5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1399. Healey, Tim. "'You Know My Methods' Musing on the Master: Some Correlations and Critical Comments." The Ritual, no. 21 (1998): 19-26.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1400. Hedberg, Lloyd R., Jr. "The Decline and Demise of Sherlock Holmes and Doctor Watson." Shoso-In Bulletin 14, no. (2004): 34-49.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1401. Henley, Jon. "The Plot Thickens." The Guardian (Manchester), Oct 13, 1999.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "He was a wine connoisseur, spoke fluent, accentless French and was awarded the Legion d'Honneur. Then there's his marked resemblance to the French painter Horace Vernet. Could it be? Sherlock Holmes a Frenchman! Jon Henley takes on the case."
1402. Higgins, W. W. "Henry the Fifth and Holmes: A Case of Affinity." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 45, no. 4 (1995): 215-220.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1403. Hirayama, Yuichi. "Dental Aspects of Sherlock Holmes." Shoso-In Bulletin 10, no. (2000): 121-127.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1404. ———. "The Master and 'Baritsu'." Shoso-In Bulletin 3, no. (1993): 61-62.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1405. Hirayama, Yuichi, and John Hall. "Questions on Holmes." The Ritual, no. 28 (2001): 23-26.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1406. ———. "Questions on Holmes." The Ritual, no. 26 (2000): 23-33.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1407. Hobbs, Don. "The Birthplace of Sherlock Holmes." The Holmes & Watson Report 3, no. 1 (1999): 27-30.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1408. ———. "The Father of Sherlock Holmes." The Holmes & Watson Report 3, no. 5 (1999): 41-42.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1409. ———. "Who Was Sherlock Holmes's Mother?" The Holmes & Watson Report 3, no. 2 (1999): 26-27.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1410. Hughes, Mel. "SH." Shoso-In Bulletin 8, no. (1998): 239-240.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1411. Hunt, A. Godfrey. "Did Holmes Have a Family?" Shoso-In Bulletin 10, no. (2000): 63-65.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

1412. ———. "Holmes Is Arrested." Shoso-In Bulletin 10, no. (2000): 113-115.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1413. ———. "How Did Holmes Use the Telegram?" Shoso-In Bulletin 13, no. (2003): 44-46.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1414. Huret, Gaston Corday, III. "The Laughter of Sherlock Holmes (translated by Don Hardenbrook)." Shoso-In Bulletin 7, no. (2007): 182-187.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1415. Hyder, William. "Holmes Away from Home: The Ins and Outs of Baker Street." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 54, no. 3 (2004): 16-22.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1416. Iwamoto, Tsutomu. "Art in the Blood: A Portrait Gallery of Sherlock Holmes." The Nezire Zanmai International 1, no. (1991): 12-20.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1417. J.C. "NB." TLS, no. 5352 (2005): 16.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews several books. "Sherlock Holmes: The Unauthorized Biography," by Nick Rennison; "The Real Life of Anthony Burgess," by Andrew Biswell; "C U Next Tuesday: A Good Look at Bad Language," by Ruth Wajnryb.
1418. Jain, Pragya. "Sherlock Holmes and Hercule Poirot: Two Faces of the Same Coin." Shoso-In Bulletin 6, no. (1996): 13-14.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1419. Johnson, Roger. "Review--'Holmes and Watson: a Study in Friendship' by June Thomson." The Ritual, no. 15 (1995): 47-49.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1420. Jordan, Anne. "Review--'Sherlock Holmes: Fact or Fiction' by T. S. Blakeney; '221B: Studies in Sherlock Holmes' by Vincent Starrett." The Ritual, no. 13 (1994): 47-48.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1421. ———. "Was Holmes a Cab Driver?" The Ritual, no. 11 (1993): 8-12.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1422. Kendrick, Stephen. "Zen in art of Sherlock Holmes." Utne Reader, no. (2000): 5p.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the spiritual teachings of Sherlock Holmes, the fictitious [sic] investigator created by Arthur Conan Doyle. Holmes' ability to focus on details as a form of Zen; Spiritual principles used by Holmes in his work as an investigator.
1423. Key, Jack D., Marc A. Shampo, and Robert A. Kyle. "Doyle, Holmes, and Watson--a 'Special' Trinity." Mayo Clinic proceedings 80, no. 6 (2005): 722-722.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "This article focuses on physicians Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, John Watson and William Sherlock Holmes. Arthur Conan Doyle was both a physician and a versatile author of historical novels, short stories, volumes of poems, plays, histories, science fiction, and publications on occult science. Holmes and Watson are 2 of the most immediately recognizable figures in popular culture. Their images have been adapted countless times for innumerable purposes. Biographical data concerning them can be drawn from the research efforts of Holmesian authorities. Arthur Conan Doyle, Sherlock Holmes, and John Watson were honored on a set of 4 stamps showing scenes from the adventures of Sherlock Holmes."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

1424. Klinger, Leslie S. "The Crimes of Sherlock Holmes." The Sherlock Holmes Review 5, no. 1 (1997): 27-30.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1425. ———. "On Sherlock Holmes's Money." New Baker Street Pillar Box 22, no. (1995): 26-28.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1426. ———. "What Do We Really Know About Sherlock Holmes and John H. Watson?" Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 54, no. 3 (2004): 6-15.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1427. ———. "The Writings of Sherlock Holmes." Baker Street West 1 10, no. 2 (2004): 29-32.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1428. ———. "The Writings of Sherlock Holmes." Baker Street West 1 3, no. 1 (1997): 23-26.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1429. Knapp, Ronald. "The Religion of Sherlock Holmes." Shoso-In Bulletin 7, no. (1997): 62-69.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1430. Kolodrubec, Alex. "Sherlock Holmes in Non-Scandalous Bohemia." Shoso-In Bulletin 14, no. (2004): 144-148.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1431. Landis, David. "Holmes the Marksman: A Man and his Mettle." Shoso-In Bulletin 5, no. (1995): 94-96.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1432. ———. "The Missing Years Revealed." Shoso-In Bulletin 4, no. (1994): 76-83.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1433. ———. "The Political Faith and Practical Politics of Mr. Sherlock Holmes." Shoso-In Bulletin 3, no. (1993): 29-34.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1434. ———. "Sherlock Holmes, the World's First Cognition Scientist." Shoso-In Bulletin 7, no. (1997): 170-176.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1435. Leckie, Ross. "Sherlock Holmes : The Unauthorized Biography." The Times (London), May 20, 2006: 17.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of the book by Nick Rennison. "...What makes this book very good, though, is that Dennison (sic) sets his biography in its historical context. He explains the facts about the Irish Republican Brotherhood or Fenians, for example, and so helps us understand why Doyle's fictional Irish nationalist Moriarty was so difficult a problem. Weaving fact and fiction about fictional fact, this is ingenious, charming, informative and full of delight."
1436. Leitch, Thomas. "Neither Fish nor Fowl." Kirkus Reviews 74, no. 18 (2006): 918-918.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "Sherlock Holmes: The Unauthorized Biography," by Nick Rennison.
1437. Lennon, Peter. "A French Hound on the tales of Holmes; Sherlock Holmes has been branded a failure by a French professor. This attack is bound to cause offence to all fans of the great detective." The Guardian (London), August 13, 1994: 23.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "A French academic has just published a merciless study of Sherlock Holmes, exposing the great sleuth's educational, social and politically incorrect failings, which is bound to cause deep offence among Holmes's touchy idolisers. Pierre Nordon, an editor of the Livre de Poche, scornfully lists Holmes's educational achievements. Knowledge of literature: none; of philosophy: none; of astronomy: none (he does not know the theory of Copernicus). While he admits the Baker Street private eye's knowledge of

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- chemistry is 'profound', his anatomy is 'exact but spotty'. In politics he is 'feeble'...."
1438. Levin, Alfred A. "Sherlock Holmes: The Chicago Connection." Shoso-In Bulletin 8, no. (1998): 13-18.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1439. Lord, Graham. "Begorra, c'est elementaire, Miss Watson." The Sunday Times (London), May 19, 1996: 6.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Sherlock Holmes has been claimed by the French, but could have been Irish - and what about the doctor? Sherlock Holmes was not only partly French he probably came from Ireland. Pukka chaps who believe the great Baker Street detective was 100% British were appalled to learn on Thursday that a new Paris exhibition claims Holmes as French and says his grandmother, Emilie Vernet, died on the guillotine during the French revolution. Now the secretary of the Sherlock Holmes Society of London, Commander Geoffrey Stavert, suggests the detective was an Irishman...."
1440. Mason, Bill. "The Automation of Baker Street: Sherlock Holmes as Robot in Canon and Comics." The Holmes & Watson Report 5, no. 4 (2001): 25-30.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1441. ———. "Between the Lines: Thoughts on Sherlock Holmes and Two Remarkable Women." The Holmes & Watson Report 1, no. 5 (1997): 28-32.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1442. Mason, Emma. "Dogs, detectives and the famous Sherlock Holmes." International Journal of Cultural Studies 11, no. 3 (2008): 289-300.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The celebrity of Sherlock Holmes is almost universally signified through the iconic silhouetted image of a deerstalker hat and smoking pipe, one that secures his fame as a popular detective from the Victorian period to our own. Despite his aloof and sometimes prickly behaviour on the page, Holmes remains a favourite with a diverse group of audiences, instantly likeable to his contemporary readers. This article will connect the fond regard in which Holmes' character was held in the nineteenth century to the detective's relationship with dogs. Using Donna Haraway's recent theorization of dogs as 'companion species' in her manifesto on otherness, the article will suggest that the Victorians regarded Holmes' sleuthing fame as inseparable from his respect for animal otherness, one with which he is identified throughout Conan Doyle's stories. In this respect, I argue, Holmes is a hudo-graphical detective, his crimesolving powers rooted in his relationship with and to dogs. [Abstract from author]
1443. Masters, Rosalind. "Review--'Some Knowledge of Baritsu' by Hirayama Yuichi and John Hall." The Ritual, no. 19 (1997): 64-65.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1444. ———. "Review--'The Life and Times of Sherlock Holmes' by Phillip Weller and Christopher Roden." The Musgrave Papers, no. 6 (1993): 109.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1445. Michaud, Rosemary. "Sherlock Holmes: Born in the USA." The Holmes & Watson Report 3, no. 1 (1999): 25-27.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1446. Mighall, Robert. "Sherlock Holmes." TLS, no. 5354 (2005): 26.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book "Sherlock Holmes: The Biography," by Nick Rennison.
1447. Mitchell, Andrea L. "New Books." Addiction 103, no. 2 (2008): 339-342.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article presents a list of books published during the month of February 2008, including "Bacchus at Baker Street: Sherlock Holmes and Victorian Drinking Lore" by Patricia Guy. iUniverse, Inc. 2007, 150 pp, $13.95, ISBN-10: 0595455751, ISBN-13: 978-0595455751 (paperback)
1448. Morstein, Mona. "Sherlock Holmes and Homeopathy." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Sherlockiana 52, no. 4 (2002): 46-54.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

1449. Moss, Robert A. "Sherlock Holmes, Paul Ehrlich, and Salvarsan." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 1 (1994): 20-24.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Observations and speculations on what Holmes did, in the nature of chemical research, during his retirement years on the Sussex Downs.

1450. Narasimhana, Balajii. "Holmes and the Fair Sex." Shoso-In Bulletin 14, no. (2004): 61-62.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

1451. Nydell, Margaret. "Sherlock Holmes in Khartoum." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 51, no. 3 (2001): 5-13.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

1452. ———. "Sherlock Holmes Was an Arab." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 46, no. 2 (1996): 34-38.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

1453. O'Brien, James. "What kind of chemist was Sherlock Holmes?" Chemistry & industry, no. 11 (1993): 394-8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Sherlock Holmes, one of the best-known and highly rated of all fictional detectives, appears to have been an avid, analytical chemist. His devotion to, together with the use of, the scientific method in his profession has a special appeal to scientists. Careful reading reveals that the detective referred to theory on 64 separate occasions and to hypothesis on 29 occasions. Abundant evidence exists to indicate that Holmes conducted studies in such varied fields as acetones, coal tar derivatives, barium compounds, blood testing, and gemstones. Holmes was probably an amateur chemist, rather than a real user of the science, and he never solved a case by chemical means. His knowledge of chemistry, his use of chemicals, and his entire lifestyle are the very factors that create the eccentricity that has kept the character of Sherlock Holmes alive for so long. .

1454. Olding, Alan C. "Holmes and the Violin." Shoso-In Bulletin 12, no. (2002): 69.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

1455. ———. "Where Did Holmes Spend the Dark Days of World War Two?" Shoso-In Bulletin 14, no. (2004): 67-68.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

1456. Owen, Tim. "Aspics of Holmes." The Musgrave Papers, no. 8 (1995): 45-50.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

1457. Pai, Shraddha. "Holmes and India: More Than a Casual Connection." Shoso-In Bulletin 8, no. (1998): 84-92.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

1458. Parry, Rosemary C. "Always a Chivalrous Opponent: A Brief Study of Sherlock Holmes and Women." The Musgrave Papers, no. 6 (1993): 6-16.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

1459. Pearce, D. N. "Sherlock Holmes, Conan Doyle and cocaine." J Hist Neurosci 3, no. 4 (1994): 227-32.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

1460. Peters, Susan L. "Sherlock Holmes: The Unauthorized Biography." Library Journal 131, no. 15 (2006): 61-61.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article reviews the book "Sherlock Holmes: The Unauthorized Biography," by Nick Rennison.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

1461. Phelps, Percy. "Was Sherlock Holmes's Mother Indian?" Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 49, no. 1 (1999): 21-24.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1462. Press, Charles. "On the Birthday of the Master." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 53, no. 4 (2003): 11-14.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1463. Radford, John. "The Intelligence of Sherlock Holmes." The Musgrave Papers, no. 7 (1994): 43-48.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1464. Rawlings, Ray. "Sherlock Holmes: Lawbreaker." Canadian Holmes 19, no. 3 (1996): 6-10.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1465. Rhea, Tina. "Sherlock's Mum, with Some Sidelights on His Sex Life." The Holmes & Watson Report 3, no. 2 (1999): 8-10.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1466. Rice, Susan. "Sherlock Holmes: Possessor or Possessed?" Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 49, no. 2 (1999): 19-25.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1467. Richards, Dana. "Science and Sherlock Holmes." Shoso-In Bulletin 9, no. (1999): 63-73.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1468. Richardson, David. "Was Holmes an Apostle?" The Holmes & Watson Report 6, no. 1 (2002): 5-9.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1469. Roden, Barbara. "Canonical Misconceptions Number Three: Holmes and the Ladies." The Ritual, no. 18 (1996): 32-37.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1470. Ross, Billy E. "Sherlock Holmes: World Traveler or Master of Illusion (There Was Something Very Strange in all this)." Shoso-In Bulletin 4, no. (1994): 33-37.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1471. Scott, Alison M. "Organizing the Brain Attic: Indexing the Commonplace Books of Sherlock Holmes." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 4 (1994): 199-203.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents some observations and thoughts on Holmes memory and his memory aids--his commonplace books and indexes--and how these might have been arranged or structured.
1472. Seifert, Steven A. "Sherlock Holmes: Academic Toxicologist." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 51, no. 1 (2001): 23-27.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1473. Senter, R. Joel. "Silver Blaze or Mr. Sherlock Holmes' Greatest Joke." Shoso-In Bulletin 5, no. (1995): 33.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1474. Shreffler, Philip A. "Sherlock Holmes from Esthete to Icon." Baker Street Miscellanea, no. 75 (1994): 1-9.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1475. Smith, Edward S., Jr. "Sherlock Holmes--Born May 4, 1854 'The Reichenbach Plan'." The Holmes & Watson Report 3, no. 5 (1999): 43-48.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

1476. Snyder, Laura J. "Sherlock Holmes: scientific detective." Endeavour 28, no. 3 (2004): 104-108.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Sherlock Holmes was intended by his creator, Arthur Conan Doyle, to be a 'scientific detective'. Conan Doyle criticized his predecessor Edgar Allan Poe for giving his creation -- Inspector Dupin -- only the 'illusion' of scientific method. Conan Doyle believed that he had succeeded where Poe had failed; thus, he has Watson remark that Holmes has 'brought detection as near an exact science as it will ever be brought into the world.' By examining Holmes' methods, it becomes clear that Conan Doyle modelled them on certain images of science that were popular in mid- to late-19th century Britain. Contrary to a common view, it is also evident that rather than being responsible for the invention of forensic science, the creation of Holmes was influenced by the early development of it." [Abstract from author]
1477. Sobottke, Thomas M. "The Creative Sherlock Holmes: or, Was Holmes Really Right-Brain Dominant?" Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 45, no. 3 (1995): 167-173.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1478. Solberg, Andrew L. "Prisoner of His Profession (Or an Anachronistic Socratic Dialogue on Holmes's Conservatism)." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 49, no. 4 (1999): 42-49.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1479. ———. "Sherlock Holmes: Anti-Semite?" Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 51, no. 1 (2001): 35-41.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1480. Stampe, Mia. "Vernet and Thorvaldsen: A Discussion of the Vernet Relation and an Artistic Connection with Danish Roots." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 52, no. 3 (2002): 42-49.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1481. Stern, Madeleine B. "Sherlock Holmes, Bibliophile: Reconstructing Sherlock Holmes's Library." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 51, no. 2 (2001): 5-12.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1482. Sveum, Richard J. "50 Years Ago." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 5, no. 1 (2001): 3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the 1951 book The Crowded Box-Room; the author, Theodore Blegen; and the printer, Emerson Wulling. "In 1951 there appeared a small book in blue wrapper with a silhouette of Sherlock Holmes on the cover. It was titled The Crowded Box-Room, Sherlock Holmes as Poet by Theodore C. Blegen, Charter Member of the Norwegian Explorers: Minneapolis and Saint Paul Chapter of the Baker Street Irregulars....This book was the first of many fine press publications written by the members of the Norwegian Explorers and printed by Emerson G. Wulling and his Sumac Press...." Includes a photograph of Blegen, Harry Truman, and Hubert Humphrey.
1483. Takata, Gi-icharo. "The Model of Sherlock Holmes (translated and edited by Hirayama Yuichi)." Shoso-In Bulletin 13, no. (2003): 130-132.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1484. Taylor, Charles. "Baker Street Regular." New York Times, Nov 12, 2006: 59.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Sherlock Holmes: The Unauthorized Biography. By Nick Rennison. 280 pp. Atlantic Monthly Press. $24. One of the more charming details in Nick Rennison's 'Sherlock Holmes: The Unauthorized Biography' is that, until recently, a secretary at the Abbey National Building Society, located on London's Baker Street, was engaged to answer the letters written to Holmes. Letters to a fictional character? You can think of that as a mark of the gullible, or as the kind of thing people did in the bygone past. But Janet Maslin's recent New York Times review of Michael Connelly's latest thriller revealed that there exists today a number in Los Angeles where you can leave messages for Connelly's serialized detective, Harry Bosch. [Abstract from publisher].

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

1485. Taylor-Ide, Jesse Oak. "Ritual and the Liminality of Sherlock Holmes in The Sign of Four and The Hound of the Baskervilles." English Literature in Transition (1880-1920) 48, no. 1 (2005): 55-70.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1486. Took, Barry. "Some Thoughts on the Humour of Sherlock Holmes." The Musgrave Papers, no. 8 (1995): 12-18.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1487. Ueda, Hirotaka. "Holmes and Bacon." The Nezire Zanmai International 2, no. (1992): 66-67.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1488. ———. "Holmes and Newton." Shoso-In Bulletin 3, no. (1993): 59-60.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1489. Vaught, Richard L. "Polytheism, Monotheism and Sherlock Holmes." Shoso-In Bulletin 6, no. (1996): 37-39.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1490. Webster, Paul. "Sherlock's Own French Connection; France has claimed the top British sleuth as its own, reports Paul Webster." The Guardian (London), May 17, 1996: 15.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The clues are so thick on the ground that even Dr Watson would have to exclaim: 'Elementary, mon cher Holmes, you have the blood, the brains and the flair of a Frenchman.' For the next three months, the French Sherlock Holmes Society will provide evidence from a dozen adventures to prove that the Baker Street sleuth would be several volumes short of an opus without his French ancestry and a fascination for Gallic art and science. At the opening of an exhibition in Paris devoted to Holmes's split loyalty, members of the society even made the bizarre claim that they had discovered a grave in the French capital where they believe the fictional character was secretly buried in 1957...."
1491. White, Kathryn. "Sherlock Holmes was a Yorkshireman." The Musgrave Papers, no. 8 (1995): 23-28.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1492. Wood, Peter H. "Sherlock Holmes, Arthur Conan Doyle and H. P. Lovecraft: Three Attitudes to the Spiritual World." Canadian Holmes 29, no. 1 (2005): 14-23.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1493. Woods, Carol P. "Escott, the Peculiar Plumber or Holmes and the Housemaid." Shoso-In Bulletin 4, no. (1994): 96-98.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1494. Wright, Henry James. "Sherlock Holmes: The Man, the Myth, the Magic." The Ritual, no. 25 (2000): 13-22.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1495. ———. "Sherlock Holmes: The Man, the Myth, the Magic, Part II." The Ritual, no. 26 (2000): 5-13.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1496. Wurl, Otto A. "Sherlock Holmes -- His Service to the Royalty of Great Britain." Shoso-In Bulletin 5, no. (1995): 81-86.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1497. ———. "Sherlock Holmes -- The Other Side." Shoso-In Bulletin 4, no. (1994): 38-40.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

06C WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- SHERLOCK HOLMES -- KNOWLEDGE OF BEE CULTURE
(1)

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

1498. Moss, Robert A. "Some Observations Upon the Segregation of the Queen." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 4 (1994): 226-232.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The author explores the "numerous intersections of organic chemistry and apian husbandry" in the work of Holmes during his time on the Sussex Downs, that "a significant portion of Holmes's Practical Handbook was devoted to apian chemistry," and speculation "upon the possible content and import of Holmes's observations upon the segregation of the queen."

06C WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- SHERLOCK HOLMES -- KNOWLEDGE OF MUSIC
(1)

1499. Staubach, Edward R. "The Polyphonic Motets of Lassus." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 3 (1994): 169-172.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Some observations on Roland de Lassus, better known by his Italian name, Orlando di Lasso, and Holmes' interest in his music.

06C WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- SHERLOCK HOLMES -- PROTOTYPES -- DR. JOSEPH BELL AND OTHERS (19)

1500. "Did Conan Doyle play Dr Watson, on the case with a real Sherlock Holmes?". Daily Mail (London), January 3, 2000: 27.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Shortly before the black flag above the jail let the crowds swarming over Calton Hill know justice had been done, the condemned man made a remarkable request. Turning to Dr Henry Littlejohn, Edinburgh's chief medical officer who had come to witness the hanging, wife murderer Eugene Chantrelle said coolly: 'Give my compliments to Joe Bell. He did a good job in bringing me to the scaffold.' In 1878 the remark was widely reported, yet it remains a mystery. Joseph Bell was an eminent Victorian surgeon at Edinburgh's Royal Infirmary, who would amuse medical students by deducing the occupation of his patients from small clues in their appearance. This habit would later inspire a certain student called Arthur Conan Doyle to create the world's most famous detective in Sherlock Holmes. But could there have been more to it than that? Chantrelle's remark suggests Bell solved the murder, not those who took credit at the trial for proving the womanising alcoholic had disposed of his wife with a large dose of opium. If Bell was a real-life Sherlock Holmes, solving crimes that baffled the police, who was the real Doctor Watson who assisted in his secret detective work? The creator of a new BBC drama claims the model for Watson was Doyle himself, and that he and Bell were actively involved in solving crimes. In uncovering the evidence, screen writer David Pirie had to wrestle with mysteries that would have taxed even Holmes. Bell and Doyle were very private men and would in any case have been sworn to secrecy if they did special detective work for the Crown Office...."
1501. "Relations of Literature and Science, 1991-1992." Configurations 2, no. 2 (1994): 373-431.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes references to Doyle and Holmes. Roden, A. E., et al. "Humanism and Values in the Medical Short Stories of Arthur Conan Doyle." South Med J 85 (May 1992): 528-537; Westmoreland, B.F. "Arthur Conan Doyle, Joseph Bell, and Sherlock Holmes: A Neurologic Connection." Arch Neurol 48 (1991): 325-329.; Oderwald, A. K. "The Physician and Sherlock Holmes." J R Soc Med 84 (1991): 151-152; Roszell, Calvert. "The Devil's Foot and the Dweller at the Threshold." BSJ 41 (1991): 100-103.
1502. Addy, John. "Joseph Bell -- The Original Good Doctor." The Musgrave Papers, no. 7 (1994): 72-82.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1503. Appleby, Louis. "Doctoring the evidence: Famed physician was model for Sherlock Holmes." The Ottawa Citizen, August 20, 1995: C2.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...Our chief at that moment resembled no one more than Sherlock Holmes. No one, that is, except Joseph Bell. Bell was the most brilliant of Edinburgh's teachers of medicine in the second half of the 19th century, when that city's medicine led the world. Arthur Conan Doyle was among his students...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

1504. Berry, John. "Program picks & pans." Library Journal 120, no. 10 (1995): 46.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Previews the American Library Association's 114th Annual Conference in Chicago, June 22-28, 1995, with reference to Doyle and Holmes. Ely M. Liebow (Dr. Joe Bell: Model for Sherlock Holmes); Let a Woman in Your Life: The Women in Conan Doyle's Life and Fiction. Sublibrarians Scion of the Baker Street Irregulars.
1505. Cameron, Lucinda. "Sherlock Holmes and Amazing Case of the Doctor Who Inspired Him; Conan Doyle Archive Material to Go on show for First Time." Daily Mail (London), April 17, 2006: 28.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses new exhibit in Edinburgh. "'A fantastically observant man', he was a doctor rather than a detective, though he did wear a deerstalker hat and cloak. Dr Joseph Bell even used a magnifying glass, although it is not clear whether he ever smoked a pipe. Now, fascinating archive material about to go on public display for the first time has revealed just how much of an inspiration he was for Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's famous detective...."
1506. Cary, Alice. "Midnight Missions, Abducted Authors & Super Sleuths." Biography 5, no. 12 (2001): 26.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a question-and-answer advisory relating to celebrities. Includes one Q & A dealing with Doyle and Holmes. "Q: Is the character Sherlock Holmes based on a real detective? A: Not a detective, but he is based on a real person--a Scottish surgeon named Joseph Bell. The young Arthur Conan Doyle studied with Dr. Bell at the University of Edinburgh Medical School in 1877 and later worked as his assistant. Whenever Bell met a patient, he would use his powers of observation and deduction to determine the person's medical problem before examination or questioning. Often Dr. Bell would startle patients by correctly guessing their habits, occupation, nationality, and sometimes even their name. Conan Doyle noted: 'Dr. Bell would sit in his receiving room... and diagnose the people as they came in, before they even opened their mouths. He would tell them details of their past life; and hardly would he ever make a mistake.' Conan Doyle dedicated The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes to his mentor and literary inspiration."
1507. Chalmers, John. "You write the festival reviews." The Independent (London), August 7, 2006: 20.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of the exhibit in Edinburgh, "Conan Doyle and Joseph Bell: The Real Sherlock Holmes," Surgeons' Hall Museums. "This is a small but fascinating exhibition on Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and his teacher, the surgeon Joseph Bell, who was his inspiration for Sherlock Holmes. Bell's ability to learn much about his patients simply from his powers of observation is legendary, and several examples are given in this show...."
1508. Champkin, Julian. "Elementary! This is the real Sherlock Holmes." Daily Mail (London), May 20, 1999: 13.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...And if that sounds like Sherlock Holmes, it is because the young medical student was Arthur Conan Doyle and his teacher was Dr Joseph Bell - the man who inspired the creation of the great fictional detective. But new research seems to show that Bell was rather more than just an Edinburgh doctor - he may have been a real-life detective....But now the BBC would have us believe otherwise. David Pirie, script editor for a BBC series on Bell to be shown in the autumn, claims to have evidence that Bell was not only a doctor when Conan Doyle met him - he was a consulting detective as well...."
1509. Cohen, George. "Dr. Joe Bell: Model for Sherlock Holmes." Booklist 103, no. 16 (2007): 17.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'Dr. Joe Bell: Model for Sherlock Holmes,' by Ely M. Liebow.
1510. Donnelly, Brian. "Doors open free for St Andrew's Day." The Herald (Glasgow), November 14, 2007: 7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "More than 60 of Scotland's top visitor attractions will open their doors free of charge on St Andrew's Day, it was announced yesterday. Castles, museums, gardens and abbeys from Orkney to Dumfries and Galloway will all take part in the initiative designed to encourage Scots and tourists to celebrate Scotland's heritage and culture. Culture Minister Linda Fabiani, announcing the joint initiative by the National Trust for Scotland, Historic Scotland and the Association of Visitor Attractions, said: 'St Andrews Day is a day to celebrate Scotland.'...Ms. Fabiani made the announcement at the Royal College of Surgeons in

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Edinburgh which is hosting the Real Sherlock Holmes exhibition, one of the free attractions on St Andrew's Day....

1511. Gibb, Eddie. "Alimentary." The Sunday Herald, January 2, 2000: 12.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...The parallels between Bell and Holmes have been milked for all they are worth in a new two-part drama called Murder Rooms: The Dark Beginnings of Sherlock Holmes, which the BBC has high hopes it will be able to turn into a series. Think of a Victorian Inspector Morse with a heavy dollop of Edinburgh Gothic and you will get an idea of how this show looks. Much of the drama was shot in the narrow wynds of Edinburgh's Old Town and has a grim, claustrophobic feel that producer Ian Madden likens to the contemporary horror movie, Seven...."
1512. Gordon, Greg. "The game's afoot." The Sunday Times (London), April 6, 2008: 4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "With deer wandering by their windows and nothing but wild bird song to disturb them, Stephen and Carol Anne Brown thought they'd found their perfect rural idyll when they bought Mauricewood House 12 years ago. Little did they know that they had also purchased a piece of literary history. Selling agents may covet it on account of its accessibility, aspect and top notch amenities, but, for literary scholars, Mauricewood is better known as the home of Dr Joseph Bell, the Victorian physician credited with inspiring Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes. Now for sale at offers over Pounds 1.1m, Mauricewood is a grand Victorian mansion set in wooded grounds of 3 acres at Milton Bridge, just nine miles from central Edinburgh. The house lies at the foot of the Pentland Hills, with woodland to either side of the approach road and open countryside beyond...."
1513. Horne, Marc. "Letter makes real Holmes elementary." The Sunday Times (London), April 16, 2006: 13.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "He wore a deerstalker hat and cloak, frequently gazed through a magnifying glass and boasted a razor-sharp mind, but, as far as history can tell, he never smoked a pipe or uttered the immortal words: 'Elementary, my dear Watson.' A new archive to be displayed in Edinburgh this summer shows the remarkable extent to which Sir Arthur Conan Doyle drew inspiration for Sherlock Holmes from his cerebral university tutor...."
1514. Kelleher, Terry. "Picks & Pans: Tube." People 53, no. 20 (2000): 31.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews a number of television programs, including one with a Holmes and Doyle connection. Murder Rooms: The Dark Origins of Sherlock Holmes, PBS (Thurs., May 18 and 25, 9 p.m. ET) "To avoid frustration at the end, bear in mind that this intriguing two-part Mystery! is less a conventional whodunit than a piece of literary detective work. The mix of fact and fiction teams young Arthur Conan Doyle (Robin Laing)--the future creator of Sherlock Holmes--and his medical-school mentor Dr. Joseph Bell (Ian Richardson) in an investigation involving gore, mutilation, religious zealotry and an immoral philanthropist (Charles Dance). Though the murder plot has more than its share of complications, concentrate on Doyle's love for a fellow student (Dolly Wells) and his deepening relationship with the masterful Bell, an apparent Holmes prototype who believes in a rigorously rational approach to crime-solving."
1515. Mazzeno, Laurence W. "The Dark Water: The Strange Beginnings of Sherlock Holmes." Magill Book Reviews, no. (2007).
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Sir Arthur Conan Doyle is the hero of this fictionalized tale about his work with his mentor Dr. Joseph Bell to prevent a notorious serial killer from stealing a family's treasure in a remote English village.
1516. McKuras, Julie. "100 Years Ago." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 4, no. 3 (2000): 2, 8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Provides information on 'The Making of Sherlock Holmes' by A.M. in the 1900 issue of The Young Man. Information is also given on Dr. Joseph Bell, one of Doyle's medical school professors in Edinburgh and a model for Sherlock Holmes.
1517. Medow, Norma B. "Medical contributions of the Bell families span 2 centuries." Ophthalmology Times 28, no. 16 (2003): 16.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the contributions of Benjamin Bell, a surgeon and his family to the

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

field of medical practice in Scotland. Family history; Achievements in their medical professions; Recognition given in the field of medicine. Includes a passing reference to Doyle, Holmes and Joseph Bell. "...Benjamin had two sons, George and Joseph; a grandson, Benjamin; and a great grandson, Joseph, who carried the illustrious name of Bell well into the 20th century. Joseph Bell (1837-1911) was the teacher of Conan Doyle, who reportedly portrayed him as Sherlock Holmes...."

1518. Rampton, James. "The Case of the Real Sherlock Holmes." Scotland on Sunday, December 19, 1999: 8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "A woman and her young child were visiting an Edinburgh surgery in the 1870s. She was mortified when, within seconds, the doctor had deduced that she came from Fife, had travelled a certain route to the capital, worked in a linoleum factory and had dropped off an older child on the way. Does this supersleuthing sound familiar? It should do. This real-life incident involved Dr Joseph Bell, who is widely seen as the role model for the greatest fictional detective of them all, Sherlock Holmes. Bell was a dazzling lecturer and trailblazing forensic pathologist at Edinburgh University in the latter part of the last century. In 1878, he began teaching a young medical student named Arthur Conan Doyle. Doyle saw Bell as his mentor and became his clerk....Not much more is known about Bell's actual relationship with Doyle - many of the relevant papers have been locked away in an interminable legal battle that has been raging since the Forties. However, these skeletal facts have now been fleshed out by writer David Pirie to create Murder Rooms, a new two-part drama for BBC2...."

06D WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- DR. WATSON (45)

1519. "Sidekicks edition." Civilization 4, no. 1 (1997): 32.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Features history's great sidekicks who have outshone their masters. Includes Plato's Socrates; Dr. Frankenstein's Igor; Sherlock Holmes' Dr. Watson.
1520. "The Watson Conundrum." Wilson Quarterly 28, no. 4 (2004): 11-11.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Analyzes the short story "The Man With the Twisted Lip," in "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes." Overview of the story; Conflict regarding the character John H. Watson in the story.
1521. Ashworth, Peter. "Review--From Netley to Maiwand: An Account of the Army Career of Dr. John H. Watson MD by Dr. Tim Healey." The Ritual, no. 27 (2001): 64.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1522. Berdan, Marshall S. "The Signs of the Two: What Chinese Astrology Tells us About the Characters of Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson, With Some Observations on the Dynamics of Their Binomial Relationship." Shoso-In Bulletin 10, no. (2000): 75-84.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1523. Bird, Gail. "The Importance of Watson's Moustache." The Ritual, no. 28 (2001): 27-32.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1524. Bousquet, Robert J. "Dr. John H. Watson, the Mystery Man of the Canon." The Serpentine Muse 23, no. 2 (2007): 14-16.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1525. Brody, Howard. "Good Old What-Do-You-Call-Him: The Watson/Doctor Problem and the Evolution of a Literary Friendship." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 52, no. 1 (2002): 33-36.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1526. Cairo, Robert F., Jr. "How Did Watson Meet His Literary Agent?" Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 52, no. 1 (2002): 37-38.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

1527. Carlile, David. "The 'Hamish' Question." The Nezire Zanmai International 1, no. (1991): 11.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1528. Crelling, Jack. "Dr. John H. Watson, M.D. -- An Assistant Consulting Detective." The Camden House Journal 26, no. 6 (2004): 2-5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1529. Cynkin, Thomas. "James Watson, M. D." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 51, no. 4 (2001): 25-29.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1530. Dietz, Linda, and Elizabeth Skopik. "The Patient Patients of Dr. Watson." Canadian Holmes 21, no. 1 (1997): 18-23.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1531. Hammer, David L. "The Line of Least Resistance: Being an Inquiry Into the Curious Matter of Doctor Watson's Unframed Portrait." Baker Street Miscellanea, no. 74 (1994): 27-36.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1532. ———. "The Name Watson Would Do." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 1 (1994): 25-27.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Offers a Doyle contemporary, Ian Maclaren, as the source of the name John Watson.
1533. Hedberg, Lloyd R., Jr. "The Decline and Demise of Sherlock Holmes and Doctor Watson." Shoso-In Bulletin 14, no. (2004): 34-49.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1534. Heifetz, Carl L. "Toast to Dr. Watson." The Holmes & Watson Report 6, no. 4 (2002): 24-25.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1535. Hunt, A. Godfrey. "Watson: How Legitimate was the Doctor." Shoso-In Bulletin 14, no. (2004): 31-33.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1536. Johnson, Roger. "Review--'Holmes and Watson: a Study in Friendship' by June Thomson." The Ritual, no. 15 (1995): 47-49.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1537. Jordan, Anne. "Review--'Undeveloped Possibilities: Some Notes on the life, habits and character of Dr John H Watson' by John Hall." The Musgrave Papers, no. 8 (1995): 113-114.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1538. Keefauver, Brad. "Dr. Watson, Hero of San Francisco." The Holmes & Watson Report 8, no. 4 (2004): 11-14.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1539. Key, Jack D., Marc A. Shampo, and Robert A. Kyle. "Doyle, Holmes, and Watson--a 'Special' Trinity." Mayo Clinic proceedings 80, no. 6 (2005): 722-722.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "This article focuses on physicians Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, John Watson and William Sherlock Holmes. Arthur Conan Doyle was both a physician and a versatile author of historical novels, short stories, volumes of poems, plays, histories, science fiction, and publications on occult science. Holmes and Watson are 2 of the most immediately recognizable figures in popular culture. Their images have been adapted countless times for innumerable purposes. Biographical data concerning them can be drawn from the research efforts of Holmesian authorities. Arthur Conan Doyle, Sherlock Holmes, and John Watson were honored on a set of 4 stamps showing scenes from the adventures of Sherlock Holmes."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

1540. Kirby, Patrick. "Dr. Watson and her Majesty's Nursing Sisters." Baker Street Miscellanea, no. 76 (1994): 27-35.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1541. Klinger, Leslie S. "What Do We Really Know About Sherlock Holmes and John H. Watson?" Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 54, no. 3 (2004): 6-15.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1542. Nathan, Hartley R. "John H. Watson M.D. Discovered at Last." Canadian Holmes 20, no. 3 (1997): 11-20.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1543. O'Connor, Edward C. "1917 Et Seq: Watson Alive or Watson Dead?" The Holmes & Watson Report 3, no. 6 (2000): 43-44.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1544. Radford, John. "Dr. Watson to 1878." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 55, no. 1 (2005): 38-42.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1545. Ravin, James G. "Was Dr. Watson Influenced by Sir James Paget?" Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 54, no. 2 (2004): 15-19.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1546. Richardson, David. "How Watson Learned He Was Tricked." The Holmes & Watson Report 4, no. 6 (2001): 11-13.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1547. ———. "Watson as Boswell." The Holmes & Watson Report 7, no. 6 (2004): 25-28.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1548. ———. "Watson Had One Wife (or maybe two?)." The Holmes & Watson Report 6, no. 5 (2002): 11-15.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1549. Roden, Barbara. "Canonical Misconceptions Number Four: Doctor Watson." The Ritual, no. 19 (1997): 24-29.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1550. Solberg, Andrew L. "The Funny John H. Watson." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 46, no. 1 (1996): 35-42.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1551. Speck, Gordon R. "The Second Mrs. Watson." The Holmes & Watson Report 4, no. 1 (2000): 9-10.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1552. Sperling, Carol. "The Life and Times of Dr. John H. Watson." Baker Street West 1 3, no. 1 (1997): 27-29.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1553. Stavert, Geoffrey. "Inherited IQ." The Times (London), November 12, 1994.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Letter to the editor. "From the Honorary Secretary of The Sherlock Holmes Society Sir, One cannot help wondering if the good Dr Hugh Watson, who so cheerfully admitted to an IQ score of 65 (letter, October 29), is not a distant connection of his namesake, the late Dr John H. Watson, who himself was no great shakes in the IQ department. 'It may be that you are not yourself luminous, but you are a conductor of light', was Holmes's assessment of him...."
1554. Trelford, Donald. "Trelford On Thursday: Illingworth rattling the chain." The Daily Telegraph (London), Nov

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- 24, 1994: 32.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Elementary, my dear [Trelford], writes Nick Utechin of my request for further and better particulars about the rugby career of John Watson, MD. Did he play for Rosslyn Park or Blackheath?; This is to be found in 'The Sussex Vampire,' a story in 'The Casebook of Sherlock Holmes,' where Robert Ferguson, recently returned from South America, writes to Holmes expressing the fear that his wife, a Peruvian beauty, may be a vampire, and adds a postscript: "I believe that your friend Watson played rugby for Blackheath when I was three-quarter for Richmond."; The most authoritative confirmation comes from H M Brodie, archivist at Blackheath RFC, who says a framed likeness of Dr Watson (taken, presumably, from a book illustration) hangs in the clubhouse at Rectory Field. He adds that a Blackheath shirt and other mementos are on show at the Sherlock Holmes Museum at Meiringen in Switzerland.
1555. Umansky, Harlan. "In Defense of John H. Watson M. D." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 45, no. 4 (1995): 221-231.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1556. Walker, Lynn E. "The Evolution and Nature of Watson's Ethical Views." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 50, no. 3 (2000): 15-22.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1557. Watson, John. "The First Report of Dr. Watson." The Holmes & Watson Report 1, no. 1 (1997): 7-8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1558. ———. "The First Report of Dr. Watson." The Holmes & Watson Report 1, no. 2 (1997): 5-6.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1559. ———. "The Fourth Report of Dr. Watson." The Holmes & Watson Report 1, no. 5 (1997): 25-26.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1560. ———. "The Seventh Report of Dr. Watson." The Holmes & Watson Report 2, no. 2 (1998): 14-15.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1561. ———. "The Sixth Report of Dr. Watson." The Holmes & Watson Report 1, no. 7 (1998): 9-10.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1562. ———. "A Special Report of Dr. Watson." The Holmes & Watson Report 1, no. 6 (1998): 9-10.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1563. ———. "The Third Report of Dr. Watson." The Holmes & Watson Report 1, no. 4 (1997): 6-7, 19.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

06E WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- OTHER CHARACTERS (50)

1564. Black, Elliott M. "Colonel Sebastian Moran." Shoso-In Bulletin 7, no. (1997): 12.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1565. ———. "Irene Adler." Shoso-In Bulletin 7, no. (1997): 20.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1566. Bousquet, Robert J. "The Operatic Roles of Irene Adler." The Serpentine Muse 21, no. 4 (2005): 19-23.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1567. Calamai, Peter. "The Missing Missives of Colonel Moriarty." Canadian Holmes 19, no. 4 (1996): 5-7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

1568. Cirone, Nino. "What Really Happened to Mary Morstan?" Canadian Holmes 25, no. 4 (2002): 20-22.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1569. ———. "What Really Happened to Mary Morstan?" The Ritual, no. 27 (2001): 6-11.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1570. Crelling, Jack. "Inspector Lestrade of Scotland Yard -- A Friend of Sherlock Holmes." The Camden House Journal 24, no. 2 (2002): 2-7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1571. ———. "Inspectors Gregson, Bradstreet and Hopkins of Scotland Yard." The Camden House Journal 26, no. 4 (2004): 2-5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1572. ———. "The Remarkable Miss Hunter." The Camden House Journal 27, no. 9 (2005): 2-7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1573. Dandrew, Thomas. "Victor and Violet: Symbolic Siblings?" Canadian Holmes 19, no. 4 (1996): 17-18.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1574. Dillstone, Don. "Arthur Conan Doyle and Irene Adler." Canadian Holmes 24, no. 2 (2000): 9-13.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1575. Dirda, Michael. "A Case for Langdale Pike." Canadian Holmes 30, no. 4 (2007): 22-34.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1576. Eustace, Grant. "Irene Adler Reconsidered." The Ritual, no. 12 (1993): 6-8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1577. Hall, John. "Holmes and Lestrade." The Ritual, no. 22 (1998): 6-8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1578. Heifetz, Carl L. "Moriarty: An Encounter of the First Kind or Smoke Gets in Your Eyes." The Holmes & Watson Report 4, no. 6 (2001): 16-21.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1579. ———. "A Toast to Murray, Watson's Courageous and Faithful Orderly." The Holmes & Watson Report 5, no. 3 (2001): 20-21.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1580. Hyder, William. "Irene Adler: A Pronounced Disagreement." The Musgrave Papers, no. 10 (1997): 61-66.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1581. ———. "Lestrade: A Fair Cop." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 55, no. 2 (2005): 39-46.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1582. Izban, Donald B. "In Honor of Inspector Lestrade." Shoso-In Bulletin 7, no. (1997): 70.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1583. Keefauver, Brad. "The Irene Adler Hoax." Canadian Holmes 22, no. 3 (1999): 24-26.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

1584. ———. "The Mystery of Violet Hunter." Shoso-In Bulletin 7, no. (1997): 13-15.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1585. Kellog, Richard. "Whatever Happened to Edward Rucastle?" Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 55, no. 1 (2005): 54-56.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1586. Kellogg, Richard L. "The Androgynous Ms. Adler." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 2 (1994): 114-116.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Some thoughts on the person of Irene Adler.
1587. Letwenko, Bobbie, and Ed Letwenko. "A Tribute to Toby." Shoso-In Bulletin 10, no. (2000): 149.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1588. Linsenmeyer, John. "Why Charles Augustus Milverton Should Be Canonized and Not Cannon-Balled." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 50, no. 1 (2000): 36-40.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1589. Lovisi, Gary. "The First Harboiled Detective: The Strange Case of Birdy Edwards." Shoso-In Bulletin 4, no. (1994): 64-69.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1590. ———. "The Molly Maguires: The Real Birdy Edwards in the Real Valley of Fear!" Shoso-In Bulletin 10, no. (2000): 57-62.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1591. Macnee, Angela. "'Charles Augustus Milverton': The Body in the Study." The Musgrave Papers, no. 13 (2000): 69-71.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1592. Mallory, Michael. "Notes Toward a Biography of Mrs. Amelia Watson." Baker Street West 19, no. 2 (2003): 19-22.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1593. Meyers, Don. "Holmes, Watson & Stamford: Was there a Method to Young Stamford's Madness?" Shoso-In Bulletin 5, no. (1995): 87-88.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1594. Newhaus, Christian. "The Woman: Reflections on Irene Adler and Christine Daae." Canadian Holmes 21, no. 2 (1997): 28-29.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1595. Randall, Warren. "Who Killed Enoch Drebber? (The Death and Burial of Jefferson Hope)." Shoso-In Bulletin 13, no. (2003): 19-20.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1596. Ravin, James G. "Who Was the King of Bohemia?" Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 54, no. 4 (2004): 25-26.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1597. Richards, Dana. "Mycroft Has His Rails." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 51, no. 3 (2001): 41-44.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

1598. Richardson, David. "To Old Frankland, the Crank." The Holmes & Watson Report 5, no. 5 (2001): 43.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1599. Robinson, Robert E. "The So-Called Porlock Enigma." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 4 (1994): 223-224.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The author argues that the true identity of Porlock is none other than Professor Moriarty.
1600. Roden, Barbara. "Canonical Misconceptions Number One: Mrs. Hudson." The Ritual, no. 16 (1995): 35-39.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1601. ———. "Canonical Misconceptions Number Two: Inspector Lestrade." The Ritual, no. 17 (1996): 48-53.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1602. Rose-Bond, Sherry. "Mary Morstan, Madonna: Virgin or Material Girl." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 46, no. 2 (1996): 44-49.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1603. Rossakis, Constantine. "Thaddeus Sholto: (Mis)Diagnosed." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 54, no. 1 (2004): 51-53.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1604. Rouby, Jason. "Porlock Was a Woman: A Postulation Stoutly Defended." Shoso-In Bulletin 4, no. (1994): 51-53.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1605. Schaefer, Bradley E. "Simon Newcomb." Physics Today 60, no. 2 (2007): 66-67.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "Simon Newcomb: America's Unofficial Astronomer Royal," by Bill Carter and Merri Sue Carter. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...The book is organized around a dozen events in Newcomb's life, leaving gaps that miss many fun anecdotes. For example, readers do not learn that Newcomb was the intentional prototype for Arthur Conan Doyle's archvillain Professor James Moriarty...."
1606. Shackelford, Lee Eric. "Regarding Irene, Maud, and Tina." The Holmes & Watson Report 1, no. 4 (1997): 28-29.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1607. Shreffler, Philip A. "Last Moments of Enoch J. Drebber." The Musgrave Papers, no. 8 (1995): 51-57.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1608. Southworth, Bruce E. "The Impact of James Winter on the Life of Sherlock Holmes." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 3 (1994): 179-182.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Provides some additional information (or speculation) on the person of James Winter and the impact this person had on the relationship between Holmes and Watson.
1609. Vogelsang, Jim. "Ramblings of an Old Shikari (of Man and Beast)." The Holmes & Watson Report 7, no. 4 (2003): 16-18.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Written as Colonel Sabastian Moran.
1610. Walker, Lynn E. "Letters from Grosvenor Square." The Holmes & Watson Report 7, no. 4 (2003): 7-9.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Written as Lady Clara St. Simon.
1611. Wallace, David. "What Ever Became of Gallant Murray?" Shoso-In Bulletin 5, no. (1995): 40-42.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1612. Wellendowd, Violet. "A Sonnet for Stapleton: 'I was a Baskerville'." The Holmes & Watson Report 5, no. 5

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

(2001): 44.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

1613. White, Kathryn. "Review--The Dynamics of a Falling Star: Some notes on the late Professor Moriarty." The Ritual, no. 16 (1995): 58-59.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

06E WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- OTHER CHARACTERS -- BERYL STAPLETON (1)

1614. Black, Elliott M. "Beryl Stapleton." Shoso-In Bulletin 7, no. (1997): 25.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

06E WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- OTHER CHARACTERS -- CHARLES AUGUSTUS MILVERTON (1)

1615. Chapman, Paul M. "The Original Charles Augustus." The Ritual, no. 20 (1997): 27-30.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

06E WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- OTHER CHARACTERS -- COLONEL SEBASTIAN MORAN (1)

1616. Goldfarb, Clifford S. "The Hunt for Colonel Sebastian Moran." Canadian Holmes 17, no. 4 (1994): 4-10.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "A distinguished Bootmaker seeks the model for one of Sherlock Holmes's most dastardly opponents in one of the most turbulent periods of English history."

06E WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- OTHER CHARACTERS -- IRENE ADLER (16)

1617. "Core Collection: Historical Mystery Timeline." Booklist 103, no. 17 (2007): 14-15.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article presents reviews of books that are set between the year 80 BC and 1901. Includes a couple of Holmes references. "1881 Irene Adler series, by Carole Nelson Douglas (Forge). The beautiful opera singer who outwitted Sherlock Holmes takes center stage in a series of crime-solving capers....1915 Mary Russell and Sherlock Holmes series, by Laurie R. King (Bantam). The famous detective's brilliant young apprentice becomes his partner in both mystery and marriage...."

1618. "Miscellany." Writer 116, no. 7 (2003): 10.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Provides information on topics and issues related to literature as of July 2003. Includes reference to Doyle and Holmes under entry for Laurie R. King. "Had Laurie R. King known just how dedicated fans of Sherlock Holmes could be to the sanctity of Arthur Conan Doyle's stories, she wonders if she would have been so eager to invent Mary Russell, Holmes' investigative equal and eventual lovematch. 'No, come to think of it, I probably wouldn't have [hesitated],' she tells Mystery Readers International. Holmes, she says, 'needed a change, of the sort that opened up the aspects of his personality not previously explored during his Baker Street days.'...King's Mary Russell novels begin with The Beekeeper's Apprentice, when Holmes retires from his investigations to raise bees in the country. King points out that historically, 'Holmes responds to strong, capable women,' noting that the only female known to have 'tweaked his interest' was Irene Adler, the one person who was able to outwit him in a case. Holmes needed a challenge, says King--and in Mary Russell, 'he got one.'"

1619. "Spider Dance: A Novel of Suspense Featuring Irene Adler and Sherlock Holmes (Book)." Publishers Weekly 251, no. 48 (2004): 27.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book "Spider Dance: A Novel of Suspense Featuring Irene Adler and Sherlock Holmes," by Carole Nelson Douglas.
1620. Black, Elliott M. "Irene Adler." Shoso-In Bulletin 7, no. (1997): 20.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1621. Bousquet, Robert J. "The Operatic Roles of Irene Adler." The Serpentine Muse 21, no. 4 (2005): 19-23.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1622. Dillstone, Don. "Arthur Conan Doyle and Irene Adler." Canadian Holmes 24, no. 2 (2000): 9-13.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1623. Dondis, Harold, and Patrick Wolff. "Chess Notes." The Boston Globe, May 20, 2002: C8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The matter of how to handle women's chess has been a dilemma for American chess for years. Women have traditionally been weaker players than men and there has been much debate over this subject. There has been the feeling that women shy from head-to-head competition and, perhaps, from defeating men. However, by winning at chess, they will earn respect. One role model must surely be Irene Adler, the only person in the works of Conan Doyle ever to outwit Sherlock Holmes. In the short story 'A Scandal of Bohemia,' Dr. Watson wrote of Adler, 'To Sherlock Holmes, she was always the woman. I have seldom heard him mention her under any other name. In his eyes she eclipses and predominates the whole of her sex.'...Still, the only person to outwit Sherlock Holmes would not be able to join the Speckled Band, which is the Sherlock Holmes Club that meets annually on Boylston Street. The popular Speckled Band simply does not admit women."
1624. Eustace, Grant. "Irene Adler Reconsidered." The Ritual, no. 12 (1993): 6-8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1625. Hughes, Linda K. "Novels of Everyday Life: The Series in English Fiction, 1850-1930 (review)." Victorian Studies 42, no. 3 (2000): 505-507.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...After examining the claims of Marxist analysis, cultural studies, and poststructuralism as approaches to the everyday, Langbauer performs a double reading of fiction and theory in each of four chapters and in her Afterword: of Oliphant's and Charlotte Yonge's series and the 'culture industry' ('Minor Fiction, Endless Progress'); of Trollope's series and hybridity ('The Everyday as Everything'); of Arthur Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes stories and the city as site of dailiness and boredom ('The City, the Everyday, and Boredom')...Langbauer's chapter on Conan Doyle shrewdly notes that to counteract boredom Holmes focuses obsessively on the minutiae that constitute it before inevitably relapsing back into ennui. Moreover, his blind spot regarding women (he never thinks to look for Irene Adler dressed as a man on the street) exposes the desire of the series and of masculinist agents to transcend the mortality of the body associated with women's reproductive capacity while retaining its generativity, whereas Irene's ultimate decision not to blackmail the king suggests the uses of indifference (a variant of boredom) as a feminist intervention...."
1626. Hyder, William. "Irene Adler: A Pronounced Disagreement." The Musgrave Papers, no. 10 (1997): 61-66.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1627. Keefauver, Brad. "The Irene Adler Hoax." Canadian Holmes 22, no. 3 (1999): 24-26.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1628. ———. "The Irene Myth and the Maudie Possibility." The Holmes & Watson Report 1, no. 2 (1997): 35-40.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1629. Kellogg, Richard L. "The Androgynous Ms. Adler." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 2 (1994): 114-116.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Some thoughts on the person of Irene Adler.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

1630. Kreyche, Gerald F. "Second-Fiddle Females." USA Today Magazine 132, no. 2708 (2004): 82-82.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the social bias against women. Belief about the secondary status of women; Biblical stories that emphasize women's secondary status; Implications of the Greek mythology on Pandora's Box; Information on how women are regarded in history. Includes a reference to Holmes. "...She is puzzling and contains contradictory elements. She is wise, but not formidably so. She is eternally young and like a phoenix rises out of her own ashes utterly renewed. The novel, She by H. Rider Haggard, exemplified this female archetype in the setting of ancient Egypt. Sherlock Holmes scholars recognize her in the opera star, Irene Adler, heroine of A Scandal in Bohemia. Holmes, however, also had this to say about the fair sex, 'The motives of women are so inscrutable.... How can you build on such a quicksand? Their most trivial action may mean volumes or their most extraordinary conduct may depend on a hairpin or a curling tong.' No wonder women still are trying to break through the glass ceiling, not only in business, but in world culture."
1631. Murasawa, Hiroko. "Drawing -- 'Irene Adler'." The Nezire Zanmai International 2, no. (1992): 29.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1632. Newhaus, Christian. "The Woman: Reflections on Irene Adler and Christine Daae." Canadian Holmes 21, no. 2 (1997): 28-29.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

06E WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- OTHER CHARACTERS -- JONATHAN SMALL (1)

1633. Marino, Joe. "A question of judgement: Jonathan Small, a re-appraisal." Shoso-In Bulletin 14, no. (2004): 119-131.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

06E WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- OTHER CHARACTERS -- MRS. HUDSON (2)

1634. Cooke, Catherine. "Mrs. Hudson: A Legend in Her Own Lodging House." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 55, no. 2 (2005): 13-23.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1635. Izban, Donald B. "A Toast to Mrs. Hudson, or Mrs. Turner, or Both." Shoso-In Bulletin 5, no. (1995): 37.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

06E WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- OTHER CHARACTERS -- MYCROFT HOLMES (INCLUDING THE DIOGENES CLUB) (7)

1636. Campbell, Mary. "Images of Mycroft." Canadian Holmes 29, no. 4 (2006): 16-30.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1637. Davies, Bernard. "Mycroft Country." The Musgrave Papers, no. 12 (1999): 78-88.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1638. Fish, Ronald E. "Toast to Mycroft Holmes." The Holmes & Watson Report 5, no. 4 (2001): 20.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1639. Scheideman, J. W. "Mycroft Holmes/The Machine Metaphors: A Reflective Essay on Sherlock Holmes's Metaphoric Older Brother." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 1 (1994): 7-12.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Some thoughts on Sherlock Holmes' older brother.

1640. Shiffman, Stu. "The Secret Sons of Mycroft Holmes." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 53, no. 2 (2003): 14-17.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

1641. ———. "The Secret Sons of Mycroft Holmes." Shoso-In Bulletin 13, no. (2003): 21-24.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

1642. Wolder, Burt. "The Secret Identity of Mycroft Holmes." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 53, no. 2 (2003): 18-23.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

06E WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- OTHER CHARACTERS -- PROFESSOR MORIARTY (17)

1643. "Into the falls." Economist 319, no. 7706 (1991): 88-88.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on the re-enactment by the London Sherlock Holmes Society of the tragic struggle between the literary detective Holmes and his arch-rival, Professor Moriarty, at Reichenbach Falls on May 4, 1991, exactly 100 years after the event. Description of the centenary pilgrimage; Familiarity with the canon of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's work; Details.

1644. "Vice rewarded." Economist, no. (1997): 2/3p.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews two books pertaining to crime. 'The Napoleon of Crime: The Life and Times of Adam Worth, Master Thief,' by Ben MacIntyre; 'Allan Pinkerton: The First Private Eye,' by James Mackay. Includes reference to Holmes. "Worth was the prototype for Sherlock Holmes's arch-enemy, Professor Moriarty; another Sherlock Holmes story, 'The Valley of Fear', was inspired by the Pinkerton agency's infiltration and destruction of the Molly Maguires, a ruthless gang that operated in the coal fields. Pinkerton's son, William, did much to bring Worth to justice and later became a close friend of the rogue. Worth's son eventually worked for the Pinkerton agency."

1645. Carter, Bill, and Merri Sue Carter. "Simon Newcomb, astronomer and personality." Physics Today 61, no. 2 (2008): 12-12.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A letter to the editor is presented in response to the article "Simon Newcomb: America's Unofficial Astronomer Royal," by Bradley Schaefer from the February 2007 issue. Includes a reference to Doyle. "...We did not mention in our book that some have suggested Newcomb as the 'intentional prototype for Arthur Conan Doyle's arch-villain Professor James Moriarty' or as the 'learn'd astronomer' in Walt Whitman's famous 'When I heard the Learn'd Astronomer,' because we found only speculations but no credible evidence that either claim is true. In fact, several scientists have been suggested as possible models for Professor Moriarty, among them Carl Friedrich Gauss. But the model that Doyle seems to imply in The Valley of Fear is the London arch criminal of the 18th century, Jonathan Wild. Why would Doyle choose as his prototype for Moriarty a relatively remote American astronomer rather than Wild, the locally well-known British villain and criminal?..."

1646. Connell, David J. "Reviews: Book." British Heritage 19, no. 6 (1998): 61.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'The Napoleon of Crime: The Life and Times of Adam Worth, Master Thief,' by Ben MacIntyre. Includes a reference to Doyle. "...In addition to his lavish attire, Worth was an articulate and self-educated man who was often seen at the best London parties. He was so renowned as a master criminal, that Sir Arthur Conan Doyle fashioned the fictional master criminal, Moriarty, after him...."

1647. Kinsley, Joseph. "Professor Moriarty: The French Connection." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 46, no. 3 (1996): 13-15.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

1648. Lehman, David. "The Napoleon of Crime: The Life and Times of Adam Worth, Master Thief." People 48, no. 17 (1997): 33.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book The Napoleon of Crime: The Life and Times of Adam Worth, Master Thief, by Ben Macintyre. Includes a reference to Doyle and Holmes. "The inspiration for Professor Moriarty, Sherlock Holmes's arch-nemesis, was a slight, dapper Civil War deserter who came to New York City and quickly rose from pickpocket to criminal mastermind. Adam Worth, the son of German Jewish immigrants, was a man of principle. He ruled out violence, refused to prey on the poor and treated the robbing of banks as if it were an intellectual problem. Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's The Red Headed League is a replay of the memorable heist Worth engineered at Boston's Boylston National Bank in 1876...."
1649. Meyer, Charles A. "Moriarty: The American Connection." Baker Street Miscellanea, no. 73 (1993): 40-44.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1650. Nathan, Paul. "Rights." Publishers Weekly 243, no. 51 (1996): 25.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Updates what is happening in contracts between publishers and authors, as of December 16, 1996. Negotiations proceeding on Arthur Golden's partial manuscript 'Memoirs of a Geisha,' a debut novel under contract in 10 countries; 'Napoleon of Crime,' by Ben Macintyre, scheduled to be published in May by Farrar, Straus & Giroux, touted as the first biography of Adam Worth, supposedly the model for Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's Professor Moriarty.
1651. Olding, Alan C. "In Memoriam Moriarty (A Funeral Ode for May 4, 1891)." Shoso-In Bulletin 12, no. (2002): 54.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1652. Perry, Anne. "An international man of mystery." Civilization 4, no. 4 (1997): 83.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'The Napoleon of Crime: The Life and Times of Adam Worth, Master Thief,' by Ben Macintyre. Includes references to Doyle and Holmes. "Adam Worth was almost certainly the inspiration for Arthur Conan Doyle's great criminal mastermind, Professor Moriarty, but anyone comparing the two does Worth a great disservice. In Ben Macintyre's portrayal, Worth is an infinitely more interesting character. Unlike those of Moriarty, Worth's passions and flaws, his weaknesses and his virtues, are essentially human, prompting empathy and at times admiration--or at least pity....Macintyre paints the times and the players with excellent detail. Notable among the supporting cast are the fabulously wealthy J. Pierpont Morgan and the dynamic and extremely complex William Pinkerton, who was Worth's Holmes. In the end, when Worth's health was broken by years spent in a Belgian prison, Pinkerton was the one man he could trust to help him return his beloved Duchess of Devonshire to her rightful owners and to ensure that his children received some benefit from what little estate was left after his death in 1902. In a denouement befitting a Conan Doyle tale, the master thief ultimately joined the master sleuth in the quest for justice."
1653. Phillips, Mike. "Dark genius." New Statesman 126, no. 4345 (1997): 48.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'The Napoleon of Crime: The Life and Times of Adam Worth, the Real Moriarty,' by Ben Macintyre.
1654. Ricker, W. E. "The Absent Corpse Mystery Solved; or, Professor Moriarty in the Yukon." Shoso-In Bulletin 4, no. (1994): 108-118.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1655. Rompalske, Dorothy. "Biography reviews." Biography 1, no. 9 (1997): 91.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'The Napoleon of Crime: The Life and Times of Adam Worth, Master Thief,' by Ben Macintyre. "Behind a facade of upper-class respectability, the Victorian era's greatest criminal mastermind, Adam Worth, carried off robberies of such ingenuity that Arthur Conan Doyle used him as the model for his memorable villain, Professor Moriarty. Unlike the dastardly Moriarty, however, Worth rejected physical violence and displayed such loyalty to his partners in crime that he won the respect and affection of even his most ardent pursuer, the famous private detective William Pinkerton...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

1656. Schaefer, Bradley E. "Simon Newcomb, astronomer and personality." Physics Today 61, no. 2 (2008): 12-13.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A letter to the editor is presented in response to the article "Simon Newcomb: America's Unofficial Astronomer Royal," by Bradley Schaefer from the February 2007 issue. Includes references to Moriarty and Doyle. "...Regarding Professor Moriarty, many frivolous claims have been made over the last century of Sherlockian literature, but only Newcomb has a long list of identical and unique matches with the biography of Moriarty. Newcomb also has three documented personal connections with Arthur Conan Doyle at the time the author was inventing the arch-villain. But Newcomb has no connection with Moriarty's criminal side. Doyle often used multiple sources for characters, and he explicitly told friends that the criminal side of Moriarty's career was modeled after Adam Worth, a London arch-villain famous at the time, and not after Jonathan Wild, a forgotten criminal from two centuries earlier. We all agree that Doyle did not model the criminal Side of Moriarty after Newcomb."
1657. Smith, Phillip Thurmond. "Europe." History: Reviews of New Books 27, no. 1 (1998): 31.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'The Napoleon of Crime: The Life and Times of Adam Worth, Master Thief,' by Ben Macintyre. Includes a reference to Doyle. "They may not make criminals like that any more, but if we hold the nostalgia we are still left with the fascinating life of Adam Worth (1844-1902), an international thief whose career ended roughly a century ago, and who was the model for Arthur Conan Doyle's master criminal Professor Moriarty. Worth's audacity, multiple identities, and elusiveness kept both Scotland Yard and the American Pinkerton detectives on his trail for over thirty years...."
1658. Trudel, Jean-Louis. "Simon Newcomb's Journey." Beaver 83, no. 6 (2003): 26-33.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Profiles Nova Scotian astronomer Simon Newcomb. Family background; Career highlights; Awards received; Accomplishments. Includes multiple references to Doyle and Holmes, beginning with this one: "A yearning for knowledge would lead a Nova Scotia son far from home to become the most honoured astronomer of his day -- and, some think, the inspiration for Conan Doyle's villainous Moriarty...."
1659. Wernick, Robert. "Book reviews." Smithsonian 28, no. 7 (1997): 152.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'The Napoleon of Crime: The Life and Times of Adam Worth, Master Thief,' by Ben Macintyre.

06F WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- OTHER SUBJECTS (52)

1660. "Totally Weird and Wonderful Words/Gallimaufry: a Hodgepodge of our Vanishing Vocabulary." Touchstone: A Journal of Mere Christianity 20, no. 7 (2007): 40-40.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews Totally Weird and Wonderful Words edited by Erin McKean Oxford University Press, 2006 (270 pages, $14.95, paperback) and Gallimaufry: A Hodgepodge of Our Vanishing Vocabulary by Michael Quinion Oxford University Press, 2006 (272 pages, $25.00, hardcover). Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "Have you ever wondered why the friends of Shakespeare's Bottom call him 'bully Bottom' or puzzled over exactly what Sherlock Holmes is calling for when he calls for a 'hackney carriage'? Erin McKean, editor in chief of the New Oxford American Dictionary, and the popular language enthusiast Michael Quinion are here to help...."
1661. Addy, John. "Arsene Lupin Versus Sherlock Holmes." The Musgrave Papers, no. 10 (1997): 35-43.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1662. Aiken, Bruce. "Some Comments on Class, Race and Ethnic Prejudice in the Sherlockian Canon." Canadian Holmes 22, no. 1 (1998): 18-24.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1663. Aldrich, Fred. "On the Birthday of Sherlock Holmes: Some Thoughts About Oysters." Canadian Holmes 28, no. 2 (2004): 15-17.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

1664. Blankenship, Marshall L. "Sherlock Holmes in marine biology literature." International Journal of Dermatology 39, no. 11 (2000): 879.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Discusses the interest of clinical dermatologists in the dermatological diagnoses featured in Sherlock Holmes novels created by Arthur Conan Doyle."
1665. Blau, Peter E. "About Golf, and Rudyard Kipling, and Vermont, and Other Things." Shoso-In Bulletin 5, no. (1995): 8-13.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1666. Bogomoletz, Wladimir V. "Who Was François le Villard? Sherlock Holmes and the Paris Detective Service." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 51, no. 3 (2001): 14-23.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1667. Duke, Michael. "Sherlock Holmes' Other Doctors." Shoso-In Bulletin 13, no. (2003): 37-43.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1668. Greene, Douglas G. "The Only Women: The Female Sleuth in Fiction." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 53, no. 2 (2003): 6-13.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1669. Hahn, Robert W. "Horse Racing in the Victorian era." Shoso-In Bulletin 8, no. (1998): 34-36.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1670. Hirayama, Yuichi. "The Japanese Rivals of Sherlock Holmes." The Nezire Zanmai International 1, no. (1991): 21-31.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1671. Hobbs, Don. "Review--The Professor and the Madman by Simon Winchester." The Holmes & Watson Report 6, no. 6 (2003): 12.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1672. Kinsella, Eileen. "The Case of the Scarce Dust Jacket." Wall Street Journal - Eastern Edition, 10/16/98, 1998: W14.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Provides information on the first edition of The Hound of the Baskervilles.
1673. Klinger, Leslie S. "Domestic Violence in the Canon." Passengers' Log 6, no. 2 (2003): 13-15.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1674. Kovacic, Chuck. "Up in Smoke: A Presentation of Sherlockian Cigar Box Labels." Baker Street West 11, no. 2 (1995): 14-19.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1675. Livingston, Bud. "Birth Control in the Canon." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 50, no. 3 (2000): 44-45.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1676. McKuras, Julie. "50 Years Ago." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 3, no. 1 (1999): 3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Highlights the 1949 publication of John Dickson Carr's biography, The Life of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle.
1677. ———. "50 Years Ago." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 3, no. 3 (1999): 3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Some observations on two anthologies published in 1949 and found in the John Bennett Shaw Collection that feature Silver Blaze: The Horse-Lovers Anthology and The Great Horse

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Omnibus.

1678. ———. "50 Years Ago." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 3, no. 4 (1999): 3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Observations on the 1949 publication, the Baker Street Rubaiyat by Nathan L. Bengis.
1679. ———. "100 Years Ago." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 3, no. 1 (1999): 2.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Highlights an article by Gertrude Bacon in the June 1899 Strand Magazine entitled "Pigs of Celebrities" that features artwork by Arthur Conan Doyle.
1680. ———. "Musings." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 4, no. 1 (2000): 5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Comments on articles and contributions in this issue of the newsletter from Peter Blau, Doug Wrigglesworth, Tim Johnson, Catherine Cooke, and Dick Sveum. Also noted are Susan Dahlinger's continued work on William Gillette, one of the items displayed in the New York exhibit, and the passing of cartoonist Charles Schulz.
1681. ———. "Musings." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 4, no. 2 (2000): 7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Comments on the writings in this issue; the newest contributor/writer for the newsletter, John Bergquist; and the passing of E. W. McDiarmid. Includes a photograph of "the Man behind Mrs. Hudson."
1682. ———. "Musings." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 3, no. 3 (1999): 5-6.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Some reflections from the new editor of the newsletter on the work of individuals in support of the Collections, current writings in this issue, additional information on the Morleys (from the last issue), and the curator's appointment to a national committee.
1683. ———. "Supporting the Collections." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 3, no. 1 (1999): 7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses ways in which donors can contribute to the Collections, with examples of matching giving from Ecolab and planned giving, in the example of David Hammer.
1684. ———. "Using the Sherlock Holmes Collections." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 3, no. 1 (1999): 6.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on some of the recent research visits to the Collections, including Masamichi (Mitch) Higurashi from Japan and Doug Elliott from Canada. Includes a picture of Mitch Higurashi.
1685. Michaud, Rosemary. "Victor Victorian: Some Thoughts on Cross-Dressing in the Canon." The Holmes & Watson Report 1, no. 1 (1997): 25-30.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1686. Morstein, Mona. "Sherlock Holmes and Homeopathy." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 52, no. 4 (2002): 46-54.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1687. Richards, Dana. "To Hell with Sherlock Holmes." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 1 (1994): 13-16.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Some observations on the relationship and perceptions between Holmes and the police.
1688. Roden, Christopher. "Concerning Men With Watches and Lost Specials." The Musgrave Papers, no. 8 (1995): 82-91.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1689. Rusch, Barbara. "A Singular Set of People: Collectors, Collections, and Private Museums of the Canon." Baker

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana* 53, no. 2 (2003): 39-45.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1690. Scott, Alison M. "Organizing the Brain Attic: Indexing the Commonplace Books of Sherlock Holmes." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 4 (1994): 199-203.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents some observations and thoughts on Holmes memory and his memory aids--his commonplace books and indexes--and how these might have been arranged or structured.
1691. Silverstein, Albert. "Sherlock Holmes, Jews and Rhode Island." Rhode Island Jewish Historical Notes 14, no. 2 (2004): 336-352.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The author, a psychologist and professor at the University of Rhode Island, describes his own and others' 20th-century studies of Sherlock Holmes, the detective character created by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. The article considers Rhode Island's Sherlock Holmes societies and examines both specific references to Jews in the Holmes canon and evidence of Doyle's attitudes toward victims of persecution.
1692. Skoyles, Lesley. "The Arthur Conan Doyle Pub, Edinburgh." The Ritual, no. 13 (1994): 24-25.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1693. Smith, Edward S., Jr. "Canonical Canines." The Holmes & Watson Report 3, no. 2 (1999): 41-44.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1694. Solito, Enrico. "Sherlock Holmes and Italy." Shoso-In Bulletin 10, no. (2000): 179-182.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1695. Southworth, Bruce E. "Musings." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 3, no. 1 (1999): 5-
Highlights the contents of this issue of the newsletter.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1696. ———. "Musings." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 2, no. 1 (1998): 4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Highlights articles in the present issue and also notes Peter Blau's discovery that Tsar Nicholas II, while in captivity with his family in Tsarkoe Selo, read The Valley of Fear.
1697. ———. "Musings." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 1, no. 4 (1997): 4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Comments on the various articles appearing in this issue of the newsletter, with additional commentary on the 1894 photograph of Doyle noted in previous issues, additional information on the identity of Frances Crane, and a note on the election of Julie McKuras as the new president of the Norwegian Explorers.
1698. Stampe, Mia. "Holmes in Scandinavia 2000." Shoso-In Bulletin 11, no. (2001): 212-214.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1699. Stampe, Mia, and Mattias Bostrom. "Sherlock Holmes in Scandinavia 2002." Shoso-In Bulletin 13, no. (2003): 153-155.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1700. Stampe, Mia, Nils Nordberg, and Mattias Bostrom. "Sherlock Holmes in Scandinavia 2001." Shoso-In Bulletin 12, no. (2002): 186-190.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1701. Sveum, Richard J. "From the President." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 3, no. 1 (1999): 4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Provides an update on the Friends activities, including the annual membership meeting to be held in August, thanks for contributions, and the University's Friends of the Libraries.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

1702. ———. "From the President." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 3, no. 2 (1999): 4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Words of thanks to Jamie Hubbs, Collections Specialist, who leaves to go back to school and Bruce Southworth, who concludes his work as editor of the newsletter. Also a word on the upcoming Friends membership meeting and on the donation of collections.
1703. ———. "A Word from our President." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 1, no. 3 (1997): 5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Comments on the various activities of the Friends of the Holmes Collections and the University of Minnesota Libraries, including materials and gifts received for the Collections, securing a new curator, construction of the new Library Access Center, and the upcoming membership meeting.
1704. Tanaka, Kiyoshi. "Drawing -- 'Sherlock Holmes in Kamakura City'." Shoso-In Bulletin 3, no. (1993): 72.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1705. ———. "Drawing -- 'Sherlock Holmes in Kamakura City'." The Nezire Zanmai International 2, no. (1992): 72.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1706. ———. "Drawings (Untitled)." Shoso-In Bulletin 8, no. (1998): 222, 228, 231.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1707. Trapp, David James. "Observations on Freehold Estates and the Fee Tail." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 3 (1994): 165-168.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Provides some understanding of English property law which, in turn, aids in understanding such legal references as found in some of the tales.
1708. Upton, Jean. "Brides in the Canon." The Musgrave Papers, no. 6 (1993): 31-40.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1709. Valley, Richard. "Crossed-Dressed to Kill: Transvestism and the World of Sherlock Holmes." The Musgrave Papers, no. 6 (1993): 22-30.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1710. Vaught, Richard L. "Polytheism, Monotheism and Sherlock Holmes." Shoso-In Bulletin 6, no. (1996): 37-39.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1711. White, Kathryn. "Behind the Veil: Facial Disfigurement in the Conan Doyle Stories." The Ritual, no. 13 (1994): 13-21.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

06F WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- OTHER SUBJECTS -- ARCHITECTURE (1)

1712. Groves, Derham. "Better Homes and Gardens: Sense of Place in the Sherlock Homes Stories." Journal of Popular Culture 36, no. 3 (2003): 466.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // In Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's autobiography, "Memories and Adventures," the creator of Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson chose to sum up his life's work as a writer in architectural terms. Doyle's choice of metaphor in this description is not surprising given that his father, Charles Altamont Doyle, was an architect with the Scottish Office of Works. Little is known about Charles' architectural career, although he is credited with designing the fountain at Holyrood Palace in Edinburgh and one of the windows in Glasgow Cathedral. Some of Doyle's literary houses were undoubtedly inspired by real places, such as the "wooden outhouse" in "Black Peter" which Peter Carey, the disreputable retired captain of the steam-sealer, Sea Unicorn, "built himself. . . a few hundred yards from his house. The idea that a house can tell a story about its occupants was behind a design project called "Better Holmes and gardens" which have run both at the Royal Melbourne Institute of Technology (RMIT), and at the University of Melbourne. It involved architecture

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

students early in the course each designing a house for the characters in a Sherlock Holmes story of his or her choice. For example, in 2001, the students could have chosen to design a house for the disfigured circus performer Euginia Ronder in "The Veiled Lodgers."

06F WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- OTHER SUBJECTS -- ART (76)

1713. Bergem, Phillip G. "David Henry Friston: First Artist of the Canon." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 53, no. 4 (2003): 23-25.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1714. Boetschi, Marianne. "Drawing -- 'A Scandal in Bohemia'." Shoso-In Bulletin 11, no. (2001): 205.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1715. ———. "Drawing -- 'Abbey Grange'." Shoso-In Bulletin 11, no. (2001): 62.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1716. ———. "Drawing -- 'Baker Street 221B, London; Holmes and Moriarty'." Shoso-In Bulletin 11, no. (2001): 10.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1717. ———. "Drawing -- 'Devil's Foot'." Shoso-In Bulletin 11, no. (2001): 120.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1718. ———. "Drawing -- 'East Wind (His Last Bow); von Bork and Altamont'." Shoso-In Bulletin 11, no. (2001): 133.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1719. ———. "Drawing -- 'East Wind (His Last Bow); von Bork, tied'." Shoso-In Bulletin 11, no. (2001): 163.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1720. ———. "Drawing -- 'Eastwind (sic); Harwich Harbor'." Shoso-In Bulletin 11, no. (2001): 218.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1721. ———. "Drawing -- 'Lady Carfax'." Shoso-In Bulletin 11, no. (2001): 75.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1722. ———. "Drawing -- 'The (sic) Silver Blaze'." Shoso-In Bulletin 11, no. (2001): 108.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1723. ———. "Drawing -- 'The Blue Carbuncle'." Shoso-In Bulletin 11, no. (2001): 126.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1724. ———. "Drawing -- 'The Dying Detective; Culverton Smith'." Shoso-In Bulletin 11, no. (2001): 24.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1725. ———. "Drawing -- 'The Red Headed League'." Shoso-In Bulletin 11, no. (2001): 226.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1726. ———. "Drawing -- 'The Second Stain'." Shoso-In Bulletin 11, no. (2001): 111.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1727. ———. "Drawing -- 'The Second Stain'." Shoso-In Bulletin 11, no. (2001): 117.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

1728. ———. "Drawing -- 'The Speckled Band'." Shoso-In Bulletin 11, no. (2001): 222.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1729. ———. "Drawing -- 'The Tree Barridebs' (sic)." Shoso-In Bulletin 11, no. (2001): 98.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1730. Cagnat, Jean-Pierre. "Drawing -- 'How are you? You have been in New Mexico, I Perceive'." Shoso-In Bulletin 5, no. (1995): 7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1731. ———. "Drawing -- 'The Editor'." Shoso-In Bulletin 3, no. (1993): 98.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1732. ———. "Drawings -- 'A Visit at my Great-Uncle, Horace Vernet'." Shoso-In Bulletin 13, no. (2003): 47-54.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1733. ———. "Drawings -- 'Baker Street Irregulars Dinner 1993'." Shoso-In Bulletin 3, no. (1993): 23-28.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1734. ———. "Drawings -- 'Baker Street Irregulars Dinner 1994'." Shoso-In Bulletin 4, no. (1994): 47-50.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1735. ———. "Drawings -- 'Baker Street Irregulars Dinner 1996'." Shoso-In Bulletin 6, no. (1996): 93-96.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1736. ———. "Drawings -- 'Baker Street Irregulars Dinner 1999'." Shoso-In Bulletin 9, no. (1999): 93.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1737. ———. "Drawings -- 'Barbizon'." Shoso-In Bulletin 8, no. (1998): 121-124.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1738. ———. "Drawings -- 'Montpelier 1993'." Shoso-In Bulletin 4, no. (1994): 15-18.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1739. ———. "Drawings -- 'Some Graves in the Churchyard of Pere Lachaise'." Shoso-In Bulletin 10, no. (2000): 24-25.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1740. ———. "Drawings -- 'The Unauthorized Pictures What I Discovered'." Shoso-In Bulletin 11, no. (2001): 127-130.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1741. ———. "Drawings -- 'Thirty Minutes at the Monument'." Shoso-In Bulletin 7, no. (1997): 140-141.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1742. Camargo, Graciliano. "Drawing -- 'Sherlock Holmes'." Shoso-In Bulletin 10, no. (2000): 182.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1743. ———. "Drawing -- 'Sherlock Holmes'." Shoso-In Bulletin 10, no. (2000): 190.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1744. Carlile, David. "Pensive Holmes (illustration)." Shoso-In Bulletin 9, no. (1999): 123.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

1745. Hasler, Martin. "Drawing (Untitled)." Shoso-In Bulletin 8, no. (1998): 102.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1746. ———. "Drawing (Untitled)." Shoso-In Bulletin 8, no. (1998): 103.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1747. ———. "Drawing (Untitled)." Shoso-In Bulletin 7, no. (1997): 157.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1748. ———. "Drawing (Untitled)." Shoso-In Bulletin 7, no. (1997): 159.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1749. ———. "Drawing (Untitled)." Shoso-In Bulletin 7, no. (1997): 160.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1750. ———. "Drawing (Untitled)." Shoso-In Bulletin 7, no. (1997): 162.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1751. ———. "Drawing (Untitled)." Shoso-In Bulletin 7, no. (1997): 163.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1752. ———. "Drawing (Untitled)." Shoso-In Bulletin 7, no. (1997): 164.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1753. Hirayama, Hiroko. "Drawing (Untitled)." Shoso-In Bulletin 7, no. (1997): 61.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1754. ———. "Drawing (Untitled)." Shoso-In Bulletin 7, no. (1997): 75.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1755. ———. "Drawing (Untitled)." Shoso-In Bulletin 7, no. (1997): 36.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1756. ———. "Drawing (Untitled)." Shoso-In Bulletin 6, no. (1996): 36.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1757. ———. "Drawing (Untitled)." Shoso-In Bulletin 6, no. (1996): 42.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1758. ———. "Drawings -- Sherlockian Gallery III." Shoso-In Bulletin 3, no. (1993): 78-79.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1759. Kasahara, Seiji. "Drawing (Untitled)." Shoso-In Bulletin 7, no. (1997): 15.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1760. ———. "Drawing (Untitled)." Shoso-In Bulletin 7, no. (1997): 20.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1761. ———. "Drawing (Untitled)." The Nezire Zanmai International 2, no. (1992): 37.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1762. ———. "Drawing (Untitled)." The Nezire Zanmai International 2, no. (1992): 54.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

1763. ———. "Drawing (Untitled)." The Nezire Zanmai International 2, no. (1992): 65.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1764. ———. "Drawings--'Sherlockian Gallery'." Shoso-In Bulletin 3, no. (1993): 40-45.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1765. Langeveld, Colin. "Drawing (Untitled)." Shoso-In Bulletin 10, no. (2000): 178.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1766. ———. "An Illustration (Untitled)." Shoso-In Bulletin 10, no. (2000): 178.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1767. McGee, Tom. "Drawing (Untitled)." Shoso-In Bulletin 4, no. (1994): 14.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1768. ———. "Drawing (Untitled)." Shoso-In Bulletin 4, no. (1994): 63.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1769. ———. "Drawing (Untitled)." Shoso-In Bulletin 3, no. (1993): 34.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1770. ———. "Drawings -- 'Sherlockian Gallery II'." Shoso-In Bulletin 3, no. (1993): 64-67.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1771. ———. "Drawings (Untitled)." Shoso-In Bulletin 6, no. (1996): 14, 17, 49, 77, 121, 123, 133.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1772. ———. "Drawings (Untitled)." Shoso-In Bulletin 5, no. (1995): 37, 39, 42, 72, 80, 86, 88, 100, 105, 108, 112, 146.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1773. ———. "Drawings (Untitled)." Shoso-In Bulletin 4, no. (1994): 85, 86, 92, 98, 107.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1774. Murasawa, Hiroko. "Drawing -- 'Holmes and Watson'." The Nezire Zanmai International 1, no. (1991): 31.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1775. ———. "Drawing -- 'Irene Adler'." The Nezire Zanmai International 2, no. (1992): 29.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1776. ———. "Drawing -- 'John H. Watson MD'." The Nezire Zanmai International 2, no. (1992): 19.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1777. ———. "Drawing -- 'Mary Morstan Watson'." The Nezire Zanmai International 2, no. (1992): 89.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1778. ———. "Drawing -- 'Sherlock Holmes'." The Nezire Zanmai International 2, no. (1992): 14.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1779. ———. "Drawings (Untitled)." Shoso-In Bulletin 7, no. (1997): 16, 20.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1780. ———. "Drawings (Untitled)." The Nezire Zanmai International 2, no. (1992): 37, 54, 65.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

1781. Nakano, Kayoho. "Drawings (Untitled)." Shoso-In Bulletin 3, no. (1993): 5, 11, 47, 49, 52, 57, 58.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1782. ———. "Drawings (Untitled)." The Nezire Zanmai International 2, no. (1992): 5, 21, 28, 71, 75, 79.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1783. Shiffman, Stu. "Drawing -- Featuring 'Holmes of Two Worlds'." Shoso-In Bulletin 12, no. (2002): 150.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1784. ———. "Drawing -- Prod. #107 'The Riding Hood Case'." Shoso-In Bulletin 10, no. (2000): 173.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1785. ———. "Drawing (Untitled)." Shoso-In Bulletin 10, no. (2000): 173.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1786. ———. "Drawings (Untitled)." Shoso-In Bulletin 7, no. (1997): 19, 88, 106, 187.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1787. ———. "Drawings (Untitled)." Shoso-In Bulletin 6, no. (1996): 12, 19, 27, 151.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1788. Stampe, Mia. "Vernet and Thorvaldsen: A Discussion of the Vernet Relation and an Artistic Connection with Danish Roots." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 52, no. 3 (2002): 42-49.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

06F WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- OTHER SUBJECTS -- BAKER STREET, 221B (28)

1789. "Abbey National Unveil Bronze of Sherlock Holmes." Birmingham Post, October 9, 1999: 32.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "In the detective's shadow: Abbey National has tried to dilute the image of banks as soulless organisations, whose only driving force is the creation of profit, by unveiling a three-metre high bronze of Sherlock Holmes as part of its 150th anniversary celebrations. The move commemorates the bank's 'association' with the detective, dating back to 1932, when Abbey's head offices moved to Baker Street and incorporated Holmes' fictional address of 211b. Abbey still receives letters addressed to the crime-buster, which are answered by his 'secretary' who works for the bank."
1790. "The best of Brickish; Japanese flock to admire our building blocks of history." Daily Mail (London), May 5, 1998: 25.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Squat and solid, they are regarded with hushed awe by the visitors who file past every day. Treasured for their shape and texture and marvelled at for their lasting quality, these are the precious prize exhibits in a Japanese museum. British bricks, it seems, are building up a reputation for themselves. Back home, they can be found cluttering up back gardens, littering building sites or even propping open doors. But the Japanese believe our bricks deserve more respect. At the World Brick Museum in Maizuru, north-west of Kyoto, specimens are kept lovingly in glass cases and treated as works of art. More than 10,000 visitors a month go to look at them. The Japanese fascination with British bricks probably has something to do with the rarity of brick buildings in Japan. The high risk of earthquakes has made building with bricks a risky business. So when the museum hosted an exhibition of just 16 bricks, titled 'Sherlock Holmes and English Bricks', record numbers of visitors flocked through the doors. They feasted their eyes on a collection of clay from Covent Garden, Scotland Yard, the Royal Albert Hall, St Pancras Station and 221B Baker Street - the detective's home address. The museum curators enlisted the help of the city of Portsmouth to compile the exhibition after discovering that Sir Arthur Conan Doyle created the character of Sherlock Holmes while living there in 1887...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

1791. "Even Sherlock Holmes." The Daily Telegraph (London), January 23, 2001: 29.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Even Sherlock Holmes, the former occupant of Abbey National's Baker Street headquarters, would need a few more clues to assess whether the former building society's bid for Bank of Scotland is better than Lloyds TSB's approach for Abbey...."
1792. "Holmes' place." The Evening Standard (London), August 4, 1999: 12.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Lord Tugendhat is hoping the cash registers of the Abbey National will be going ching! ching! over the Abbey's links with Sherlock Holmes. The bank, of which he is chairman, is sponsoring a statue of Conan Doyle's great detective as part of its 150th anniversary celebrations. 221b Baker Street, where Holmes and Watson were so capably looked after by Mrs Hudson, has been occupied by Abbey National since 1932, and the Sherlock Holmes Society has long pleaded for a statue there...."
1793. "Holmes' Statue is on the Case!". Birmingham Evening Mail, September 24, 1999: 37.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "A bronze statue of the world's best-known fictional detective was unveiled in London. The statue of Sherlock Holmes stands outside Baker Street underground station, near to where the detective lived at the fictional number 221b. Abbey National, whose head office is located on the site of what would be 221b Baker Street, has sponsored the work to mark its 150th anniversary...."
1794. "Sherlock homes in on London address." The Evening Standard (London), September 21, 1999: 19.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The final touches are being put to a 9ft statue of the great sleuth Sherlock Holmes which will stand outside Baker Street Tube station - close to the fictional detective's London address. The bronze, by Essex sculptor John Doubleday, has been commissioned by the Sherlock Holmes Society whose chairman Lord Tugendhat will unveil it on Thursday...."
1795. "Superb Take Holmes Pay; Job Vacancy for Sherlock Holmes Lookalike at Museum." The Mirror, January 29, 1998: 34.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Looking for a job with a difference? It's elementary, dear Watson. The Baker Street Museum has a vacancy for a Sherlock Holmes lookalike at its famous address in London. It is just one of a range of opportunities you'll find in Summer Jobs Britain '98 and Summer Jobs Abroad '98 (both GBP 8.99)...."
1796. "Tellers' Tales." New Statesman 128, no. 4453 (1999): vi.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents several trivia related to the banking industry. Includes reference to Holmes and 221B Baker Street. "Abbey House, the Baker Street headquarters of Abbey National, receives about 100 letters a week addressed to Sherlock Holmes, 221b Baker Street. They are fielded by a special secretary to Sherlock Holmes."
1797. Barlay, Nick. "Statues of the London." The Times (London), May 15, 2004: 31.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Unveiled by Harold Wilson in 1966, Mohandas Karamchand Gandhi's serene sculptural presence in Tavistock Square Gardens has become a focal point for peace memorials and events, just as his strategy of non-violent non-cooperation (satyagraha) has become a byword for peaceful resistance. Pandit Nehru, the former Prime Minister of India, planted a copper beech tree near by to commemorate his visit to London in 1953, and a cherry tree was planted in 1967 for the victims of Hiroshima. Each year on October 2, Gandhi's birth is celebrated with a huge display of flowers. To find Gandhi's statue, the great man's own instructions will help: "There is no way to peace. Peace is the way." The recent murder of Lancelyn Green, the renowned Sherlock Holmes expert, only fuels the transatlantic excitement of American and British fans: is there a Conan Doyle curse? What is true, of course, is that Holmes lived at 221b Baker Street, which is now a museum complete with very real souvenirs. Around the corner in front of Baker Street station is a statue of the famous detective by the sculptor John Doubleday, who is responsible for a number of London's more populist enterprises. The statue was unveiled in 1999 by Lord Tugendhat, the chairman of Abbey National Bank. The association with Holmes goes back to 1932, when the company built its headquarters at 200 Baker Street. Soon, a "secretary to Sherlock Holmes" had to be appointed to deal with the constant letters addressed to 221b. A permanent memorial to the world's most translated and performed playwright after Shakespeare was first proposed by the film director Derek Jarman, but it wasn't until 1998 that Oscar Wilde secured a place in

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- Central London. Maggi Hambling's bronze in Adelaide Street near Trafalgar Square was unveiled by Stephen Fry and is less formal than the blue plaque at Wilde's residence in Tite Street in Chelsea. Entitled A Conversation with Oscar Wilde 1854-1900, the memorial consists of a sarcophagus, out of which pokes the writer's head. According to Hambling, the sculpture is "completed" when a member of the public sits down on the sarcophagus to have a chat with the author. In addition, the rebellious Wilde is depicted smoking, once a symbol of moral decay. Inscribed on the memorial is that wonderful quote by Wilde: "We are all in the gutter, but some of us are looking at the stars."
1798. Bennett, Suzy. "Scenes of the crime." The Daily Telegraph (London), May 12, 2007: 13.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...For fans of Britain's original detective, the Sherlock Holmes Museum at 221b Baker Street, London, is an obvious place to visit...along with the Sherlock Holmes pub on nearby Northumberland Avenue, which exhibits props used in the films. Further afield, in Devon, mist-wreathed Dartmoor was the inspiration for Arthur Conan Doyle's The Hound of the Baskervilles, although most of the 2002 film version of the story took place in Glen Maye, Jurby and Druidale on the Isle of Man...."
1799. Boetschi, Marianne. "Drawing -- 'Baker Street 221B, London; Holmes and Moriarty'." Shoso-In Bulletin 11, no. (2001): 10.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1800. Campbell, Mark. "Hot on Sherlock Holmes's Trail; Mark Campbell Sniffs Out the London Haunts of Conan Doyle's Legendary Sleuth." The Independent (London), October 27, 2001: 7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "One of the most famous literary addresses in London is 221b Baker Street. There's only one problem - the cosy rooms of amateur detective Sherlock Holmes and his friend, John H Watson, don't actually exist. The 'real' 221b, subsumed by the head office of the Abbey National, is not a worthy place of veneration. However, down the street in the Sherlock Holmes Museum..., you'll find a mock 221b frontage and a frighteningly accurate rendition of the dark and cluttered Victorian interior of Conan Doyle's stories. But for every fictitious address in the Canon (the official term for the four novels and 56 short stories featuring Holmes and Watson), you'll find plenty of bona fide locations in the capital. To begin with, turn the corner into Wigmore Street and you pass the post office that Holmes magically deduced Watson had visited in The Sign of Four (1890)...."
1801. Carlton, Michael. "Inside Yankee." Yankee 68, no. 3 (2004): 6-6.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Recounts the bird watching experience of a journalist in Highlands, Scotland. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "I was on assignment for the Los Angeles Times/Washington Post News Service, writing various stories from the U.K., ranging from Princess Diana's first trip to Balmoral, the magnificent country house of the Windsors, to interviewing the man who actually lived at 221b Baker Street, the fictional home of Sherlock Holmes...."
1802. Dalby, Stewart. "Play dough: Hot on the trail of the man who never was: Sherlock Holmes was a fictional character but that doesn't stop people collecting anything to do with him." The Guardian (London), July 15, 2000: 24.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Sherlock Holmes never existed, of course. Nor did his much-loved dwellings at 221b Baker Street in London. But try telling Kazie Kamaza, one of the thousands of visitors who flock to the Sherlock Holmes Memorabilia Company in Baker Street each year....Almost exactly opposite is the Sherlock Holmes Museum, housed in a former Victorian lodging house. A blue plaque on the wall claims that this is the original 221b Baker Street. Not so, says the Abbey National Bank. Its modern, 60s built former headquarters a few doors along is where numbers 205 to 229 Baker Street used to be. And Abbey National still gets mail, as does the museum, addressed to Sherlock Holmes and asking him to help with a problem. They are reluctant to tell you at the museum just how many visitors they receive. In fact, they are disinclined to tell you anything if they suspect you have been across the road talking to the Memorabilia Company. The two see themselves as strong competitors...."
1803. Dorn, Jennifer. "Streetlights of London." British Heritage 27, no. 5 (2006): 11-12.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article presents information on the Marylebone neighborhood in London,

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

England. The address 221B was not there in Baker Street, Marylebone during the years of the Sherlock Holmes stories. But Baker Street was extended and renumbering of the buildings was done in 1930. 221B became a real address and the popular Sherlock Holmes Museum was made there. The beautiful Regent's Park is the famous residential area of Marylebone. Medical services are offered in Wimpole and Harley streets.

1804. Ellis, Stephen. "Abbey ending for Sherlock Holmes." The Sunday Times (London), June 5, 1994.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...Ever since 1932 when its head office opened on the site where 221b Baker Street would be, Abbey National has been answering letters addressed to Sherlock Holmes. As many as 200 a week arrive from admirers the world over expressing their admiration for the fictional hero or simply asking after his health. Some go so far as to request his help to find stolen jewels or missing pets. All are answered by an Abbey employee referred to as 'Secretary to Sherlock Holmes.' However, like a real-life Moriarty, a Sherlock Holmes Museum has opened nearby and is putting the pressure on to have all the letters redirected so it can take advantage and sell its memorabilia of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's great detective...."
1805. Fernz, Helena. "Probing the residence at 221b Baker Street, London." Business Times, December 7, 2001: 13.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Let's play the sleuth on this occasion and investigate the famed residence at 221b Baker Street, London, by stopping at http:// www.sherlock- holmes.co.uk/ The notable occupants of this well-known abode at Baker Street are none other than Sherlock Holmes and his colleague John H. Watson, MD. Well, actually, this will probably be the easiest 'case' ever to be investigated, for 'The Sherlock Holmes Museum' that is online provides a colourful and in-depth tour to anyone who actually takes the time to visit and explore...."
1806. Friedman, Kinky. "Mad Cowboy Disease." Texas Monthly 31, no. 5 (2003): 244.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Relates the experience of a cowboy when he visited London, England. Reaction of the city workers to the cowboy's outfit; Details of the cowboy's meeting with Mike Levy, former record producer and tennis partner of Great Britain's Prime Minister Tony Blair. Includes a reference to Holmes. "...On my last night in London, I walked through the fog until I came to the most famous address in the world, 221B Baker Street. On the door was a small bronze plaque that read 'Visitors for Mr. Sherlock Holmes or Doctor Watson please ring the bell.' I rang the bell, walked up one flight of seventeen steps, and suddenly I was standing in Sherlock Holmes's living room. There was a cheery fire in the fireplace. Holmes's violin stood poignantly nearby, along with the old Persian slipper where he kept his Turkish tobacco. And in the room were Japanese, Russians, Africans, people from seemingly every nation on earth, all bound together by a common, passionate belief that Sherlock Holmes was real. It was, I thought, a perfect United Nations...."
1807. Galerstein, David H. "Book review--'They Came to Baker Street' by Reginald L. Johnson." Baker Street Miscellanea, no. 70 (1992): 39-40.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Johnson was born at the turn of the century and discovered the Canon as a teenager, and his book is a collection of more than 50 well-written vignettes of those who visited the famous sitting-room, edited and foot-noted by Alan Truscott (who as the bridge editor of the N.Y. Times has shown in his bridge column that he too is an admirer of Sherlock Holmes)."
1808. Hughes, Mel. "221B -- An Early Visit (or Parker's Vigil)." Shoso-In Bulletin 4, no. (2004): 93.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1809. Jenkins, Rebecca. "Detective work at Baker Street." The Times (London), September 25, 1999: 30.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Looking for clues on a tour of Sherlock Holmes's fictional patch. We were on the trail of Sherlock Holmes. Nine of us, mostly American tourists and fellow sleuths, were scouring Marylebone for the haunts of a fictional character. It was a strange way to spend a Tuesday afternoon...."
1810. Klinger, Leslie S. "Layout of a 'Most Desirable Residence'." Shoso-In Bulletin 6, no. (1996): 78-81.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1811. Laidlaw, Joanna. "The fun of museum shopping." Victoria 12, no. 3 (1998): 16.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on museum shops in London, England that sell souvenirs and other gift

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- items. Henry VIII's Tudor palace; Tower of London; Victoria & Albert Museum; Pollock's Toy Museum; Museum of Garden History; Twinings Tea Museum. Includes passing references to Holmes. "...Come along with Londoner Joanna Laidlaw on an enlightening stroll that leads directly to artful and unusual souvenirs -- from a silk scarf to a Beefeater teddy bear and a Sherlock Holmes hat....Snoop around the real 221b Baker Street (011 44 171 935 8866), and see where Sherlock Holmes lived. The fictitious English sleuth still receives thousands of letters, birthday cards, and invitations to speak. The museum shop sells everything from Baker Street street signs and meerschaum pipes to capes, and handsome tweed deerstalker hats. You can even buy a real London Times from the last century and a chess set featuring characters from the tales (the pawns are London bobbies)...."
1812. Malion, Brian. "Deconstructing Baker Street or 221b Faker Street." Baker Street West 17, no. 2 (2001): 33-35.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1813. McAteer, Michael. "Holmes' legend lives." Toronto Star, January 3, 2002: L14.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The small room with the two windows overlooking Baker Street is on the first floor of the Sherlock Holmes Museum. Here, shrouded in blue tobacco smoke, the great consulting detective pondered the criminal mind as gas lamps flickered in the fog outside and hansom cabs rattled over cobbles. A museum visitor- an American by his accent- glances over the room crammed with Holmes memorabilia before addressing a young woman decked out as a Victorian maid. 'Did Sherlock Holmes die in this house?' he asks...."
1814. Muller, Lynne. "The case of the fictional flat: A quirky London museum pays tribute to Sherlock Holmes and Watson." The Globe and Mail (Toronto), May 16, 1998: F3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...I'll never know if she believed Sherlock Holmes had really lived, because I didn't pursue the conversation. But the obsession she and other Sherlockians share must be the ultimate tribute to Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, Holmes' creator. Fascination with the Holmes persona is so strong almost 70 years after Doyle's death that there are more than 300 Sherlockian organizations worldwide, 17 in Japan alone. And the fiction is complete in Baker Street's Sherlock Holmes Museum, which allows fans to visit the small flat, reproduced with style and good humour, that Holmes shared with Dr. Watson from 1881 to 1904. The museum contains no mention of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, no background on how he came to create his famous sleuth. A project of the Sherlock Holmes International Society, the museum simply reproduces Holmes' flat (and sells a few souvenirs along the way). Thankfully, there's not too much schlock amidst the Sherlockiana...."
1815. Nurton, James. "The King and I." Managing Intellectual Property, no. (2000): 5p.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the story Elvisly Yours owner Sid Shaw to illustrate the limits of trademark protection for the memorabilia and collectibles about Elvis Presley. Lawsuit filed by Elvis Presley Enterprises against the company; Details of how Shaw won various lawsuits against his business; Forecasts of how Shaw's legal troubles will end. Includes a reference to Holmes. "...If you're looking for celebrities, London's Baker Street would be a good place to start. On one side of the road is the famous Madame Tussauds waxworks, the country's biggest tourist attraction, and home to models of thousands of politicians, monarchs, sports stars, artists, entertainers and criminals. On the other side is number 221 B, the residence of Sherlock Holmes, probably the world's most famous detective. Now there is a new face in the neighbourhood. The King is in town. Next to the Sherlock Holmes museum, the greatest rock and roll star of all time has just moved in to number 233. Elvis the Pelvis, the Memphis Flash, is here...."
1816. Rowan, David. "Strange Case of the Building Society Which was Found at the Wrong Address." The Guardian (London), November 10, 1994: 26.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "It is the Case of the Missing Door Number, or perhaps the Hound of Westminster Council. For the quest to occupy Sherlock Holmes's famous lodgings has brought financiers, councillors, and now Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's daughter into a conflict more bitter even than Mrs Ronder's prussic acid. Only the intervention of the nation's law makers, it seems, can decide finally who owns 221b Baker Street. The problem is that there never was, or is, a Number 221b. An Abbey National edifice has long been numbered 215-229, and the Sherlock Holmes Museum stands, as the Post Office sees it, at 239. But both have been claiming the rights to the legendary address which Watson found 'cheerfully furnished, so desirable in every way'. And now Westminster council has come down on the building society's side...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

06F WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- OTHER SUBJECTS -- BANKS AND BANKING (7)

1817. "Abbey National Unveil Bronze of Sherlock Holmes." Birmingham Post, October 9, 1999: 32.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "In the detective's shadow: Abbey National has tried to dilute the image of banks as soulless organisations, whose only driving force is the creation of profit, by unveiling a three-metre high bronze of Sherlock Holmes as part of its 150th anniversary celebrations. The move commemorates the bank's 'association' with the detective, dating back to 1932, when Abbey's head offices moved to Baker Street and incorporated Holmes' fictional address of 221b. Abbey still receives letters addressed to the crime-buster, which are answered by his 'secretary' who works for the bank."

1818. "Holmes' place." The Evening Standard (London), August 4, 1999: 12.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Lord Tugendhat is hoping the cash registers of the Abbey National will be going ching! ching! over the Abbey's links with Sherlock Holmes. The bank, of which he is chairman, is sponsoring a statue of Conan Doyle's great detective as part of its 150th anniversary celebrations. 221b Baker Street, where Holmes and Watson were so capably looked after by Mrs Hudson, has been occupied by Abbey National since 1932, and the Sherlock Holmes Society has long pleaded for a statue there...."

1819. "Holmes' Statue is on the Case!". Birmingham Evening Mail, September 24, 1999: 37.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "A bronze statue of the world's best-known fictional detective was unveiled in London. The statue of Sherlock Holmes stands outside Baker Street underground station, near to where the detective lived at the fictional number 221b. Abbey National, whose head office is located on the site of what would be 221b Baker Street, has sponsored the work to mark its 150th anniversary...."

1820. "Tellers' Tales." New Statesman 128, no. 4453 (1999): vi.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents several trivia related to the banking industry. Includes reference to Holmes and 221B Baker Street. "Abbey House, the Baker Street headquarters of Abbey National, receives about 100 letters a week addressed to Sherlock Holmes, 221b Baker Street. They are fielded by a special secretary to Sherlock Holmes."

1821. Dalby, Stewart. "Play dough: Hot on the trail of the man who never was: Sherlock Holmes was a fictional character but that doesn't stop people collecting anything to do with him." The Guardian (London), July 15, 2000: 24.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Sherlock Holmes never existed, of course. Nor did his much-loved dwellings at 221b Baker Street in London. But try telling Kazie Kamaza, one of the thousands of visitors who flock to the Sherlock Holmes Memorabilia Company in Baker Street each year....Almost exactly opposite is the Sherlock Holmes Museum, housed in a former Victorian lodging house. A blue plaque on the wall claims that this is the original 221b Baker Street. Not so, says the Abbey National Bank. Its modern, 60s built former headquarters a few doors along is where numbers 205 to 229 Baker Street used to be. And Abbey National still gets mail, as does the museum, addressed to Sherlock Holmes and asking him to help with a problem. They are reluctant to tell you at the museum just how many visitors they receive. In fact, they are disinclined to tell you anything if they suspect you have been across the road talking to the Memorabilia Company. The two see themselves as strong competitors...."

1822. Ellis, Stephen. "Abbey ending for Sherlock Holmes." The Sunday Times (London), June 5, 1994.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...Ever since 1932 when its head office opened on the site where 221b Baker Street would be, Abbey National has been answering letters addressed to Sherlock Holmes. As many as 200 a week arrive from admirers the world over expressing their admiration for the fictional hero or simply asking after his health. Some go so far as to request his help to find stolen jewels or missing pets. All are answered by an Abbey employee referred to as 'Secretary to Sherlock Holmes.' However, like a real-life Moriarty, a Sherlock Holmes Museum has opened nearby and is putting the pressure on to have all the letters redirected so it can take advantage and sell its memorabilia of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's great detective...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

1823. Wells, David H. "Further gloom in the building societies' challenging new world." Management Accounting: Magazine for Chartered Management Accountants 72, no. 1: 28.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the plight of Abbey National and other building societies in Great Britain in the aftermath of the Building Societies Act of 1986. Continuation of mutuality and legal framework debate; Financial results and balance sheet changes; Contribution of the main activities; Development of newer activities. Includes passing references to Doyle and Holmes. "...In every year since the passing of the Building Societies Act 1986, Abbey National has been involved in some kinds of controversy. These included the fierce debate over its conversion to a public limited company, the fairness of allocation of free shares to members, the mystery of its 400,000 lost share certificates, the purchase of Scottish Mutual Assurance and its continuing links with Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's fictitious Sherlock Holmes....Visitors to the fictitious home of Sherlock Holmes at 221b Baker Street, London--and the postmen delivering mail to the sleuth--would have been further mystified. Abbey National's Head Office is at 215-229 Baker Street and it has had many secretaries dealing with his correspondence for over 50 years. However, a new museum for the detective has opened at 239 Baker Street. It is called 221b Baker Street and is claimed to fit the description of Holmes's house...."

06F WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- OTHER SUBJECTS -- BARITSU (BARTITSU) (5)

1824. Bowen, Richard. "Further Lessons in Baritsu." The Ritual, no. 20 (1997): 22-26.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1825. Hirayama, Yuichi. "The Master and 'Baritsu'." Shoso-In Bulletin 3, no. (1993): 61-62.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1826. Masters, Rosalind. "Review--'Some Knowledge of Baritsu' by Hirayama Yuichi and John Hall." The Ritual, no. 19 (1997): 64-65.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1827. Waterhouse, D. B. "More Thoughts on Baritsu." The Ritual, no. 21 (1998): 40-42.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1828. Webb, James R. "Some Observations on Baritsu." Shoso-In Bulletin 8, no. (1998): 229-231.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

06F WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- OTHER SUBJECTS -- BEE CULTURE (1)

1829. Moss, Robert A. "Some Observations Upon the Segregation of the Queen." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 4 (1994): 226-232.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The author explores the "numerous intersections of organic chemistry and apian husbandry" in the work of Holmes during his time on the Sussex Downs, that "a significant portion of Holmes's Practical Handbook was devoted to apian chemistry," and speculation "upon the possible content and import of Holmes's observations upon the segregation of the queen."

06F WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- OTHER SUBJECTS -- BIBLIOGRAPHY (6)

1830. "Book Review--Ron de Waal's TUSH." Baker Street Miscellanea, no. 76 (1994): 51.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of The Universal Sherlock Holmes bibliography.
1831. "Relations of Literature and Science, 1991-1992." Configurations 2, no. 2 (1994): 373-431.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes references to Doyle and Holmes. Roden, A. E., et al. "Humanism and

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- Values in the Medical Short Stories of Arthur Conan Doyle." South Med J 85 (May 1992): 528-537;
Westmoreland, B.F. "Arthur Conan Doyle, Joseph Bell, and Sherlock Holmes: A Neurologic Connection." Arch Neurol 48 (1991): 325-329.; Oderwald, A. K. "The Physician and Sherlock Holmes." J R Soc Med 84 (1991): 151-152; Roszell, Calvert. "The Devil's Foot and the Dweller at the Threshold." BSJ 41 (1991): 100-103.
1832. De Waal, Ronald B. "Days and Thoughts in the Life of Mr. Ron. A Bibliography of Published and Unpublished Writings." Shoso-In Bulletin 10, no. (2000): 35-43.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1833. Johnson, Roger. "Review--'The Universal Sherlock Holmes' by Ronald B. De Waal, edited by George Vanderburgh." The Ritual, no. 14 (1994): 58-59.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1834. Johnson, Timothy J. "Collections Update -- More Accessibility Soon." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 2, no. 4 (1998): 3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Notes work on mounting a digital version of The Universal Sherlock Holmes bibliography on the Holmes Collections web site.
1835. Lovisi, Gary. "Tauchnitz Books Sherlock Holmes and the Non-Sherlockian Titles." Shoso-In Bulletin 7, no. (1997): 26-30.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

06F WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- OTHER SUBJECTS -- CHRISTMAS (1)

1836. "Mysteries Reveal Message of Christmas; [Fourth Edition]." The Oregonian (Portland, OR), December 15, 1994: 06.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Something mysterious is going on in Bethlehem, and Sirlock and Watstein get to the bottom of it in "The Inn Kaper," a Christmas musical by St. Stephen Lutheran Church in Gladstone.; The musical will follow the indefatigable detective, Sirlock, and his trusty assistant, Watstein, as they uncover the meaning of Christmas, said Troy Lutz, youth director of the play. The characters are based on the Sherlock Holmes stories and placed in biblical times, he said.

06F WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- OTHER SUBJECTS -- CHRONOLOGIES (1)

1837. Keefauver, Brad. "Review--'The Date Being---? A Compendium of Chronological Data Expanded and Revised' by Andrew Jay Peck and Leslie S. Klinger." The Holmes & Watson Report 1, no. 1 (1997): 20.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

06F WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- OTHER SUBJECTS -- COLLECTING SHERLOCKIANA (38)

1838. "Acquisitions." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 5, no. 1 (2001): 7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Highlights recent acquisitions from David Hammer, Ted Friedman, J. Randolph Cox, John and Inez Bergquist, and Hugo Koch. Includes photographs of Richard Sveum with Ted Friedman, John Bergquist with Tim Johnson and Michael Meer, and Ted Friedman's stamp moulage.
1839. "Book fetches pounds 15,000 at auction." Daily Post (Liverpool), May 21, 2008: 8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "A first edition of a Sherlock Holmes story discovered in an Oxfam shop has sold for more than pounds 15,000 after a bidding war between buyers in the US and the UK yesterday. The rare first edition of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's first Sherlock Holmes story, A Study In Scarlet, broke its upper reserve price of pounds 9,000 to fetch pounds 15,500 at the Bonhams Auction in Oxford. The story was discovered inside a book called Beeton's Christmas Annual for 1887 by two volunteers at an Oxfam shop in Harrogate, North Yorkshire...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

1840. "Global Reach." American Libraries 38, no. 6 (2007): 42-42.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article offers news briefs about libraries. Includes a reference to Doyle.
"Scottish celebrities, including actor Sir Sean Connery and author Ian Rankin, have joined the National Library of Scotland's campaign to purchase the archive of Edinburgh-born publisher John Murray, which includes manuscripts and letters from Charles Dickens, Jane Austen, Lord Byron, and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. The Heritage Lottery Fund and the Scottish Executive provided the bulk of the funding, but the library must raise GBP6.5 million to close the deal. The National Library plans to make the archive widely accessible through exhibitions that will travel the country...."
1841. "Remembrances." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 4, no. 2 (2000): 8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Notes donors who have made contributions in honor or memory of special persons.
1842. "Remembrances." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 4, no. 3 (2000): 12.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // List of donors who made contributions in memory or honor of a special individual. Includes a photograph of Peter Blau, E. W. McDiarmid and Mike Whelan and another of three of the founders of the Norwegian Explorers: E. W. Ziebarth, Mac McDiarmid, and Bryce Crawford.
1843. "Remembrances." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 3, no. 1 (1999): 8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // List of recent donors to the Collections.
1844. "Remembrances." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 3, no. 3 (1999): 8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // List of donors with gifts given in memory or honor of certain individuals.
1845. Blau, Peter E. "From One Collector to Another." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 5, no. 2 (2001): 1, 6.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the acquisition and gift of a rusty paperclip, now set in a paperweight, that once belonged with Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's papers.
1846. Breese, James. "Your Money: Focus On; a Study in Scarlet Treasure Hunters." Sunday Mirror, June 1, 2008: 46.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "A book handed in to a branch of Oxfam in Harrogate has just gone under the hammer for a small fortune. What made it so desirable was the special connection to Sherlock Holmes. However, it is not a mystery why the book made so much....The book in which the story first appeared - Samuel Beeton's Christmas Annual 1887 - is thought to be one of the most desirable titles for collectors of fine fiction. There are rarer editions that have commanded over pounds 50,000 in the past. Only a handful of these are thought to exist."
1847. Cowan, James. "Conan Doyle saw greatness in Canada: Toronto library acquires collection of author's notes during visits here." National Post (Canada), November 18, 2004: A9.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Sir Arthur Conan Doyle loved Canada -- its landscape, its government, its literature. The creator of Sherlock Holmes came to North America three times between 1894 and 1922, travelling for different reasons but almost exclusively by private rail car. In 1914, he was headed to the National Reserve in Jasper, Alta., as an invited guest of the Canadian government. He stopped at Canadian Clubs along the way -- in Winnipeg, Fort William, Ont., and Hamilton, among other cities -- delivering speeches on literature....Doyle's speaking notes were among the items acquired last spring by the Toronto Public Library at an auction at Christie's in London and directly from the Doyle estate. Toronto has the only public library collection in the world dedicated to Arthur Conan Doyle, contained in a wood-panelled room on the fifth floor of the Toronto Reference Library...."
1848. De Waal, Ronald B. "Pages From the Journal of Ron De Waal. Collecting and Writing About Sherlock Holmes."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Shoso-In Bulletin 14, no. (2004): 19-20.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

1849. Gordon, Douglas. "Canine Curiosa in William and Mary's Special Collections." American Libraries 30, no. 9 (1999): 60.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the collection of information and materials on the history of dogs at the College of William and Mary in Williamsburg, Virginia. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...The fiction section includes many of the great names in dog literature Richard Harding Davis, Albert Payson Terhune, Jim Kjelgaard, James Thurber, Rudyard Kipling, James Oliver Curwood, MacKinlay Kantor, Alfred Ollivant, Dion Henderson, Sidonie Gabrielle Colette, Ouida Sebestyen, Arthur Conan Doyle, Jack London, and Eric Knight. Any number of titles, Richard Harding Davis's The Bar Sinister (1903), Conan Doyle's The Hound of the Baskervilles (1902), and Mark Twain's A Dog's Tale (1904) among them, are first editions...."
1850. Hall, John. "British Sherlockiana 2002." Shoso-In Bulletin 13, no. (2003): 145-146.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1851. ———. "British Sherlockiana in 1999." Shoso-In Bulletin 10, no. (2000): 176-178.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1852. ———. "British Sherlockiana in 2000." Shoso-In Bulletin 11, no. (2001): 215-216.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1853. ———. "British Sherlockiana in 2001." Shoso-In Bulletin 12, no. (2002): 204-205.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1854. Harris, Christopher. "Arts Ink: Memorabilia Holmesiana for sale." The Globe and Mail (Toronto), July 13, 1995: C1.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "What Sotheby's is calling one of the finest collections of Sherlock Holmes memorabilia ever offered for sale is expected to fetch about L70,000 (roughly $145,000) when it goes on the block in London on July 24. The collection, amassed by a former custodian of the Sherlock Holmes Society, includes papers, first editions and other materials relating to the legendary fictional detective and his creator, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle...."
1855. Hirayama, Yuichi. "Sherlockiana in Japan." Shoso-In Bulletin 9, no. (1999): 100-103.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1856. ———. "Sherlockiana in Japan 2001-2002." Shoso-In Bulletin 12, no. (2002): 197-198.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1857. ———. "Sherlockiana in Japan 2002-2003." Shoso-In Bulletin 13, no. (2003): 151-152.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1858. Hobbs, Don. "Review--2001: A Sherlockian Odyssey: A Journey Among the Shaw 100." The Holmes & Watson Report 5, no. 4 (2001): 14.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1859. Hollyer, Cameron. "Seventeen Steps to a Collection." Canadian Holmes 30, no. 1 (2006): 14-37.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1860. Johnson, Timothy J. "An Update from the Collections." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 3, no. 3 (1999): 5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A report from the curator on a non-Sherlockian matter: his appointment to the Advisory Committee on the Records of Congress (which will also provide opportunities to meet with Sherlockians in the Washington, DC area).

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

1861. Kennedy, Maev. "Flipside of Conan Doyle: Auction of romantic manuscripts from Sherlock Holmes creator." The Guardian (London), October 17, 2003: 12.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...A collection of Conan Doyle manuscripts, which have remained in his family for the past century, is to be auctioned at Christie's in London in aid of a number of charities. It includes the original manuscript of the book he insisted should have a print run of 15,000 copies, against the judgment of his publishers. A Duet with an Occasional Chorus, which appeared in 1889, was not what fans of A Study in Scarlet or The Sign of the Four expected...."
1862. Klinger, Leslie S. "'Maybe you collect yourself, sir. . .': 'The Collection Mania in its Most Acute Form': A Checklist of Sherlockian Pornography." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 56, no. 4 (2006): 41-47.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1863. McKuras, Julie. "50 Years Ago." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 4, no. 1 (2000): 3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Provides some observations on the London Mystery Magazine and one of its contributors ("Sagittarius"; identified as Olga Katzin).
1864. ———. "Acquisitions." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 3, no. 2 (1999): 4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Provides an update on new acquisitions to the Collections from Steve Clarkson, Jennie Paton, Syd Goldberg, the Herbert Hoover Museum, Bob Katz, and the family of the late Will Crakes.
1865. ———. "Musings." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 5, no. 1 (2001): 4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Notes the arrival of the Eve Titus manuscript archive, her current illness, and her contributions to the article about this acquisition. Also noted are other articles in the newsletter relating to Theodore Blegen, the Reichenbach Falls, and the passing of Sherlockian Wayne Swift.
1866. Meer, Michael A. "'Maybe You Collect Yourself, Sir ...' Morbus Colligendi Sherlockianus (Incurable): Being Some Scattered Notes on Hunters, Collectors, and Books." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 51, no. 3 (2001): 48-52.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1867. Proubasta, Joan. "Spanish Sherlockiana in 1999." Shoso-In Bulletin 10, no. (2000): 183-184.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1868. Rossakis, Constantine. "The First Colonial Hound: A Centenary Discovery." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 53, no. 3 (2003): 17-21.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1869. Rutter, Richard R. "Sherlockiana Germania, Part I." Baker Street Miscellanea, no. 70 (1992): 1-8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1870. ———. "Sherlockiana Germania, Part II." Baker Street Miscellanea, no. 71 (1992): 1-7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1871. Shaw, John. "Last chapter in strange case of the literary detective." The Times (London), July 11, 1995: 1.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "A fascination with Sherlock Holmes, which turned a schoolboy into a literary detective, will lead to a Pounds 70,000 book sale in London this month. Stanley MacKenzie became a world authority on Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's fictional detective and his collection of first editions, reference books and papers is regarded as the finest in Europe. As an honorary member of the Sherlock Holmes Society of London, Mr MacKenzie, who lived in west London and died aged 82 earlier this year, had been consulted frequently by playwrights and film-makers. The material he collected will now be sold at Sotheby's on July 24...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

1872. Shaw, John Bennett, and Karen Murdock. "The First 'Shaw 100'." Canadian Holmes 29, no. 2 (2005): 18-37.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1873. Solito, Enrico. "Sherlockiana in Italy 2000." Shoso-In Bulletin 11, no. (2001): 206-208.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1874. Southworth, Bruce E. "Stix-Shaw Bolo Tie Comes to Minnesota." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 3, no. 1 (1999): 1.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Highlights gift from Dorothy Stix of a bolo tie that had belonged to her husband, Tom, and John Bennett Shaw, given to the Collections during the Holmes birthday weekend in New York.
1875. Williams, Sally. "Elementary, my dear Watson... silver cutlery of the family that inspired Sherlock Holmes classic is tracked down in Wales." The Western Mail, June 3, 2008: 12.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "A set of silver cutlery featuring Sherlock Holmes' legendary Hound of the Baskervilles is to be sold at auction later this month. The 42-piece set, which is expected to fetch up to pounds 6,000, was hidden in a wardrobe at Baskerville Hall, Clyro Court, in Mid Wales - the setting that inspired author Sir Arthur Conan Doyle to write his spine-chilling thriller. The crest showing a hound with a broken spear through its jaw with five drips of blood falling from its tip is on every piece of the dinner service. The hound, Black Vaughan, howled and roamed the nearby foggy moors of Hergest Ridge and was the inspiration of Conan Doyle's book. And the silver is believed to have been used at the fine banquets Conan Doyle would have attended during his numerous visits to the house in the late 19th and early 20th century. It lay hidden for 63 years until being discovered by antiques expert Martin Heath...."

06F WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- OTHER SUBJECTS -- COLLECTING SHERLOCKIANA --
MARYLEBONE LIBRARY (LONDON) (2)

1876. "'A Singular Set of People...'" Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 2, no. 1 (1998): 2.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Notes the decisions by two scion societies of the Baker Street Irregulars to make contributions to the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota, The Arthur Conan Doyle Collection at The Metropolitan Toronto Library, and The Sherlock Holmes Collection at the Marylebone Library in London.
1877. Cooke, Catherine. "Vintage 1951 - a Festival, a Society and a Collection." Shoso-In Bulletin 8, no. (1998): 186-198.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

06F WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- OTHER SUBJECTS -- COLLECTING SHERLOCKIANA --
NEWBERRY LIBRARY (1)

1878. "Datebook." American Libraries 34, no. 3 (2003): 95.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents the calendar for events related to the American Library Association for March-April 2003. Reference and photo from Newberry Library exhibit, "Sir Arthur Conan Doyle: Beyond Sherlock Holmes."

06F WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- OTHER SUBJECTS -- COLLECTING SHERLOCKIANA --
PORTSMOUTH(14)

1879. "The best of Brickish; Japanese flock to admire our building blocks of history." Daily Mail (London), May 5, 1998: 25.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Squat and solid, they are regarded with hushed awe by the visitors who file past

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

every day. Treasured for their shape and texture and marvelled at for their lasting quality, these are the precious prize exhibits in a Japanese museum. British bricks, it seems, are building up a reputation for themselves. Back home, they can be found cluttering up back gardens, littering building sites or even propping open doors. But the Japanese believe our bricks deserve more respect. At the World Brick Museum in Maizuru, north-west of Kyoto, specimens are kept lovingly in glass cases and treated as works of art. More than 10,000 visitors a month go to look at them. The Japanese fascination with British bricks probably has something to do with the rarity of brick buildings in Japan. The high risk of earthquakes has made building with bricks a risky business. So when the museum hosted an exhibition of just 16 bricks, titled 'Sherlock Holmes and English Bricks', record numbers of visitors flocked through the doors. They feasted their eyes on a collection of clay from Covent Garden, Scotland Yard, the Royal Albert Hall, St Pancras Station and 221B Baker Street - the detective's home address. The museum curators enlisted the help of the city of Portsmouth to compile the exhibition after discovering that Sir Arthur Conan Doyle created the character of Sherlock Holmes while living there in 1887...."

1880. "City Gets Conan Doyle Collection; Portsmouth, England, receives Sherlock Holmes memorabilia worth $3.6 million." Los Angeles Times, Aug 8, 2004: A.9.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "[Richard Lancelyn Green] was the foremost [Arthur Conan Doyle] scholar and a leading Sherlock Holmes specialist. His collection was acknowledged to be the finest in private hands,' said Nicholas Utechin, Lancelyn Green's friend and editor of the 'Sherlock Holmes Journal.' Lancelyn Green, a prominent figure in the Sherlock Holmes Society, spent more than 40 years collecting material related to Conan Doyle and Holmes. His will stipulated that the collection should be housed together and that he wanted it offered first to Portsmouth's library service."

1881. "Global Reach." American Libraries 35, no. 8 (2004): 23-23.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents world news briefs on libraries as of September 2004. "What may be the world's largest collection of Arthur Conan Doyle memorabilia was donated August 6 to the Portsmouth Library' by the estate of writer Richard Lancelyn Green. The collection includes a full-size recreation of Sherlock Holmes's Baker Street study, and first editions of all Conan Doyle's works."

1882. "Holmes collection left to library in southern England." Xinhua News Agency - CEIS, Aug 6, 2004: 1.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "[Arthur Conan Doyle] was born in Edinburgh. He moved later to Portsmouth and then London. While in Portsmouth, he wrote 'A Study in Scarlet' ( 1887), which introduced [Holmes] and his sidekick, Dr. Watson. [Richard Lancelyn Green] was the foremost Arthur Conan Doyle scholar and a leading Sherlock Holmes specialist. His collection was acknowledged to be the finest in private hands,' said Nicholas Utechin, editor of the 'Sherlock Holmes Journal.'"

1883. "Library gets Sherlock trove ; Conan Doyle collection includes first editions, full-size replica of detective's study." San Antonio Express-News, Aug 7, 2004: 16A.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "One of the world's greatest collections of memorabilia from Sir Arthur Conan Doyle was handed over Friday to a library in the port city where the author once had a medical practice and wrote the first two Sherlock Holmes adventures. When he died in March, writer and collector Richard Lancelyn Green, left the 20,000-item collection worth more than $3.6 million to the Portsmouth library service. The collection includes a full size recreation by Lancelyn Green of the study at 221B Baker Street, Holmes' fictional London address...."

1884. "A new home for Sherlock Holmes." Daily Mail (London), August 6, 2004: 19.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "A collection of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle memorabilia, including a hint of how Sherlock Holmes got his name, is moving. Writer Richard Lancelyn Green, who died in March, has left the 20,000 items, worth more than Pounds 2million, to Portsmouth library...."

1885. "The World." The Augusta Chronicle, Aug 7, 2004: A.02.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "One of the greatest collections of memorabilia from Sir Arthur Conan Doyle was given Friday to a library in Portsmouth, England, where he wrote the first Sherlock Holmes adventures. The 20,000- item collection of Richard Lancelyn Green includes a full-size model of the study at 221B Baker St.,

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Holmes' fictional address."

1886. "Writer leaves pounds 2m Conan Doyle collection to library." Daily Post, Aug 7, 2004: 7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "[Richard Lancelyn Green], who died in March this year, was a prominent figure in the Sherlock Holmes Society and spent more than 40 years collecting everything he could find that related to [Arthur Conan Doyle] and Sherlock Holmes."
1887. Alberge, Dalya. "Holmes archive row ends in GBP2m bequest." The Times (London), August 6, 2004: 11.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The world's leading authority on Sherlock Holmes, who was found garotted on his bed three months ago, has bequeathed his Pounds 2 million collection of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's papers to the nation. Richard Lancelyn Green was found dead at 50 after trying in vain to stop the sale of another Pounds 2 million collection of Doyle papers, some of which he felt should have been left to the British Library. An open verdict on his death was recorded. Mr Lancelyn Green left more than 20,000 Doyle manuscripts and memorabilia, amassed over more than 40 years, to Portsmouth, where Dr Conan Doyle had his medical practice and where he created his legendary detective...."
1888. ———. "Holmes archive row ends in Pounds 2m bequest." The Times (London), Aug 6, 2004: 11.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Mr [Richard Lancelyn Green] left more than 20,000 [Arthur Conan Doyle] manuscripts and memorabilia, amassed over more than 40 years, to Portsmouth, where Dr Conan Doyle had his medical practice and where he created his legendary detective. Doyle's daughter, Dame Jean, died in 1997 at the age of 84. She stipulated in her will that Sherlock Holmes manuscripts were to go to the British Library and museums in Edinburgh, Doyle's birthplace, and Southsea or Portsmouth, where he worked as a doctor and where he created [Holmes]. Mr Lancelyn Green's brother, Scirard, said yesterday: 'It's truly fitting that Richard's life work should go to Portsmouth. Conan Doyle wrote the first two Sherlock Holmes stories there, so in some way his work is going home.'"
1889. Cook, William. "Close to home: A bit more than naval-gazing: When you think of Portsmouth, what comes to mind? Its redoubtable historic warships, perhaps. Chances are, it's not designer shopping, contemporary art - or Portsmouth FC's first goalkeeper, Arthur Conan Doyle." The Guardian (London), Apr 12, 2008: 2.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "From the crow's nest of Portsmouth's new Spinnaker Tower, you get a great view of the Isle of Wight, but the most spectacular sight is right beneath your feet, more than 100 metres below. Portsmouth's Historic Dockyard is a slice of living history, featuring several fascinating museums, housed in the original dockside buildings that were the powerhouse of the royal navy for several centuries. Most riveting is Nelson's flagship, HMS Victory, moored beside the Victorian battleship HMS Warrior, and Henry VIII's favourite warship, the Mary Rose. [Richard Lancelyn Green]'s bequest has provided a cultural catalyst for a city with a far more varied cultural life than its robust public image as a military harbour would suggest. Portsmouth was also the birthplace of Britain's greatest novelist, Charles Dickens. The handsome house where he was born is now a museum. And if you prefer fine art to literature, the local artist WL Wyllie was one of the finest maritime painters of the late 19th and early 20th centuries. There are some splendid examples of his work Portsmouth's City and Royal Naval Museums, most notably his epic panorama of the Battle of Trafalgar. There's first class stand-up comedy at Jongleurs and the Wedgwood Rooms, and the cathedral is a gem. 'It was a place in which a man might very well spend a happy life,' wrote [Arthur Conan Doyle], of Portsmouth. Or, he might have added, a very enjoyable weekend."
1890. Forsyth, Alex. "'Super museum' proposed in shake up." The News (Portsmouth, England), 27 January, 2009.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The City Museum and Central Library would be sold off and their contents re-housed in a brand new GBP37m landmark building if plans go ahead...." Mentions the Lancelyn Green Collection at Portsmouth.
1891. Gilchrist, Jim. "Not so elementary." The Scotsman, no. (2007): 22.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "I think when I started out, inevitably, I had a fairly naive view of him,' says [Andrew Lycett], 'based on the available evidence, which tended to present this rather upright English gentleman, forever taking up causes and, of course, his life dominated by writing Sherlock Homes.' We're talking in London, at the Primrose Hill flat of his partner, the literary photographer Sue Greenhill, and he has just obliged our own photographer by donning a T-shirt emblazoned with the single word 'Elementary'. Doyle (whose immortal detective never actually use the phrase 'elementary my dear [John H Watson]', until an 1899 stage dramatisation by the American actor William Gillette) would turn out to be rather more complicated than Lycett expected. 'Now, after looking into his life in some detail, I suppose I'm more aware of the warts-and-all aspect of his character, and that there were these contradictions. I'm much more aware of his sheer complexity and, in a way, I look to Edinburgh as a metaphor for that. It was Robert Louis Stevenson who alighted on the 'divided city' aspect of Edinburgh and you get that in Conan Doyle's character - the fascination with the supernatural alongside that strong belief in reason and science.' But even the field of Conan Doyle scholarship turned out not to be without its dark side: during Lycett's period of research, a leading Doyle scholar and archivist, Richard Lancelyn Green, was found dead amid strange circumstances. Amid the conspiracy theories, Lancelyn Green's own massive collection, as he had bequeathed, went to the City of Portsmouth, where Doyle practised as a doctor and where Lycett was eventually able to access it - though not without some help from the actor and broadcaster Stephen Fry, who is patron of the collection. Among so much fresh documentary material the biographer was able to 'flesh out the details' of the author's close relationship with his second wife while his first, Louise, was dying of tuberculosis. The established picture was one of Doyle, although fond of [Jean Leckie], doing the honourable thing of the day. Lycett refers to Leckie as Doyle's 'mistress', but how certain is he that, prior to Louise's death and his marriage to Leckie in 1907, theirs was a physical affair? 'I think he was in this awful dilemma. He had this wife who was ill, who I don't think he was very passionate about but who he respected and liked. He did his best for her in many ways, taking her abroad to try and ensure she'd live longer. However, during this period he met and fell in love with this younger, attractive and in many ways more suitable woman.'"

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

1892. Sapsted, David. "Conan Doyle fan leaves pounds 2m hoard to library." The Daily Telegraph (London), Aug 6, 2004: 11.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Mr [Richard Lancelyn Green] had collected 20,000 items, including a recreation of 221b Baker Street....His will, published today, leaves them to the library service in Portsmouth, where Conan Doyle lived and worked between 1882-1890 and where he helped to found Portsmouth Football Club, becoming its first goalkeeper. The collection will be catalogued before going on display in 2006."

06F WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- OTHER SUBJECTS -- COLLECTING SHERLOCKIANA -- TORONTO PUBLIC LIBRARY (8)

1893. "ALA/CLA Annual Conference." American Libraries 34, no. 3 (2003): 97.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents the schedule and highlights for the 2003 American Library Association/Canadian Library Association Annual Conference, held in Toronto, Canada. Notes "Sherlock Holmes in Toronto" and The Sub-Librarian Scion of the Baker Street Irregulars in the ALA meeting with an invitation to "come and tour the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection at the Toronto Reference Library. This is one of the world's finest collections of materials by and about Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. Victoria Gill, Curator, will give an introduction to the Collection, emphasizing Sherlock Holmes. Afterwards, there will be a complimentary 'Coffee and Sticky Buns' light reception, hosted by the Bootmakers of Toronto, the local Sherlock Holmes scion society. Meet the Bootmakers and the Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection. Speaker: Victoria Gill, Curator of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection"

1894. "'A Singular Set of People...'" Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 2, no. 1 (1998): 2.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Notes the decisions by two scion societies of the Baker Street Irregulars to make contributions to the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota, The Arthur Conan Doyle Collection at The Metropolitan Toronto Library, and The Sherlock Holmes Collection at the Marylebone Library in London.

1895. Coren, Michael. "Lest civility entirely perish in our times, it behooves us to cherish eccentricity." Alberta Report / Newsmagazine 22, no. 43 (1995): 42.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Opinion. Relates the author's experiences at a one-day conference on Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and Sherlock Holmes at a Toronto library. View that eccentrics, such as Holmes aficionados,

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

help defend the right to be different; Their fight against political correctness; Analysis of the psychology of eccentrics; Problems that the modern age has with eccentrics and with Conan Doyle's books.

1896. Gill, Victoria. "Thus, month after month his papers accumulated." Canadian Holmes 18, no. 3 (1995): 19-20.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1897. ———. "Thus, month after month his papers accumulated." Canadian Holmes 18, no. 2 (1994): 4-5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
1898. ———. ""Thus, month after month his papers accumulated."" Canadian Holmes 17, no. 3 (1994): 18-19.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Curator of the ACD Collection in Toronto provides an update on library activities.
1899. ———. ""Thus, month after month his papers accumulated."" Canadian Holmes 17, no. 4 (1994): 23-24.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The curator of the ACD Collection provides regular updates from Toronto.
1900. Wrigglesworth, Doug. "The Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collections at the Toronto Reference Library." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 4, no. 1 (2000): 6.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Provides some background on the Doyle Collections at the Toronto Reference Library and the activities of its Friends organization, including their newsletter, The Magic Door, and celebrations surrounding the centennial of the publication of the Hound of the Baskervilles.

06F WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- OTHER SUBJECTS -- COLLECTING SHERLOCKIANA -- UNIVERSITY OF MINNESOTA (111)

1901. "50 Years Ago." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 2, no. 2 (1998): 3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Highlights the 1948 publication of The Client's Case-Book by The Illustrious Clients of Indianapolis.
1902. "50 Years Ago." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 2, no. 3 (1998): 3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Highlights the founding of the Norwegian Explorers scion society in 1948.
1903. "50 Years Ago." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 2, no. 4 (1998): 4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Highlights the 1948 publication of The Adventure of the Blue Carbuncle by the Baker Street Irregulars.
1904. "50 Years Ago: "We may need an interpreter."" Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 2, no. 1 (1998): 5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Notes French, German, and Spanish titles from the Holmes Collections, especially La casa vacia (The Empty House) purchased by Dr. Philip Hench in 1961.
1905. "50 Years Ago: "you will send for a hansom"." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 1, no. 2 (1997): 5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses The Second Cab and other "Cab" publications of the Speckled Band of Boston. Also discusses Vincent Starrett's short story, "A Picture for Ronald Colman."
1906. "50 Years Ago: 'Cadaver in the Roman Toga' by Edith Meiser airs on November 9, 1947." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 1, no. 1 (1997): 3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A brief biographical sketch of actress and writer Edith Meiser. Includes a photograph of Meiser and a reproduction of page one of the script for "Cadaver in the Roman Toga."
1907. "50 Years Ago: From the archives of the Norwegian Explorers." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 1, no. 4 (1997): 5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on material in the Norwegian Explorers archive related to its inaugural

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

meeting in 1947 and first general meeting in 1948.

1908. "50 Years Ago: Howard Haycraft and Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 1, no. 3 (1997): 5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Highlights Howard Haycraft's contributions to Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine and reprints part of a 1947 column by Haycraft in EQMM. Includes a reproduction of a cover of EQMM from the John Bennett Shaw Collection and the first page of an article by Haycraft in the November 1947 EQMM (from the Haycraft Collection).
1909. "100 Years Ago." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 2, no. 2 (1998): 2.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Highlights the 1898 edition of William Gillette's play "Held By The Enemy."
1910. "100 Years Ago." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 2, no. 3 (1998): 2.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Highlights the 1898 publication of "The Sign of the Four" in Pitman's shorthand.
1911. "100 Years Ago." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 2, no. 4 (1998): 2.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Highlights Sherlockian James Montgomery (b. 1898) and his writings.
1912. "100 Years Ago: "The Press....is a most valuable institution"." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 1, no. 2 (1997): 2.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reprint of a letter written by Doyle to The Times, October 20, 1897 from Morley's Hotel, Trafalgar Square, London, WC
1913. "100 Years Ago: "To Ada, from her old friend Arthur Conan Doyle, Jan. 18, '97"." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 1, no. 3 (1997): 2.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses a photograph taken of Doyle in New York, during his 1894 tour of the United States and Canada and the mysteries associated with the inscription on the back of the photograph. Includes a reproduction of the photograph and inscription.
1914. "100 Years Ago: Ada and the Napoleon of Photography." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 1, no. 4 (1997): 2.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A follow-up article on the mysteries presented in an inscription on the back side of a photograph taken of Doyle in New York. The photographer is identified as Napoleon Sarony, known for his photographs of celebrities in the late 19th century. The identity of the "Ada" of the inscription is still unknown, Ada Waller and Ada Pasby being the most likely candidates.
1915. "100 Years Ago: For a Song?". Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 2, no. 1 (1998): 2.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Highlights publication of Songs of Action, a collection of poetry and "The Song of the Bow," sheet music based on the same ballad of the outland bowmen found in Doyle's The White Company.
1916. "Acquisitions." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 5, no. 2 (2001): 8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Notes gifts to the Collections from Christopher and Barbara Roden (a copy of their latest publication, The Haunted Grange of Goresthorpe); Dale Ahlquist, President of the American Chesterton Society, and his donation of a copy of Sherlock Holmes Meets Father Brown and His Creator; Dr. William A. S. Sarjeant, M. Bt, and his gift of several items during his visit; and Daniel Morrow's gift of several journal clippings and articles regarding Sherlock Holmes and radio.
1917. "Acquisitions." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 5, no. 3 (2001): 10.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Notes recent additions to the Collections including donations from Caroline Bryan, Steve Clarkson, Don Hobbs, Charles Press, Allen J. Heiss, Doug Wrigglesworth, Les Klinger, and Ed Christenson.
1918. "Acquisitions." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 4, no. 2 (2000): 4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Notes the acquisition of cigars from C Us 4 Cigars in Aurora, Illinois; Brad

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Keefauver's gift of materials related to the "Sherlock Holmes for President" campaign, and other materials from Philip Sherman, Geoff Jeffrey, Ted Bergman, and John Bergquist. Includes photos of Keefauver and the cigars.

1919. "Acquisitions." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 4, no. 4 (2000): 7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Notes the donation of Arthur M. Axelrad's Hot on the Scent, A Visitor's Guide to the London of Sherlock Holmes and the purchase of a new archive of Eve Titus, to be featured in a later issue of the newsletter.
1920. "Acquisitions." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 2, no. 3 (1998): 4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Highlights the acquisition of "On Grimpen Mire," a bronze sculpture donated by the sculptor Lynette Yenko and her husband Michael.
1921. "Acquisitions." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 2, no. 4 (1998): 5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Highlights some recent acquisitions by the Sherlock Holmes Collections.
1922. "Bill Rabe material comes to Sherlock Holmes Collections." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 1, no. 4 (1997): 1-3, 5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses acquisition and contents of the Bill Rabe Collection acquired by the University of Minnesota Libraries.
1923. "Calling all Scion Societies." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 1, no. 1 (1997): 3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Call for materials from scion societies for the University of Minnesota Libraries' Sherlock Holmes Collections.
1924. "The Charm of Variety." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 1, no. 2 (1997): 5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Call for letters written by John Bennett Shaw for addition to the Holmes Collections.
1925. "Contents of the Crowded Box-Room." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 1, no. 1 (1997): 1-2.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Describes the origins and nature of the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota.
1926. "It was in a city in Russia..." (Golden Pince-Nez)." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 1, no. 3 (1997): 1-2, 4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses John Bennett Shaw's acquisition of the Czarina's Tauschnitz editions of The Hound of the Baskervilles, A Study in Scarlet, and The Memoirs of Sherlock Holmes. Includes photographs of the Tauschnitz editions and the Czarina.
1927. "Libraries around the country." Civilization 2, no. 5 (1995): 92.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a calendar of events for libraries in the United States. Includes "University of Minnesota--Sherlock Holmes and John Bennett Shaw: The Detective and the Collector. Celebrates the university's establishment of Shaw's personal library as a source for Holmes research. October 13 through November 30 at the Wilson Library..."
1928. "Mark Your Calendars." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 1, no. 1 (1997): 4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Announcement of the 1998 membership meeting of the Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections in conjunction with the 50th anniversary celebration of the Norwegian Explorers, August 7-9.
1929. "Mark Your Calendars." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 1, no. 2 (1997): 6.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Announcement of the 1998 membership meeting of the Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections in conjunction with the 50th anniversary celebration of the Norwegian Explorers, August

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- 7-9.
1930. "Mark Your Calendars." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 1, no. 3 (1997): 6.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Announcement of the 1998 membership meeting of the Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections in conjunction with the 50th anniversary celebration of the Norwegian Explorers, August 7-9.
1931. "Mark Your Calendars." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 1, no. 4 (1997): 6.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Announcement of the 1998 membership meeting of the Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections in conjunction with the 50th anniversary celebration of the Norwegian Explorers, August 7-9.
1932. "Meet the Editorial Board." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 2, no. 3 (1998): 6.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents short biographical profiles of the editorial board of the Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections newsletter: Julie McKuras, Bruce E. Southworth, and Richard J. Sveum.
1933. "One Hundred Years Ago: "...a considerable mansion" (ACD)." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 1, no. 1 (1997): 2.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses Doyle's home, Undershaw. Includes two photographs, one of Undershaw during construction and the other of Doyle's other home, Windlesham (miscaptioned as Undershaw in the article).
1934. "Remembrances." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 5, no. 1 (2001): 8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Notes the contributions made by donors in supporting the Sherlock Holmes Collections, either in honor or in memory of special persons.
1935. "Remembrances." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 5, no. 2 (2001): 8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Notes the contributions made by donors in supporting the Sherlock Holmes Collections, either in honor or in memory of special persons.
1936. "Remembrances." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 5, no. 3 (2001): 12.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Listing of those who have given gifts to support the Collections in honor or memory of special persons.
1937. "Remembrances." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 4, no. 1 (2000): 8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Lists donors who have made contributions in memory or honor of a special individual.
1938. "Remembrances." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 3, no. 2 (1999): 8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A list of recent donors to the collections, in memory or honor of certain individuals.
1939. "Remembrances." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 3, no. 4 (1999): 8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // List of donors who made contributions in honor of or memory of certain individuals.
1940. "Sherlock Holmes in many languages." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 2, no. 1 (1998): 1-3, 5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Profile of Fred Levin's interest in Yiddish language versions of the Sherlock Holmes stories. Includes photograph of Bruce Southworth, Fred Levin, and Dr. Richard Sveum.
1941. "'A Singular Set of People...'" Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 2, no. 1 (1998): 2.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Notes the decisions by two scion societies of the Baker Street Irregulars to make contributions to the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota, The Arthur Conan Doyle

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Collection at The Metropolitan Toronto Library, and The Sherlock Holmes Collection at the Marylebone Library in London.

1942. "Using the Sherlock Holmes Collections." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 4, no. 2 (2000): 8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Notes work by Courtney Andersen and tours of the Collections during the opening festivities. Includes a photograph of Tim Johnson, Phil Bergem, John Bergquist, and Pj Doyle.
1943. "Using the Sherlock Holmes Collections." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 4, no. 3 (2000): 8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Notes research and visits by Steve Robinson (Gilbert, Arizona), Larry and Ann Koppers of Leawood, Kansas, and Angelo Barratta and Laura Leigh Mason, of Phoenix, Arizona. Includes a photograph of the Koppers.
1944. "Using the Sherlock Holmes Collections." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 4, no. 4 (2000): 8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Notes the visits of Randall Stock and Adam Sveum, with photographs of both.
1945. "Using the Sherlock Holmes Collections." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 2, no. 4 (1998): 5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Notes recent visits to the Collections by Catherine Cooke, Susan Dahlinger, and Randall Stock
1946. "You may have read of the remarkable explorations of a Norwegian named Sigerson..." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 1, no. 2 (1997): 1-3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Biographical profile of E.W. "Mac" McDiarmid. Includes photograph of McDiarmid and Dorothy Rowe Shaw, reproduction of McDiarmid bookplate for the University of Minnesota Libraries Sherlock Holmes Collections
1947. Bergquist, John. "The Paton Collection Comes to Minnesota." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 4, no. 4 (2000): 1, 6.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Highlights the arrival of Jennie Paton's audio-visual collection to Minnesota.
1948. Blau, Peter E. "About Bill Rabe." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 1, no. 4 (1997): 3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Biographical information and personal reflections and insights about Bill Rabe.
1949. Dahlinger, Susan E. "Sherlock Holmes, a centenary essay." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 3, no. 4 (1999): 1, 6, 8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // An essay on the life and work of the actor, William Gillette, on the centennial of his first performance of the play "Sherlock Holmes," the art of Frederic Dorr Steele (who fixed Gillette's image of Holmes in the minds of many), Vincent Starrett's work with Gillette on the publication of the script, and the materials related to all three of these men in the Holmes Collections.
1950. Johnson, Timothy J. "The Adventure of the Unopened Box: Building the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota Libraries." Collection Management 29, no. 3/4 (2004): 121-141.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article traces the historical development and description of significant acquisitions that comprise major portions of the Sherlock Holmes Collections of the University of Minnesota Libraries Special Collections. Beginning with the formation of the Norwegian Explorers, a local scion society of the Baker Street Irregulars of New York, in 1948, the article presents the intertwined nature in the development of this local interest group and the growth of the Holmes Collections. Various strategic acquisitions methodologies, such as donor relations, exhibitions, scholarly publications, and conference development are presented as part of the narrative. Reprinted by permission of the publisher.
1951. ———. "Collections Update -- More Accessibility Soon." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Newsletter 2, no. 4 (1998): 3.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Notes work on mounting a digital version of The Universal Sherlock Holmes bibliography on the Holmes Collections web site.

1952. ———. "The Cover." Libraries & Culture 36, no. 2 (2001): 366.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Describes the bookplate for the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota Libraries in Minneapolis. Illustration of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle; Background on the titles included in the collections; Significance of the collections.

1953. ———. "Meet the new Curator of Special Collections: Timothy Johnson." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 2, no. 3 (1998): 1-2-4.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Introductory essay by the new curator of the Sherlock Holmes Collections. Includes a photograph of Tim Johnson and Mike Whelan, head of the Baker Street Irregulars.

1954. ———. "An Update from the Collections." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 5, no. 1 (2001): 5.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Notes recent activities including recent class visits, preparations for the summer conference and exhibit, work with the Weisman Museum on their "Cabinet of Curiosities" exhibit, and an article on the Collections in the St. Paul Pioneer Press. Also noted is progress on fund-raising for McDiarmid curatorship, work with the Law Library on a conference tie-in with the exhibit, and the passing of Wayne Swift.

1955. ———. "An Update From the Collections." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 5, no. 3 (2001): 9.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reflections on the attention given the exhibit "The Basic Holmesian Library" by the media, conference attendees, and other visitors. An update on current book cataloging and other activities is also given.

1956. ———. "An Update from the Collections." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 4, no. 1 (2000): 4, 8.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Provides some observations on this year's trip to New York and the BSI weekend and on preparations for the opening of the Elmer L. Andersen Library.

1957. ———. "An Update from the Collections." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 4, no. 2 (2000): 5, 8.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Comments on the final move into and grand opening of the Elmer L. Andersen Library. work on the Hubbs cataloging project, the latest exhibit, "Better Holmes and Gardens: Sherlock Holmes, Arthur Conan Doyle, and Architectural Design 'Down Under' and the passing of E. W. McDiarmid.

1958. ———. "An Update From the Collections." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 4, no. 3 (2000): 6-7.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // An abbreviated version of the 'State of the Collections' address given at the annual membership meeting of the Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections. Includes a photograph of Richard Sveum and Anne McDiarmid and another photograph of Jim Deleo, Mary McDiarmid, and the author.

1959. ———. "An Update from the Collections." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 4, no. 4 (2000): 4.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on the status of the cataloging project funded by the Hubbs family and on a gift by Mary McDiarmid towards the endowed curator position.

1960. ———. "An Update from the Collections." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 3, no. 1 (1999): 4.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Provides information on recent activities including gifts to the collections, the important contributions of volunteers, planning for the move into the new library, and the availability of a web

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

version of The Universal Sherlock Holmes bibliography.

1961. ———. "An Update from the Collections." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 3, no. 2 (1999): 5, 6.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Provides a word of thanks for the work of Jamie Hubbs, Collection Specialist, as he moves on to graduate coursework in library science, and an update on planning the move of the Collections into the new library building and possible disruptions to service during that time.
1962. ———. "An Update from the Collections." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 3, no. 4 (1999): 5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Provides an update on the move into the new Elmer L. Andersen Library, beginning organization of the cataloging work as a result of the Hubbs family gift, the mounting of a new exhibit featuring the work of Derham Grove's architectural students, and the passing of Dorothy Rowe Shaw.
1963. Lellenberg, Jon L. "Norman Schatell." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 2, no. 2 (1998): 1-2-5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Portrait of Norman Schatell.
1964. Malec, Andrew. "Frederic Dorr Steele." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 2, no. 2 (1998): 6.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Portrait of the illustrator Frederic Dorr Steele and holdings by the Holmes Collections.
1965. ———. "Some Personal Recollections of the Early Days of the Sherlock Holmes Collections." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 4, no. 3 (2000): 1, 10-11.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A reminiscence from an Irregular who played a role in the early days of the collections. Includes a picture of the author with E. W. McDiarmid and another photograph from the July 1983 "Adventures on the Air" with John Bennett Shaw, Austin McLean, Edith Meiser, and McDiarmid.
1966. McKuras, Julie. "100 Years Ago." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 4, no. 4 (2000): 2.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Sherlock Holmes Baffled was made in 1900, and marked the premier of the Master Detective in the new entertainment medium of the motion picture. Although the film lasts less than one minute, the impact of Holmes on the screen is still felt 100 years later. Jennie Paton has donated a copy of this film to the Sherlock Holmes Collections.
1967. ———. "About the Haycraft Collection." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 3, no. 3 (1999): 7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Provides background on the Haycraft Collection acquisition.
1968. ———. "Acquisitions." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 4, no. 1 (2000): 5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Notes recent acquisitions for the Collections including Keith Webb's first book, Sherlock Holmes in Japan, computer image files from Bill Vande Water, and items from Al Gregory and Karen Ellery.
1969. ———. "Acquisitions." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 4, no. 3 (2000): 4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Highlights recent acquisitions and donations to the collections from Jennie Paton, Laura Kuhn, and Taylor Publishing.
1970. ———. "Acquisitions." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 3, no. 1 (1999): 5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Highlights recent acquisitions to the Collections.
1971. ———. "Acquisitions." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 3, no. 3 (1999): 4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Highlights recent acquisitions to the Holmes Collections including donations from Bert Coules, Larry Millett, George Hubbs, and Fred Anderson.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

1972. ———. "Acquisitions." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 3, no. 4 (1999): 4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Highlights a number of recent acquisitions including material from Larry Millett, Pasquale Accardo, Margrith Geisser, materials from the "Holmes Under the Arch" conference, and a tape from Jill Fritz.
1973. ———. "The Basic Holmesian Library." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 5, no. 3 (2001): 1, 5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Some observations on John Bennett Shaw's "List of 100" and the exhibit based on Shaw's list that was displayed during the conference "2001: A Sherlockian Odyssey". Includes seven photographs from the exhibit and visitors during the conference including Les Klinger, Jon Lellenberg, Richard Lancelyn Green, and Dan Posnansky.
1974. ———. "Community Support for the Collections." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 4, no. 4 (2000): 5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Highlights the support of Mike McKuras and his volunteer work on the Friends board and the additional support of Ecolab, Inc. Also reports on a visit from a member of Ecolab's Community Relations Department, Cheryl Budewitz, to the Collections. Includes a photograph of Cheryl and Tim Johnson during her visit.
1975. ———. "Musings." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 5, no. 3 (2001): 11.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reflections on the contents and writers in this issue of the newsletter.
1976. ———. "Musings." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 4, no. 4 (2000): 4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Some observations on the arrival of the Paton Collection, other articles in the newsletter, the identity of "A.M." as Arthur Mee, and a correction to include Jon Lellenberg on the editorial board.
1977. ———. "Musings." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 3, no. 4 (1999): 2.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Observations on some of the changes that have affected the Collections: the move into the new library, the contributions of new writers for the newsletter, and the addition of Jon Lellenberg to the editorial board.
1978. ———. "The Old Globe Theatre, KPBS-FM of San Diego, and "The Mask of Moriarty"." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 1, no. 4 (1997): 4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on the production and playbill for "The Mask of Moriarty" at the Old Globe Theatre in San Diego and the associated radio program, "These Days," on KPBS-FM with the resulting donations to the Sherlock Holmes Collections. Includes photograph of Paxton Whitehead in the role of Holmes and Tom Lacy in the role of Watson
1979. ———. "The Paton Collection." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 4, no. 4 (2000): 7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Provides additional information on the newly acquired Paton collection of audio-visual materials.
1980. ———. "Treasures From the John Bennett Shaw Library." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 4, no. 1 (2000): 7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Provides some additional information on the selection of items for the New York BSI exhibit, those who assisted in developing the exhibit, and a list of the items that were displayed. Includes a photograph of the curator near one of the cases at the National Arts Club.
1981. ———. "Treasures, Tales and Tea." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 3, no. 3 (1999): 7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on a Friends of the Libraries event the highlighted a number of treasures from the various collections that will be moving into the new library and Tim Johnson's presentation that included items from the Holmes Collections and some background on the history and development of rare and

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

special collections.

1982. ———. "Using the Sherlock Holmes Collections." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 5, no. 3 (2001): 7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Notes visitors to the Collections, including students in the Summer Enrichment Program of the Minneapolis Public Schools ("The Doolittle Detective Agency"). One member of the class, Joseph Anderson, is the great-great-grand nephew of Dr. Joseph Bell. Includes four photographs of visitors.
1983. ———. "Using the Sherlock Holmes Collections." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 3, no. 2 (1999): 8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Observations on the research use of the Collections by Andrew Malec, Lucy Brusic, Jamie Hubbs, and William Nadel.
1984. Shaughnessy, Tom. "On the Elementary Importance of the Sherlock Holmes Collections." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 1, no. 2 (1997): 4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // An article by the University Librarian on the importance of the Holmes Collections within the context of the larger mission of a research library.
1985. Southworth, Bruce E. "Musings." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 3, no. 2 (1999): 5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Thoughts on recent activities in the Collections and the contents of this issue of the newsletter, including the web version of The Universal Sherlock Holmes, the tribute to Will Crakes, the Morley donation, the new library, and a new editor for the newsletter.
1986. ———. "Musings." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 2, no. 1 (1998): 4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Highlights articles in the present issue and also notes Peter Blau's discovery that Tsar Nicholas II, while in captivity with his family in Tsarkoe Selo, read The Valley of Fear.
1987. ———. "Musings." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 2, no. 2 (1998): 7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Highlights the articles in this issue of the newsletter that deal with the theme of Holmes in art.
1988. ———. "Musings." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 2, no. 3 (1998): 5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reflects on the recently held "Founders' Footprints" conference, the advisory committee meeting, the Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections membership meeting, and the arrival of Tim Johnson as the new curator.
1989. ———. "Musings." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 2, no. 4 (1998): 3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Highlights the articles that have appeared in the second year of the newsletter's publication.
1990. ———. "Musings." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 1, no. 4 (1997): 4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Comments on the various articles appearing in this issue of the newsletter, with additional commentary on the 1894 photograph of Doyle noted in previous issues, additional information on the identity of Frances Crane, and a note on the election of Julie McKuras as the new president of the Norwegian Explorers.
1991. ———. "Musings from the Writing Table." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 1, no. 2 (1997): 3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Comments on reactions to the inaugural edition of the Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections newsletter.
1992. ———. "Musings from the Writing Table." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 1, no. 3 (1997): 4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the two mysteries posed by articles in this issue of the newsletter,

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

highlights other items from the newsletter, and thanks those who have sent materials or financial contributions to the Collections.

1993. Sveum, Richard J. "50 Years Ago." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 4, no. 4 (2000): 3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on Charles Honce and his work. "In 1950, the latest of Charles Honce's fine press Christmas books was published by the Golden Eagle Press in Mount Vernon. The 58-page To Talk of Many Things was limited to 88 copies. It was designed and printed by S. A. Jacobs, who attended the 1950 BSI Dinner with Honce. The Sherlock Holmes Collections has John Bennett Shaw's copy of this book, whose cover page indicates it is "A Book Lovers Opinion on a Lot of Other Subjects Including Eating, Drinking, Traveling, Decorating, Entertaining, and Dressing and Undressing...."
1994. ———. "Advisory Committee Meeting." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 2, no. 3 (1998): 4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on the Sherlock Holmes Collections advisory committee meeting held on August 7th.
1995. ———. "Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections: a word from Dr. Richard Sveum, President." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 1, no. 1 (1997): 4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections and the inaugural newsletter for the collections.
1996. ———. "From the President." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 4, no. 1 (2000): 4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Invites readers to the open house for the new Elmer L. Andersen Library, comments on the exhibit at the BSI reception in New York, and urges readers to continue their support of the Collections.
1997. ———. "From the President." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 4, no. 2 (2000): 4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Notes the upcoming August Friends annual meeting, the opening of the Elmer L. Andersen Library, and the passing of E. W. McDiarmid.
1998. ———. "From the President." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 4, no. 3 (2000): 4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Highlights events at the annual membership meeting of the Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections including meeting in the new Andersen Library, awarding Lucy Brusic the volunteer of the year, the establishment of an endowment named in honor and memory of E. W. McDiarmid for the curator's position, and tributes to McDiarmid. Includes a photograph of Lucy Brusic and Tim Johnson.
1999. ———. "From the President." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 4, no. 4 (2000): 4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Notice of the next Friends annual meeting in conjunction with the 2001 conference co-sponsored with the Norwegian Explorers. Also information on the University's capital campaign and the desire to raise funds for the McDiarmid endowed curator position.
2000. ———. "From the President." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 3, no. 3 (1999): 4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a report on the annual meeting of the Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections.
2001. ———. "From the President." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 3, no. 4 (1999): 4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Extends gratitude to the Hubbs family for their gift to the Collections, alerts readers to a display of items at the Baker Street Irregulars weekend in January 2000, and the opening gala for the new library.
2002. ———. "From the President." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 2, no. 1 (1998): 4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Notes appointment of Timothy J. Johnson as the new curator of Special Collections, the construction of the new Minnesota Library Archives and Access Center, and a reminder of the membership meeting of the Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections on August 7th.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

2003. ———. "From the President." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 2, no. 2 (1998): 7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Notes the upcoming annual meeting of the Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections, the acquisition of the Norman Schatell archives, and the ongoing desire to collection scion society materials and John Bennett Shaw correspondence.
2004. ———. "From the President." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 2, no. 3 (1998): 7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Recaps the activities of the Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections during the "Founders' Footprints" conference.
2005. ———. "The Hubbs Family Gift." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 3, no. 4 (1999): 1, 5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on the gift of the Hubbs family for the cataloging of the book and serial portions of the Collections. The project gift, which will take three years, was matched by the University Libraries. Additional information is provided on members of the Hubbs family who have played such an important role with the collections. Includes a photograph.
2006. ———. "Library Receives Maiwand Jezails Artifacts." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 5, no. 3 (2001): 1, 4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Notes the donation by Richard D. Lesh, BSI, of souvenirs of the June 2, 2001 Maiwand Jezail dinner in Omaha, Nebraska to the Holmes Collections. Also provides additional information on Professor Lesh and the Maiwand Jezail scion society. Includes a photograph of Lesh and the author at the dinner.
2007. ———. "The View from Laurel Cottage." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 2, no. 4 (1998): 1-4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Profile of lawyer, scholar, writer, publisher, philanthropist, and Sherlockian David L. Hammer.
2008. ———. "A Word from our President." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 2, no. 4 (1998): 3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Notes his visit with David and Audrey Hammer and the many donations of correspondence with John Bennett Shaw and back issues of periodicals that have been received by the Collections.
2009. ———. "A Word from our President." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 1, no. 3 (1997): 5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Comments on the various activities of the Friends of the Holmes Collections and the University of Minnesota Libraries, including materials and gifts received for the Collections, securing a new curator, construction of the new Library Access Center, and the upcoming membership meeting.
2010. ———. "A Word from our President." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 1, no. 4 (1997): 6.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Observations on the first year of the Friends' newsletter, a request to consider membership, and a note on the upcoming membership meeting.
2011. Vande Water, Bill. "'the picture has supplied us with one of the most obvious missing links.' (Hound)." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 1, no. 3 (1997): 3-4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the photographic holdings of the University of Minnesota's Sherlock Holmes Collections.

06F WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- OTHER SUBJECTS -- COLLECTING SHERLOCKIANA -- UNIVERSITY OF TEXAS (4)

2012. Becker, Jill, and Sheri Fowler. "Around the state." Texas Monthly 23, no. 2 (1995): 16.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a guide to various entertainment and cultural events to be organized in Texas during 1995, with a reference to Doyle. "When the Harry Ransom Humanities Research Center in

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Austin receives a writer's archive, items such as letter openers, ash-trays, and checkbooks often accompany the manuscripts and letters. These personal effects make up the center's new permanent display, 'Worldly Possessions.' Among the articles exhibited are Isaac Singer's typewriter (complete with Yiddish characters), Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's metal-rimmed glasses (below, bottom left), a pair of moccasins worn by D. H. Lawrence, and a plate bearing Charles Dickens' initials and seal."

2013. Max, D. T. "Final Destination." New Yorker 83, no. 16 (2007): 54-71.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article discusses the literary manuscripts held at the Harry Ransom Humanities Research Center at the University of Texas at Austin. The center's director Thomas Staley is profiled. On hand are works such as a Gutenberg Bible, a first edition of "Alice in Wonderland," and the corrected proofs of James Joyce's "Ulysses." The article reports on Staley's method for acquiring new material and his passion for the field. Former University of Texas dean Harry Hunt Ransom's development of the archive center is covered. Includes a reference to Doyle. "...Ransom acquired books and manuscripts so rapidly that they piled up in the halls and stairwells. 'G.T.T.' -- Gone to Texas -- became a recognized abbreviation in the rare-book business. He was also innovative. He bought the collections of the living or only recently dead writers whom Harvard and Yale considered too green. Ransom, who earned the nickname the Great Acquisitor, not only bought these writers' manuscripts and letters; he tried to gather everything from baby book to death mask. As a result, the center has Arthur Conan Doyle's undershirts, Evelyn Waugh's writing desk, a pair of beaded moccasins worn by D. H. Lawrence, Anne Sexton's glasses, and Isaac Bashevis Singer's Yiddish typewriter...."

2014. Petkus, Donald A. "Lone Star Treasures: ACD Manuscripts and Materials at the University of Texas-Austin." Baker Street West 10, no. 1 (2004): 13-14.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

2015. Spong, John. "King's Ransom." Texas Monthly 31, no. 10 (2003): 98-107.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the Harry Ransom Humanities Research Center (HRC) at the University of Texas (UT) in Austin. Information on several collections found at the HRC: Vision of former UT vice president Harry Ransom when he founded the HRC in 1957; Reasons behind Ransom's success in creating the HRC; Efforts of HRC director Tom Staley to promote the research center. Includes a reference to Doyle with a photograph of his reading glasses. "Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's reading glasses. The HRC has many personal effects belonging to the Scotland-born creator of Sherlock Holmes, including his desk, the clothes he was wearing when he escaped his burning house in 1929, his Ouija board, and the dirty socks his wife took off of him after he died so she could make him more presentable for the afterlife."

06F WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- OTHER SUBJECTS -- CONFERENCES AND WORKSHOPS (21)

2016. "ALA conference preview. (Cover story)." American Libraries 29, no. 4 (1998): 106.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents information on the American Library Association (ALA) annual conference in Washington, D.C. from June 25 to July 1, 1998. Includes "Sherlock Holmes In Washington." Peter E. Blau of The Red Circle of Washington and the infamous "Black Peter" of the Baker Street Irregulars, will be our host for Sherlockian presentation toasts, and canonical discussion at the National Press Club on the 13th floor of the National Press Building. Speakers: Gayle T. Harris, past-pres., libn., Lib. of Congress, "Skeletons in the Stacks"; Peter E. Blau, "Insights and Revelations on the World of Sherlockian Scholarship and Conviviality"; Francine Morris Swift, sr. surviving member of Sublibns., member, Baker Street Irregulars, Sherlock Holmes Society of London, "The Good Old Days of the Sublibrarians Scion."

2017. "Foth revisited (2) Who Was Who at Footprints of the Hound." Canadian Holmes 25, no. 4 (2002): 28-30.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

2018. "From the Editor's Commonplace Book." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 2 (1994): 127.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Peter Blau's report on Doyle manuscripts offered at Sotheby's, The Scowrers and

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- Molly Maguires Third International Seminar, the passing of Patsy Dalton, and The Watsonian Weekend III.
2019. "Photomontage I. Birthday 2001." The Serpentine Muse 17, no. 2 (2001): 6-7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2020. "Photomontage II. Bash 2001." The Serpentine Muse 17, no. 2 (2001): 10.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2021. "Sherlock Holmes: Victorian Sleuth to Modern Hero [advertisement]." Canadian Holmes 17, no. 3 (1994): 48.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Announcement of a conference held at Bennington College in Vermont, June 23-26, 1994. Featured speakers include Nicholas Meyer and Edward Hanna.
2022. "Who Was Who at ACD@35." Canadian Holmes 30, no. 3 (2007): 50-51.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2023. Bruxner, Pamela. "Review -- Aspects of Holmes II: Scrutinizing Holmes, York 11-13 June 1993." The Musgrave Papers, no. 6 (1993): 98-103.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2024. Campbell, Mary, and Bob Coghill. "Footprints of FOTH, A Reminiscence." Canadian Holmes 25, no. 2 (2001): 4-12.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2025. Capolupo, Maria. "Review--Sherlock in Summer, The Mini Tonga Cruise--Part II." The Ritual, no. 22 (1998): 58-59.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2026. Cochran, William R. "From the Editor's Commonplace Book." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 1 (1994): 62-63.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // On the demise of the periodical Baker Street Miscellanea, Julie and Al Rosenblatt's 4-day mini-course on Holmes at Vassar College, an article in MHQ by Thaddeus Holt, the Folio Society's version of the Canon, the 25th anniversary of the Noble Bachelors of St. Louis, the Sherlock Holmes Society of London's "Back to Baker Street" festival, and the Books of Michael Harrison.
2027. Elliott, Philip et al. "ACD at Thirty-Five." Canadian Holmes 30, no. 2 (2006): 24-39.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2028. France, F. Dennis. "Founder's Footprints: The Fiftieth Anniversary Conference of the Norwegian Explorers of Minnesota." The Serpentine Muse 15, no. 1 (1998): 16-20.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2029. Johnson, Timothy J. "An Update From the Collections." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 5, no. 2 (2001): 5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Notes attendance at various conferences between March and the beginning of the Holmes conference in June.
2030. Keefauver, G. Hunter. "Fear and Fake Rowing on the Campaign Trail: The Dayton Sherlockian Convention of '00." The Holmes & Watson Report 4, no. 3 (2000): 19-24.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2031. McCafferty, Jonathan, and Elaine Hamill. "Review--Aspects of Holmes V." The Ritual, no. 26 (2000): 62-65.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2032. Moore, Richard. "Review--Aspects of Holmes III: A Study in Scotland, Scandic Crown Hotel, Edinburgh, 4-5

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

May 1995." The Musgrave Papers, no. 8 (1995): 95-103.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

2033. Penner, Marilyn. "FOTH Revisited: When Toronto was the Centre of the Universe." Canadian Holmes 25, no. 4 (2002): 24-27.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

2034. Randall, Warren. "FOTH Revisited (3) At the Sound of the Hound." Canadian Holmes 25, no. 4 (2002): 31-35.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

2035. Sveum, Richard J. "From the President." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 5, no. 2 (2001): 4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Notice of the triennial conference, "2001: A Sherlockian Odyssey - A Journey Among the Shaw 100", to be held June 29 to July 1, 2001.

2036. Weller, Philip, and Jane Weller. "Franco-Midland Hardware Company Contributions to The Kamakura Seminar and the Kawasaki Convention." Shoso-In Bulletin 8, no. (1998): 206-222.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

06F WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- OTHER SUBJECTS -- DICTIONARIES AND ENCYCLOPEDIAS (1)

2037. Roden, Christopher. "On the Shoulders of Giants: Jack Tracy and The Encyclopaedia Sherlockiana." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana, no. (2001): 3-63.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

06F WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- OTHER SUBJECTS -- DRUGS AND POISONS (4)

2038. Couchman, Jason. "Sherlock Holmes and Opium Use: Detecting Holmes's Mystery Narcotic." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 3 (1994): 149-51.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A discussion of Holmes use of the drug as related in some of the tales.

2039. Fouassier, E. "Sherlock Holmes, Watson and cocaine. A literary contribution to the history of drug addiction." Rev Hist Pharm (Paris) 41, no. 300 (1994): 65-70.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // From 1887 to 1927, Conan Doyle devoted fifty-six short stories and four novels to the extraordinary investigations of Sherlock Holmes. Special passages from these works, gathered here in the form of long extracts, evoke the passion of the celebrated detective for cocaine and constitute rather generally an original sort of evidence on the emergence of drug addicts in Europe at the end of the 19th century.

2040. Keep, Christopher, and Don Randall. "Addiction, Empire, and Narrative in Arthur Conan Doyle's The Sign of the Four." Novel: A Forum on Fiction 32, no. 2 (1999): 207.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Relates the book The Sign of the Four, by Conan Doyle, with the image of Great Britain as an empire and an exporter of addictive substances. What the fictitious character [sic] Sherlock Holmes represents; Impact of cocaine in medicine and Europe's colonial enterprise; Views of writer Jacques Derrida on the drug pharmakon."

2041. Pearce, D. N. "Sherlock Holmes, Conan Doyle and cocaine." J Hist Neurosci 3, no. 4 (1994): 227-32.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

06F WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- OTHER SUBJECTS -- ENGLAND -- BIRMINGHAM
(1)

2042. Plant, Sadie. "The great toyshop of Europe." New Statesman 132, no. 4640 (2003): 30.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the city of Birmingham, England. Network of extensive canals that the city built in the 18th century; City that produced metal goods; Economic life that continues to be varied and inventive; City that is full of cultures. Includes a reference to Doyle. "...Birmingham makes all the usual claims to fame - great achievements, great people, great events. It can show off its magnificent pre-Raphaelite paintings, offer some outstanding architectural sights, music and food, not to mention countless shiny bars and waterside cafes. It was home to famous writers, too: JR R Tolkien, Hilaire Belloc and Benjamin Zephaniah; Samuel Johnson, whose first essays appeared in the Birmingham Journal; Washington Irving, who was living in the Jewellery Quarter when he wrote Rip Van Winkle and The Legend of Sleepy Hollow; and Arthur Conan Doyle, who, as a young city doctor, bought his first violin from a shop on Sherlock Street...."

06F WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- OTHER SUBJECTS -- ENGLAND -- DEVON (6)

2043. Brimacombe, Peter. "A walk on the wildside." In Britain 4, no. 2: 10.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Features the Dartmoor National Park in England, with a passing reference to Doyle. "...This menacing legend was the inspiration for Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's Hound of the Baskervilles, partially written in the Duchy Hotel at Princetown, now the High Moorland Visitor Centre...."

2044. Hargan, Jim. "Dartmoor of the Baskervilles." British Heritage 19, no. 5 (1998): 52.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Provides information on the hounds of Dartmoor, with reference to The Hound of the Baskervilles. When Conan Doyle first heard about the hounds; Folk tales surrounding the hounds of Dartmoor; How Conan Doyle set about writing a book about this folk tale; Places of interest in Dartmoor.

2045. ———. "England's un-natural landscape." British Heritage 27, no. 1 (2006): 34-40.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article presents information on the historical natural landscapes in England. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Rural folk reacted in ways ambiguous and contradictory, at once liking the short cuts and disliking the trespassers. Conan Doyle made fun of those attitudes in The Hound of the Baskervilles, as when Dr. Watson describes Mr. Frankland of Laffer Hall: 'Sometimes he will shut up a right of way and defy the parish to make him open it. At others he will with his own hands tear down some other man's gate and declare that a path has existed there from time immemorial, defying the owner to prosecute him for trespass.'"

2046. Pugh, Brian W. "The Weather and Atmosphere of Dartmoor in the Hound." Shoso-In Bulletin 14, no. (2004): 132-135.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

2047. Spano, Susan. "At home on the moors." New York Times, June 8, 1997: 6.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Provides information on the experience of the author, who visited the wild uplands of Dartmoor National Park in the West Country of England, said to be frequented by pixies and ghosts. History of the park; How it was depicted in the book 'Hound of Baskervilles,' by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. INSET: The bottom line.

2048. Tuttle, Brad R. "Death at Dartmoor." American History 37, no. 4 (2002): 30.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Provides information on the massacre of U.S. prisoners of war at the Dartmoor Prison in England by British soldiers headed by Royal Navy Captain Thomas G. Shortland in 1812. Description of the massacre; Abuse of prisoners by British prison guards; Description of the conditions of prisoners; Acts of defiance demonstrated by the prisoners. Inset: Dartmoor Prison. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Not much has changed in this isolated part of Devon, the setting for the classic Sherlock Holmes story The Hound of the Baskervilles. Only two roads cross this great moor, and civilization seems far away.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Travelers may come across an occasional farm and some sheep and semi-wild ponies, and perhaps think that time stopped here two centuries ago--when Dartmoor Prison was new...."

06F WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- OTHER SUBJECTS -- ENGLAND -- LONDON (62)

2049. "Abbey National Unveil Bronze of Sherlock Holmes." Birmingham Post, October 9, 1999: 32.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "In the detective's shadow: Abbey National has tried to dilute the image of banks as soulless organisations, whose only driving force is the creation of profit, by unveiling a three-metre high bronze of Sherlock Holmes as part of its 150th anniversary celebrations. The move commemorates the bank's 'association' with the detective, dating back to 1932, when Abbey's head offices moved to Baker Street and incorporated Holmes' fictional address of 211b. Abbey still receives letters addressed to the crime-buster, which are answered by his 'secretary' who works for the bank."
2050. "About London." New Statesman 129, no. 4481 (2000): 4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents information related to London, England, including a quote from Doyle. "London, that great cesspool into which all the loungers of the Empire are irresistibly drained." in A Study in Scarlet (1887).
2051. "Excess Baggage." The Dominion Post (Wellington), December 24, 2002: A9.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Sherlock Holmes fans can immerse themselves in the fictional detective's world, spending a weekend at the Sherlock Holmes Hotel in Baker St, London. The two-night break includes entry to Madame Tussaud's waxworks and a guided walk in the footsteps of Holmes with Historical Walks of London...."
2052. "The Game's Afoot! Hot on the Trail of a Deerstalker." The Toronto Star, July 10, 1999: 1.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // In response to a reader query, some suggested places in London from which to buy (or order) a deerstalker hat.
2053. "Great Britain, Europe." Reference & Research Book News 19, no. 4 (2004): 35-43.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents abstracts of books on Great Britain and Europe selected from the 2004 issues of "Reference and Research Book News" and "SciTech Book News". Lists A Traveller's Companion to London, ed. by Thomas Wright. (Interlink Publishing Group, 2004) 410p. From the review: "Diary entries, letters, newspaper stories, and eyewitness accounts from authors such as Tacitus, Conan Doyle, and Crisp are among these nearly two hundred short readings about the places, people, and events that shaped London."
2054. "History's dirty secret." Geographical 76, no. 4 (2004): 44-45.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Deals with the lack of political will to clean up urban air pollution in London, England. Passing reference to Holmes. "The smog -- caused by a temperature inversion that trapped thousands of tonnes of exhaust from domestic coal fires -- wasn't a new phenomenon. Since the 19th century, these 'London's particulars' had furnished the city with an air of mystery. Central to the tales of Sherlock Holmes and captured by artists such as Turner and Monet, the dense fog was accepted as a fact of life -- so much so that bronchitis became known as the 'British disease'."
2055. "Holmes loan fraud; [3 Edition]." The Independent (London), December 7, 1994: No page citation.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "John A-----, 37, a businessman, of Belgravia, central London, who was behind the Sherlock Holmes museum in Baker Street, was convicted at Southwark Crown Court of founding it with the proceeds from a pounds 1.2m mortgage fraud. He will be sentenced next month."
2056. "Holmes' Statue is on the Case!". Birmingham Evening Mail, September 24, 1999: 37.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "A bronze statue of the world's best-known fictional detective was unveiled in London. The statue of Sherlock Holmes stands outside Baker Street underground station, near to where the detective lived at the fictional number 221b. Abbey National, whose head office is located on the site of what would be 221b Baker Street, has sponsored the work to mark its 150th anniversary...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

2057. "M2: Travel: It's Elementary!". Birmingham Evening Mail, August 20, 2002: 44.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Finding a decent hotel in London is, to pinch a phrase from Sherlock Holmes, a three-pipe problem. Either you need to negotiate a second mortgage just to pay the bill or you arrive in an airless identi-kit concrete block with all the charm of a multistorey carpark. And you still get charged a small fortune. It was, then, with some trepidation that I headed for the Sherlock Holmes Hotel in Baker Street. The name alone conjured up visions of gullible American tourists being fleeced...."
2058. "News in Brief." Nature 419, no. 6909 (2002): 770.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents international news briefs as of October 24, 2002. Presentation of a silver medal to the statue of Sherlock Holmes in London, England.
2059. "Newsbrief: Sherlock's home." The Independent (London), May 19, 1994: no page citation.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "A plaque commemorating the creator of Sherlock Holmes, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle is to be unveiled this month by his daughter, Lady Bromet, at 2 Upper Wimpole Street, where her father wrote several books, including 'A Scandal in Bohemia' and 'The Red Headed League'."
2060. "On the Trail of Sherlock Holmes." British Heritage 24, no. 3 (2003): 10.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on a package tour 'Sherlock Discovery,' organized by the Sherlock Holmes Hotel in London. Places to be visited in the tour; Duration of the package; Contact information for the package tour.
2061. "Sherlock homes in on London address." The Evening Standard (London), September 21, 1999: 19.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The final touches are being put to a 9ft statue of the great sleuth Sherlock Holmes which will stand outside Baker Street Tube station - close to the fictional detective's London address. The bronze, by Essex sculptor John Doubleday, has been commissioned by the Sherlock Holmes Society whose chairman Lord Tugendhat will unveil it on Thursday...."
2062. "Sherlockian London." British Heritage 21, no. 1 (1999): 19.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the Sherlock Holmes Memorabilia Co. shop in London, England. Showcase of the set from the Sherlock Holmes television series starring Jeremy Brett; Exhibition prices.
2063. "Superb Take Holmes Pay; Job Vacancy for Sherlock Holmes Lookalike at Museum." The Mirror, January 29, 1998: 34.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Looking for a job with a difference? It's elementary, dear Watson. The Baker Street Museum has a vacancy for a Sherlock Holmes lookalike at its famous address in London. It is just one of a range of opportunities you'll find in Summer Jobs Britain '98 and Summer Jobs Abroad '98 (both GBP 8.99)...."
2064. "That great cesspool." Economist 354, no. 8162 (2000): 8-8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'London 1900: The Imperial Metropolis,' by Jonathan Schneer. References to both Holmes and Doyle.
2065. "Tried and Terrific Explore London up close with guided walking tours." Providence Journal (Providence, RI), November 30, 1994: H-25.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a reference to Holmes. "...We had been intrigued by brochures in our hotel lobby advertising two-hour guided walking tours with various themes, ranging from the sedate (London's gardens) to the literary (the London of Dickens and Sherlock Holmes) to the macabre (an evening tour of the spots where Jack the Ripper's victims were found)...."
2066. Alexander, Marlene. "While in London, Lunch with the Great Detective." The Toronto Star, November 4, 2000: 16.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...The Sherlock Holmes Public House and Restaurant proves an irresistible lure for a long-time fan of the Great Detective. My husband and teenage daughter agree, in view of its being the noon hour, that the situation bears further investigation. Ha, the game is afoot! Inside, we find that the lower floor is devoted to the bar. It seems the typical English pub except for the memorabilia that adorns the walls, among them Dr. Watson's service revolver and the stuffed and mounted head of the Hound of the Baskervilles...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

2067. Barlay, Nick. "Statues of the London." The Times (London), May 15, 2004: 31.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Unveiled by Harold Wilson in 1966, Mohandas Karamchand Gandhi's serene sculptural presence in Tavistock Square Gardens has become a focal point for peace memorials and events, just as his strategy of non-violent non-cooperation (satyagraha) has become a byword for peaceful resistance. Pandit Nehru, the former Prime Minister of India, planted a copper beech tree near by to commemorate his visit to London in 1953, and a cherry tree was planted in 1967 for the victims of Hiroshima. Each year on October 2, Gandhi's birth is celebrated with a huge display of flowers. To find Gandhi's statue, the great man's own instructions will help: "There is no way to peace. Peace is the way." The recent murder of Lancelyn Green, the renowned Sherlock Holmes expert, only fuels the transatlantic excitement of American and British fans: is there a Conan Doyle curse? What is true, of course, is that Holmes lived at 221b Baker Street, which is now a museum complete with very real souvenirs. Around the corner in front of Baker Street station is a statue of the famous detective by the sculptor John Doubleday, who is responsible for a number of London's more populist enterprises. The statue was unveiled in 1999 by Lord Tugendhat, the chairman of Abbey National Bank. The association with Holmes goes back to 1932, when the company built its headquarters at 200 Baker Street. Soon, a "secretary to Sherlock Holmes" had to be appointed to deal with the constant letters addressed to 221b. A permanent memorial to the world's most translated and performed playwright after Shakespeare was first proposed by the film director Derek Jarman, but it wasn't until 1998 that Oscar Wilde secured a place in Central London. Maggi Hambling's bronze in Adelaide Street near Trafalgar Square was unveiled by Stephen Fry and is less formal than the blue plaque at Wilde's residence in Tite Street in Chelsea. Entitled A Conversation with Oscar Wilde 1854-1900, the memorial consists of a sarcophagus, out of which pokes the writer's head. According to Hambling, the sculpture is "completed" when a member of the public sits down on the sarcophagus to have a chat with the author. In addition, the rebellious Wilde is depicted smoking, once a symbol of moral decay. Inscribed on the memorial is that wonderful quote by Wilde: "We are all in the gutter, but some of us are looking at the stars."

2068. Battista, Kathy, Brandon LaBelle, Barbara Penner, Steve Pile, and Jane Rendell. "Exploring 'an area of outstanding unnatural beauty': a treasure hunt around King's Cross, London." Cultural Geographies 12, no. 4 (2005): 429-462.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes references to Doyle and Holmes.

2069. Baylen, Joseph O. "London 1900: The Imperial Metropolis (review)." Victorian Studies 43, no. 4 (2001): 680-682.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes reference to Doyle. "...Schneer cites the fiction of Arthur Conan Doyle, whose propagation of racist ideas and sentiments justified the imperialist sentiment prevalent in London in 1900. Here his acerbic view of Conan Doyle differs somewhat from the verdict of Daniel Strashower's recent biography of the writer...."

2070. Bennett, Suzy. "Scenes of the crime." The Daily Telegraph (London), May 12, 2007: 13.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...For fans of Britain's original detective, the Sherlock Holmes Museum at 221b Baker Street, London, is an obvious place to visit...along with the Sherlock Holmes pub on nearby Northumberland Avenue, which exhibits props used in the films. Further afield, in Devon, mist-wreathed Dartmoor was the inspiration for Arthur Conan Doyle's The Hound of the Baskervilles, although most of the 2002 film version of the story took place in Glen Maye, Jurby and Druidale on the Isle of Man...."

2071. Berdan, Marshall S. "Elementary, My Dear Tourist: 100 years after his official retirement, Sherlock Holmes still draws supporters and supplicants to London's Baker Street." Shoso-In Bulletin 13, no. (2003): 31-36, 43.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

2072. ———. "Sherlock Holmes 101." The Washington Post, January 11, 2004: 2.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "WHAT: Tracing the Victorian London of Sherlock Holmes; his colleague and biographer, Dr. John H. Watson; and his creator, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. WHY NOW: Because as devotees of Holmes -- 'the world's first and still most famous consulting detective' -- have collectively deduced, he was born Jan. 6, 1854, thus making 2004 his sesquicentennial celebration. SHERLOCKIAN SITES: The exact site of Holmes's 221B Baker St. residence remains a matter of debate. Because the entire Portman Square neighborhood in which it was located was reduced to rubble in World War II, the 'modern' world of Sherlock Holmes has been relocated to the northern end of the extended -- and renumbered -- Baker Street. Highlights include: "The Great Detective." Standing vigil outside the Marylebone Road exit of the Baker Street tube station is this statue, erected in 1999 by the Abbey National Bank (the residents of 221 Baker since 1932)....Sherlock Holmes Museum....Sherlock Holmes Memorabilia Co...."

2073. Campbell, Mark. "Hot on Sherlock Holmes's Trail; Mark Campbell Sniffs Out the London Haunts of Conan Doyle's Legendary Sleuth." The Independent (London), October 27, 2001: 7.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "One of the most famous literary addresses in London is 221b Baker Street. There's only one problem - the cosy rooms of amateur detective Sherlock Holmes and his friend, John H Watson, don't actually exist. The 'real' 221b, subsumed by the head office of the Abbey National, is not a worthy place of veneration. However, down the street in the Sherlock Holmes Museum..., you'll find a mock 221b frontage and a frighteningly accurate rendition of the dark and cluttered Victorian interior of Conan Doyle's stories. But for every fictitious address in the Canon (the official term for the four novels and 56 short stories featuring Holmes and Watson), you'll find plenty of bona fide locations in the capital. To begin with, turn the corner into Wigmore Street and you pass the post office that Holmes magically deduced Watson had visited in The Sign of Four (1890)...."

2074. Churchill, Winsoar, and Alan Klehr. "London's Gentlemen's Clubs." British Heritage 21, no. 3 (2000): 50.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on clubs in London, England with a quote from the Memoirs of Sherlock Holmes: "We had reached Pall Mall as we talked, and were walking down it from St. James's end. Sherlock Holmes stopped at a door some little distance from the Carlton, and cautioning me not to speak, he led the way into the hall. Through the glass panelling I caught a glimpse of a large and luxurious room, in which a considerable number of men were sitting about and reading papers, each in his own little nook. Holmes showed me into a small chamber which looked out into Pall Mall, and then, leaving me for a minute, he came back with a companion whom I knew could only be his brother...."

2075. Cirone, Nino. "An Interview with a Baker Street Cabby." Shoso-In Bulletin 12, no. (2002): 125-127.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

2076. Cooke, Catherine, and Alvin E. Rodin. "Arthur Conan Doyle in London, Part I, In Baker Street and Beyond." Baker Street Miscellanea, no. 73 (1993): 16-27.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

2077. Cooper, Barbara Roisman. "Stage by Stage: London's Historic Theaters." British Heritage 26, no. 6 (2006): 34-40.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article focuses on various historic theaters in London, England. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...When I was in Kiss Me, Kate,' remembers Patricia Morison, who starred in the musical in 1951, 'the back door of the Coliseum opened onto a street that looked like a set of a Sherlock Holmes movie, gas lamps and fog swirling.'"

2078. Dalby, Stewart. "Play dough: Hot on the trail of the man who never was: Sherlock Holmes was a fictional character but that doesn't stop people collecting anything to do with him." The Guardian (London), July 15, 2000: 24.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Sherlock Holmes never existed, of course. Nor did his much-loved dwellings at 221b Baker Street in London. But try telling Kazie Kamaza, one of the thousands of visitors who flock to the Sherlock Holmes Memorabilia Company in Baker Street each year....Almost exactly opposite is the Sherlock Holmes Museum, housed in a former Victorian lodging house. A blue plaque on the wall claims that this is the original 221b Baker Street. Not so, says the Abbey National Bank. Its modern, 60s built former headquarters a few doors along is where numbers 205 to 229 Baker Street used to be. And Abbey National still gets mail, as does the museum, addressed to Sherlock Holmes and asking him to help with a problem. They are reluctant to tell you at the museum just how many visitors they receive. In fact, they are disinclined to tell you anything if they suspect you have been across the road talking to the Memorabilia Company. The two see themselves as strong competitors...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

2079. Dorn, Jennifer. "Simpson's-in-the-Strand." British Heritage 26, no. 4 (2005): 16-166.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article presents the author's view that for two decades now, London, England has enjoyed one of the most vital and diverse restaurant scenes in the world. Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...Simpson's has frequently been mentioned in literary works as well. Arthur Conan Doyle was particularly partial to the restaurant, using it as a meeting place in many of his books. In The Adventure of the Dying Detective, Doyle has his famous detective Sherlock Holmes fast so as to appear ill. After the criminal is caught, Holmes proposes dinner at Simpson's-in-the-Strand: 'When we have finished at the police station, I think that something nutritious at Simpson's would not be out of place.' Obviously, year after year many diners have followed this suggestion...."

2080. ———. "Streetlights of London." British Heritage 27, no. 5 (2006): 11-12.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article presents information on the Marylebone neighborhood in London, England. The address 221B was not there in Baker Street, Marylebone during the years of the Sherlock Holmes stories. But Baker Street was extended and renumbering of the buildings was done in 1930. 221B became a real address and the popular Sherlock Holmes Museum was made there. The beautiful Regent's Park is the famous residential area of Marylebone. Medical services are offered in Wimpole and Harley streets.

2081. Fell, Christine. "Review--'Back to Baker Street: An Appreciation of Sherlock Holmes and London' edited by Roger Johnson and Jean Upton." The Musgrave Papers, no. 7 (1994): 116.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

2082. Fernz, Helena. "Probing the residence at 221b Baker Street, London." Business Times, December 7, 2001: 13.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Let's play the sleuth on this occasion and investigate the famed residence at 221b Baker Street, London, by stopping at http:// www.sherlock- holmes.co.uk/ The notable occupants of this well-known abode at Baker Street are none other than Sherlock Holmes and his colleague John H. Watson, MD. Well, actually, this will probably be the easiest 'case' ever to be investigated, for 'The Sherlock Holmes Museum' that is online provides a colourful and in-depth tour to anyone who actually takes the time to visit and explore...."

2083. Fildes, Christopher. "Sherlock Holmes solves the intractable problem of the black hole in the Aldgate area." The Daily Telegraph (London), March 3, 2001: 32.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "It was Sherlock Holmes who first identified the black hole in the Aldgate area. By now it is engulfing ministers and mayors and money, but in his time it had already swallowed the Bruce-Partington plans for the Royal Navy's latest submarine....More recently the black hole in the Aldgate area has proved itself capable of reducing signals and services to anti-matter, much to the dread of passengers whose daily journeys take them, or are meant to take them, to the City. Desperately, London Underground has sought to blame this on the interaction of new equipment and old track...."

2084. Friedman, Kinky. "Mad Cowboy Disease." Texas Monthly 31, no. 5 (2003): 244.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Relates the experience of a cowboy when he visited London, England. Reaction of the city workers to the cowboy's outfit; Details of the cowboy's meeting with Mike Levy, former record producer and tennis partner of Great Britain's Prime Minister Tony Blair. Includes a reference to Holmes. "...On my last night in London, I walked through the fog until I came to the most famous address in the world, 221B Baker Street. On the door was a small bronze plaque that read 'Visitors for Mr. Sherlock Holmes or Doctor Watson please ring the bell.' I rang the bell, walked up one flight of seventeen steps, and suddenly I was standing in Sherlock Holmes's living room. There was a cheery fire in the fireplace. Holmes's violin stood poignantly nearby, along with the old Persian slipper where he kept his Turkish tobacco. And in the room were Japanese, Russians, Africans, people from seemingly every nation on earth, all bound together by a common,

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

passionate belief that Sherlock Holmes was real. It was, I thought, a perfect United Nations...."

2085. Galerstein, David H. "Book review--'They Came to Baker Street' by Reginald L. Johnson." Baker Street Miscellanea, no. 70 (1992): 39-40.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Johnson was born at the turn of the century and discovered the Canon as a teenager, and his book is a collection of more than 50 well-written vignettes of those who visited the famous sitting-room, edited and foot-noted by Alan Truscott (who as the bridge editor of the N.Y. Times has shown in his bridge column that he too is an admirer of Sherlock Holmes)."
2086. Green, Richard Lancelyn. "Editorial: A Sherlock Holmes Statue for Baker Street." The Sherlock Holmes Journal 23, no. 2 (1997): 41-42.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2087. Hall, John. "Review--'Pie and Mash: A guide to Londoners' Traditional Eating Houses' by The Pie 'n' Mash Club of Great Britain." The Ritual, no. 20 (1997): 69-70.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2088. Huntington, Tom. "Franklin's Last Home." American Heritage 57, no. 2 (2006): 49-52.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article presents information about Benjamin Franklin, the inventor of electricity and the archaeological research on his residence home. Of the many houses Franklin lived in over his eight decades, only one survives, which has been restored just in time for his 300th birthday in London, England. The Benjamin Franklin House is ideally located in central London, close to Trafalgar Square, Charing Cross, and the Strand. The two nearest tube stops are Charing Cross and Embankment, at opposite ends of Craven Street. Information on the life of Franklin has also been offered in the article. Includes a reference to Holmes. "...There are a few good pubs nearby. Franklin probably frequented the Ship and Shovel, just down Craven Street and around the corner. If you turn onto Craven Passage, you'll find the Sherlock Holmes Pub. Franklin lived in a world without Sherlock Holmes, but that shouldn't keep you from stopping in, enjoying a pint, and surveying the pub's collection of Sherlockiana, including the re-creation of Holmes's famous sitting room that was originally built for the Festival of Britain in 1951."
2089. Jenkins, Lin. "Elementary Fraud at the Sherlock Holmes museum." The Times (London) 1994: 3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "[John A-----], 38, of Belgravia, central London, used false details to obtain mortgages. Each time he applied for money he claimed falsely that he had no outstanding debts on other properties. He netted Pounds 890,000 on the Sherlock Holmes museum building and Pounds 228,000 from a house in Battersea, south London. A further Pounds 100,000 was obtained on a flat in Stockwell, south London, under the name Peter Neville. A----- wrote references claiming that Neville worked for him at his free newspaper distribution firm, Rollerteam Ltd." [excerpt]
2090. Jenkins, Rebecca. "Detective work at Baker Street." The Times (London), September 25, 1999: 30.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Looking for clues on a tour of Sherlock Holmes's fictional patch. We were on the trail of Sherlock Holmes. Nine of us, mostly American tourists and fellow sleuths, were scouring Marylebone for the haunts of a fictional character. It was a strange way to spend a Tuesday afternoon...."
2091. Kendall, Robert, and Gloria Davis. "The Throb of Life in London." Hispanic Times Magazine 25, no. 2 (2002): 30.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Features the tourist spots in London, England. Destination for travelers; Description of the city; Citation of several tourist spots. Includes references to Doyle and Holmes. "...Located farther down Park Lane is the Grosvenor House, combining a hotel with residential flats. The Grosvenor provides a perfect view of Hyde Park across the street. At the far end of Park Lane, located across from the Marble Arch, is the historic landmark Cumberland Hotel, mentioned in Arthur Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes stories....Fringe theatre is London's equivalent to New York's Off Broadway productions. One of London's best is the Pentameters at The Three Horseshoes Pub, located one block from the Tube (or Underground) Station in Hampstead. I saw The Hound of the Baskervilles, which was adapted to the stage by Harry Meacher, who also starred as Sherlock Holmes and directed. Sharing honors was international film star

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- Judi Bowker, who rose to prominence in Black Beauty and in Franco Zeffirelli's Brother Sun, Sister Moon....Madame Tussaud's Wax Museum contains 400 life size figures. It is situated in the Baker Street section of North London made famous by Arthur Conan Doyle as the residence of his detective creation Sherlock Holmes. The Sherlock Holmes Pub, meeting place for the club memorializing the legendary sleuth, is located in the shadows of Trafalgar Square...."
2092. Koenig, Helmut. "In search of Sherlock Holmes." The Toronto Star, March 17, 1995: G25.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...Even today, more than a century later, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's creation - hero of 56 stories and four novels - seems almost a living presence. Sherlock Holmes embodies the spirit of that London of long ago. And with a little imagination and some research, today's visitor can follow the sleuth on his rounds through labyrinthian ways of the capital....Be advised when tracking down sites from the adventures, however. Names have been changed. Others may never have existed. The Alpha Inn? The White Eagle Tavern? Oft-mentioned Saxe-Coburg Square? Directions can be misleading. Distances and timing are not always accurate...."
2093. Laidlaw, Joanna. "The fun of museum shopping." Victoria 12, no. 3 (1998): 16.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on museum shops in London, England that sell souvenirs and other gift items. Henry VIII's Tudor palace; Tower of London; Victoria & Albert Museum; Pollock's Toy Museum; Museum of Garden History; Twinings Tea Museum. Includes passing references to Holmes. "...Come along with Londoner Joanna Laidlaw on an enlightening stroll that leads directly to artful and unusual souvenirs -- from a silk scarf to a Beefeater teddy bear and a Sherlock Holmes hat....Snoop around the real 221b Baker Street (011 44 171 935 8866), and see where Sherlock Holmes lived. The fictitious English sleuth still receives thousands of letters, birthday cards, and invitations to speak. The museum shop sells everything from Baker Street street signs and meerschaum pipes to capes, and handsome tweed deerstalker hats. You can even buy a real London Times from the last century and a chess set featuring characters from the tales (the pawns are London bobbies)...."
2094. Lezard, Nicholas. "Sherlock Holmes was on the wrong side of town, finds Nicholas Lezard." The Guardian (London), September 18, 1999: 11.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of Atlas of the European Novel, 1800-1900, by Franco Moretti (Verso, pounds 12). "How many times do you think Sherlock Holmes goes to the East End? Ten times? A dozen? Fifteen? No: once, exactly. I find this hard to believe, but Moretti asserts it so pugnaciously - and it's not the kind of claim you make lightly, as anyone who has tangled with Sherlockians knows - that I have to defer to his research. This is a book which makes maps out of where books are set, or, rather, overlays geography with the loci of fiction, and sees what kind of patterns can be made. In the case of Sherlock Holmes's London, the fascinating thing is what happens when the detective's movements are superimposed on Charles Booth's real map of London, published in 1889. It's hugely detailed: each block of dwellings is colour-coded according to social class (there are seven: the richest are coloured gold, the poorest and most dangerous black, a scheme which is 'either quite naive or very very ironic', as Moretti drily puts it.) A map of Holmes's investigations is the exact inverse of Booth's. Murders are more likely to happen, in Conan Doyle's London, where in reality they are least likely to happen...."
2095. Lyall, Sarah. "36 Hours in London." New York Times, April 20, 2008: 12.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "There are many different Londons, and they appeal to people with many different passions: museum lovers, theatergoers, opera buffs, devotees of royalty, students of history, people who like to walk in the rain. But richest of all, perhaps, is the London for book lovers. Because the city is the star and the backdrop of so much great literature, it is possible to believe you know it intimately -- how it looks, how it feels -- without ever leaving your home country, or indeed your home. But it is better to visit, if only for the joy of seeing the landscape of your imagination come to life. How thrilling to happen upon Pudding Lane, where a bakery mishap led to the Great Fire of 1666, after reading Pepys's account in his diaries. Or to wander along Baker Street, where Sherlock Holmes once fictionally solved the unsolvable. Walk across London Bridge and gaze down, toward Southwark Bridge: this is the stretch of the Thames where Dickens's sinister characters dredged up corpses in 'Our Mutual Friend.' "[Abstract from publisher]

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

2096. Morgan, Judith. "If You Go: London." The San Diego Union - Tribune, July 17, 1994: F6.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2097. Muller, Lynne. "The case of the fictional flat: A quirky London museum pays tribute to Sherlock Holmes and Watson." The Globe and Mail (Toronto), May 16, 1998: F3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...I'll never know if she believed Sherlock Holmes had really lived, because I didn't pursue the conversation. But the obsession she and other Sherlockians share must be the ultimate tribute to Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, Holmes' creator. Fascination with the Holmes persona is so strong almost 70 years after Doyle's death that there are more than 300 Sherlockian organizations worldwide, 17 in Japan alone. And the fiction is complete in Baker Street's Sherlock Holmes Museum, which allows fans to visit the small flat, reproduced with style and good humour, that Holmes shared with Dr. Watson from 1881 to 1904. The museum contains no mention of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, no background on how he came to create his famous sleuth. A project of the Sherlock Holmes International Society, the museum simply reproduces Holmes' flat (and sells a few souvenirs along the way). Thankfully, there's not too much schlock amidst the Sherlockiana...."
2098. Pearce, Fred. "The big smoke." Geographical 74, no. 9 (2002): 20.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the smog and environmental condition of London, England in nineteenth century. Increase in mortality rate in December 1873; Reasons for the decline in fog levels in 1900; Information on the London Fog Inquiry from 1901-1902; Overview of arts and literature inspired by the London fog. INSET: London cleans up its act, by Fred Pearce. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...The smog had become an integral character of Victorian fiction; in Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's the Sherlock Holmes stories, for example. It became a metaphor that embodied confusion, foreboding and uncertainty about the future...."
2099. Pizzichini, Lilian, and Frances Stonor Saunders. "The big smoke." New Statesman 131, no. 4617 (2002): 36.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents an article on the killer fogs which invaded London, England in December 1952. Number of people who died due to the fog; Influence of the fog on art and literature; Action taken by the city of London to address the disaster. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...But what really got the writers going was 'smog' (a portmanteau word meaning 'fog intensified by smoke'), coined at roughly the same time as 'London particular' or 'pea-souper'. These early 19th-century terms describe the meteorological phenomenon unique to the capital at the time. The industrial revolution saw it spread to other urban sprawls, heralding the unhealthy plight of the city-dweller. Novelists quickly picked up on the symbolism inherent in the smog that infected the atmosphere. Robert Louis Stevenson's Dr Jekyll gave birth to Mr Hyde in its muddy whorls; Sherlock Holmes chased villains through the thick of it. Fog had become the perfect emblem for a sinful city; implacable and insidious, even its acrid smell contained sickness...."
2100. Pugh, Brian W., Philip Weller, and Gary Lovisi. "Book Review (Doylean Links With London and Naples)." Shoso-In Bulletin 13, no. (2003): 156-157.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2101. Reed, Adam. "City of Details: Interpreting the Personality of London." Journal of the Royal Anthropological Institute 8, no. 1 (2002): 127.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article investigates the ways in which a group of enthusiasts for London constitute their city. The 'personality' attributed to London is described, as well as the interpretive acts that reveal it. These people, who also lead walking tours across the city, privilege 'detail' as their term of analysis. The article examines the identified qualities of that category, in particular its perceived capacity to animate the plural time-spaces of the city. This sensitivity to detail is presented as part of a sensing of place, which allows people to regard themselves as uniquely able to see the city. The article is intended as a contribution to the ethnography of London. [Abstract from author] Includes references to Holmes.
2102. Reitz, Caroline. "Capital Offenses: Geographies of Class and Crime in Victorian London (review)." Victorian Studies 47, no. 1 (2005): 100-102.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of Capital Offenses: Geographies of Class and Crime in Victorian London, by Simon Joyce; pp. viii + 267. Charlottesville: University of Virginia Press, 2003, $39.50. Includes a passing

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- reference to Doyle. "...Later readings of Arthur Conan Doyle, Robert Louis Stevenson, and Oscar Wilde carry Joyce's argument through the end of the century. Joyce's emphasis on the 'privileged offender' (Dr. Jekyll or Dorian Gray, for example) in the context of late- century debates on the relationship between charity and crime illustrates that the cultural discourse on crime and class is more complicated than a neat distinction between cops and robbers or a close association between criminality and poverty...."
2103. Rodin, Alvin E., Catherine Cooke, and Kevin Brown. "Arthur Conan Doyle in London, Part II, St. Mary's Hospital: Medicine, Spiritualism and Sion." Baker Street Miscellanea, no. 74 (1994): 37-48.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2104. Ronson, Jon. "The Human Zoo: Magical History Tour." The Guardian (London), September 2, 1995: T62.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...There are, as it stands, three competing Beatles Walks of London. This would be confusing in itself, but it is compounded by the four Sherlock Holmes tours that are taking place concurrently - on the same pavement. 221b Baker Street is perilously close to the house that Paul McCartney shared with Jane Asher between 1963 and 1966, and walkers have been known to switch allegiance mid-tour. Today, in fact, two old ladies from America do just that...."
2105. Rubinstein, William D. "The Hunt For Jack the Ripper." History Today 50, no. 5 (2000): 10.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the research and theories on the identity of the serial killer called Jack the Ripper who murdered five prostitutes in Whitechapel, London, England in 1888. Social and economic conditions in Whitechapel in 1888; Candidates for the true identity of the killer; Arguments about the 1992 discovery of the killer's alleged diaries. Includes passing references to Doyle and Holmes. "...The association of the Ripper with the London of Sherlock Holmes, with fogs, riverside opium dens, the haunts of prostitutes and criminals, virtually adjacent to great wealth and the aristocracy, is enticing to many....The notion that 'Jack' was actually 'Jill' surfaced early during the spate of killings themselves, and had an advocate of sorts in Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, who argued that the male killer was able to pass through Whitechapel disguised as a bloodstained midwife...."
2106. Shiffman, Stu. "The Singing Fire by Liian Nattel: A view into the London not seen in the annals of Sherlock Holmes." The Holmes & Watson Report 8, no. 4 (2004): 26-32.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2107. Stasio, Marilyn. "Murder most fogbound." New York Times, October 19, 1997: 31.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the links between London, England and its fictional detectives. Reference to the fictional [sic] detectives, Sherlock Holmes and Sir John Felling; Citing the book 'The Trial of Elizabeth Cree,' by Peter Ackroyd; Authors' perceived fascination with the use of London in the plots of their books; Descriptive language used to illustrate the murder scenes.
2108. Stein, Richard L. "Recent Work in Victorian Urban Studies." Victorian Studies 45, no. 2 (2003): 319-331.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews Victorian Babylon: People, Streets, and Images in Nineteenth-Century London, by Lynda Nead; pp. ix + 252. New Haven, CT and London: Yale University Press, 2000, $35.00, GBP19.95.; Imperial Cities: Landscape, Display, and Identity, edited by Felix Driver and David Gilbert; pp. xvii + 283. Manchester and New York: Manchester University Press, 1999, GBP45.00, $74.95.; Streetwalking the Metropolis: Women, the City, and Modernity, by Deborah L. Parsons; pp. x + 246. Oxford and New York: Oxford University Press, 2000, GBP15.95, $22.00.; Shopping for Pleasure: Women in the Making of London's West End, by Erika Diane Rappaport; pp. xi + 323. Princeton, NJ and London: Princeton University Press, 2000, $35.00, GBP21.95.; Writing the Urban Jungle: Reading Empire in London from Doyle to Eliot, by Joseph McLaughlin; pp. xii + 240. Charlottesville and London: University Press of Virginia, 2000, $55.00, $18.50 paper, GBP2.95, GBP14.50 paper. Includes multiple references to Doyle and Holmes.
2109. Swartz, Mim. "Trailing the path of London's infamous murderer | Steady nerves needed for Jack the Ripper tour." The San Diego Union - Tribune 1994.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

2110. Watts, Janet. "At a glance." Sunday Times (London), February 27, 2000: 42.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Very short review of London 1900: The Imperial Metropolis, by Jonathan Schneer. "...Imperialism shapes every aspect of the city's culture -- the construction of Kingsway, music-hall black minstrels, Sherlock Holmes stories, the treatment of animals in London Zoo...."

06F WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- OTHER SUBJECTS -- FOOD AND DRINK (2)

2111. "Pluck a flamingo." Economist 389, no. 8611 (2008): 140-142.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // In this article the author discusses cookbooks, noting that a significant number are published every year. A variety of issues are discussed including the history of cookbooks the domestic management taught by Isabella Beeton in 19th century Great Britain and the impact of Fannie Farmer on American cookery. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Although the recipes in one book are often similar to those in another, their presentation varies wildly. There are Lutheran cookbooks, Wiccan cookbooks, feminist vegetarian cookbooks (The Political Palate) and satirical cookbooks. There are instructions on cooking the food that Jane Austen, Sherlock Holmes and Thomas Jefferson might have eaten...."
2112. Dahlin, Robert. "Soup's On: A Selection of Forthcoming Cookbooks." Publishers Weekly 246, no. 30 (1999): 44.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Enumerates several cookbooks, one with a reference to Holmes. "Jo Grossman has not personally sampled every morsel served up in A Taste of Murder: Diabolically Delicious Recipes from Contemporary Mystery Writers (DTP), which she compiled with Robert Weibezahl....In total, more than 140 mystery authors supplied recipes and brief introductions to their fare. 'There are more recipes than that, because we wanted to include a sidebar with recipes from two Sherlock Holmes pubs, one in London, the other in Carmel,' says Grossman."

06F WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- OTHER SUBJECTS -- FORENSICS (11)

2113. "Books." Science news 171, no. 23 (2007): 367-367.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article reviews the books "Mind In Life: Biology, Phenomenology, and the Sciences of the Mind," by Evan Thompson, "The Science of Sherlock Holmes: From Baskerville Hall to the Valley of Fear, the Real Forensics behind the Great Detective's Greatest Cases," by E. J. Wagner and "The Happiness Trip: A Scientific Journey," by Eduardo Punset.
2114. "Miscellaneous Book Awards." World Almanac & Book of Facts, no. (2008): 256-256.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article announces the recipients of book awards in 2007 including and Edgar awards for Best Critical/Biographical: The Science of Sherlock Holmes: From Baskerville Hall to the Valley of Fear, E. J. Wagner; Best Play: Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure, Steven Dietz.
2115. "The Science of Sherlock Holmes: From Baskerville Hall to the Valley of Fear, the Real Forensics behind the Great Detective's Greatest Cases." Physics Teacher 45, no. 3 (2007): 190-190.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "The Science of Sherlock Holmes: From Baskerville Hall to the Valley of Fear, the Real Forensics Behind the Great Detective's Greatest Cases," by E.J. Wagner.
2116. "The Science of Sherlock Holmes: From Baskerville Hall to the Valley of Fear, the Real Forensics Behind the Great Detective's Greatest Cases." Publishers Weekly 253, no. 3 (2006): 49-49.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of The Science of Sherlock Holmes: From Baskerville Hall to the Valley of Fear, the Real Forensics Behind the Great Detective's Greatest Cases, by E. J. Wagner (published by Wiley).
2117. "The Science of Sherlock Holmes: From Baskerville Hall to the Valley of Fear, the Real Forensics behind the Great Detective's Greatest Cases." Science news 169, no. 17 (2006): 271-271.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "The Science of Sherlock Holmes: From Baskerville Hall to the Valley of Fear, the Real Forensics behind the Great Detective's Greatest Cases," E. J. Wagner.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

2118. Begley, Sharon. "Critical Thinking: Part Skill, Part Mindset And Totally Up to You." Wall Street Journal - Eastern Edition, 10/20, 2006: B1-B1.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article discusses the difference between having critical thinking skills and applying them. The writer offers an example from the book "The Science of Sherlock Holmes" by E.J Wagner. Cognitive psychologist D. Alan Bensley at Frostberg State College in Maryland argues that application of critical thinking is determined by character traits not intelligence.
2119. Benfey, Theodor. "Wish List." Chemical Heritage 25, no. 4 (2008): 43.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews several books including "Ghostwalk," by Rebecca Stott, "The Cartoon Guide to Chemistry," by Larry Gonick and Craig Criddle, and "The Science of Sherlock Holmes: From Baskerville Hall to the Valley of Fear, the Real Forensics Behind the Great Detective's Greatest Cases," by E. J. Wagner.
2120. Champkin, Julian. "Print of True Genius." Daily Mail (London), November 6, 2004: 40.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Since the arrival of Sherlock Holmes, created by the celebrated Edinburgh author Arthur Conan Doyle, the world has been aware that something as slight as a fingerprint can be used to catch countless criminals. In The Case of the Norwood Builder, Doyle showed his detective hero taking a keen interest in one particular piece of evidence....But few are aware of the convoluted case of the man who invented fingerprints or rather was first to suggest their use as forensic evidence. The story involves a heap of ancient musselshells, a Japanese ceramic tea-service, slightly flawed, and eventually a worldwide database, infallible, unbeatable, of use to detectives everywhere. All three lead, in a trail Sherlock Holmes would have been pleased to follow, to the unveiling next weekend in Beith, Ayrshire, of a statue of Dr Henry Faulds. Faulds is a name that should make wrongdoers quake in their shoes, or perhaps tremble in their gloves, since he was the first to suggest catching them by their fingerprints...."
2121. Freeman, Judith. "Review -- The Science of Sherlock Holmes From Baskerville Hall to the Valley of Fear: the Real Forensics Behind the Great Detective's Greatest Cases by E. J. Wagner." The Serpentine Muse 22, no. 3 (2006): 20.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2122. Knight, Bernard. "The modern Sherlock Holmes (book review)." New Scientist 133, no. (1992): 46-7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Based on the BBC World Service series of the same name, this book is an introduction to modern crime-detection. Williams shows how the extraordinary advances made in modern forensic science have been built on the techniques made famous by Conan Doyle's immortal Holmes.
2123. Taube, Michael. "CSI: Sherlock Holmes?" Christian Science Monitor, Apr 11, 2006: 14.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of The Science of Sherlock Holmes by E.J. Wagner. John Wiley & Sons, 244 pp., $24.95.

06F WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- OTHER SUBJECTS -- GEMS (1)

2124. Dale, Doris. "The Gems of the Canon: Precious Toys, or the Devil's Bait." Baker Street West 1 3, no. 1 (1997): 13-15.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

06F WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- OTHER SUBJECTS -- ILLUSTRATORS AND ILLUSTRATIONS (85)

2125. Beare, Geraldine. "The Strand Magazine - 1891-1950." Imaginative Book Illustration Society Newsletter, no.9, suppl, no. 9 (1998): 31-33.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A history of 'The Strand Magazine', a literary and general interest magazine published by George Newnes which made its first appearance in January 1891 and ran for nearly sixty years, being absorbed into 'Men Only' in 1950. The author discusses the writers and illustrators whose work was published in the magazine. Authors who wrote for 'The Strand' included Conan Doyle, E.W. Raffles, P.G. Wodehouse, H.G. Wells, John Buchan and Agatha Christie. Among the many illustrators whose work featured in the pages of the magazine were Charles Pears, Frank Reynolds, W.H., Charles and T.H. Robinson, E.H. Shepard, Gordon Browne, Dudley Hardy, Edward Ardizzone, Mervyn Peake, Robin Jacques, Ronald Searle and John Farleigh.

2126. Boetschi, Marianne. "Drawing -- 'A Scandal in Bohemia'." Shoso-In Bulletin 11, no. (2001): 205.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2127. ———. "Drawing -- 'Abbey Grange'." Shoso-In Bulletin 11, no. (2001): 62.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2128. ———. "Drawing -- 'Baker Street 221B, London; Holmes and Moriarty'." Shoso-In Bulletin 11, no. (2001): 10.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2129. ———. "Drawing -- 'Devil's Foot'." Shoso-In Bulletin 11, no. (2001): 120.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2130. ———. "Drawing -- 'East Wind (His Last Bow); von Bork and Altamont'." Shoso-In Bulletin 11, no. (2001): 133.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2131. ———. "Drawing -- 'East Wind (His Last Bow); von Bork, tied'." Shoso-In Bulletin 11, no. (2001): 163.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2132. ———. "Drawing -- 'Eastwind (sic); Harwich Harbor'." Shoso-In Bulletin 11, no. (2001): 218.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2133. ———. "Drawing -- 'Lady Carfax'." Shoso-In Bulletin 11, no. (2001): 75.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2134. ———. "Drawing -- 'The (sic) Silver Blaze'." Shoso-In Bulletin 11, no. (2001): 108.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2135. ———. "Drawing -- 'The Blue Carbuncle'." Shoso-In Bulletin 11, no. (2001): 126.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2136. ———. "Drawing -- 'The Dying Detective; Culverton Smith'." Shoso-In Bulletin 11, no. (2001): 24.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2137. ———. "Drawing -- 'The Red Headed League'." Shoso-In Bulletin 11, no. (2001): 226.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2138. ———. "Drawing -- 'The Second Stain'." Shoso-In Bulletin 11, no. (2001): 111.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2139. ———. "Drawing -- 'The Second Stain'." Shoso-In Bulletin 11, no. (2001): 117.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2140. ———. "Drawing -- 'The Speckled Band'." Shoso-In Bulletin 11, no. (2001): 222.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

2141. ———. "Drawing -- 'The Tree Barridebs' (sic)." Shoso-In Bulletin 11, no. (2001): 98.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2142. Cagnat, Jean-Pierre. "Drawing -- 'How are you? You have been in New Mexico, I Perceive'." Shoso-In Bulletin 5, no. (1995): 7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2143. ———. "Drawing -- 'The Editor'." Shoso-In Bulletin 3, no. (1993): 98.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2144. ———. "Drawings -- 'A Visit at my Great-Uncle, Horace Vernet'." Shoso-In Bulletin 13, no. (2003): 47-54.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2145. ———. "Drawings -- 'Baker Street Irregulars Dinner 1993'." Shoso-In Bulletin 3, no. (1993): 23-28.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2146. ———. "Drawings -- 'Baker Street Irregulars Dinner 1994'." Shoso-In Bulletin 4, no. (1994): 47-50.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2147. ———. "Drawings -- 'Baker Street Irregulars Dinner 1996'." Shoso-In Bulletin 6, no. (1996): 93-96.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2148. ———. "Drawings -- 'Baker Street Irregulars Dinner 1999'." Shoso-In Bulletin 9, no. (1999): 93.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2149. ———. "Drawings -- 'Barbizon'." Shoso-In Bulletin 8, no. (1998): 121-124.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2150. ———. "Drawings -- 'Montpelier 1993'." Shoso-In Bulletin 4, no. (1994): 15-18.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2151. ———. "Drawings -- 'Some Graves in the Churchyard of Pere Lachaise'." Shoso-In Bulletin 10, no. (2000): 24-25.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2152. ———. "Drawings -- 'The Unauthorized Pictures What I Discovered'." Shoso-In Bulletin 11, no. (2001): 127-130.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2153. ———. "Drawings -- 'Thirty Minutes at the Monument'." Shoso-In Bulletin 7, no. (1997): 140-141.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2154. Camargo, Graciliano. "Drawing -- 'Sherlock Holmes'." Shoso-In Bulletin 10, no. (2000): 182.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2155. ———. "Drawing -- 'Sherlock Holmes'." Shoso-In Bulletin 10, no. (2000): 190.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2156. Carlile, David. "Pensive Holmes (illustration)." Shoso-In Bulletin 9, no. (1999): 123.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2157. Cooke, Catherine. "Illustrating the Hound." The Musgrave Papers, no. 14 (2001): 36-44.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

2158. Dahlinger, Susan E. "Sherlock Holmes, a centenary essay." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 3, no. 4 (1999): 1, 6, 8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // An essay on the life and work of the actor, William Gillette, on the centennial of his first performance of the play "Sherlock Holmes," the art of Frederic Dorr Steele (who fixed Gillette's image of Holmes in the minds of many), Vincent Starrett's work with Gillette on the publication of the script, and the materials related to all three of these men in the Holmes Collections.
2159. de Freitas, Leo. "The art of the illustrated book: the illustration of contemporary adult fiction." Journal, The, no. 12 (2002): 15-19.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The author charts the decline in the illustration of adult fiction from the 1830s to the present day. The heyday for adult fiction illustration is generally acknowledged to be the middle of the nineteenth century - the author cites as examples the illustration of books written by Charles Dickens, William Makepeace Thackeray, Anthony Trollope and George Du Maurier - however, with the exception of the illustration of Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes stories by Sydney Paget in the 1890s, the inclusion of illustrations in adult fiction is the exception rather than the rule. The exceptions he cites include William Kermode's cut illustrations to 'The Patriot's Progress' (1930), John Farleigh's illustrations to George Bernard Shaw's 'Black Girl in Search of God' (1932), McKnight Kauffer's interpretation of W.H. Hudson's 'Green Mansions' (1944), Edward Bawden's 'Death and the Dreamer' (1944), Anthony Gross's illustrations for 'The Forsyte Saga' (1950), Peter Blake's illustrations for 'The Sun on the Water' (1969), Ralph Steadman's accompaniments to J. Hunter Thompson's book 'Fear and Loathing' (1972), Brad Holland's illustrations for 'The Geek' (1976), Ian Pollock's 'Brothers of the Head' (1977), Marshall Arisman's illustrations for 'Dr Marr' (1990), Andrew Davidson's illustrations for Ted Hughes' 'The Iron Woman' (1993). The reasons for the shift away from illustration in the twentieth century are explored at length in the article. He notes that, while recently there have been interesting examples of the marriage of illustration and adult fiction, not all attempts to have been successful. [An edited version of a paper read at the Victoria & Albert study day, 10 February 2001]
2160. Genova, John. "Sidney Paget's Successor: The Life of Arthur Twidle." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 55, no. 3 (2005): 12-19.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2161. Hasler, Martin. "Drawing (Untitled)." Shoso-In Bulletin 8, no. (1998): 102.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2162. ———. "Drawing (Untitled)." Shoso-In Bulletin 8, no. (1998): 103.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2163. ———. "Drawing (Untitled)." Shoso-In Bulletin 7, no. (1997): 157.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2164. ———. "Drawing (Untitled)." Shoso-In Bulletin 7, no. (1997): 159.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2165. ———. "Drawing (Untitled)." Shoso-In Bulletin 7, no. (1997): 160.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2166. ———. "Drawing (Untitled)." Shoso-In Bulletin 7, no. (1997): 162.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2167. ———. "Drawing (Untitled)." Shoso-In Bulletin 7, no. (1997): 163.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2168. ———. "Drawing (Untitled)." Shoso-In Bulletin 7, no. (1997): 164.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

2169. Hirayama, Hiroko. "Drawing (Untitled)." Shoso-In Bulletin 7, no. (1997): 61.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

2170. ———. "Drawing (Untitled)." Shoso-In Bulletin 7, no. (1997): 75.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

2171. ———. "Drawing (Untitled)." Shoso-In Bulletin 7, no. (1997): 36.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

2172. ———. "Drawing (Untitled)." Shoso-In Bulletin 6, no. (1996): 36.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

2173. ———. "Drawing (Untitled)." Shoso-In Bulletin 6, no. (1996): 42.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

2174. ———. "Drawings -- Sherlockian Gallery III." Shoso-In Bulletin 3, no. (1993): 78-79.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

2175. Hyde, Jay. "Art in the Brood." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 3 (1994): 162-64.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Some observations on William Henry Hyde, the first American illustrator of Holmes, and his inability to capture the Master.

2176. Kasahara, Seiji. "Drawing (Untitled)." Shoso-In Bulletin 7, no. (1997): 15.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

2177. ———. "Drawing (Untitled)." Shoso-In Bulletin 7, no. (1997): 20.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

2178. ———. "Drawing (Untitled)." The Nezire Zanmai International 2, no. (1992): 37.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

2179. ———. "Drawing (Untitled)." The Nezire Zanmai International 2, no. (1992): 54.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

2180. ———. "Drawing (Untitled)." The Nezire Zanmai International 2, no. (1992): 65.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

2181. ———. "Drawings--'Sherlockian Gallery'." Shoso-In Bulletin 3, no. (1993): 40-45.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

2182. Langeveld, Colin. "Drawing (Untitled)." Shoso-In Bulletin 10, no. (2000): 178.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

2183. ———. "An Illustration (Untitled)." Shoso-In Bulletin 10, no. (2000): 178.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

2184. Malec, Andrew. "Frederic Dorr Steele." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 2, no. 2 (1998): 6.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Portrait of the illustrator Frederic Dorr Steele and holdings by the Holmes Collections.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

2185. McGee, Tom. "Drawing (Untitled)." Shoso-In Bulletin 4, no. (1994): 14.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2186. ———. "Drawing (Untitled)." Shoso-In Bulletin 4, no. (1994): 63.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2187. ———. "Drawing (Untitled)." Shoso-In Bulletin 3, no. (1993): 34.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2188. ———. "Drawings -- 'Sherlockian Gallery II'." Shoso-In Bulletin 3, no. (1993): 64-67.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2189. ———. "Drawings (Untitled)." Shoso-In Bulletin 6, no. (1996): 14, 17, 49, 77, 121, 123, 133.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2190. ———. "Drawings (Untitled)." Shoso-In Bulletin 5, no. (1995): 37, 39, 42, 72, 80, 86, 88, 100, 105, 108, 112, 146.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2191. ———. "Drawings (Untitled)." Shoso-In Bulletin 4, no. (1994): 85, 86, 92, 98, 107.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2192. Murasawa, Hiroko. "Drawing -- 'Holmes and Watson'." The Nezire Zanmai International 1, no. (1991): 31.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2193. ———. "Drawing -- 'Irene Adler'." The Nezire Zanmai International 2, no. (1992): 29.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2194. ———. "Drawing -- 'John H. Watson MD'." The Nezire Zanmai International 2, no. (1992): 19.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2195. ———. "Drawing -- 'Mary Morstan Watson'." The Nezire Zanmai International 2, no. (1992): 89.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2196. ———. "Drawing -- 'Sherlock Holmes'." The Nezire Zanmai International 2, no. (1992): 14.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2197. ———. "Drawings (Untitled)." Shoso-In Bulletin 7, no. (1997): 16, 20.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2198. ———. "Drawings (Untitled)." The Nezire Zanmai International 2, no. (1992): 37, 54, 65.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2199. Nakano, Kayoho. "Drawings (Untitled)." Shoso-In Bulletin 3, no. (1993): 5, 11, 47, 49, 52, 57, 58.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2200. ———. "Drawings (Untitled)." The Nezire Zanmai International 2, no. (1992): 5, 21, 28, 71, 75, 79.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2201. Scheideman, J. W. "Blade Straight/Frederick Dorr Steele, True! An essay reflecting on the comparative contributions of Sherlockian illustrations." Baker Street Miscellanea, no. (1994): 1-16.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2202. Shiffman, Stu. "Drawing -- Featuring 'Holmes of Two Worlds'." Shoso-In Bulletin 12, no. (2002): 150.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

2203. ———. "Drawing -- Prod. #107 'The Riding Hood Case'." Shoso-In Bulletin 10, no. (2000): 173.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2204. ———. "Drawing (Untitled)." Shoso-In Bulletin 10, no. (2000): 173.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2205. ———. "Drawings (Untitled)." Shoso-In Bulletin 7, no. (1997): 19, 88, 106, 187.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2206. ———. "Drawings (Untitled)." Shoso-In Bulletin 6, no. (1996): 12, 19, 27, 151.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2207. Tanaka, Kiyoshi. "Drawing -- 'Sherlock Holmes in Kamakura City'." Shoso-In Bulletin 3, no. (1993): 72.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2208. ———. "Drawing -- 'Sherlock Holmes in Kamakura City'." The Nezire Zanmai International 2, no. (1992): 72.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2209. ———. "Drawings (Untitled)." Shoso-In Bulletin 8, no. (1998): 222, 228, 231.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

06F WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- OTHER SUBJECTS -- INDIA (1)

2210. Pai, Shraddha. "Holmes and India: More Than a Casual Connection." Shoso-In Bulletin 8, no. (1998): 84-92.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

06F WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- OTHER SUBJECTS -- LITERARY PARALLELS AND COMPARISONS (1)

2211. "Which the Justice which the Thief? the Life and Influence of Eugène-François Vidocq." Legal Studies Forum 29, no. 2 (2005): 825-837.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Explores the life of Eugène-François Vidocq, one of the founders of the French detective police service. His influence on detective fiction and nineteenth-century French literature; Family background; Accomplishments as a detective.

06F WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- OTHER SUBJECTS -- LITERARY PARALLELS AND COMPARISONS -- AGATHA CHRISTIE (2)

2212. Leitch, Thomas. "The Long & the Short." Kirkus Reviews 73, no. 17 (2005): 928-928.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Offers observation on the disparity between achievement in short mystery fiction and long. Praise for Leslie S. Klinger's editing of the book "New Annotated Sherlock Holmes"; Critique of the novels included in the book; Strength of Agatha Christie's anthology "Masterpieces in Miniature."
2213. Oakley, Helen. "Disturbing Design: Nabokov's Manipulation of the Detective Fiction Genre in Pale Fire and Despair." Journal of Popular Culture 36, no. 3 (2003): 480.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Vladimir Nabokov's role as a self-conscious and even postmodernist innovator has long been a benchmark of literary criticism. His debt to the detective fiction genre is clearly evident in much of his fiction. However, what remains to be investigated are the specific connections between Nabokov's work and the English literary heritage of the crime novel, which is often credited with its genesis in Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes stories of the nineteenth century, through to Agatha Christie's drawing-room dramas of the twentieth century. The significant increase in crime and the rapid technological advances of the nineteenth century contributed to the rise of the detective story, whose success to a large degree depended on its capacity to provide a reassuring rational framework at a time when society was growing increasingly turbulent. This article focuses on how Nabokov drew upon and inverted what had become well-known archetypes of the genre, and also the ways in which he exploded formulaic narrative patterns in order to destabilize the reader's relationship with the text.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

06F WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- OTHER SUBJECTS -- LITERARY PARALLELS AND COMPARISONS -- BRAM STOKER (4)

2214. "The New Annotated Dracula." Publishers Weekly 255, no. 34 (2008): 48-48.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "The New Annotated Dracula," by Bram Stoker and edited by Leslie S. Klinger. Norton, $39.95 (624p) ISBN 978-0-393-06450-6. "Klinger brings the same impressive breadth of knowledge that distinguished The New Annotated Sherlock Holmes to this definitive examination of one of the classic horror novels of all time. Adopting the conceit that Stoker's narrative is based on fact, Klinger elucidates the plot and historical context for both Stoker devotees and those more familiar with Count Dracula from countless popular culture versions. Because he had privileged access to the typescript Stoker delivered to his publisher, Klinger is able to note changes between it and the first edition and comment on the reasons for them. Through close reading, Klinger raises questions about such matters as the role of lead vampire-hunter Van Helsing and whether the villainous count is actually dispatched at book's end. An introduction by Neil Gaiman, numerous illustrations, essays on topics ranging from Dracula in the movies to the academic response, and much more enhance the package. 8-city author tour."

2215. Chapman, Paul M. "A Study in Friendship: Conan Doyle and Bram Stoker." The Musgrave Papers, no. 8 (1995): 71-81.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

2216. Hoffert, Barbara. "Prepub Alert." Library Journal 133, no. 10 (2008): 72-76.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews several books including Stoker, Bram. The New Annotated Dracula. Norton. Dct. 2008.464p. ISBN 978-0-393-06450-6. $39.95. "Leslie S. Klinger (The New Annotated Sherlock Holmes) digs through myth, culture, and graveyards in Transylvania to illuminate Stoker's dark and creepy tale. With an eight-city tour."

2217. Schaffer, Talia. "'A Wilde Desire Took Me': the Homoerotic History of Dracula." ELH 61, no. 2 (1994): 381-425.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reference in footnote 1 to Doyle: Anne Cranny-Francis, "Sexual Politics and Political Repression in Bram Stoker's Dracula," Nineteenth-Century Suspense: From Poe to Conan Doyle, ed. Clive Bloom, Brian Docherty, Jane Gibb, Keith Shand (New York: St. Martin's Press, 1988), 64-79.

06F WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- OTHER SUBJECTS -- LITERARY PARALLELS AND COMPARISONS -- CHARLES DICKENS (5)

2218. "Dickens on the Metropolitan Police." The Ritual, no. 22 (1998): 24-26.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

2219. "Victorian Detective Fiction and the Nature of Evidence: The Scientific Investigations of Poe, Dickens, and Doyle." Victorian Studies 47, no. 4 (2005): 609-611.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of book by Lawrence Frank, with remark "Applying methods of close reading to both scientific and literary texts, Frank argues that Edgar Allen Poe, Charles Dickens, and Arthur

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Conan Doyle 'promoted a new, emerging worldview that was secular and naturalistic.'

2220. Matus, Jill L. "Trauma, Memory, and Railway Disaster: The Dickensian Connection." Victorian Studies 43, no. 3 (2001): 413-436.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reference to Doyle in "Works Cited." Day, Gary. "Figuring Out 'The Signalman': Dickens and the Ghost Story." Eds. Clive Bloom, et al. Nineteenth-Century Suspense: From Poe to Conan Doyle. London: Macmillan, 1988. 26-45.
2221. Pope, Norris. "Dickens's 'The Signalman' and Information Problems in the Railway Age." Technology and Culture 42, no. 3 (2001): 436-461.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Note 5 contains a reference to Doyle: Recent articles on "The Signalman" include John Stahl, "The Source and Significance of the Revenant in Dickens's 'The Signalman,'" Dickens Studies Newsletter 11 (December 1980): 98-101; David Seed, "Mystery in Everyday Things: Charles Dickens's Signalman," Criticism 23 (winter 1981): 42-57; Ewald Mengel, "The Structure and Meaning of Dickens's 'The Signalman,'" Studies in Short Fiction 20 (fall 1983): 271-80; Gary Day, "Figuring Out 'The Signalman,'" in Nineteenth-Century Suspense: From Poe to Conan Doyle, ed. Clive Bloom et al. (New York, 1988); Daniel J. Greenman, "Dickens's Ultimate Achievement in the Ghost Story," Dickensian 85 (spring 1989): 40-48; and Graeme Tytler, "Dickens's 'The Signalman,'" Explicator 53 (fall 1994): 26-29. None of these provides any substantial discussion of railway signaling practices or railway safety.
2222. Thompson, Kenneth. "Victorian Detective Fiction and the Nature of Evidence: The Scientific Investigations of Poe, Dickens, and Doyle (review)." Victorian Studies 47, no. 4 (2006): 609-611.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of Victorian Detective Fiction and the Nature of Evidence: The Scientific Investigations of Poe, Dickens, and Doyle, by Lawrence Frank; pp. x + 249. Basingstoke and New York: Palgrave Macmillan, 2003, GBP47.50, $90.00. Contains multiple references to Doyle and Holmes.

06F WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- OTHER SUBJECTS -- LITERARY PARALLELS AND COMPARISONS -- DOROTHY L. SAYERS (3)

2223. May, Radmila. "Murder most Oxford." Contemporary Review 277, no. 1617 (2000): 232.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Examines why Oxford, England becomes the setting for several fictitious detective and mystery stories. Characteristics of various categories of Oxford writing; Depiction of Oxford in the novel 'Gaudy Night,' by Dorothy Sayers; Reasons behind the mystique of Oxford; Faults of the Oxford tradition in 'Skeleton at the Feast,' by Patricia Hall. Includes references to Holmes. "...Sayer's Gaudy Night was not the first crime novel to be set in Oxford; there were several predecessors as well as two Sherlock Holmes short stories....These early titles also have a tendency to a rather contrived literariness: Fen, when on the track of a murderer, takes on the mannerisms of Sherlock Holmes..."
2224. Oakes, Edward T. "Wimsey surpassed." Commonweal 121, no. 2 (1994): 28.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'A Mind in Love,' by Barbara Reynolds. Biography on Dorothy L. Sayers; Sayers as writer of detective stories; Reasons for Sayers' achievements; Author as a friend and collaborator of Sayers. Includes a reference to Doyle. "Nowadays Dorothy L. Sayers is known by the reading public mostly for her detective fiction; but after reading this fascinating account of her life by a close friend and collaborator in her later years, I wonder how pleased she would be by her posthumous fate: 'She had come to the conclusion,' says Reynolds, 'that detective stories tended to have a bad effect on people, making them believe that there was one neat solution for all human ills, and she would have no more part in encouraging such an attitude.' And like Conan Doyle before her, she grew rather tired of letters from fans (not to mention her publisher) pleading with her to continue to pump more life into her detective, Lord Peter Wimsey, especially now that he had married Harriet Vane, a suspect in one of the earlier novels..."
2225. Strout, Cushing. "Romance and the Literary Detective the Legacy of Dorothy Sayers." Sewanee Review 109, no. 3 (2001): 423.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the literary style of detective fiction author Dorothy L. Sayers and how it

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

influenced other authors. Importance of the element of romance in detective stories; Use of the literary detective story that was popularized by Dorothy Sayers by Jill Paton Walsh, S.T. Haymon and Batya Gur. Includes references to Doyle and Holmes.

06F WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- OTHER SUBJECTS -- LITERARY PARALLELS AND COMPARISONS -- EDGAR ALLEN POE (7)

2226. "American Literature." Reference & Research Book News 22, no. 3 (2007): 273-278.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews several books including The Beautiful Cigar Girl; Edgar Allan Poe, Mary Rogers, and the invention of murder. Stashower, Daniel. Dutton Books, 326 p. $25.95 "Stashower (mystery writer and Edgar Award-winning biographer of Arthur Conan Doyle) tells the sensational real-life story of the 1841 murder of Mary Rogers, New York City's 'beautiful cigar girl'--along with the real-life story of how Edgar Allen Poe transformed the crime into the short story that would invent modern detective fiction and that he hoped would turn his failing career around. During the decline of his wife's health and particular personal hardship, Poe expanded his character C. Auguste Dupin's passion and talent for deductive reasoning to compose the longer-than-usual 'The Mystery of Mary Roget,' debuting the formula that would find its literary legacy in Sherlock Holmes and others."
2227. "Victorian Detective Fiction and the Nature of Evidence: The Scientific Investigations of Poe, Dickens, and Doyle." Victorian Studies 47, no. 4 (2005): 609-611.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of book by Lawrence Frank, with remark "Applying methods of close reading to both scientific and literary texts, Frank argues that Edgar Allen Poe, Charles Dickens, and Arthur Conan Doyle 'promoted a new, emerging worldview that was secular and naturalistic.'"
2228. Freeland, Nataalka. "'One of an infinite series of mistakes': Mystery, influence, and Edgar Allan Poe." Atq 10, no. 2 (1996): 123.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Examines mystery and influence in Edgar Allan Poe's detective fiction. Emphasis on originality; Anxiety of influence in 'The Tell-tale Heart'; Characterization of protagonists in Poe's works. Includes a reference to Doyle. "There is no doubt that Edgar Allan Poe plays a singular role in the history of detective fiction. Few would argue with Arthur Conan Doyle's description of Poe as 'the father of the detective tale'; yet, pronouncements, such as that of Jorge Luis Borges, that 'Poe exhausted the genre' are almost as common...."
2229. Hogarth, Dennis. "Edgar Allan Poe: The Father of the Modern Detective Story and His Influence Upon Arthur Conan Doyle." Baker Street West 14, no. 2 (1998): 7-11, 13.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2230. Stashower, Daniel. "100 Years Ago: Is 'S.S.T.' the Love-child of Bigfoot?" Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 5, no. 3 (2001): 2, 8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Comments and observations on the article "Is Doyle a Plagiarist?" in a 1901 issue of The University of Virginia Magazine by an anonymous author, S. S. T., that "presents his readers with the assertion that Conan Doyle has plagiarized the essential elements of the character of Sherlock Holmes from Poe's fictional sleuth, C. Auguste Dupin."
2231. Thompson, Kenneth. "Victorian Detective Fiction and the Nature of Evidence: The Scientific Investigations of Poe, Dickens, and Doyle (review)." Victorian Studies 47, no. 4 (2006): 609-611.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of Victorian Detective Fiction and the Nature of Evidence: The Scientific Investigations of Poe, Dickens, and Doyle, by Lawrence Frank; pp. x + 249. Basingstoke and New York: Palgrave Macmillan, 2003, GBP47.50, $90.00. Contains multiple references to Doyle and Holmes.
2232. White, Ed. "The Ourang-Outang Situation." College Literature 30, no. 3 (2003): 88.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Analyzes two critical positions on the relationship between literature and history in the novel 'The Murders in the Rue Morgue,' by Edgar Allan Poe. Theoretical framework of the story; Distinct

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

narrative segments of the story; Importance of the parallels between orangutan and insurrectionary slave manifested in the novel. Includes a passing reference to Holmes (p. 98). "... This passage at first seems a clever demonstration of Dupin's amazing analytical powers, akin to those thrilling moments when Sherlock Holmes figures out what Dr. Watson had for dinner three nights ago...."

06F WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- OTHER SUBJECTS -- LITERARY PARALLELS AND COMPARISONS -- G. K. CHESTERTON (6)

2233. "In His Own Words: G.K.'s silly and serious sides." Christian History 21, no. 3 (2002): 16.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents an excerpt from the book 'The Autobiography of G.K. Chesterton.'

Includes the following: "I used to say that my autobiography ought to consist of a series of short stories like those about Sherlock Holmes; only that his were astonishing examples of observation, and mine astonishing examples of lack of observation. In short, they were to be 'Adventures' concerned with my absence of mind, instead of his presence of mind."

2234. Merla, Patrick. "The Club of Queer Trades." James White Review 20, no. 4 (2003): 11-13.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Profiles British Christian writer Gilbert Keith Chesterton. Overview of Chesterton's literary works; Personal background; Role of Chesterton in publishing the journal "The New Witness"; Excerpts from his short story "The Tremendous Adventures of Major Brown." Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...The six tales that comprise the slim volume are narrated by Charles Swinburne (Gardner says it is 'a mystery' why GKC named him after the poet). The second character who figures in most of the tales (although not the one reprinted here) is Rupert Grant, a detective by profession and a parody of Arthur Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes...."

2235. Miller, Steve. "100 Years Ago." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 5, no. 2 (2001): 2, 6.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A brief profile of G. K. Chesterton and his thoughts on Conan Doyle and Sherlock Holmes as contained in an essay published in 1901.

2236. Peterson, John. "The Mystery Deepens." Christian History 21, no. 3 (2002): 31.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Explores the mystery crime stories of the late Roman Catholic writer G.K. Chesterton on his fictional Father Brown character. Description of the detective or mystery crime genre by the late author Edgar Allan Poe; Concept of a detective story by Chesterton; Influence of Chesterton on mystery crime writers. Includes multiple references to Doyle and Holmes.

2237. Rampton, David. "Nabokov and Chesterton." Nabokov Studies 8, no. (2004): 43-57.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Nabokov always discouraged source- and influence-hunting, routinely insisting that his predecessors and contemporaries had had little in the way of discernible effect on him. He even went out of his way to forestall precisely the sort of investigation that I am proposing here. In a 1965 interview, he spoke of his youthful admiration for a range of writers he characterizes as romantic-- Conan Doyle, Conrad, Kipling, Wilde, and Chesterton--but described his interest in them as a juvenile phase he quickly outgrew, noting that they are 'essentially writers for very young people' (Strong Opinions 57)...."

2238. Schmitz, Sandy. "The Club of Queer Trades/Wings." School Library Journal 54, no. 3 (2008): 232-232.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the books "The Club of Queer Trades," by G. K. Chesterton and "Wings," by Mikhail Kuzmin. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "The first book, originally published in Britain in 1905, is a set of six interconnected detective stories in which seemingly ordinary people find themselves in extraordinary and baffling situations, all of which are tied to the secretive Club of Queer Trades and its mysterious president. Only retired judge Basil Grant can separate illusion from reality to solve the mysteries. Teens who have read the Sherlock Holmes stories avidly will enjoy Basil Grant's adventures...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

06F WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- OTHER SUBJECTS -- LITERARY PARALLELS AND COMPARISONS -- GEORGE BERNARD SHAW (3)

2239. Crawford, MaryAnn Krajnik. "Introduction: Shaw Scholarship: 'Here and Now' and at the 2004 International Shaw Society (ISS) Conference." SHAW The Annual of Bernard Shaw Studies 25, no. (2005): 1-8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes conference paper with reference to Doyle. "Papers were given by Lagretta Lenker ('Shaw's Best Play?')...Alan Andrews ('Shaw and Conan Doyle'), Rodelle Weintraub ('What Makes Johnny Run? Man and Superman as Pre-Freudian Dream Play')..."
2240. Weintraub, Rodelle. "What Makes Johnny Run? Shaw's Man and Superman as a Pre-Freudian Dream Play." SHAW The Annual of Bernard Shaw Studies 24, no. (2004): 119-127.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...A second volume is suggested in the Preface to the play, where Shaw writes, 'The theft of the brigand-poetaster [Mendoza] from Sir Arthur Conan Doyle is deliberate' (518). Reading Conan Doyle in either The Memoirs of Sherlock Holmes (1894) or in The Strand Magazine, Tanner would have found, in the story "Silver Blazes," [sic] a retired jockey named John Straker, who may have metamorphosed into John Tanner's chauffeur, Henry Straker. Hector Malone calls Ann 'a regular Sherlock Holmes.' Perhaps the very literary John Tanner, just prior to the opening of Shaw's play, has taken both Kipling and Conan Doyle to bed--and fallen asleep...."
2241. Weintraub, Stanley. "Shaw's Goddess: Lady Colin Campbell." SHAW The Annual of Bernard Shaw Studies 25, no. (2005): 241-256.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a reference to Doyle. "...Actors and acting often surfaced in her columns, and she also risked writing plays and fiction. When the Charringtons (with Janet Achurch in each work) presented a quintuple bill at Terry's Theatre in June 1893, along with short plays by James Barrie, Conan Doyle, Thomas Hardy, and the forgotten Walter Pollock, they included a farce by Lady Colin, Bud and Blossom...."

06F WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- OTHER SUBJECTS -- LITERARY PARALLELS AND COMPARISONS -- H. P. LOVECRAFT (2)

2242. Nelson, Victoria. "H.P. Lovecraft and the great heresies." Raritan 15, no. 3 (1996): 92.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Examines the imagination of horror writer H.P. Lovecraft. Lovecraft's family background and life; Lovecraft's dreams and obsessions as inspirations for his stories; Daniel Paul Schreber's paranoia as matched in Lovecraft's vision of intentions of his horror creatures. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...We know things, he said, only through our five senses or our religious convictions; wherefore it is quite impossible to refer to any object or spectacle which cannot be clearly depicted by the solid definitions of fact or the correct doctrines of theology--preferably those of the Congregationalist, with whatever modifications tradition and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle can supply...."
2243. Wood, Peter H. "Sherlock Holmes, Arthur Conan Doyle and H. P. Lovecraft: Three Attitudes to the Spiritual World." Canadian Holmes 29, no. 1 (2005): 14-23.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

06F WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- OTHER SUBJECTS -- LITERARY PARALLELS AND COMPARISONS -- IAN FLEMING (3)

2244. Dirda, Michael. "James Bond as Archetype (and Incredibly Cool Dude)." Chronicle of Higher Education 54, no. 41 (2008): B20-B21.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // An essay is presented on the fictional character James Bond. The author examines the character in books such as "Devil May Care" by Sebastian Faulks writing as the novelist Ian Fleming and in motion pictures such as "Casino Royale." The heroic attributed of Bond are explored and the psychology of men wishing to be heroes is discussed. The popularity of James Bond is also analyzed. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Still, James Bond lives on, for he has outgrown the books, and even the movies can scarcely contain him. A half-dozen actors have played him, and there will be more in the future: Bond has become as archetypal as Hamlet or Sherlock Holmes, a hero with a thousand faces -- and among them are yours and mine."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

2245. Kerr, Philip, and Frances Stonor Saunders. "Licensed to print money." New Statesman 131, no. 4575 (2002): 38.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on the location where Ian Fleming wrote his series of novels that gave birth to the popular James Bond films. Information on 'Casino Royale,' the first novel about James Bond written by Fleming; Description of the house of Fleming in Jamaica where he wrote his books; Success of the James Bond films; Number of James Bond novels written by Fleming before he died; James Bond movies that were made after Fleming died. Contains a passing reference to Holmes. "...Ever since Sean Connery put away his quartermaster-issue hairpiece, the Bond films have been grotesque parodies of the novels and the character who, as Anthony Burgess argued in his introduction to the Coronet paperback editions of the Bond novels in 1985, is very nearly the equal of Sherlock Holmes. 'I know there are some who would deny that Fleming practised the literary art,' Burgess wrote. 'They are the aesthetic snobs who will not grant that the Sherlock Holmes stories are literature either... Both, as Shakespeare did, believed that fiction (drama or narrative) should be about well-defined characters in interesting situations.'...The Bond brand is owned by MGM/UA. So it is hardly surprising that other studios such as Paramount have tried, and failed, to create in Ethan Hunt (Mission: Impossible) and Jack Ryan (from the novels by Tom Clancy) own-brand characters to rival Bond. You might as well ask Inspector Lestrade to try to rival Sherlock Holmes...."

2246. Mackay, Jordan. "Bond plays on." Texas Monthly 26, no. 6 (1998): 84.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Profiles Raymond Benson, a Texas writer who wrote a James Bond novel. Books written by Benson about James Bond; Production outfit that developed the films of James Bond; Brief biography of Benson. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...After all, Fleming's Bond, who served in World War II, would be in his seventies today, and chances are he wouldn't resemble Pierce Brosnan. 'Sherlock Holmes stayed a Victorian-age character,' says Benson, 'and I think there's a lot to be said for that with Bond.'"

06F WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- OTHER SUBJECTS -- LITERARY PARALLELS AND COMPARISONS -- RUDYARD KIPLING (2)

2247. Blau, Peter E. "About Golf, and Rudyard Kipling, and Vermont, and Other Things." Shoso-In Bulletin 5, no. (1995): 8-13.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

2248. Wollen, Peter. "Kim: The More Things Change the More They Stay the Same." Emergences: Journal for the Study of Media & Composite Cultures 12, no. 1 (2002): 157-170.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Argues that an analysis of Rudyard Kipling's novel 'Kim,' is a metonym for processess of repetitive historical destruction. Relational nature of discipline; Joining of imagination and politics to enforce the discipline of futility; Overlapping of Kipling's story with the larger processes of destruction; Kipling's take on imperialism. Includes multiple references to Holmes.

06F WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- OTHER SUBJECTS -- LITERARY PARALLELS AND COMPARISONS -- SPOCK (STAR TREK) (1)

2249. Harada, Kakuko. "Holmes and Spock, how are they related?" Shoso-In Bulletin 5, no. (1995): 30-32.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

06F WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- OTHER SUBJECTS -- LITERARY PARALLELS AND COMPARISONS -- UMBERTO ECO (4)

2250. Levenson, Michael. "The critic as novelist." Wilson Quarterly 18, no. 1 (1994): 116.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Analyzes the works of literary critic and novelists Umberto Eco, Terry Eagleton, Susan Sontag and Julia Kristeva. Novel writing among literary critics; Idea of criticism as a science; Writes' ability to overcome the constraints of their theoretical past and the traditional division between creation and analysis. Includes references to Holmes. "...Once The Name of the Rose (1980) had become an international publishing sensation, nothing seemed more natural than that Eco the theorist should have found a home as a novelist. As a journalist for daily and weekly papers and as a distinguished professor, Eco wrote criticism that carried him into many disciplines across many centuries. He wrote about Thomas Aquinas and Superman; he studied the history of monsters and devised a theory of lists. When he began to put his novel together, he had the many resources of his large and eccentric knowledge. The history of the church, medieval philosophy, the Sherlock Holmes canons--all this, among much else could come into romping play in the form of a historical/detective/Biblical/philosophical mystery plot, where each murder shimmers across the centuries, from the Apocalypse to Dr. Watson....Eco says that when he writes his fiction, he leaves his critical self back in' the closet; let others play at explanation. But at least one of Eco's critical preoccupations--or their very nemesis--is clear. In both of his big novels, the signal event is the overreaching of interpretation. William of Baskerville--Eco's Holmes as philosophic Churchman--devises the most cunning explanation, based on his reading of the Apocalypse, to solve the murders of The Name of the Rose. But William fails. This, says Eco, is 'a mystery in which very little is discovered and the detective is defeated.'"

2251. Rice, Thomas J. "Mapping Complexity in the Fiction of Umberto Eco." Critique 44, no. 4 (2003): 349-368.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Examines the challenge posed by mapping complexity in Umberto Eco's novels, each of which is centrally concerned with map-making. Background on a growth in the complexity consciousness of industrialized societies; Discussion on the use of the Lynch-Jameson model of cognitive mapping to map the transition from the postmodern novel to the novel of complexity; Significance of an increased awareness of the arbitrary nature of physical and cognitive maps to the culturally emergent complexity consciousness. Includes passing references to Holmes. "...The central character of Adso's narrative, the Franciscan monk William of Baskerville, a fourteenth-century Sherlock Holmes, attempts to solve the mystery of a series of murders in an abbey by using his uncanny powers of deduction and an open-mindedness to the nascent wonders of modern science....Casaubon, who styles himself less as William of Baskerville's Sherlock Holmes and more as the 'Sam Spade of culture' in Eco's stunning conflation of Dashiell Hammett, film noir, Raiders of the Lost Ark, and the history of pseudo-intellectualism, ultimately leads the crew of modern-day Templars to assume that he and his associates possess the final clue, a 'message' that contains 'instructions, elaborately coded, on where to find the right map, which may have been specially drawn for the occasion'..."

2252. Rushing, Robert A. "From Monk to Monks: the End of Enjoyment in Umberto Eco's The Name of the Rose." Symposium 59, no. 2 (2005): 116-128.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents an article about the content of the detective fiction "The Name of the Rose," by Umberto Eco. Comments on the setting of the fiction; Emphasis of the story on the lives of monks in a monastery; Implications of the book for several social events in the Western Europe such as cultural upheavals in 1968. Contains multiple references to Doyle and Holmes.

2253. Vladiv-Glover, Slobodanka. "The Poetics of Pastiche in Eco's Postmodern Detective Novel." European Legacy 13, no. 1 (2008): 59-81.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes passing references to Doyle and Holmes.

06F WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- OTHER SUBJECTS -- LITERARY PARALLELS AND COMPARISONS -- VLADIMIR NABOKOV (2)

2254. Oakley, Helen. "Disturbing Design: Nabokov's Manipulation of the Detective Fiction Genre in Pale Fire and

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Despair." Journal of Popular Culture 36, no. 3 (2003): 480.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Vladimir Nabokov's role as a self-conscious and even postmodernist innovator has long been a benchmark of literary criticism. His debt to the detective fiction genre is clearly evident in much of his fiction. However, what remains to be investigated are the specific connections between Nabokov's work and the English literary heritage of the crime novel, which is often credited with its genesis in Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes stories of the nineteenth century, through to Agatha Christie's drawing-room dramas of the twentieth century. The significant increase in crime and the rapid technological advances of the nineteenth century contributed to the rise of the detective story, whose success to a large degree depended on its capacity to provide a reassuring rational framework at a time when society was growing increasingly turbulent. This article focuses on how Nabokov drew upon and inverted what had become well-known archetypes of the genre, and also the ways in which he exploded formulaic narrative patterns in order to destabilize the reader's relationship with the text.

2255. Rampton, David. "Nabokov and Chesterton." Nabokov Studies 8, no. (2004): 43-57.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Nabokov always discouraged source- and influence-hunting, routinely insisting that his predecessors and contemporaries had had little in the way of discernible effect on him. He even went out of his way to forestall precisely the sort of investigation that I am proposing here. In a 1965 interview, he spoke of his youthful admiration for a range of writers he characterizes as romantic-- Conan Doyle, Conrad, Kipling, Wilde, and Chesterton--but described his interest in them as a juvenile phase he quickly outgrew, noting that they are 'essentially writers for very young people' (Strong Opinions 57)...."

06F WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- OTHER SUBJECTS -- LITERARY PARALLELS AND COMPARISONS -- WILKIE COLLINS (2)

2256. Cavallaro, Rosanna. "Solution to Dissolution: Detective Fiction from Wilkie Collins to Gabriel García Márquez." Texas Journal of Women & the Law 15, no. 1 (2005): 1-41.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article examines the detective fiction written by Wilkie Collins and Gabriel Garcia Marquez. Includes multiple references to Doyle and Holmes.

2257. Liebman, Arthur, and David H. Galerstein. "The Sign of the Moonstone." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 2 (1994): 71-74.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Some observations on the influence of Wilkie Collins on Doyle and the parallels between Collins' The Moonstone and Doyle's The Sign of Four.

06F WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- OTHER SUBJECTS -- MORMONS AND MORMONISM (2)

2258. Bergem, Phillip G. "Arthur Conan Doyle: Connections to the Latter-Day Saints and Other Matters." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 54, no. 1 (2004): 39-42.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

2259. Weisberger, Bernard A. "What makes a marriage?" American Heritage 47, no. 7 (1996): 14.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Looks at the rise and extinction of polygamy among the Mormons, or the members of the Church of Jesus Christ of the Latter-Day Saints. Formal assertion of plural marriage as church doctrine in 1852; Polygamy as the symbolic focus of the struggle between Mormons and their enemies in the West; Biblical teachings about marriage and concubinage; Practices of polygamous husbands. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Anti-Mormon writers found that polygamy perfectly fitted a propaganda that painted Mormonism as a malign anti-Gentile conspiracy with secret armies and dastardly crimes. (See the first Sherlock Holmes novel, A Study in Scarlet, for an example.)..."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

06F WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- OTHER SUBJECTS -- MUSIC (6)

2260. Boyd, Martin. "Fictional fiddlers." Strad 107, no. 1273 (1996): 514.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the portrayal of violinists and violins in literature, with multiple references to Holmes and Doyle.
2261. Bradway, Jeffry Alan. "Upon the True Provenance of Sherlock Holmes's Stradivarius." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 46, no. 3 (1996): 30-33.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2262. Maycock, Roger, and David Rubin. "Web Page." Electronic Musician 17, no. 1 (2001): 32.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Features Web sites and other information technology developments relating to electronic sound recording in the United States as of January 2001. The web site of the month relates to Holmes. "As any fan of Sherlock Holmes knows, the great detective was an avid music enthusiast. Throughout Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's 60 Holmesian mysteries (referred to by the cognoscenti as the Canon), you'll find numerous references to composers and performers that the eccentric and erudite Victorian sleuth found appealing. For example, we learn in Bruce-Partington Plans that Holmes was a noted expert on the polyphonic motets of Orlando di Lasso. In The Red-Headed League, Holmes and Dr. Watson rush to hear Spanish composer and violin virtuoso Pablo de Sarasate. The grandiloquent gumshoe himself was no slouch when it came to playing the violin. On several occasions he played pieces by Mendelssohn and Offenbach while in the midst of his crime-solving escapades. If you'd like to learn more about Sherlock Holmes and his musical tastes, check out David Soucek's St. James's Hall Web page (www.bakerstreet221b.de/midi.htm). The site offers quotes from the Holmesian stories that include musical references. The text is followed by downloadable General MIDI files of the specific pieces mentioned in the stories or works by the composers whose names are sprinkled throughout the adventures."
2263. Olding, Alan C. "Holmes and the Violin." Shoso-In Bulletin 12, no. (2002): 69.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2264. Solito, Enrico. "A Study in Violin -- The Paneveggio Connection." Shoso-In Bulletin 12, no. (2002): 18-28.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2265. Sprague, David. "Nothin' like the reel thing." Billboard 108, no. 26 (1996): 68.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on developments in the soundtrack and film score segment of the sound recording industry in the United States as of June 29, 1996. Included is release of the album 'The Film Music of Miklos Rosza' with a Holmesian reference. "...Rosza is also showcased on Varese Sarabande's 'Sherlock Holmes: Classic Themes From 221B Baker Street,' which compiles new recordings of themes from six decades in the lensed life of the world's best-known detective. The label will target devotees of Holmesiana through fan magazines like Scarlet Street (editor Richard Valley wrote the liner notes), direct mailings, and Internet solicitations...."

06F WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- OTHER SUBJECTS -- NONCANONICAL CASES -- JACK THE RIPPER (9)

2266. Gowers, Rebecca. "What the cats' meat woman witnessed ; Rebecca Gowers on the fine art of murder and the rise of Ripperology; [FINAL Edition]." The Independent (London), Dec 31, 1994: 28.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The internal contradictions in [Melvin Harris]'s work are glaring. All that can be confidently deduced from this book is that [D'Onston Stephenson] was obsessed with the murders, and wished to thrill a few people with the possibility of his being the Ripper. Whether D'Onston believed it himself is unclear. Any of his actions tending to exonerate him are presented by Harris as devious smokescreens. His central argument is that D'Onston "was adamant that the killings were the sexually inspired deeds of a

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

sophisticated man, never the work of a madman. Only the killer himself could speak with such authority." Not only is this thesis alarmingly circular, but one is left hankering keenly for a definition of "mad".; The picture Harris builds up of a fetid Victorian underworld is fascinating, if patchy. This is typical of Ripper books. The best moments in [Philip Sugden]'s tome are occasional background details. He notes at one point the 17 people living in a house overlooking one of; the murder sites, including two girls employed in a cigar shop, two carmen, a little old lady maintained out of charity, a tennis boot maker, his mentally retarded son, and a woman running a "cats' meat shop". He catalogues one victim's many pockets, her two clay pipes, little tin of sugar and metal teaspoon. He produces records of the sometimes indifferent reactions of those who discovered the corpses, and the angry response of a watchman who slept through one killing: "thirteen long hours for 3 shillings and find your own coke". These pathetic particulars have an immediacy that nothing else in the book achieves. When Sugden tries to evoke "the old, half-fed, impoverished drabs [left] to crawl about from lamp to lamp until the first signs of dawn", he achieves none of the forlorn force of the "drab" allowed her own voice: "The people speak so kind and sympathisin' about the women he has killed and I'd not object to being ripped up by him to be talked about so nice after I'm dead."; In an interview five years after the Ripper murders he talked about the "Dear Boss" letter: "It may have been a hoax, but there were reasons to think it genuine. . . Holmes' plan would have been to reproduce the letters in fac-simile, and on each plate indicate briefly the peculiarities of the handwriting. Then publish these fac- similes in the leading newspapers . . . and offer a reward to any one who could show a letter or any specimen of the same handwriting. Such a course would have enlisted millions of people as detectives in the case." It is depressing to picture Sherlock Holmes attacking the problem in this way. The police had in fact published copies of the letter, but it merely inspired several hundred cranks to send them new disgusting variants. Nevertheless, as Sugden and Harris demonstrate, people are still enlisting to attempt to solve these murders.

2267. Joyce, Simon. "Sexual Politics and the Aesthetics of Crime: Oscar Wilde in the Nineties." ELH 69, no. 2 (2002): 501-523.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes references to Doyle and Holmes. "...Late Victorian readers could of course look to popular fiction--to Gothic novels, sensation fiction, and the Sherlock Holmes detective stories--for a more elevated style of criminality, or to newspaper accounts of Jack the Ripper: indeed, it became a commonplace of contemporary commentary to highlight how strikingly literary these murders appeared, with noticeable parallels to Poe, Sade, and especially to Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde (1886)....Such speculations about the Ripper's identity--and his presumed resemblance to other literary figures--suggest a renewed interest in crime as not only imaginative and aesthetic, but as the province of the privileged classes: by the turn of the century, for example, we get the first appearance of Raffles, E. W. Hornung's aristocratic cat burglar, to place alongside Dr. Jekyll, Dorian Gray, and all those hard-up minor aristocrats who usually turn out to be the culprits in Conan Doyle...." Note 7 includes a Holmes reference: In his Atlas of the European Novel, 1880-1900 (London: Verso, 1998), Franco Moretti points out the astonishing fact that Holmes only once ventures into the East End, and even this is presumably in the doppelganger story, "The Man with the Twisted Lip," in which the culprit turns out to be a bourgeois journalist disguised as a beggar (Moretti, 34).

2268. Kaplan, Robert. "Searching the Silver trail: Charles van Onselen, Joe Silver and Jack the Ripper." Australasian Psychiatry 15, no. 3 (2007): 217-221.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "South African historian Charles van Onselen's discovery of the identity of Jack the Ripper is described. The author was consulted by van Onselen during the writing of the latter's book, "The Fox and the Flies: Joe Silver, Racketeer and Psychopath", which suggested the identity of Jack the Ripper and was first published earlier this year." Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...The Ripper Murders, as they became known, represented not only a hitherto unique form of gynaeicide, seeming to epitomize the social prejudices of the era....The effect of the murders on public perception cannot be understated. They coincided with two significant literary events: the theatrical launching of Robert Louis Stevenson's Dr Jekyll and Mr Hyde, and the publishing debut of the greatest detective in history, Sherlock Holmes, in The Study in Scarlet by Arthur Conan Doyle, both perfect metaphors for the event...."

2269. Klett, Rex E., and Barbara Hoffert. "Book reviews: Fiction." Library Journal 122, no. 13 (1997): 139.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book Bloodguilty, by Raymond Thor (Danger. Aug. 1997. c.256p. ISBN 0-9658727-7-7. $23.95.) "Cryptic prose, wide-roving action, and breathless sensationalism characterize

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

this first novel. California publisher Harry Chrysler returns from a trip to London with a previously unknown diary of one Dr. John Watson, which proves not only that Watson and Sherlock Holmes really existed but also that they solved the Jack-the-Ripper case. Present-day evil forces related to the case now seek to acquire and destroy the diary, so Chrysler and investigative writer Dave Conway combine wits. Of possible interest to fans of Conan Doyle and followers of Jack the Ripper, but mostly derivative and superficial."

2270. Lawton, Lindl. "Ripper Snorter." Meanjin 61, no. 2 (2002): 85.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the motion picture 'From Hell,' directed by Alan Moore and starring Heather Graham and Johnny Depp. Unknown reference to Doyle or Holmes.

2271. Lithner, Klas. "How Jack the Ripper Was Caught--A Sherlockian Apocrypha in Swedish." Shoso-In Bulletin 3, no. (1993): 12-14.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

2272. Rawlins, Sharon. "Grades 5 & Up." School Library Journal 51, no. 12 (2005): 148.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a review with a reference to Holmes. Jubert, Herve. Dance of the Assassins. tr. from French by Anthea Bell. 396p. (The Devil's Dances Trilogy, Bk. #1). CIP.

HarperCollins/Eos. 2005. Tr $16.99, ISBN 0-06-077717-6; PLB $17.89. ISBN 0-06-077718-4. LC

2004028084. Gr 9 Up "Have Jack the Ripper, Montezuma, and other famous villains come alive to commit grisly murders? That's the question that Roberta, a sorceress in her 40s, and her 20-some thing assistant must determine in this futuristic fantasy/mystery novel. This first book in a projected trilogy takes place in a world in which virtual-reality theme parks have been created in London, Paris, Versailles, and Venice. Each city is set in a time from the 17th to the 19th century. Tourists wear period costumes and totally immerse themselves in that city's milieu. A wealthy man named Count Palladio has financed these re-creations and is suspected of being the mastermind behind a series of murderers committed by a group called the Killers' Quadrille. They are famous villains come back to life to do the Devil's bidding. The plotting is quite convoluted and involves, among other things, astral twins, telepathic hedgehogs, and babies comprised of organs taken from murdered women. The transitions from scene to scene are often abrupt. At times, the translation is awkward, resulting in melodramatic and laughable prose--'she let the warmth envelop her, savoring it like warm tangerine sauce,' Although there are no teen characters, the plot will appeal to fans of historical mysteries, fantasy, and forensic science. A few brief sexual situations and some graphic violence make the story more suitable for older teens. The author's pairing of elements from Sherlock Holmes and Harry Potter is unique but not completely successful."

2273. Rubinstein, William D. "The Hunt For Jack the Ripper." History Today 50, no. 5 (2000): 10.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the research and theories on the identity of the serial killer called Jack the Ripper who murdered five prostitutes in Whitechapel, London, England in 1888. Social and economic conditions in Whitechapel in 1888; Candidates for the true identity of the killer; Arguments about the 1992 discovery of the killer's alleged diaries. Includes passing references to Doyle and Holmes. "...The association of the Ripper with the London of Sherlock Holmes, with fogs, riverside opium dens, the haunts of prostitutes and criminals, virtually adjacent to great wealth and the aristocracy, is enticing to many....The notion that 'Jack' was actually 'Jill' surfaced early during the spate of killings themselves, and had an advocate of sorts in Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, who argued that the male killer was able to pass through Whitechapel disguised as a bloodstained midwife...."

2274. Swartz, Mim. "Trailing the path of London's infamous murderer | Steady nerves needed for Jack the Ripper tour." The San Diego Union - Tribune 1994.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

06F WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- OTHER SUBJECTS -- PERIODICALS (4)

2275. Johns, Ray. "Review--'The Sherlock Holmes Review' edited by Steven T. Doyle." The Ritual, no. 18 (1996): 72-73.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

2276. Lellenberg, Jon L. "The Origins of the Baker Street Journal Part I: Prehistory." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 46, no. 1 (1996): 20-30.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

2277. ———. "The Origins of the Baker Street Journal Part II: The Game Is Afoot." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 46, no. 2 (1996): 7-21.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

2278. Levin, Alfred A. "Author and Title Indices to Issues Vol. 1-13." Shoso-In Bulletin 14, no. (2004): 162-197.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

06F WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- OTHER SUBJECTS -- PHILATELY (3)

2279. Key, Jack D., Marc A. Shampo, and Robert A. Kyle. "Doyle, Holmes, and Watson--a 'Special' Trinity." Mayo Clinic proceedings 80, no. 6 (2005): 722-722.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "This article focuses on physicians Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, John Watson and William Sherlock Holmes. Arthur Conan Doyle was both a physician and a versatile author of historical novels, short stories, volumes of poems, plays, histories, science fiction, and publications on occult science. Holmes and Watson are 2 of the most immediately recognizable figures in popular culture. Their images have been adapted countless times for innumerable purposes. Biographical data concerning them can be drawn from the research efforts of Holmesian authorities. Arthur Conan Doyle, Sherlock Holmes, and John Watson were honored on a set of 4 stamps showing scenes from the adventures of Sherlock Holmes."

2280. Moss, Robert A. "Sherlock Holmes on Stamps." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 51, no. 1 (2001): 28-34.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

2281. Wood, Benton. "Philatelic Philandering (or Stamping Around with Sherlock Holmes)." Shoso-In Bulletin 4, no. (1994): 12-14.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

06F WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- OTHER SUBJECTS -- POETRY AND LIMERICKS (1)

2282. Ruber, Peter. "A Newly Discovered Sherlockian Poem by Vincent Starrett." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 46, no. 2 (1996): 23-26.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

06F WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- OTHER SUBJECTS -- PORNOGRAPHY (1)

2283. Klinger, Leslie S. "'Maybe you collect yourself, sir. . .': 'The Collection Mania in its Most Acute Form': A Checklist of Sherlockian Pornography." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 56, no. 4 (2006): 41-47.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

06F WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- OTHER SUBJECTS -- RESTAURANTS (1)

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

2284. Miles, Gary. "In Small-Market Edmonton, NHL Players Take a Hit in Western Canada, Life without Hockey is no Joke. And the Players are the Reason no One is Laughing." The Philadelphia Inquirer, October 19, 1994: D01.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...The Sherlock Holmes, a popular bar in this quaint downtown, has lost about $4,000 in business since the NHL shut down on Oct. 1....The Oilers were scheduled to host the Mighty Ducks of Anaheim tonight at the Northlands Coliseum. Instead, the fans at the Sherlock Holmes will be treated to bowling tournaments and dog shows on TV....The Sherlock Holmes is the kind of bar hockey players love. It is cozy, dark, friendly and within walking distance of their hotels. Indeed, the bar is within a weak slapshot of the Westin and the Hilton, the hotels where visiting teams and officials usually stay. The Sherlock Holmes also is strategically placed between two subway stops. So it is usually jammed with thirsty fans on their way to the games at the Coliseum, which just happens to be a short walk at the end of the line. In the back hall at the Sherlock Holmes, behind the grimy Oilers pennant, seven huge photo collages hang on the wall. Pictured there, among the hockey legends, are Wayne Gretzky and Michel Goulet at New Year's Eve and Halloween parties during happier times. This month, however, there have been no parties, and bartender Vanessa Bellamy couldn't decide whether she was more angry than troubled as a result of the lockout...."

06F WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- OTHER SUBJECTS -- SCOTLAND -- EDINBURGH (9)

2285. "Literary city." Writer 118, no. 2 (2005): 8-8.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports that the United Nations named the city of Edinburgh, Scotland as the world's first city of literature in late 2004. Writers who participated in the campaign for the city's designation; Expected impact of the award on the city. "The campaign was based not only on the city's contemporary authors, but on the fact that Edinburgh was also the home of such literary notables as Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, Sir Walter Scott, Robert Louis Stevenson and Robert Burns."

2286. "Value deal: Holmes defeats an arch-villain." York Daily Record, Dec 29, 1999: D.01.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "An 18th-century Scottish mansion where Sir Arthur Conan Doyle once lived was saved from a Big Mac attack when the city of Edinburgh slapped a preservation order on it. Fans of the Sherlock Holmes creator, alarmed to discover that McDonald's planned to build a burger restaurant on the site, appealed to city hall and won. 'This is wonderful news,' said Richard Lancelyn Green, a Conan Doyle expert and former chairman of the London-based Sherlock Holmes Society. 'Sherlock Holmes still has his magic, it seems.' So does good, old red meat. Agricultural officials say consumers are returning to meat counters, buying more pork and beef to put on their tables as a strong economy puts more money in their pockets to spend at the grocery store."

2287. "When Visiting." British Heritage 23, no. 3 (2002): 39.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents information on Edinburgh, Scotland. Location of the Conan Doyle Pub; Hotels and restaurants; Landmarks.

2288. Brown, Allan. "The curious case of old Conan Doyle." Sunday Times (London), August 22, 2004: 4.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Observations on Doyle, Edinburgh, the fate of various Doyle papers, the Christie's auction, Richard Lancelyn Green, Owen Dudley Edwards, and Charles Foley.

2289. Cameron, Lucinda. "Sherlock Holmes and Amazing Case of the Doctor Who Inspired Him; Conan Doyle Archive Material to Go on show for First Time." Daily Mail (London), April 17, 2006: 28.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses new exhibit in Edinburgh. "'A fantastically observant man', he was a doctor rather than a detective, though he did wear a deerstalker hat and cloak. Dr Joseph Bell even used a magnifying glass, although it is not clear whether he ever smoked a pipe. Now, fascinating archive material about to go on public display for the first time has revealed just how much of an inspiration he was for Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's famous detective...."

2290. Chalmers, John. "You write the festival reviews." The Independent (London), August 7, 2006: 20.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of the exhibit in Edinburgh, "Conan Doyle and Joseph Bell: The Real Sherlock Holmes," Surgeons' Hall Museums. "This is a small but fascinating exhibition on Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and his teacher, the surgeon Joseph Bell, who was his inspiration for Sherlock Holmes. Bell's ability to learn much about his patients simply from his powers of observation is legendary, and several examples are given in this show...."

2291. Donnelly, Brian. "Doors open free for St Andrew's Day." The Herald (Glasgow), November 14, 2007: 7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "More than 60 of Scotland's top visitor attractions will open their doors free of charge on St Andrew's Day, it was announced yesterday. Castles, museums, gardens and abbeys from Orkney to Dumfries and Galloway will all take part in the initiative designed to encourage Scots and tourists to celebrate Scotland's heritage and culture. Culture Minister Linda Fabiani, announcing the joint initiative by the National Trust for Scotland, Historic Scotland and the Association of Visitor Attractions, said: 'St Andrews Day is a day to celebrate Scotland.'...Ms. Fabiani made the announcement at the Royal College of Surgeons in Edinburgh which is hosting the Real Sherlock Holmes exhibition, one of the free attractions on St Andrew's Day...."
2292. Huntington, Tom. "Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's Edinburgh." British Heritage 23, no. 3 (2002): 33.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents the life and works of writer Sir Arthur Conan Doyle in Edinburgh, Scotland. Full name of Doyle; Alma mater of Doyle; Family background; Problems with alcoholism.
2293. Jamieson, Teddy. "Return to the Lost World of Conan Doyle; If you want to retrace the footsteps of Sherlock Holmes's creator in his native Edinburgh, you'll need to do a little detective work." The Herald (Glasgow), January 31, 2009: 12.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...Me, I'm trying to get my head round Conan Doyle's Edinburgh and [Allan] Foster, who's hugely knowledgeable and entertaining company, is the man to help me. Sherlock Holmes's creator was born in the city (in 1859, making this the 150th anniversary of his birth) and studied medicine here before leaving Scotland. Foster knows where Conan Doyle bought his books and where he took a drink. And this bright blue Monday morning he's agreed to show me around the Edinburgh that the author knew...."

06F WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- OTHER SUBJECTS -- SCOTLAND YARD (5)

2294. "Fingering the Culprit: Scotland Yard's Fingerprint Bureau." Baker Street West 17, no. 2 (2001): 23.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2295. "The Suspicions of Mr. Whicher." Publishers Weekly 255, no. 51 (2008): 49-49.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Kate Summerscale, read by Simon Vance. HighBridge Audio, unabridged, eight CDs, 10 hrs., $34.95 ISBN 978-1-59887-849-3. "Simon Vance does a fine job reading this unusually detailed and thoughtful true crime investigation into a notorious child murder case in 1860 London. At the time, there were only eight detectives working in England. Scotland Yard's top man was Insp. Jonathan Whicher, and he headed the investigation. Intertwined with the tale of detection in its infancy is a fascinating examination of the role played by this case and its inspector in the creation of the detective novel genre by the likes of Wilkie Collins, Edgar Allan Poe, Charles Dickens and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle...."
2296. Crelling, Jack. "Inspector Lestrade of Scotland Yard -- A Friend of Sherlock Holmes." The Camden House Journal 24, no. 2 (2002): 2-7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2297. ———. "Inspectors Gregson, Bradstreet and Hopkins of Scotland Yard." The Camden House Journal 26, no. 4 (2004): 2-5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2298. Ranger, Terence. "Scotland Yard in the Bush: Medicine Murders, Child Witches and the Construction of the Occult: a Literature Review." Africa 77, no. 2 (2007): 272-283.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article discusses the techniques employed by detective agency Scotland Yard in interpreting data related to occultism, child witchcraft, and exorcism in Africa. According to the author, Scotland Yard had previously adopted the attitudes of ignorance, skepticism, and credulity in investigating African occult. He asserts that the agency lacked scientific measures in identifying the causes of the criminal case. Includes references to Holmes. "In the Sherlock Holmes stories Scotland Yard famously does not deploy science or make use of all those studies of blood and ash and bone which Holmes himself had pioneered. But the Yard is never so clumsy as when the occult seems to be involved--with suspected vampires, spectral dogs, tribal fetishes....A forensic squad disinterred skeletons from a cemetery in Benin City to find a match for Adam's bones. Sherlock Holmes would have been impressed....A particularly telling example, which in many ways brings together everything I have been arguing, is David Pratten's The Man-Leopard Murders: history and society in colonial Nigeria (Pratten 2007). Pratten's wonderful title might well be that of a Sherlock Holmes murder mystery...."

06F WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- OTHER SUBJECTS -- SMOKING AND TOBACCO
(1)

2299. McKuras, Julie. "Pipes, Matches and Tobacco." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 4, no. 2 (2000): 1, 6.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses John Bennett Shaw's notebook of tobacco-related ephemera and his collection of matchbooks. Includes a photograph of Doyle on a cigarette card and two other photos of items from the collection.

06F WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- OTHER SUBJECTS -- SWITZERLAND (11)

2300. "Been there." The Daily Telegraph (London), December 1, 2001: 17.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Skiing in Meiringen, Switzerland. The Bernese Oberland and the Alps looked like meringues and whipped cream as we flew over them, but Meiringen, we were assured, has every reason to look like a meringue - they were invented here. Our genial host at the Park Hotel du Sauvage extolled the virtues of this pretty little town. Everyone from the Kaiser downwards paid a visit here in the last century and it was from here that Sherlock Holmes set out to meet Moriarty at the nearby Reichenbach Falls. There is even a Sherlock Holmes museum, a bronze statue and a hotel bearing his name...."

2301. "Into the falls." Economist 319, no. 7706 (1991): 88-88.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on the re-enactment by the London Sherlock Holmes Society of the tragic struggle between the literary detective Holmes and his arch-rival, Professor Moriarty, at Reichenbach Falls on May 4, 1991, exactly 100 years after the event. Description of the centenary pilgrimage; Familiarity with the canon of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's work; Details.

2302. "Travel: Grand Tour; Holmes falls for Moriarty (literally)." Independent on Sunday (London), May 5, 2002: 24.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Great writers and their adventures in Literature. This week, Arthur Conan Doyle kills off his hero....Arthur Conan Doyle, below, later resurrected his most famous character after protests from fans. Includes a brief biographical sketch of Doyle, an excerpt from "The Final Problem" and tourist information on London and tours to Switzerland.

2303. Bergquist, John. "100 Years Ago." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 5, no. 1 (2001): 2.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses a letter in the December, 1901 issue of The Strand magazine (#132, Vol. 22, labeled "Grand Christmas Double Number") contained in the "Curiosities" section titled "Where Sherlock Holmes Died" dealing with the Reichenbach Falls (along with additional comment on Dr. Philip Hench's later interest in the Falls).

2304. David, Daniela. "Making tracks in the snow." The Evening Post (Wellington), March 4, 2002: 15.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "A winter train journey through Switzerland catches the alpine towns at their snowy best and avoids the crowds....Near the expanse of Lake Brienz is Meiringen, the next stop on the rail tour. British author Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, who created Sherlock Holmes, stayed many times at the old Parkhotel du Sauvage. He used the residence as the backdrop for his book The Final Problem. The death of Sherlock Holmes' arch enemy, Moriarty, takes place at the Reichenbach Waterfalls...."
2305. Gore-Langton, Robert. "Holmes and away!" Daily Mail (London), September 4, 2004: 56-57.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Switzerland was where Sir Arthur Conan Doyle plotted the death of Sherlock Holmes. Sick of writing stories about the sleuth, the author, who was a keen hiker, travelled around Switzerland and decided to make the spectacular Reichenbach Falls, near the village of Meiringen, the place to bump off his great detective. And, so, on May 4, 1891, Holmes and his arch- enemy Professor Moriarty ('the Napoleon of crime') did battle on a tiny ledge at the top of the falls. They supposedly vanished into the raging torrent whose noise was like a 'half-human shout which came booming up with the spray out of the abyss'. The Reichenbach Falls are these days a shrine for fans of literature's famous character. A star marks the chilling spot from where Holmes fell...."
2306. Hanlon, Michael. "Sleuthing the case of statue in the square." The Toronto Star, October 4, 2003: no page citation.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Here I am in my room at the Parkhotel du Sauvage, indulging myself in Meiringen's two major pursuits. I'm munching on a meringue while at the same time gazing at Reichenbach Falls cascading down the mountain beyond my window. And, though I've been here only 24 hours, I've already solved both The Case of the Statue in the Square and The Mystery of the Bakery Window. My brilliant powers of observation and deduction of the statue's deerstalker cap, meerschaum pipe, and the astonishing likeness to the many Sherlock Holmeses we've seen on film, led me to conclude that the statue depicted none other than the Great Detective...."
2307. Hart, Jennifer. "Never Say Die: Sherlock Holmes and the Reichenbach Falls." The Washington Post, March 3, 2002: G12.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Letter to the editor. "To the Editor: Paul Richard's excellent story on J.M.W. Turner [Sunday Arts, Feb. 17] notes: 'In 1810 -- more than half a century before Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Moriarty plunged to their deaths there -- Turner sketched in Switzerland the dread Reichenbach Falls.' As nitpicky Holmesians know, in 'The Final Problem' (1893), Holmes and Moriarty do struggle in hand-to-hand combat on the edge of the falls and supposedly die there. Arthur Conan Doyle was tired of cranking out detective stories and had decided to use this epic battle between good and evil to kill off Holmes in a heroic way...."
2308. Hofmann, Paul. "Sherlock Holmes Inc." New York Times, May 1, 1994: A35.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Article concerning Meiringen, Switzerland, which built an industry around the detective's plunge into the Reichenbach Falls. The Anglican church which became the Sherlock Holmes Museum; Conan Doyle's Swiss home, an old castle in the town of Lucens; Museum exhibits.
2309. Kovacic, Chuck. "A Journey to Reichenbach." Baker Street West 13, no. 1 (1997): 16-22.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2310. Scott, Alistair. "On the trail of a super sleuth." Sunday Times (London), October 4, 1998: 5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Although not widely known among British skiers, the region of Meiringen-Hasliberg is beginning to gather a loyal following....A rather more arcane attraction of Meiringen is that it was the location Sir Arthur Conan Doyle chose for the death of his hero Sherlock Holmes. The old Anglican church here has now been turned into a Sherlock Holmes museum and an excursion can be made to the Reichenbach Falls, to see exactly where the famous sleuth died at the hands of his archenemy Moriarty...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

2311. Addy, John. "Two Lost Sherlockian Tales? An Examination of The Lost Special and The Man With the Watches." The Ritual, no. 23 (1999): 39-43.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2312. Jones, Philip K. "Codes for the Apocrypha and The Untold Tales." Shoso-In Bulletin 14, no. (2004): 103-104.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2313. Lithner, Klas. "How Jack the Ripper Was Caught--A Sherlockian Apocrypha in Swedish." Shoso-In Bulletin 3, no. (1993): 12-14.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2314. Scheetz, George H. "Sherlock Holmes (Book)." Library Journal 106, no. 3 (1981): 354.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'Sherlock Holmes: The Published Apocrypha,' by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and others.

06F WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- OTHER SUBJECTS -- THE STRAND MAGAZINE
(5)

2315. "The case of the immortal detective." Economist 333, no. 7895 (1994): 107-108.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Tells of the 'Strand,' a magazine published in Britain from 1891 to 1950. Some of the authors who appeared in it, including Arthur Conan Doyle; Some of the illustrators, including Sidney Paget; Obsequious treatment accorded to royalty; Lack of coverage of current affairs, except for politics.
2316. Beare, Geraldine. "The Strand Magazine - 1891-1950." Imaginative Book Illustration Society Newsletter, no.9, suppl, no. 9 (1998): 31-33.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A history of 'The Strand Magazine', a literary and general interest magazine published by George Newnes which made its first appearance in January 1891 and ran for nearly sixty years, being absorbed into 'Men Only' in 1950. The author discusses the writers and illustrators whose work was published in the magazine. Authors who wrote for 'The Strand' included Conan Doyle, E.W. Raffles, P.G. Wodehouse, H.G. Wells, John Buchan and Agatha Christie. Among the many illustrators whose work featured in the pages of the magazine were Charles Pears, Frank Reynolds, W.H., Charles and T.H. Robinson, E.H. Shepard, Gordon Browne, Dudley Hardy, Edward Ardizzone, Mervyn Peake, Robin Jacques, Ronald Searle and John Farleigh.
2317. Bergquist, John. "100 Years Ago." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 5, no. 1 (2001): 2.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses a letter in the December, 1901 issue of The Strand magazine (#132, Vol. 22, labeled "Grand Christmas Double Number") contained in the "Curiosities" section titled "Where Sherlock Holmes Died" dealing with the Reichenbach Falls (along with additional comment on Dr. Philip Hench's later interest in the Falls).
2318. Regan, Jim. "On the trail of the world's greatest consulting detective." Christian Science Monitor, December 28, 2005: 25.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Stanford University has a New Year's gift for you - and not just some virtual keepsake that disappears as soon as you move on to the next website, but a real, physical collection that can, if you so desire, be delivered to your mailbox and enjoyed in the relaxed solitude of your offline time. The Discovering Sherlock Holmes project wants to acquaint (or reacquaint) you with the life and times of world's greatest consulting detective, and it's making that introduction with the help of a few century-old stories - online and on paper...."
2319. Rose, Jonathan. "Was Capitalism Good for Victorian Literature?" Victorian Studies 46, no. 3 (2004): 489-501.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews Literature, Money and the Market from Trollope to Amis, by Paul Delany; pp. iii + 243. Basingstoke and New York: Palgrave Macmillan, 2002, GBP44.00, $49.95; The House of Blackwood: Author-Publisher Relations in the Victorian Era, by David Finkelstein; pp. viii + 198.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

University Park: Penn State University Press, 2002, $55.00; Oscar Wilde's Profession: Writing and the Culture Industry in the Late Nineteenth Century, by Josephine M. Guy and Ian Small; pp. x + 314. Oxford and New York: Oxford University Press, 2000, GBP55.00, $85.00; George Newnes and the New Journalism in Britain, 1880-1910: Culture and Profit, by Kate Jackson; pp. xi + 293. Aldershot and Burlington: Ashgate, 2001, GBP47.50, $84.95; Macmillan: A Publishing Tradition, edited by Elizabeth James; pp. xxvii + 273. Basingstoke and New York: Palgrave Macmillan, 2002, GBP50.00, $69.95. Includes references to Doyle and Holmes. "...That last statistic should have been a warning to Blackwood's: it was relying too much on its backlist rather than actively seeking new talent. The firm passed up the chance to sign on Shaw, Thomas Hardy, Arthur Conan Doyle, H. G. Wells, and Robert Louis Stevenson--one of the most impressive streaks of missed opportunities in publishing history....Strand Magazine, Newnes's most famous periodical, has been written off as quintessentially middlebrow, and so it was. But middlebrow journals, far from marginalizing avant-garde culture, can serve the vital role of broadcasting that culture to a mass audience. As early as 1913, the Strand was explaining Sigmund Freud's The Interpretation of Dreams (1900) to suburbanites. The magazine pioneered innovative black-and-white illustration techniques, publishing artists such as Sidney Paget (the Sherlock Holmes mysteries) and H. R. Millar (Edith Nesbit's stories)...."

06F WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- OTHER SUBJECTS -- TOASTS (20)

2320. Axford, W. Scott. "Toast for 'The Six Napoleons'." The Holmes & Watson Report 4, no. 2 (2000): 8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2321. Beiman, Nancy. "Toast to Mrs. Hudson." The Holmes & Watson Report 4, no. 2 (2000): 9.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2322. Brown, Lloyd W., Jr. "A Toast Given at the Hansom Wheels." The Holmes & Watson Report 4, no. 3 (2000): 30-31.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2323. Cavalluzzi, Carol. "Toast to Irene Adler." The Serpentine Muse 25, no. 4 (2009): 14.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2324. Crelling, Jack. "A Canonical Toast." The Camden House Journal 15, no. 5 (1993): 2.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2325. Dale, Doris. "Toast to Irene Adler." The Camden House Journal 18, no. 5 (1996): 2.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2326. Dale, Richard. "Toast -- William Stuart Baring-Gould." The Camden House Journal 15, no. 10 (1993): 3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2327. Fish, Ronald E. "Toast to Mycroft Holmes." The Holmes & Watson Report 5, no. 4 (2001): 20.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2328. Heifetz, Carl L. "Toast to Dr. Watson." The Holmes & Watson Report 6, no. 4 (2002): 24-25.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2329. ———. "A Toast to Murray, Watson's Courageous and Faithful Orderly." The Holmes & Watson Report 5, no. 3 (2001): 20-21.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2330. Izban, Donald B. "A Toast to Mrs. Hudson, or Mrs. Turner, or Both." Shoso-In Bulletin 5, no. (1995): 37.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

2331. ———. "A Toast to The Maiwand Mule." Shoso-In Bulletin 7, no. (1997): 75.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2332. ———. "A Toast to 'The Woman'." Shoso-In Bulletin 6, no. (1996): 35.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2333. Keefauver, Brad. "A Toast to William S. Baring-Gould." The Camden House Journal 17, no. 6 (1995): 2-3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2334. MacLachlan, Donald, Elliott M. Black, George A. Vanderburgh, Doug Elliott, Mark Hacksley, Rachel Alkally, and Rose Wilkins. "A Clinking of Toasts." Canadian Holmes 17, no. 3 (1994): 6-10.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presentation of "the third annual sampling of toasts from recent Sherlockian dinners from Montreal to Vancouver--and points south."
2335. Risley, Randall. "Toast -- Arthur Conan Doyle." The Camden House Journal 15, no. 10 (1993): 2.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2336. Skinion, Cathrine. "A Companionable Toast." The Camden House Journal 15, no. 5 (1993): 2.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2337. ———. "A Toast to Mrs. Hudson." The Camden House Journal 18, no. 5 (1996): 3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2338. Skinion, Signe. "A Toast to Miss Irene Adler." The Camden House Journal 18, no. 5 (1996): 2.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2339. Tinsley, Stan. "A Breakfast Toast: Mrs. Hudson." The Camden House Journal 15, no. 5 (1993): 3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

06F WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- OTHER SUBJECTS -- TRANSPORTATION (1)

2340. Brousch, John. "Ships Ahoy!--Vessels Within the Canon." The Holmes & Watson Report 5, no. 1 (2001): 11-15.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

06F WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- OTHER SUBJECTS -- UNTOLD TALES (1)

2341. Jones, Philip K. "Codes for the Apocrypha and The Untold Tales." Shoso-In Bulletin 14, no. (2004): 103-104.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

06F WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- OTHER SUBJECTS -- UNTOLD TALES AND DR. WATSON'S TIN DISPATCH-BOX (1)

2342. Owen, Morris. "A Safe Affair: One of the cases of Sherlock Holmes Not hitherto related." Shoso-In Bulletin 14, no. (2004): 69-76.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

06F WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- OTHER SUBJECTS -- UNTOLD TALES AND DR. WATSON'S TIN DISPATCH-BOX -- ALICIA (2)

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

2343. Hall, John. "The disappearance of the Cutter Alicia." Shoso-In Bulletin 12, no. (2002): 43-53.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

2344. ———. "The loss of the cutter 'Alicia'." Shoso-In Bulletin 5, no. (1995): 19-22.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

06F WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- OTHER SUBJECTS -- UNTOLD TALES AND DR. WATSON'S TIN DISPATCH-BOX -- JAMES PHILLIMORE (1)

2345. Hall, John. "The disappearance of Mr. James Phillimore." Shoso-In Bulletin 4, no. (1994): 19-28.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

06F WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- OTHER SUBJECTS -- WEAPONS (GUNS, FIREARMS, KNIVES, ETC.) (3)

2346. Bensley, D. F. "A Question of Ballistics?" Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 3 (1994): 173-78.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents some observations on Holmes' interest in firearms, munitions, and marksmanship as related in a number of the tales and during the time of the Great Hiatus.
2347. Murphy Jr, John F. "For 60 years the dependable Webley revolver was the British officer's strong right arm." Military History 20, no. 3 (2003): 24.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on revolvers from Webley Co. used by British armed servicemen since 1854. Story about former Prime Minister Winston Churchill's experiences with the revolver in the Indian frontier; Design of the Webley RIC model in 1883; Information on Webley automatic pistols. Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...In 1883, Webley brought out an even shorter variant of the RIC model, with a 2 1/2-inch barrel. This was issued to London's Metropolitan Police, headquartered at Scotland Yard, in .45 and later in .32 and .38 calibers. Called the Bulldog, the Metropolitan Police Webley gained immortality in detective fiction as the gun of choice of Arthur Conan Doyle's heroes, Sherlock Holmes and Dr. John Watson, as well as their police ally, Inspector Lestrade...."
2348. Petkus, Donald A. "Bull Pups, Bulldogs and Annie Oakley: a re-examination of dogs and firearms in the Canon." Baker Street West 19, no. 1 (2003): 26-35.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

06F WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- OTHER SUBJECTS -- WEDDINGS (1)

2349. Chapman, Paul M. "'I Really Cannot Congratulate You': Weddings in the Canon." The Ritual, no. 17 (1996): 8-14.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

06F WRITINGS ABOUT THE WRITINGS -- OTHER SUBJECTS -- WINE (1)

2350. Klinger, Leslie S. "Some Canonical Observations on Wine." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 2 (1994): 109-113.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The author throws some additional light on the subject of wine, as found in two tales: The Abbey Grange and A Case of Identity.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

07 SHERLOCKIANS AND THE SOCIETIES -- GENERAL AND MISCELLANEOUS (109)

2351. "Holmes's popularity elementary." The Ottawa Citizen, November 18, 1995: H9.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Here's a mystery Sherlock Holmes would love. In a world of DNA testing, forensic pathology and court television, why does a century-old fictional detective armed only with deductive reasoning still hold readers spellbound? 'Partly it's the same appeal that any superhero has,' says Chris Redmond of University of Waterloo, author of In Bed With Sherlock Holmes. 'And partly, it's just the joy of reading very well-written stories.' About 100 fans of the late 19th-century London sleuth will gather today at a downtown Indianapolis hotel for a two-day Sherlock Holmes symposium...."
2352. "News & Notes." Canadian Holmes 26, no. 3 (2003): 56-59.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // News and notes from the Sherlockian world.
2353. "News & Notes." Canadian Holmes 25, no. 3 (2002): 44-47.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // News and notes from the Sherlockian world.
2354. "News & Notes." Canadian Holmes 25, no. 4 (2002): 44-47.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // News and notes from the Sherlockian world.
2355. "News & Notes." Canadian Holmes 26, no. 1 (2002): 44-47.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // News and notes from the Sherlockian world.
2356. "News & Notes." Canadian Holmes 26, no. 2 (2002): 45-47.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // News and notes from the Sherlockian world.
2357. "News & Notes." Canadian Holmes 25, no. 2 (2001): 37-40.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // News and notes from the Sherlockian world.
2358. "News & Notes." Canadian Holmes 23, no. 3 (2000): 54-59.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // News and notes from the Sherlockian world.
2359. "News & Notes." Canadian Holmes 24, no. 1 (2000): 48-51.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // News and notes from the Sherlockian world.
2360. "News & Notes." Canadian Holmes 22, no. 4 (1999): 47-49.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // News and notes from the Sherlockian world.
2361. "News & Notes." Canadian Holmes 23, no. 1 (1999): 48-50.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // News and notes from the Sherlockian world.
2362. "News & Notes." Canadian Holmes 23, no. 2 (1999): 46-47.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // News and notes from the Sherlockian world.
2363. "News and Notes." Canadian Holmes 30, no. 4 (2007): 38-40.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // News and notes from the Sherlockian world.
2364. "News Notes." Canadian Holmes 30, no. 3 (2007): 59-63.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // News and notes from the Sherlockian world.
2365. "News Notes." Canadian Holmes 29, no. 3 (2006): 39-43.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // News and notes from the Sherlockian world.
2366. "News Notes." Canadian Holmes 29, no. 4 (2006): 44-46.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // News and notes from the Sherlockian world.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

2367. "News Notes." Canadian Holmes 30, no. 1 (2006): 56-59.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // News and notes from the Sherlockian world.
2368. "News Notes." Canadian Holmes 30, no. 2 (2006): 51-55.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // News and notes from the Sherlockian world.
2369. "News Notes." Canadian Holmes 28, no. 3 (2005): 42-45.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // News and notes from the Sherlockian world.
2370. "News Notes." Canadian Holmes 28, no. 4 (2005): 38-42.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // News and notes from the Sherlockian world.
2371. "News Notes." Canadian Holmes 29, no. 1 (2005): 37-38.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // News and notes from the Sherlockian world.
2372. "News Notes." Canadian Holmes 29, no. 2 (2005): 53-59.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // News and notes from the Sherlockian world.
2373. "News Notes." Canadian Holmes 27, no. 3 (2004): 42-43.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // News and notes from the Sherlockian world.
2374. "News Notes." Canadian Holmes 27, no. 4 (2004): 49-52.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // News and notes from the Sherlockian world.
2375. "News Notes." Canadian Holmes 28, no. 1 (2004): 47-51.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // News and notes from the Sherlockian world.
2376. "News Notes." Canadian Holmes 26, no. 4 (2003): 49-51.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // News and notes from the Sherlockian world.
2377. "News Notes." Canadian Holmes 27, no. 1 (2003): 49-51.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // News and notes from the Sherlockian world.
2378. "News Notes." Canadian Holmes 27, no. 2 (2003): 42-43.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // News and notes from the Sherlockian world.
2379. "News Notes." Canadian Holmes 24, no. 3 (2001): 55-59.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // News and notes from the Sherlockian world.
2380. "News Notes." Canadian Holmes 24, no. 4 (2001): 35-39.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // News and notes from the Sherlockian world.
2381. "News Notes." Canadian Holmes 25, no. 1 (2001): 56-59.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // News and notes from the Sherlockian world.
2382. "News Notes." Canadian Holmes 23, no. 4 (2000): 41-42.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // News and notes from the Sherlockian world.
2383. "News Notes." Canadian Holmes 24, no. 2 (2000): 46-47.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // News and notes from the Sherlockian world.
2384. "News Notes." Canadian Holmes 19, no. 3 (1996): 42-47.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // News and notes from the Sherlockian world.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

2385. "News Notes." Canadian Holmes 19, no. 4 (1996): 44-46.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // News and notes from the Sherlockian world.
2386. "News Notes." Canadian Holmes 18, no. 3 (1995): 47-51.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // News and notes from the Sherlockian world.
2387. "News Notes." Canadian Holmes 18, no. 4 (1995): 48-51.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // News and notes from the Sherlockian world.
2388. "News Notes." Canadian Holmes 19, no. 1 (1995): 62-63.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // News and notes from the Sherlockian world.
2389. "News Notes." Canadian Holmes 19, no. 2 (1995): 46-49.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // News and notes from the Sherlockian world.
2390. "News Notes." Canadian Holmes 17, no. 4 (1994): 49-51.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // News and notes from the Sherlockian world.
2391. "News Notes." Canadian Holmes 18, no. 1 (1994): 49-51.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // News and notes from the Sherlockian world.
2392. "News Notes." Canadian Holmes 18, no. 2 (1994): 47-51.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // News and notes from the Sherlockian world.
2393. "News Notes." Canadian Holmes 17, no. 1 (1993): 44-47.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // News and notes from the Sherlockian world.
2394. "News Notes." Canadian Holmes 17, no. 2 (1993): 44-47.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // News and notes from the Sherlockian world.
2395. "Remembrances." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 5, no. 1 (2001): 8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Notes the contributions made by donors in supporting the Sherlock Holmes Collections, either in honor or in memory of special persons.
2396. "Remembrances." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 5, no. 2 (2001): 8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Notes the contributions made by donors in supporting the Sherlock Holmes Collections, either in honor or in memory of special persons.
2397. "The Sherlock Holmes exhibition." Festival Times 1, no. 5 (1990): 10-12.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A report on the Festival of Britain 'Sherlock Holmes' exhibition, held at Abbey House, Baker Street, London, 22 May-22 September 1951.
2398. "Using the Sherlock Holmes Collections." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 5, no. 1 (2001): 8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Notes the recent visit of Luci Zahray accompanied by her good friend who writes under the name Mary Monica Pulver. Mary Monica also has a current mystery series written under the name of Monica Ferris, which includes Crewel World, Framed in Lace, and A Stitch in Time, and features her character Betsy Devonshire. While touring the Collections, Mary Monica was inspired, and has planned a future book featuring the Elmer L. Andersen Library and Betsy Devonshire. Randall Stock's return research visit in December is also noted. Includes a photograph of Mary Monica Pulver, Luci Zahray, and Tim Johnson.
2399. Alkally, Rachel. "United by a common quest." The Gazette (Montreal), Jan 22, 2005: H6.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Fortunately, I was not alone on my quest; I was the tag-along of Professor

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- Graeme Decarie, who had been invited as a result of his Sherlockian-related comments in the newspaper. A lone fan of the Victorian detective since childhood, lost in a sea of Nancy Drew and Hardy Boys aficionados, I was looking forward, apprehensively, to meeting like-minded folk. Would they be a wizened group of doddering old men and women, dressed in 19th-century costume, querulously picking at the 56 short stories and four novels that make up The Canon, the 'bible' of Sherlockian scholars? Or a collection of ex-hippies living in fantasyland? The current hot topic - sure to be debated at several meetings - is the mysterious death, in London, England, of Richard Lancelyn Green, the foremost Sherlockian scholar, a mystery worthy of the best detecting abilities of Sherlock Holmes, who, as every devotee knows, is alive and well and tending his bees on the Sussex Downs. Which is why every world-wide Sherlockian society from London to Tokyo celebrates his Jan. 6 birthday sometime this month with festive dinners - Victorian costumes welcome."
2400. Barnes, Bill. "Report on Sherlockian Activities in Australia for 2002." Shoso-In Bulletin 13, no. (2003): 147-150.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2401. Berdan, Marshall S. "Elementary, My Dear Tourist: 100 years after his official retirement, Sherlock Holmes still draws supporters and supplicants to London's Baker Street." Shoso-In Bulletin 13, no. (2003): 31-36, 43.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2402. Berry, John. "Program picks & pans." Library Journal 120, no. 10 (1995): 46.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Previews the American Library Association's 114th Annual Conference in Chicago, June 22-28, 1995, with reference to Doyle and Holmes. Ely M. Liebow (Dr. Joe Bell: Model for Sherlock Holmes); Let a Woman in Your Life: The Women in Conan Doyle's Life and Fiction. Sublibrarians Scion of the Baker Street Irregulars.
2403. Blau, Peter E. "East and West Have Met -- Sherlockian Friendships Between the United States and Japan." Shoso-In Bulletin 8, no. (1998): 223-228.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2404. Calamai, Peter. "Holmes's attraction? Elementary." The Ottawa Citizen, September 16, 1995: B6.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "In 1891, when Sherlock Holmes plunged over Reichenbach Falls in Switzerland to his seeming death, the news didn't reach the London newspapers for four days. When Jeremy Brett, his most memorable portrayer, died this week in London, the news didn't make papers here for three days. Appearances, however, are deceiving. Brett's death may have seen print in the New York Times and the Citizen only on Thursday, but it flashed around the world via the Internet at 3:28 p.m. Tuesday. And the recipients of that first message, a group called the Hounds of the Internet, reacted just as Londoners had a century earlier. They put on black armbands of mourning...."
2405. ———. "Tracking Down the Authentic Sherlock Holmes." The Toronto Star, January 24, 1999: 1.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Baffled by the talk of fellow passengers on an elevator at the fabled Algonquin Hotel, the 30-something woman blurted out, 'Are you here for some sort of conference?' 'Yes,' replied Dr. George Vanderburgh, a family physician from Shelburne, northwest of Toronto. 'We're all Sherlockians, people who admire Sherlock Holmes.' The woman scrunched her brow. 'You mean, you sit around and read the stories together?' Not quite. This annual gathering of several hundred devoted Sherlockians every January in New York is much more an exercise in contemporary idolatry than a study of Victorian literature...."
2406. Cochran, William R. "From the Editor's Commonplace Book." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 1 (1994): 62-63.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // On the demise of the periodical Baker Street Miscellanea, Julie and Al Rosenblatt's 4-day mini-course on Holmes at Vassar College, an article in MHQ by Thaddeus Holt, the Folio Society's version of the Canon, the 25th anniversary of the Noble Bachelors of St. Louis, the Sherlock Holmes Society of London's "Back to Baker Street" festival, and the Books of Michael Harrison.
2407. Cox, Jim. "Holmes West Dispatch: A review of the September '97 Los Angeles Holmes Conference." Baker Street West 1 4, no. 1 (1998): 27-29, 31.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

2408. Downie, Richard. "Carruthers at the crease." The Daily Telegraph (London), June 11, 2001: 20.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "While England resumed hostilities with Australia on the cricket field yesterday, an equally keenly-contested fixture was being resolved on the green at West Wycombe, Buckinghamshire. Hal Cazalet, the grandson of P G Wodehouse and a member of the Wodehouse XI, took to the field against Rik Grandia and his Sherlock Holmes team in the annual game between the two sides. The teams, sporting Victorian costumes and playing to the 1895 laws of cricket, contested a rain-affected game. Flapping beards, unwieldy hats and a stiff breeze combined to keep flowing shots to a minimum. Dutch-born Mr Grandia, who dressed as Carruthers, a character from the Sherlock Holmes novels, admitted that he hardly understood the rules."
2409. Fish, Carol, and Ronald E. Fish. "The Baskerville Bash 2004." The Serpentine Muse 20, no. 2 (2004): 6-7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2410. Hafner, Katie. "Online on a shoestring." Newsweek 125, no. 10 (1995): 73.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Looks at how bulletin-board systems (BBS) are coming into their own in the computer world. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...BBSes are dedicated to every topic imaginable, from paganism to guns to Sherlock Holmes...." Also included is a "BBS Sampler" that notes Sherlocktron of San Clemente, Calif. "This one-modem BBS is devoted to, you guessed it, Sherlock Holmes. Three online databases point you to 600 Sherlock Holmes societies worldwide, a list of publications on the uber-sleuth and contacts for about 400 sellers of souvenirs."
2411. Hall, John. "Review--'Sherlock Holmes in Japan' by Keith E. Webb." The Ritual, no. 22 (1998): 73-74.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2412. Hirayama, Yuichi, and Hiroko Hirayama. "Revisit to the Sherlock Holmes Museum." Shoso-In Bulletin 4, no. (1994): 101-107.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2413. Hobbs, Don. "Sherlocking at The Gasfitter's Ball." The Holmes & Watson Report 8, no. 5 (2004): 12-13.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2414. ———. "Sherlocking in Devonshire, England." The Holmes & Watson Report 5, no. 4 (2001): 7-11.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2415. ———. "Sherlocking With Carole Nelson Douglas." The Holmes & Watson Report 6, no. 5 (2002): 5-10.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2416. ———. "Sherlocking With Larry McMurtry." The Holmes & Watson Report 4, no. 6 (2001): 39-41.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2417. ———. "Sherlocking with the Kinkster." The Holmes & Watson Report 3, no. 5 (1999): 11-13.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2418. ———. "Were the Beatles Holmesians?" The Holmes & Watson Report 2, no. 5 (1998): 18-20.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2419. Hughes, Mel. "1995: Year of Losses, Year of Gains." Shoso-In Bulletin 6, no. (1996): 5-6.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2420. Hustak, Alan. "A double dose of Sherlock Holmes." The Gazette (Montreal), June 2, 2000: D1.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Sherlockians unite! Sherlock Holmes will be put under the magnifying glass during a three-day colloquium that begins today at the Montreal Amateur Athletic Association's clubhouse."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

About 50 of the world's leading authorities are meeting here to talk about England's most famous fictional detective and his faithful companion, Dr. John Watson. The seminar, which is closed to the public, is being sponsored by the Bimetallic Question, Montreal's chapter of the international Sherlock Holmes Society...."

2421. Johnson, Timothy J. "An Update from the Collections." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 4, no. 4 (2000): 4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on the status of the cataloging project funded by the Hubbs family and on a gift by Mary McDiarmid towards the endowed curator position.
2422. Keefauver, Brad. "A Shy Person's Guide to Making Conversation at a Sherlockian Function." The Holmes & Watson Report 1, no. 6 (1998): 13-16.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2423. Kegley, Jerry. "Immortalized in Bronze: The London Statue Dedication." Baker Street West 16, no. 1 (2000): 38-41.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2424. ———. "It's Elementary! Bringing Sherlock Holmes to the Youth of Southern California." Baker Street West 19, no. 1 (2003): 22-25.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2425. Lindvall, Robert. "Sherlock Holmes in Milwaukee." Shoso-In Bulletin 9, no. (1999): 135-141.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2426. MacDonald, Gayle. "The case of the perennial sleuth; He sniffed out his first clues more than a century ago. But to fans around the world, reports Gayle MacDonald, understanding Sherlockmania is still elementary." The Globe and Mail (Toronto), January 2, 2002: R1.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...Of the great fictional characters in literature, Sherlock Holmes is one of the most enduring. With his calabash pipe and deerstalker cap, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's super sleuth has inspired countless films, books and journals dedicated to the world's most famous logician, the man who could always figure out whodunit. He has also inspired no end of magazine articles, TV shows, plays, comics, pubs, museums, festivals, conventions -- even fine bone china, in the form of Royal Doulton bookends that retail for about $300. And there are over 100 so-called Sherlock scion societies, in almost every major city in the world, dedicated to the study of what might just be the most famous man who never lived -- and his avuncular sidekick, Dr. Watson. For years, diehard Sherlockians have met monthly to dine, wine and mull over the many facets of the great detective...."
2427. McKuras, Julie. "Community Support for the Collections." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 4, no. 4 (2000): 5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Highlights the support of Mike McKuras and his volunteer work on the Friends board and the additional support of Ecolab, Inc. Also reports on a visit from a member of Ecolab's Community Relations Department, Cheryl Budewitz, to the Collections. Includes a photograph of Cheryl and Tim Johnson during her visit.
2428. ———. "Musings." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 5, no. 2 (2001): 4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Some observations on the writers and articles in this issue of the newsletter.
2429. ———. "Musings." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 4, no. 4 (2000): 4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Some observations on the arrival of the Paton Collection, other articles in the newsletter, the identity of "A.M." as Arthur Mee, and a correction to include Jon Lellenberg on the editorial board.
2430. Olding, Alan C. "150th Birthday Celebration in Adelaide." Shoso-In Bulletin 14, no. (2004): 138-139.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

2431. Pollak, Michael. "They Came to Honor Mr. Holmes. Or So, at Least, They Claimed." The New York Times, January 16, 2000: 6.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The setting--Upstairs at O'Casey's restaurant on East 41st Street, 40 dedicated Sherlock Holmes fans gathered Wednesday to celebrate the world's supreme detective and the 146th anniversary of his birth, said to be Jan. 6. The dinner -- only one deerstalker cap in attendance -- was a warm-up to four days of Holmes festivities in Manhattan, including staged readings, scholarly papers presented by the venerable Baker Street Irregulars and a costume dinner, the Baskerville Bash. Wednesday's event was sponsored by the Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes, founded in 1965 because the Irregulars wouldn't admit women. (They have since relented.)..."
2432. ———. "Unraveling the Mysteries of Sherlock Holmes." The New York Times, December 2, 1999: G13.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "What would Sherlock have thought of the Internet? Its spreadsheets would have been invaluable time-savers (for correlating soil colors and granulations by London neighborhoods, for instance; or trouser threads by manufacturer and tailor). He would have found it quite useful as a library and a correspondence tool, if only for cataloging and exposing the mistakes of others. As a code-breaker, it would have been entirely unnecessary; his own intellect was enough. As biography, he would have declared it absolute rubbish. But that is only what Sherlock Holmes himself would have thought. For more than a century, Holmes devotees have been enthusiastically filling the gaps left by the incomplete journals of Dr. John H. Watson, Holmes's friend and chronicler, and they have lost no time putting their speculations online. Sherlockian trivia is legendary, and since 'obsessive' would be Holmes's middle name if he had one, there is no shortage of Web sites. One of the most comprehensive sites is at Yoxley Old Place..."
2433. Raymond, Trevor S. "Traces of Bootprints: Are we still having fun?" Canadian Holmes 17, no. 4 (1994): 1-3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Thoughts on "playing the Game" prompted by a review of The Oxford Sherlock Holmes.
2434. Roden, Barbara. "A Bootmaker Abroad." Canadian Holmes 17, no. 3 (1994): 30-32.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Expatriate Master Bootmaker Barbara Roden sends her regular report on news and activities of interest to followers of the great detective and his creator."
2435. Roden, Christopher. "Little things." The Sunday Times (London), May 11, 1997: 2.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Letter to the editor. "I have to take issue with Sheridan Morley that Terry Manners's biography of Jeremy Brett is 'coolly expert and chillingly excellent' (April 27). In his acknowledgments, Manners notes: 'But to those who, for reasons best known to themselves, did not contribute to remembering Jeremy, I say thank you. You made me even more determined to tell his true story.' Manners admits that he was unable to obtain the views of a number of people who could have spoken authoritatively on the subject. Without those views, his book cannot be considered expert. He also records that The Sherlock Holmes Society of London has 50,000 members; it has 1,000. Morley's review is his own assessment of Brett's life, but here, too, there is a significant error. He writes, 'with the deaths of his early lover Gary Bond (of Aids) and (Robert) Stephens, he (Brett) saw little point in survival'. Stephens died on November 12, 1995, two months after Brett. Some might consider these trivial points, but, as Holmes said, 'It has long been an axiom of mine that the little things are infinitely the most important'." Christopher Roden. The Sir Arthur Conan Doyle Society. Canada
2436. Ross, Michael. "Sherlock Holmes in Germany 1999." Shoso-In Bulletin 10, no. (2000): 174-176.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2437. Solito, Enrico. "Sherlock Holmes and Italy." Shoso-In Bulletin 10, no. (2000): 179-182.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2438. ———. "Sherlockiana in Italy 2000." Shoso-In Bulletin 11, no. (2001): 206-208.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

2439. Southworth, Bruce E. "Musings." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 2, no. 3 (1998): 5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reflects on the recently held "Founders' Footprints" conference, the advisory committee meeting, the Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections membership meeting, and the arrival of Tim Johnson as the new curator.
2440. ———. "Musings." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 1, no. 4 (1997): 4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Comments on the various articles appearing in this issue of the newsletter, with additional commentary on the 1894 photograph of Doyle noted in previous issues, additional information on the identity of Frances Crane, and a note on the election of Julie McKuras as the new president of the Norwegian Explorers.
2441. ———. "Musings from the Writing Table." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 1, no. 3 (1997): 4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the two mysteries posed by articles in this issue of the newsletter, highlights other items from the newsletter, and thanks those who have sent materials or financial contributions to the Collections.
2442. Stampe, Mia. "Holmes in Scandinavia 2000." Shoso-In Bulletin 11, no. (2001): 212-214.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2443. Stampe, Mia, and Mattias Bostrom. "Sherlock Holmes in Scandinavia 2002." Shoso-In Bulletin 13, no. (2003): 153-155.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2444. Stampe, Mia, Nils Nordberg, and Mattias Bostrom. "Sherlock Holmes in Scandinavia 2001." Shoso-In Bulletin 12, no. (2002): 186-190.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2445. Strebeigh, Fred. "To His Modern Fans, Sherlock is Still Worth a Close Look." Smithsonian 17, no. 9 (1986): 60-66, 68-69.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Author of historical works and of studies of spiritualism, British physician Arthur Conan Doyle (1859-1930) is remembered chiefly for his prolific outpouring of detective stories about the fictional Sherlock Holmes, who, in the century after the first tale was published, remains a hero to his fans around the world, most particularly in the United States.
2446. Sveum, Richard J. "Advisory Committee Meeting." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 2, no. 3 (1998): 4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on the Sherlock Holmes Collections advisory committee meeting held on August 7th.
2447. ———. "Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections: a word from Dr. Richard Sveum, President." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 1, no. 1 (1997): 4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections and the inaugural newsletter for the collections.
2448. ———. "From The President." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 5, no. 3 (2001): 4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A brief report on the June 30, 2001 annual membership meeting of the Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections including the announced goal of establishing an endowed curatorship in honor and memory of E. W. McDiarmid.
2449. ———. "From the President." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 2, no. 1 (1998): 4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Notes appointment of Timothy J. Johnson as the new curator of Special Collections, the construction of the new Minnesota Library Archives and Access Center, and a reminder of the membership meeting of the Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections on August 7th.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

2450. ———. "From the President." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 2, no. 2 (1998): 7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Notes the upcoming annual meeting of the Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections, the acquisition of the Norman Schatell archives, and the ongoing desire to collection scion society materials and John Bennett Shaw correspondence.
2451. ———. "From the President." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 2, no. 3 (1998): 7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Recaps the activities of the Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections during the "Founders' Footprints" conference.
2452. ———. "A Word from our President." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 2, no. 4 (1998): 3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Notes his visit with David and Audrey Hammer and the many donations of correspondence with John Bennett Shaw and back issues of periodicals that have been received by the Collections.
2453. ———. "A Word from our President." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 1, no. 3 (1997): 5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Comments on the various activities of the Friends of the Holmes Collections and the University of Minnesota Libraries, including materials and gifts received for the Collections, securing a new curator, construction of the new Library Access Center, and the upcoming membership meeting.
2454. Tanaka, Kiyoshi. "Holmes Related Events Held in Japan, Centering on the Holmes Exhibition and Dramas." Shoso-In Bulletin 8, no. (1998): 173-175.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2455. Trelford, Donald. "Trelford On Thursday: Illingworth rattling the chain." The Daily Telegraph (London), Nov 24, 1994: 32.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Elementary, my dear [Trelford], writes Nick Utechin of my request for further and better particulars about the rugby career of John Watson, MD. Did he play for Rosslyn Park or Blackheath?; This is to be found in 'The Sussex Vampire,' a story in 'The Casebook of Sherlock Holmes,' where Robert Ferguson, recently returned from South America, writes to Holmes expressing the fear that his wife, a Peruvian beauty, may be a vampire, and adds a postscript: "I believe that your friend Watson played rugby for Blackheath when I was three-quarter for Richmond."; The most authoritative confirmation comes from H M Brodie, archivist at Blackheath RFC, who says a framed likeness of Dr Watson (taken, presumably, from a book illustration) hangs in the clubhouse at Rectory Field. He adds that a Blackheath shirt and other mementos are on show at the Sherlock Holmes Museum at Meiringen in Switzerland.
2456. Ueda, Hirotaka, Kiyoshi Arai, and Eiichi Nakahara. "Introduction of Sherlock Holmes in Japan (translated by Amano Yaeko)." Shoso-In Bulletin 8, no. (1998): 208-222.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2457. Utechin, Nick. "The immortal Sherlock." The Times (London), January 17, 2004: 2.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "How could a beaky pedant in a funny hat have held the world in thrall for so long? Nick Utechin offers some clues. Sherlock Holmes is 150 this year. It is more than a century since he caught a hansom from Baker Steet on his last adventure. And yet, somehow, this quintessentially English literary invention has become a worldwide phenomenon. On February 5, for example, his fans will gather in 604 cities and 45 countries as far apart as Austria and Vietnam, Hungary and Lebanon. It is a ceremony that is repeated somewhere every month, on an agreed day, when devotees discuss the object of their shared passion - "the best and the wisest man", in the words of his dedicated partner, Dr Watson...."
2458. Van Gelder, Lawrence. "Book Notes." The New York Times, January 4, 1995: C14.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "He'll be 141 years old on Friday. Although long retired as a consulting detective, he still busies himself as he has for many decades, tending bees in Sussex. His name is Sherlock Holmes. Sherlockian scholars agree that his birthday is Jan. 6, and around the world his exploits still thrill readers (not to mention those who follow his adventures on television or videocassette)...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

2459. Watson, Bruce. "It's not what you do that counts, it's what you belong to." Smithsonian 26, no. 1 (1995): 128.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Offers a humorous look at some of unusual societies in the United States. Includes a reference to Holmes. "...Rest easy, FRUMPs and friends. There must be someone like you out there. From the Aaron Burr Association to the ZZ Top International Fan Club, no topic is too eccentric to have its own organization. Unlike Groucho Marx, who would never 'belong to any club that would accept me as a member,' seven out of ten Americans belong to at least one club or society. Eager to share interests, we join any club that promises a kinship of concerns. And if there are no such clubs, we start them. Time was when we defined ourselves by where we lived--a Texan, a New Englander, a Hoosier--but now we are what we join. We are idealists, 1,200-some members of Idealist International Inc. We are Frankenstein buffs, 250 in the International Frankenstein Society. We are Sherlock Holmes fans, members of nearly 200 separate societies honoring the fictional detective (Smithsonian, December 1986). We are Edsel owners, more than 900 in one club. Above all, we are people who yearn to belong to something larger than one...."

07A SHERLOCKIANS AND THE SOCIETIES -- SHERLOCKIANS (35)

2460. "Acquisitions." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 5, no. 1 (2001): 7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Highlights recent acquisitions from David Hammer, Ted Friedman, J. Randolph Cox, John and Inez Bergquist, and Hugo Koch. Includes photographs of Richard Sveum with Ted Friedman, John Bergquist with Tim Johnson and Michael Meer, and Ted Friedman's stamp moulage.
2461. "ALA conference preview. (Cover story)." American Libraries 29, no. 4 (1998): 106.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents information on the American Library Association (ALA) annual conference in Washington, D.C. from June 25 to July 1, 1998. Includes "Sherlock Holmes In Washington." Peter E. Blau of The Red Circle of Washington and the infamous "Black Peter" of the Baker Street Irregulars, will be our host for Sherlockian presentation toasts, and canonical discussion at the National Press Club on the 13th floor of the National Press Building. Speakers: Gayle T. Harris, past-pres., libn., Lib. of Congress, "Skeletons in the Stacks"; Peter E. Blau, "Insights and Revelations on the World of Sherlockian Scholarship and Conviviality"; Francine Morris Swift, sr. surviving member of Sublibns., member, Baker Street Irregulars, Sherlock Holmes Society of London, "The Good Old Days of the Sublibrarians Scion."
2462. "Foth revisited (2) Who Was Who at Footprints of the Hound." Canadian Holmes 25, no. 4 (2002): 28-30.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2463. "From the Editor's Commonplace Book." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 2 (1994): 127.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Peter Blau's report on Doyle manuscripts offered at Sotheby's, The Scowlers and Molly Maguires Third International Seminar, the passing of Patsy Dalton, and The Watsonian Weekend III.
2464. "Meet the Editorial Board." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 2, no. 3 (1998): 6.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents short biographical profiles of the editorial board of the Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections newsletter: Julie McKuras, Bruce E. Southworth, and Richard J. Sveum.
2465. "Photomontage I. Birthday 2001." The Serpentine Muse 17, no. 2 (2001): 6-7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2466. "Photomontage II. Bash 2001." The Serpentine Muse 17, no. 2 (2001): 10.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2467. "Remembrances." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 4, no. 3 (2000): 12.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // List of donors who made contributions in memory or honor of a special individual. Includes a photograph of Peter Blau, E. W. McDiarmid and Mike Whelan and another of three of the founders of the Norwegian Explorers: E. W. Ziebarth, Mac McDiarmid, and Bryce Crawford.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

2468. "Top 100 Sherlockian Writers of All Time." The Holmes & Watson Report 1, no. 7 (1998): 3-5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2469. "Using the Sherlock Holmes Collections." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 4, no. 2 (2000): 8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Notes work by Courtney Andersen and tours of the Collections during the opening festivities. Includes a photograph of Tim Johnson, Phil Bergem, John Bergquist, and Pj Doyle.
2470. "Using the Sherlock Holmes Collections." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 2, no. 4 (1998): 5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Notes recent visits to the Collections by Catherine Cooke, Susan Dahlinger, and Randall Stock
2471. "Who Was Who at ACD@35." Canadian Holmes 30, no. 3 (2007): 50-51.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2472. Aiken, Bruce. "Letter to the Editor: Hono(u)r Among Sherlockians." Canadian Holmes 26, no. 4 (2003): 5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2473. Blau, Peter E. "Letter to the Editor, 'Where were Edmonton Sherlockians?'" Canadian Holmes 20, no. 4 (1997): 33.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2474. Campbell, Mary, and Bob Coghill. "Footprints of FOTH, A Reminiscence." Canadian Holmes 25, no. 2 (2001): 4-12.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2475. Cochran, William R. "The Editor's Gas-lamp." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 1 (1994): 5-6.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Comments on Sherlockians "of the first order--one who was fond of socializing with literary types," "of the second order--one who exhibits total devotion to the cause," and "of the third order" of "often think of themselves as non-Sherlockians" who were all present in New York for the 60th anniversary gathering.
2476. ———. "From the Editor's Commonplace Book." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 1 (1994): 62-63.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // On the demise of the periodical Baker Street Miscellanea, Julie and Al Rosenblatt's 4-day mini-course on Holmes at Vassar College, an article in MHQ by Thaddeus Holt, the Folio Society's version of the Canon, the 25th anniversary of the Noble Bachelors of St. Louis, the Sherlock Holmes Society of London's "Back to Baker Street" festival, and the Books of Michael Harrison.
2477. Coghill, Bob. "Remembering Mary in Manhattan." Canadian Holmes 29, no. 3 (2006): 32-33.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2478. De Waal, Ronald B. "Acceptance Speech in Absentia." Canadian Holmes 18, no. 3 (1995): 31.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2479. Doyle, Dame Jean Conan et al. "Anniversary greetings, Messages of congratulation from an array of Sherlockians." The Musgrave Papers, no. 10 (1997): 7-15.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2480. Doyle, Pj. "Joe Connors' Crowded Box Room." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 3, no. 4 (1999): 7.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Observations on Joe Connors, member of the Norwegian Explorers, and his recollections of Gillette's performance of "Sherlock Holmes" in 1932 at the Metropolitan Theater in Minneapolis.
2481. Halewood, Michael H. "The Adventures of a Maniac Collector." The Ritual, no. 17 (1996): 54-59.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2482. Higashiyama, Akane. "Japanese Sherlockians in 2000." Shoso-In Bulletin 11, no. (2001): 217-218.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2483. Hirayama, Yuichi. "Tom, the 'Tai-jin' Sherlockian." Shoso-In Bulletin 8, no. (1998): 240-242.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2484. Hobbs, Don. "Review--Good for the Cause: Sherlockians in the Newspapers by Karen Murdock." The Holmes & Watson Report 8, no. 1 (2004): 32.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2485. Johnson, Timothy J. "Meet the new Curator of Special Collections: Timothy Johnson." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 2, no. 3 (1998): 1-2-4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Introductory essay by the new curator of the Sherlock Holmes Collections. Includes a photograph of Tim Johnson and Mike Whelan, head of the Baker Street Irregulars.
2486. ———. "An Update from the Collections." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 3, no. 3 (1999): 5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A report from the curator on a non-Sherlockian matter: his appointment to the Advisory Committee on the Records of Congress (which will also provide opportunities to meet with Sherlockians in the Washington, DC area).
2487. Kolodrubec, Alex. "My First encounter with Mr. Holmes." Shoso-In Bulletin 11, no. (2001): 7-10.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2488. Lesh, Richard D. "Basil Rathbone's 3-Day Visit to the Wayne Campus." Shoso-In Bulletin 6, no. (1996): 40-42.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2489. Pelle-Douel, Christilla, and Jean-Pierre Cagnat. "French Sherlockians Visit Japan." Shoso-In Bulletin 4, no. (1994): 99-100.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2490. Redmond, Christopher. "Letter to the Editor, 'Canuck Sherlockians circa 1939'." Canadian Holmes 24, no. 3 (2001): 44.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2491. ———. "Tiptoes! Tiptoes." Canadian Holmes 17, no. 4 (1994): 25-26.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The author's trans-Canada trip continues.
2492. ———. "Tiptoes! Tiptoes!" Canadian Holmes 17, no. 3 (1994): 28-29.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Musings and Sherlockian observations during a trip on the Trans-Canada highway.
2493. Sawisch, Bill, and Sally Behary. "2003 Baskerville Bash -- A Rousing Success?" The Serpentine Muse 19, no. 2 (2003): 8-10.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2494. Silverstein, Albert. "Sherlock Holmes, Jews and Rhode Island." Rhode Island Jewish Historical Notes 14, no. 2 (2004): 336-352.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The author, a psychologist and professor at the University of Rhode Island, describes his own and others' 20th-century studies of Sherlock Holmes, the detective character created by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. The article considers Rhode Island's Sherlock Holmes societies and examines both specific references to Jews in the Holmes canon and evidence of Doyle's attitudes toward victims of persecution.

07A SHERLOCKIANS AND THE SOCIETIES -- SHERLOCKIANS -- A (2)

2495. Dunn, Dave. "Strictly Personal: Bruce D. Aikin." Canadian Holmes 17, no. 1 (1993): 30-31.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

2496. ———. "Strictly Personal: Mark Alberstat." Canadian Holmes 18, no. 1 (1994): 34.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

07A SHERLOCKIANS AND THE SOCIETIES -- SHERLOCKIANS -- ASIMOV, ISAAC (3)

2497. DeAngelo, Carol. "Adult books for young adults: Fiction." School Library Journal 44, no. 6 (1998): 175.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'Time Machines: The Best Time Travel Stories Ever Written,' edited by Bill Adler. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "Even readers who generally avoid science fiction can find something enjoyable in this anthology. The 22 stories represent a wide range of authors and time periods. Edgar Allan Poe, Rudyard Kipling, Isaac Asimov, Rod Serling, Ray Bradbury, Connie Willis, and Robert Sawyer are among the writers included. The quality of the stories is exceptional; each tale is a thought-provoking experience. From the transportation of Sherlock Holmes to the 21st century to solve an enigma, to a time traveler who refuses to die, to a graduate history student doing his practicum in World War II London, all of the stories are readable, enjoyable, and stimulating...."

2498. LaBounty, David. "The Origins of Inspiration: Winwood Reade's Role in the Foundation of Isaac Asimov's Psychohistory." Extrapolation (Kent State University Press) 39, no. 4 (1998): 364-372.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Traces the origins of Isaac Asimov's invented science of psychohistory in his science fiction series about the Galactic Empire. Possibility of mathematician Winwood Reade's influence through the writings of H.G. Wells and Arthur Conan Doyle; Reade's ideas in his book 'The Martyrdom of Man'; Asimov's interest in the works of Doyle and Wells.

2499. McCallister, David R. "Sherlock Holmes and Hari Seldon: Canonical Antecedents of Asimov's Theory of Psychohistory." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 45, no. 3 (1995): 162-166.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

07A SHERLOCKIANS AND THE SOCIETIES -- SHERLOCKIANS -- B (11)

2500. "Passings Syd Goldberg, John J. Brousch, Donald O'Connor." Baker Street West 19, no. 2 (2003): 46.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

2501. De Waal, Ronald B. "Pages from the Journal of Ronald B. De Waal. Peter E. Blau in Town for Geology and Sherlock Holmes Meetings May 12-14, 2003." Shoso-In Bulletin 13, no. (2003): 98-99, 118.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

2502. Dunn, Dave. "Strictly Personal: Carol Ball." Canadian Holmes 30, no. 1 (2006): 43-44.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

2503. ———. "Strictly Personal: Craig Brtnik." Canadian Holmes 28, no. 2 (2004): 27.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

2504. ———. "Strictly Personal: Joanne Bamford." Canadian Holmes 17, no. 2 (1993): 29-30.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

2505. Green, Richard Lancelyn. "Lionel William Bailey (1913-2003)." The Sherlock Holmes Journal 26, no. 3 (2003): 102.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

2506. McKuras, Julie. "Musings." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 5, no. 1 (2001): 4.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Notes the arrival of the Eve Titus manuscript archive, her current illness, and her contributions to the article about this acquisition. Also noted are other articles in the newsletter relating to Theodore Blegen, the Reichenbach Falls, and the passing of Sherlockian Wayne Swift.

2507. Southworth, Bruce E. "Musings." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 2, no. 1 (1998): 4.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Highlights articles in the present issue and also notes Peter Blau's discovery that Tsar Nicholas II, while in captivity with his family in Tsarkoe Selo, read The Valley of Fear.

2508. Sveum, Richard J. "50 Years Ago." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 5, no. 1 (2001): 3.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the 1951 book The Crowded Box-Room; the author, Theodore Blegen; and the printer, Emerson Wulling. "In 1951 there appeared a small book in blue wrapper with a silhouette of Sherlock Holmes on the cover. It was titled The Crowded Box-Room, Sherlock Holmes as Poet by Theodore C. Blegen, Charter Member of the Norwegian Explorers: Minneapolis and Saint Paul Chapter of the Baker Street Irregulars....This book was the first of many fine press publications written by the members of the Norwegian Explorers and printed by Emerson G. Wulling and his Sumac Press...." Includes a photograph of Blegen, Harry Truman, and Hubert Humphrey.

2509. Thomalen, Robert E., Howard Brody, and William Hyder. "'Stand with me here upon the terrace...'" Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 3 (1994): 188-189.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Obituaries for Robert N. Brodie, Ralph F. Turner, and R. Irving Paxton.

2510. Utecht, Thom. "Stand With Me Here Upon the Terrace, Robert N. Brodie." The Serpentine Muse 12, no. 3 (1993): 8.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

07A SHERLOCKIANS AND THE SOCIETIES -- SHERLOCKIANS -- BARING-GOULD, WILLIAM S.
(6)

2511. Dalrymple, Theodore. "Holmes and his commentators." The New Criterion 24, no. 3 (2005): 4-8.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Avid Sherlock Holmes fan Theodore Dalrymple takes issue with the annotations in three canonical editions of Arthur Conan Doyle's work. The three are William S. Baring-Gould's of 1967; the Oxford Sherlock Holmes of 1993; and the just published The New Annotated Sherlock Holmes: The Novels, edited by Leslie S. Klinger.

2512. Fuller, Graham. "The Game's Afoot: Dr. Watson gives his verdict on a must-have Sherlock Holmes edition." Daily News (New York), January 9, 2005: 19.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of Les Klinger's The New Annotated Sherlock Holmes. "...That quibble aside, I am led to believe this is the most important edition dedicated to our collaboration since William S. Baring-Gould's 'The Annotated Sherlock Holmes' of 1967. Reading the stories again, I conclude that, above and beyond their enormous criminological value, they paint an extraordinarily rich picture of the Victorian and Edwardian eras, a notion enhanced by the copious photographs and amusing illustrations by Mr. Paget and others. (The cinematic 'stills' will indubitably annoy you.)..."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

2513. Hall, John. "Review--'From Baltimore to Baker Street' by William Hyder." The Ritual, no. 17 (1996): 72-79.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "A past Gasogene of The Six Napoleons of Baltimore offers Sherlockian essays and dramatic readings that combine erudition with humour - and occasionally challenge such revered scholars as Vincent Starrett, Michael Harrison, and William S. Baring-Gould."
2514. Hickling, Alfred. "Saturday Review: A four-pipe poseur: Alfred Hickling on the definitive guide to Holmes: The New Annotated Sherlock Holmes edited by Leslie S Klinger 1,878pp, Norton, GBP35." The Guardian (London), December 4, 2004: 9.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Ever since Holmes made his debut in Arthur Conan Doyle's novel A Study in Scarlet in 1887, there has been no shortage of bizarre theories to explain the perplexing inconsistencies of the detective's career. Did he tumble to his death at the Reichenbach Falls? Where was he educated? Did he know Freud? And just how many wives had Dr Watson? These are questions that have tickled the imaginations of Holmes addicts since approximately 1911, when the first piece of Sherlockian scholarship was published by Father Ronald Knox, who proposed to apply the detective's own methods of deduction to the narrative....A small army of narrative sleuths has been sifting through the canon ever since, on the basis that there is nothing scholars love more than a giant, contradictory codex in which nothing adds up. The first notable attempt to present an overall digest of Sherlockian suppositions came with the publication of William S Baring-Gould's monumental Annotated Sherlock Holmes in 1967, which is still considered to be the standard work of reference. A more recent milestone was reached with the 1993 publication of the Oxford Sherlock Holmes, the most authoritative modern edition of the texts, though its editor, Owen Dudley Edwards, insists on regarding the stories as fictions created by Conan Doyle, a position that makes him, in the eyes of certain Sherlockians, a bit of a killjoy. Leslie S Klinger's enormous New Annotated Sherlock Holmes now arrives to remedy that position.
2515. Keefauver, Brad. "A Toast to William S. Baring-Gould." The Camden House Journal 17, no. 6 (1995): 2-3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2516. Whittington-Egan, Richard. "Living with and Annotating Sherlock Holmes." Contemporary Review 286, no. 1669 (2005): 95-101.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article focuses on a fictitious character [sic], Sherlock Homes, with reference to the book "The New Annotated Sherlock Holmes," edited with a foreword and notes by Leslie S. Klinger. The book consists of two volumes and it is a collection of 56 short stories. The original edition of this books was edited by William S. Baring-Gould. In the original (1968) edition, Baring-Gould elected to go nap on his own personal and controversial concept of the chronology of the stories, Klinger decided to relegate all such data to a most useful Chronological Table at the end of Volume One. Something in the region of two thousand annotations are scattered broadcast throughout the book, lifting the curtain on the modes, manners and events of Victorian England, and ventilating, and where necessary explaining, Sherlockian theoretical constructs past and present.

07A SHERLOCKIANS AND THE SOCIETIES -- SHERLOCKIANS -- C (9)

2517. "Obituaries Richard Lancelyn Green and Steve Clarkson." Baker Street West I 10, no. 2 (2004): inside rear cover.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2518. "Professor Richard Chorley." The Times (London), July 19, 2002: 32.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Bill Bailey writes: As a loyal Fellow, and former Vice Master of Sidney Sussex College, Cambridge, Professor Richard Chorley (obituary, June 24) achieved further distinction by exploring the possible undergraduate career of Sherlock Holmes at Cambridge. The results of his study are published in his pamphlet, Sherlock Holmes at Sidney Sussex College 1871-1873. An Imaginative Reconstruction. This research extended the original proposition by Dorothy L. Sayers that 'of all the Cambridge colleges, Sidney Sussex perhaps offered the greatest number of advantages to a man in Holmes's position and, in default of more exact information, we may tentatively place him there'. The improbable project to which you refer,

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

whereby Professor Chorley dispatched a housebrick (known affectionately as 'Dick's Brick') to Japan, is embedded in college folklore. This eccentric act of generosity arose from a request from the World Brick Museum in Maizuru, Japan, for an artefact for a special theme on 'The Bricks of Great Britain and Sherlock Holmes'. Professor Chorley responded by sending the housebrick by special delivery. It was subsequently included in an exhibition where Holmes featured as an eminent Victorian...."

2519. Dunn, Dave. "Strictly Personal: Cheryl Madeline Conway." Canadian Holmes 19, no. 1 (1995): 48-49.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2520. ———. "Strictly Personal: Joseph A. Coppola." Canadian Holmes 22, no. 2 (1998): 40-41.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2521. Gil, Olga et al. "In Memoriam: Anne Skene Melvin, Mary Campbell, Stephen R. Tolins, Robin W. Links, Kathleen Morrison, and Frank Darlington." Canadian Holmes 26, no. 4 (2003): 20-27.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2522. Green, Maureen, and Kate Karlson. "In Memoriam: Mary E. Campbell and Ann Skene Melvin." The Serpentine Muse 19, no. 3 (2003): 7-9.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2523. McKuras, Julie. "50 Years Ago." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 4, no. 3 (2000): 3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Provides some background and information on Jay Finley Christ and his 1950 publication "The Missing Three." It was printed in a small 4-page pamphlet titled Christmas 1950, and published by Christ's own Fanlight Press. Includes a photograph of Jay Finley Christ.
2524. ———. "Using the Sherlock Holmes Collections." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 3, no. 3 (1999): 8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on the tour given to Paul Smedegaard and Ed Christenson, from Wisconsin, during their attendance at the annual meeting of the Friends. Includes a photograph.
2525. Seil, William. "Will Crakes--Sherlockian Collector." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 3, no. 2 (1999): 7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A tribute to Will Crakes of Seattle.

07A SHERLOCKIANS AND THE SOCIETIES -- SHERLOCKIANS -- D (5)

2526. "In Memoriam Dr. Tom Draisey." Canadian Holmes 30, no. 1 (2006): 44.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2527. Charnock, Ian A. "Concerning Mr. D. Martin Dakin: Being a Reprint from the Reminiscences of Ian A. Charnock, B.A., etc." The Ritual, no. 22 (1998): 21-23.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2528. Dunn, Dave. "Strictly Personal: David Patrick Drennan." Canadian Holmes 17, no. 3 (1994): 34-35.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Brief biographical sketch of Dave Dunn.
2529. ———. "Strictly Personal: Gordon Dawe." Canadian Holmes 18, no. 4 (1995): 40-41.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2530. Gil, Olga et al. "In Memoriam: Anne Skene Melvin, Mary Campbell, Stephen R. Tolins, Robin W. Links, Kathleen Morrison, and Frank Darlington." Canadian Holmes 26, no. 4 (2003): 20-27.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

07A SHERLOCKIANS AND THE SOCIETIES -- SHERLOCKIANS -- DALTON, PATSY (4)

2531. "From the Editor's Commonplace Book." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 2 (1994): 127.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Peter Blau's report on Doyle manuscripts offered at Sotheby's, The Scowlers and Molly Maguires Third International Seminar, the passing of Patsy Dalton, and The Watsonian Weekend III.
2532. "Obituary of Patsy Dalton." The Daily Telegraph (London), May 3, 1994: 23.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...The most celebrated recreation was at the Reichenbach Falls in 1968, when, watched by a large crowd of bemused Swiss, the society staged the desperate struggle between Holmes and Moriarty (played by Lord Gore-Booth and Charles Scholefield, QC, respectively). Her editor, Barbi Boxall, recognised her qualities, and Dalton quickly became an associate editor, deputising for Boxall, who appreciated her eye for detail. Dalton stayed on for more than a decade and continued to work part-time until her retirement. Dalton was infuriated when rheumatoid arthritis confined her to a wheelchair. She hated to be thought an invalid and was as active as her painful debility permitted. At the time of her death she was planning a trip to Madeira...."
2533. Bruxner, Pamela. "Obituary: Patsy Dalton." The Guardian (London), May 10, 1994: 19.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Patsy Dalton, first woman to chair the Sherlock Holmes Society of London, has died aged 75. She was a journalist and writer of short stories who began her working life as a film continuity girl before joining the Daily Sketch and eventually becoming associate editor of Woman. Although her professional life was successful and satisfying, much of her energy in later years was devoted to the Sherlock Holmes Society of London which she joined with her husband Pip in 1952 shortly after its formation. They were in their element...."
2534. Porter, Philip. "Obituary: Patsy Dalton." The Independent (London), Jun 4, 1994: 1; Gazette p. 45.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Patricia Louise Brougham, journalist: born London 25 January 1919; chairman, Sherlock Holmes Society of London 1981-84; married 1948 Pip Dalton (died 1981); died 6 April 1994. The unique atmosphere of the society had much to do with the Daltons, who successively held a number of posts in it. When the society made its pilgrimages to Switzerland, which it did on five occasions, the first being in 1968, members traditionally took a Holmesian role and spent the entire trip in costume. With her splendid Victorian dresses and wonderful hats, Patsy Dalton set high standards of style and period accuracy. She was at home either as Holmes's faithful housekeeper Mrs Hudson, or more latterly as the graceful, aristocratic Duchess of Holderness. When the Duchess donned her Victorian swimming costume to take the waters at Leukerbad, she still wore her tiara. Like most members, she never took herself too seriously.

07A SHERLOCKIANS AND THE SOCIETIES -- SHERLOCKIANS -- DAVIES, DAVID STUART (16)

2535. "Classic Returns." Library Journal 132, no. 17 (2007): 104-104.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Short review of Davies, David Stuart. Starring Sherlock Holmes. 208p. ISBN 978-1-84576-537-8. Hearn, Marcus & Alan Barnes. The Hammer Story: The Authorised History of Hammer Films. 192p. ISBN 978-1-84576-185-1. ea. vol: Titan. Oct. 2007. illus. filmog. $35.
2536. "The First Shoso-in Bulletin Award is Presented to Starring Sherlock Holmes by David Stuart Davies." Shoso-In Bulletin 12, no. (2002): 8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2537. "The Inaugural Shoso-in Bulletin Award 2002 to David Stuart Davies for Starring Sherlock Holmes." Shoso-In Bulletin 13, no. (2003): 6.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

2538. "The most complex case for Sherlock; coffee break Preview Sherlock Holmes Torch Theatre, Milford Haven." The Western Mail, October 1, 2008: 26.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "One of the world's greatest fictional detectives confronts the most complex case of all - his own psyche - in a new Sherlock Holmes production which comes to Wales this week. In this staged fantasy based on fiction, Arthur Conan Doyle tires of his famous sleuth and creates arch-villain Professor Moriarty to dispose of him....Funny, engaging and dark, this tale of murder, mystery and the occult is a play which is packed with ideas - and it's also the perfect form of entertainment....The play features Roger Llewellyn as Holmes....Following his international success in Sherlock Holmes...The Last Act, the new play has been created and directed by the renowned author David Stuart Davies, directed by Gareth Armstrong and it features original music from the Royal Shakespeare Company's composer Simon Slater."
2539. "Spooky tale of supersleuth Sherlock." Daily Post (Liverpool), January 23, 2009: 21.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The character of Sherlock Holmes is the main talking point in a spinetingling new drama about Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's great detective. The man in the deerstalker is played by Roger Llewellyn in Sherlock Holmes...the Death and Life. In this story at Theatr Colwyn, the supersleuth is becoming somewhat arrogant and so malevolent Moriarty is brought in to take him on. But Doyle's dangerous strategy, combined with his passion for raising the spirits of the dead, has rather more surreal and dramatic consequences than he bargains for....The new play, written by David Stuart Davies and directed by Gareth Armstrong, is billed as a fantasy based on a fiction. Davies, a playwright and author, specialises in adaptations of the Conan Doyle canon. And there's original music by Simon Slater. Sherlock Holmes...the Death and Life, Theatr Colwyn, Colwyn Bay, Wednesday, February 4, 7.30pm."
2540. Booth, Matthew. "Review--The Scroll of the Dead: A Sherlock Holmes Adventure by David Stuart Davies." The Ritual, no. 22 (1998): 64-65.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2541. ———. "Review--The Shadow of the Rat by David Stuart Davies." The Ritual, no. 24 (1999): 62-64.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2542. Chadwick, Peter. "Review--'Sherlock Holmes: The Last Act' by David Stuart Davies." The Ritual, no. 24 (1999): 56-58.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2543. Clarke, Roger. "Reviews: Llewellyn's excellent role is elementary; Sherlock Holmes...The Death and Life, Lichfield Garrick Theatre." Birmingham Evening Mail, February 13, 2009: 83.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Roger Llewellyn produces an acting masterclass in this sequel to his first venture into Holmes' world. Sherlock Holmes ... the last act, written like the new production by David Stuart Davies, has been touring the world since 1999 and with Holmes killed off and resurrected the new production could be following in its footsteps. Llewellyn, on stage alone for the best part of an hour-and-a-half, plays ten characters living a conflict between Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and the creation he has come to hate, Sherlock Holmes. Into the mix comes Prof James Moriarty, arch villain of his age destined to kill the finest detective of his generation - until the characters develop a mind of their own. The play examines Doyle's frustration at the lack of success of his historical novels, his passion for spiritualism, his letters to his mother, his father's incarceration in an asylum and his relationship with Holmes. It is a test of the actor's art which Llewellyn passes with distinction."
2544. Donnelly, Pat. "Sherlock Holmes's finest hour." The Gazette (Montreal), June 5, 2000: B4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "You don't have to be a card-carrying member of a Sherlock Holmes club to enjoy Sherlock Holmes...the Last Act!, a one-man show starring Roger Llewellyn, which has just dropped into Centaur Theatre...."
2545. Hall, John. "Review--'Bending the Willow: Jeremy Brett as Sherlock Holmes' by David Stuart Davies." The Ritual, no. 18 (1996): 65-70.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

2546. Key, Philip. "The return of . . . The Return of Sherlock Holmes ; 08 Culture Diary." Daily Post (Liverpool), September 23, 2008: 16.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "One-man play The Death and Life of Sherlock Holmes comes to the region tomorrow night as part of the Sefton Celebrates Writing Festival. Renowned actor Roger Llewellyn reprises the role of the famous detective - and several more roles besides - after the first outing proved so successful...."
2547. Leland, Mary. "Review." The Irish Times, March 23, 2006: 2.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Sherlock Holmes - The Last Act! at the Everyman Palace in Cork. "An actor completely in charge of his material, his stage and his own artistry, Roger Llewellyn invests his performance in Sherlock Holmes - The Last Act! with all the tension achieved by Conan Doyle at his best. Written by David Stuart Davies and unfolding in the measured sequences of classic detective fiction, the play is, of course, a brilliant opportunity for any actor with the intelligence to grasp its rhythms and to peel away the sometimes pompous layers of the eponymous hero and reveal the passionate, lonely personality underneath....Presented by Jay Productions in association with the Salisbury Playhouse, the piece is, in fact, something of an exercise in detection in itself, but one of great style and subtlety. This is Holmes in 1916, mourning his colleague Watson whom he is at last able to acknowledge as a dear friend, and re-working through his tribute a series of plots and characters with which both have been memorably associated. It is a fiction upon a fiction, and held its audience captivated through two acts of 45 minutes each....Music by Simon Slater and lighting by Peter Hunter are threaded through Gareth Armstrong's direction in a presentation in which the few props are employed so skilfully that the bravura touches here and there are accents rather than declarations, commas rather than exclamation marks. This is a production which has been touring in England, Europe and America, yet there is nothing stale about it. The playwright - a Conan Doyle enthusiast - seasons his script with implied acknowledgements of contemporary approaches, but both the writing and the performance achieve an almost old-fashioned - and certainly rare - symmetry of excellence and entertainment."
2548. Masters, Rosalind. "Review--'The Annals of Skelington Bones: the Case of the Phantom Paperhanger of Bug Hare Hall' by David Stuart Davies." The Ritual, no. 16 (1995): 60.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2549. Michael, Patrick. "Review--'Starring Sherlock Holmes' by David Stuart Davies." The Ritual, no. 28 (2001): 57-58.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2550. Sampson, Benjamin W. "Season preview 2002-03. (Cover story)." American Theatre 19, no. 8 (2002): 43.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a list of theatrical productions at Theatre Communications Group theaters across the U.S. for the 2002-03 season. Includes Holmes and Doyle listings. Apple Tree Theater, Highland Park, Illinois: The Sign of Four, adapt: D. Shanghai Low from Arthur Conan Doyle; dir: Steve Pickering. Jun 18-Jul 20.; The Kavinoky Theatre, Buffalo, New York: Sherlock Holmes...the last act, adapt: David Stuart Davies from Arthur Conan Doyle; dir: Gareth Armstrong. Jan 9-Feb 9.

07A SHERLOCKIANS AND THE SOCIETIES -- SHERLOCKIANS -- DE WAAL, RONALD B. (8)

2551. "Book Review--Ron de Waal's TUSH." Baker Street Miscellanea, no. 76 (1994): 51.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of The Universal Sherlock Holmes bibliography.
2552. "Ronald De Waal signing galley proofs [photograph]." Canadian Holmes 17, no. 3 (1994): 35.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Photograph of Ronald De Waal signing galley proofs for The Universal Sherlock Holmes, in New York City, with many other Sherlockians looking on.
2553. De Waal, Ronald B. "Days and Thoughts in the Life of Mr. Ron. A Bibliography of Published and Unpublished Writings." Shoso-In Bulletin 10, no. (2000): 35-43.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

2554. ———. "Days and Thoughts in the Life of Mr. Ron. A Weekend With the Baker Street Irregulars January 13-16, 2000." Shoso-In Bulletin 10, no. (2000): 191-195.
 NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2555. ———. "Pages From the Journal of Ron De Waal Holmes, Watson and de Waal." Shoso-In Bulletin 14, no. (2004): 54-55.
 NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2556. ———. "Pages From the Journal of Ron De Waal. Collecting and Writing About Sherlock Holmes." Shoso-In Bulletin 14, no. (2004): 19-20.
 NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2557. ———. "Pages from the Journal of Ronald B. De Waal. Peter E. Blau in Town for Geology and Sherlock Holmes Meetings May 12-14, 2003." Shoso-In Bulletin 13, no. (2003): 98-99, 118.
 NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2558. Johnson, Roger. "Review--'The Universal Sherlock Holmes' by Ronald B. De Waal, edited by George Vanderburgh." The Ritual, no. 14 (1994): 58-59.
 NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

07A SHERLOCKIANS AND THE SOCIETIES -- SHERLOCKIANS -- DIRDA, MICHAEL (3)

2559. "Classics for Pleasure." Publishers Weekly 254, no. 33 (2007): 57-57.
 NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book 'Classics for Pleasure,' by Michael Dirda. Includes a reference to Holmes. "In this casually brilliant collection of 'great book' recommendations, Dirda, a Pulitzer Prize-winning critic for the Washington Post Book World, discusses titles ranging from well-known favorites such as Sherlock Holmes and Beowulf to more obscure writers such as Jaroslav Hasek and John Masfield...."
2560. Carrigan, Henry L. "Arts & Humanities." Library Journal 131, no. 6 (2006): 90, 92-4, 96-100, 102.
 NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // An annotated bibliography of arts and humanities titles, published or soon to be published, is provided. Includes an entry of note. Dirda, Michael. Book by Book: Notes on Reading and Life. Holt. May 2006. c.192p. ISBN 0-8050-7877-0. pap. $17. "Once we're finished reading all those books our teachers required us to read, where do we turn for counsel on reading and life? Pulitzer Prize-winning critic Dirda (An Open Book) affectionately offers up this bouquet of thoughts and quotations from novels, poems, and essays as a guide to discovering the meaning of our experiences. Dirda's thoughtful little meditations conduct us through all aspects of life from work, leisure, and love to art, spiritual matters, and death and grief. He imagines the ideal guest room library filled with "familiar, cozy, browsable, and soothing" books, ranging from the mysteries of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and G.K. Chesterton to the humor of P.G. Wodehouse and James Thurber and the maxims of Francois de La Rochefoucauld. In the section on love, Dirda provides a minicourse on the subject in the Western world, beginning with Sappho's poetry and coursing through Ovid and Horace, Tristan and Isolde, Dante's The Divine Comedy, Gustave Flaubert's Madame Bovary, Philip Roth's The Dying Animal, and Zadie Smith's On Beauty. Finally, Dirda sums up the value of a life lived book by book: "The beauty of words, the sound and fall of sentences, a writer's distinctive voice rising from the page--these, in the end, provide the greatest and most lasting pleasures of a reading life." A lovingly crafted volume, this is recommended for all libraries."
2561. Genco, Barbara A. "Great Reads For Grown-Ups." School Library Journal 49, no. 12 (2003): 58-61.
 NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // An annotated bibliography of the best nonfiction books for adults published in 2003 is provided. Includes an entry with a reference to Holmes by a well-known member of the Sherlockian community. An Open Book: Coming of Age in the Heartland by Michael Dirda. Norton. $24.95. ISBN 0-393-05756-9. "As Michael Dirda, senior editor of The Washington Post Book World and a distinguished literary critic, observes early on in this beautifully written memoir: "To be an indiscriminate reader--as the luckiest

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

young often are--means the right books are all around you.' Dirda's portrait of the writer as a young reader is an irresistible choice for librarians. Dirda began life as a chubby, nearsighted kid, growing up in the 1950s in the gritty factory town of Lorrain, OH. An omnivorous reader, he gradually sharpened his literary taste (and enlarged his world) on an eclectic mix of books and comics that included Tarzan, Sherlock Holmes, the Green Lantern, the Count of Monte Cristo, and Raskolnikov. Dirda takes the reader along on his journey to Oberlin College (which he attended in the '60s on a scholarship), and concludes with an account of a romantic summer spent in Paris, at the impressionable age of 19. The future Pulitzer Prize winner for criticism seemed to emanate 'an invisible tractor beam for printed matter.' SLJ readers will relish Dirda's candid, sometimes bittersweet account of his early life with books and his assertion that 'childhood reading possesses an almost holy power.' Dirda's boyhood reading list--consisting of weighty titles he managed to read in high school--is not to be missed: it offers some stiff competition to the American Library Association's list of 'Outstanding Books for the College Bound.'"

07A SHERLOCKIANS AND THE SOCIETIES -- SHERLOCKIANS -- DOYLE, ADRIAN CONAN
(2)

2562. Doyle, Adrian Conan. "Thoughts From A. Conan Doyle -- the other one." Canadian Holmes 21, no. 3 (1998): 27-29.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

2563. Travis, Alan. "G-men rallied to aid Sherlock Holmes : Scotland Yard turned to FBI to find Conan Doyle collection." The Guardian (London), February 15, 2001: 8.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "J. Edgar Hoover called in his special network of 'G-men' when Scotland Yard turned to the FBI for help in solving the case of the disappearance of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's crime library from his house at Crowborough in Sussex. The Metropolitan police case file released yesterday at the public record office shows that Conan Doyle's two sons and heirs, Denis and Adrian, appealed for Scotland Yard's help in 1945 when an American magazine led them to suspect that the collection of real crime stories their father had used to create the plots and character of Sherlock Holmes stories had been stolen...."

07A SHERLOCKIANS AND THE SOCIETIES -- SHERLOCKIANS -- DOYLE, DENIS CONAN (2)

2564. Green, Richard Lancelyn. "Tilting at Windmills: Denis Conan Doyle and the Baker Street Irregulars." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana, no. (2002): 5-64.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

2565. Travis, Alan. "G-men rallied to aid Sherlock Holmes : Scotland Yard turned to FBI to find Conan Doyle collection." The Guardian (London), February 15, 2001: 8.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "J. Edgar Hoover called in his special network of 'G-men' when Scotland Yard turned to the FBI for help in solving the case of the disappearance of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's crime library from his house at Crowborough in Sussex. The Metropolitan police case file released yesterday at the public record office shows that Conan Doyle's two sons and heirs, Denis and Adrian, appealed for Scotland Yard's help in 1945 when an American magazine led them to suspect that the collection of real crime stories their father had used to create the plots and character of Sherlock Holmes stories had been stolen...."

07A SHERLOCKIANS AND THE SOCIETIES -- SHERLOCKIANS -- E(2)

2566. Dunn, Dave. "Strictly Personal: Edward Geoffrey Ewing." Canadian Holmes 19, no. 2 (1995): 32-33.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

2567. ———. "Strictly Personal: John Philip Balcom Elliott." Canadian Holmes 20, no. 2 (1996): 40-41.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

07A SHERLOCKIANS AND THE SOCIETIES -- SHERLOCKIANS -- EDWARDS, OWEN DUDLEY (2)

2568. Brown, Allan. "The curious case of old Conan Doyle." Sunday Times (London), August 22, 2004: 4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Observations on Doyle, Edinburgh, the fate of various Doyle papers, the Christie's auction, Richard Lancelyn Green, Owen Dudley Edwards, and Charles Foley.
2569. Cornwell, Tim. "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Writer's Vanishing Treasures." The Scotsman, May 14, 2004: 7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Scotland's foremost expert on Sir Arthur Conan Doyle has launched a last-minute campaign to ensure that recently-discovered papers by the Sherlock Holmes author, which are due to be auctioned by Christie's, are saved for the British nation. Owen Dudley Edwards, a historian at Edinburgh University and editor of The Oxford Sherlock Holmes, is calling on the government to step in to ensure that a key part of the Edinburgh-born author's legacy is saved for researchers and the public. 'When this sale was announced there was tremendous surprise and anger,' he said. 'I am thinking about posterity - for the next 100 to 200 years.' The Edinburgh South MP, Nigel Griffiths, has taken up Professor Edwards' cause, calling on Estelle Morris, the UK culture minister, to block the auction and explore ways of saving the Doyle archive...."

07A SHERLOCKIANS AND THE SOCIETIES -- SHERLOCKIANS -- F (2)

2570. Dunn, Dave. "Strictly Personal: Margot French." Canadian Holmes 21, no. 3 (1998): 39.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2571. Levin, Alfred A. "On the Terrace: Dennis France." Shoso-In Bulletin 11, no. (2001): 218.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

07A SHERLOCKIANS AND THE SOCIETIES -- SHERLOCKIANS -- G (9)

2572. "In Memoriam Marian Grudeff." Canadian Holmes 30, no. 2 (2006): 49.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2573. "Passings Syd Goldberg, John J. Brousch, Donald O'Connor." Baker Street West 19, no. 2 (2003): 46.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2574. Cannon, Peter. "The Magic of Martin Gardner." Publishers Weekly 253, no. 38 (2006): 39-40.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article features author Martin Gardner. To his fans, Gardner, a 91-year-old widower, is revered as a genius. He has written or edited more than 70 books. A lover of Sherlock Holmes, the Oz books and other literary classics, he does not care for poetry that lacks rhyme or meter. He has used a literary agent only once on his first book, In the Name of Science. His book, The New Ambidextrous Universe, is an example of how Gardner has challenged mainstream as well as fringe science.
2575. Dunn, Dave. "Strictly Personal: Brian 'Neil' Gibson." Canadian Holmes 21, no. 2 (1997): 30-31.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2576. ———. "Strictly Personal: Edward (Ted) Gurr." Canadian Holmes 23, no. 1 (1999): 36-37.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2577. ———. "Strictly Personal: Olga Joan Gil." Canadian Holmes 26, no. 4 (2003): 36.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

2578. Redmond, Christopher. "In Memoriam Ronald P. Graham." Canadian Holmes 19, no. 2 (1995): 34.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

2579. Stajic, Marina et al. "In Memoriam Maureen Green." Canadian Holmes 30, no. 2 (2006): 17-23.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

2580. Wrigglesworth, Doug. "In Memoriam Ted Gurr." Canadian Holmes 30, no. 2 (2006): 16-17.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

07A SHERLOCKIANS AND THE SOCIETIES -- SHERLOCKIANS -- GAIMAN, NEIL (1)

2581. "Hot Deals." Publishers Weekly 249, no. 43 (2002): 14.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents updates on several deals between authors and publishers, as of October 28, 2002. Neil Gaiman at HarperCollins and Bloomsbury. Also note on Michael Capuzzo's The Arms of Angels. "The new book is a true tale about a mysterious group of skilled detectives who use their skills to solve only the most despicable of crimes, led by a figure who seems to be a contemporary Sherlock Holmes."

07A SHERLOCKIANS AND THE SOCIETIES -- SHERLOCKIANS -- GREEN, RICHARD LANCELYN (64)

2582. "The case of the Conan Doyle papers." The Hindu, May 20, 2004: 1.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The [Arthur Conan Doyle] archive, including his unpublished first novel, a rich cache of family letters and handwritten notebooks full of research and musings about works in progress, was expected to bring in about GBP1 million to 1.5 million, according to Christie's, which is handling the sale. But even as the auction house has attracted a stream of Conan Doyle enthusiasts thrilled at the newly released material, it has also been sharply criticised by some scholars and Members of Parliament for allowing the sale because they say crucial legal questions remain unresolved. They also say the material is too important to be sold off piecemeal. Adding to the sense of unease is the mysterious death of Richard Lancelyn Green, a leading Conan Doyle scholar, private collector and a vociferous opponent of the sale."

2583. "City Gets Conan Doyle Collection; Portsmouth, England, receives Sherlock Holmes memorabilia worth $3.6 million." Los Angeles Times, Aug 8, 2004: A.9.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "[Richard Lancelyn Green] was the foremost [Arthur Conan Doyle] scholar and a leading Sherlock Holmes specialist. His collection was acknowledged to be the finest in private hands,' said Nicholas Utechin, Lancelyn Green's friend and editor of the 'Sherlock Holmes Journal.' Lancelyn Green, a prominent figure in the Sherlock Holmes Society, spent more than 40 years collecting material related to Conan Doyle and Holmes. His will stipulated that the collection should be housed together and that he wanted it offered first to Portsmouth's library service."

2584. "Correction." The Sunday Telegraph (London), Dec 19, 2004: 02.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Last Sunday we published a picture, stating that it was Richard Lancelyn Green, who died in March this year. It was, in fact, a picture of his brother, Scirard Lancelyn Green, who is very much alive. We apologise for this error."

2585. "Death a case for Sherlock." The Gold Coast Bulletin, Dec 14, 2004: 6.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "According to friends of Richard Lancelyn Green, he appears to have dressed up his suicide as murder in an attempt to get at an enemy from beyond the grave,..."

2586. "Death still a mystery." Journal (Newcastle-upon-Tyne), Apr 24, 2004: 14.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Richard Lancelyn Green, 50, who co-edited a book about Holmes creator Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, was found garrotted in his bed surrounded by cuddly toys and a bottle of gin. The tin was created for Berkshire biscuit manufacturers Huntley and Palmers in the 1970s by a mischievous artist."
2587. "Expert's death linked to Holmes story: Suicide plot." National Post, Dec 13, 2004: A.11.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "According to friends of Richard Lancelyn Green, he appears to have dressed up his suicide as murder in an attempt to get at an enemy from beyond the grave, a notion lifted from one of [Holmes]'s adventures, the Sunday Times said. According to the report, Mr. Lancelyn Green had become bitterly depressed after learning that a collection of papers belonging to the creator of Holmes, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, was to be broken up and sold at auction."
2588. "Global Reach." American Libraries 35, no. 8 (2004): 23-23.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents world news briefs on libraries as of September 2004. "What may be the world's largest collection of Arthur Conan Doyle memorabilia was donated August 6 to the Portsmouth Library' by the estate of writer Richard Lancelyn Green. The collection includes a full-size recreation of Sherlock Holmes's Baker Street study, and first editions of all Conan Doyle's works."
2589. "Holmes collection left to library in southern England." Xinhua News Agency - CEIS, Aug 6, 2004: 1.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "[Arthur Conan Doyle] was born in Edinburgh. He moved later to Portsmouth and then London. While in Portsmouth, he wrote 'A Study in Scarlet' ( 1887), which introduced [Holmes] and his sidekick, Dr. Watson. [Richard Lancelyn Green] was the foremost Arthur Conan Doyle scholar and a leading Sherlock Holmes specialist. His collection was acknowledged to be the finest in private hands,' said Nicholas Utechin, editor of the 'Sherlock Holmes Journal.'"
2590. "Holmes man's death riddle." The Sun (London), Apr 24, 2004: 28.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Mr [Richard Lancelyn Green], of Kensington, West London, was upset about an auction of items belonging to [Holmes]' creator Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and wanted it stopped. He also feared he was going to be smeared."
2591. "Library gets Sherlock trove ; Conan Doyle collection includes first editions, full-size replica of detective's study." San Antonio Express-News, Aug 7, 2004: 16A.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "One of the world's greatest collections of memorabilia from Sir Arthur Conan Doyle was handed over Friday to a library in the port city where the author once had a medical practice and wrote the first two Sherlock Holmes adventures. When he died in March, writer and collector Richard Lancelyn Green, left the 20,000-item collection worth more than $3.6 million to the Portsmouth library service. The collection includes a full size recreation by Lancelyn Green of the study at 221B Baker Street, Holmes' fictional London address...."
2592. "Mystery surrounds 'murder' of Sherlock Holmes fan." Liverpool Echo, Dec 13, 2004: 3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Wirral-born Richard Lancelyn Green, 50, a biographer of author Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, was discovered garrotted with a shoelace tightened around his neck with a wooden spoon. John Gibson, who co-edited a Conan Doyle bibliography with Mr Lancelyn Green in 1983, believes his colleague set up a false trail of clues to make his death look like foul play."
2593. "A new home for Sherlock Holmes." Daily Mail (London), August 6, 2004: 19.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "A collection of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle memorabilia, including a hint of how Sherlock Holmes got his name, is moving. Writer Richard Lancelyn Green, who died in March, has left the 20,000 items, worth more than Pounds 2million, to Portsmouth library...."
2594. "Obituaries Richard Lancelyn Green and Steve Clarkson." Baker Street West I 10, no. 2 (2004): inside rear cover.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2595. "Obituary: Richard Gordon Lancelyn Green." Daily Post, Apr 12, 2004: 11.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Green was an honorary member of the [Arthur Conan Doyle] Society and, from 1996 to 1999, was chairman of the Sherlock Holmes Society of London. In 2001, his Christmas cards were based on a cover of The Strand Magazine which serialised Doyle stories. [Holmes] was his passion. He worked with another enthusiast, John Michael Gibson, on producing the Doyle Bibliography, and he compiled a volume by other writers of parodies and imitations of Doyle, The Further Adventure of Sherlock Holmes."

2596. "Papers of Sherlock Holmes creator sell for half of what auction house expected." National Post (Canada), May 20, 2004: A15.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "A collection of long-lost papers giving a rare glimpse into the private life of Sherlock Holmes' creator, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, was sold at auction in London for almost (ps)1-million ($2.3- million) yesterday, about half of what had been estimated. The 3,000 letters, notes and manuscripts fetched (ps)948,546, auction house Christie's said....The auction has ignited a furor among politicians and Holmes enthusiasts, with some saying the collection should have been bequeathed to the nation rather than sold off piecemeal. It took place against the backdrop of the bizarre death of a leading Holmes expert...."

2597. "Richard Lancelyn Green." The Times (London), April 14, 2004: 27.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Obituary of RLG. "... As the foremost expert on Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's fictional detective, Lancelyn Green travelled widely, giving lectures to Sherlock Holmes societies around the world. While his knowledge of the [Holmes] canon was encyclopaedic, he never failed to treat the subject with a light and entertaining touch. If difficult to approach at first, he was a brilliant raconteur and showed flashes of theatrical inspiration, whether he was playing the role of a Victorian music hall master of ceremonies for a Sherlock Holmes Society event or dressing up in period costume for a pilgrimage to the Reichenbach Falls, where Sherlock Holmes, temporarily, met his end...."

2598. "Suicide plot based on Holmes story, report says." National Post (Canada), December 13, 2004: A14.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The mysterious death of Britain's leading Sherlock Holmes expert appears to have been a bizarre suicide plot deliberately based on one of the cases tackled by the fictional detective himself, a report said yesterday. According to friends of Richard Lancelyn Green, he appears to have dressed up his suicide as murder in an attempt to get at an enemy from beyond the grave, a notion lifted from one of Holmes's adventures, the Sunday Times said...."

2599. "A tangled skein." Economist 371, no. 8376 (2004): 77-78.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The author reports on a controversial auction of private papers of author Sir Arthur Conan Doyle at Christie's in London this week. The long unseen collection shows that Conan Doyle was not only one of the most popular writers of the 20th century--he has still outsold J.K. Rowling and J.R.R. Tolkien put together--but a public figure who took an active interest in politics and war, championed many private causes and gave GBP250,000 (millions in today's money) to further the interests of spiritualism. Befittingly, the auction has not been without controversy, not least thanks to the mysterious death of Richard Lancelyn Green, a former chairman of the Sherlock Holmes Society of London, who was found garrotted in his locked bedroom in March. There was not enough evidence for the coroner to rule it was suicide, but enough for believers in the "Conan Doyle curse" to suspect foul play worthy of Holmes's attention. Lancelyn Green believed that some of the papers in the auction had rightfully been left to the British Library, and he told the Times newspaper that he had written to Christie's asking them not to go ahead with the sale, which Christie's denies. Would-be Conan Doyle biographers, as well as the British Library, have expressed disappointment that the material in the auction has now been dispersed.

2600. "Teddies and gin death of Holmes expert." Coventry Evening Telegraph, Apr 24, 2004: 5.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Richard Lancelyn Green, 50, who co-edited a book about Holmes creator Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, was found garrotted in his bed surrounded by cuddly toys and a bottle of gin."

2601. "The World." The Augusta Chronicle, Aug 7, 2004: A.02.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "One of the greatest collections of memorabilia from Sir Arthur Conan Doyle was given Friday to a library in Portsmouth, England, where he wrote the first Sherlock Holmes adventures. The 20,000- item collection of Richard Lancelyn Green includes a full-size model of the study at 221B Baker St.,

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Holmes' fictional address."

2602. "Writer leaves pounds 2m Conan Doyle collection to library." Daily Post, Aug 7, 2004: 7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "[Richard Lancelyn Green], who died in March this year, was a prominent figure in the Sherlock Holmes Society and spent more than 40 years collecting everything he could find that related to [Arthur Conan Doyle] and Sherlock Holmes."
2603. Adrian, Jack. "Obituary: Richard Lancelyn Green; Collector and Bibliographer of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle." The Independent (London), April 8, 2004: 34.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Richard Lancelyn Green devoted his life to one of the great icons of popular culture of the 20th century, the most celebrated fictional detective of all, Sherlock Holmes. Over a period of nearly 40 years he accumulated not just the bedrock of any collection, the books by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, but masses of material relating to both Holmes and Doyle - from examples of the author's personal correspondence to items such as the cigarette case inscribed 'From Sherlock Holmes' and presented by Doyle to Sidney Paget, the illustrator of the Holmes stories. At the same time he turned his hobby into a full-time occupation by producing books and articles on Holmes, and co-authoring one of the most comprehensive bibliographies of any writer...."
2604. Alberge, Dalya. "Holmes archive row ends in GBP2m bequest." The Times (London), August 6, 2004: 11.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The world's leading authority on Sherlock Holmes, who was found garrotted on his bed three months ago, has bequeathed his Pounds 2 million collection of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's papers to the nation. Richard Lancelyn Green was found dead at 50 after trying in vain to stop the sale of another Pounds 2 million collection of Doyle papers, some of which he felt should have been left to the British Library. An open verdict on his death was recorded. Mr Lancelyn Green left more than 20,000 Doyle manuscripts and memorabilia, amassed over more than 40 years, to Portsmouth, where Dr Conan Doyle had his medical practice and where he created his legendary detective...."
2605. ———. "Holmes archive row ends in Pounds 2m bequest." The Times (London), Aug 6, 2004: 11.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Mr [Richard Lancelyn Green] left more than 20,000 [Arthur Conan Doyle] manuscripts and memorabilia, amassed over more than 40 years, to Portsmouth, where Dr Conan Doyle had his medical practice and where he created his legendary detective. Doyle's daughter, Dame Jean, died in 1997 at the age of 84. She stipulated in her will that Sherlock Holmes manuscripts were to go to the British Library and museums in Edinburgh, Doyle's birthplace, and Southsea or Portsmouth, where he worked as a doctor and where he created [Holmes]. Mr Lancelyn Green's brother, Scirard, said yesterday: 'It's truly fitting that Richard's life work should go to Portsmouth. Conan Doyle wrote the first two Sherlock Holmes stories there, so in some way his work is going home.'"
2606. Brown, Allan. "The curious case of old Conan Doyle." Sunday Times (London), August 22, 2004: 4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Observations on Doyle, Edinburgh, the fate of various Doyle papers, the Christie's auction, Richard Lancelyn Green, Owen Dudley Edwards, and Charles Foley.
2607. Caswell, Jonathan. "Death of Writer; Body of Conan Doyle expert discovered at home by sister." Liverpool Echo, Apr 9, 2004: 17.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "A Wirral man regarded as a world authority on Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, the creator of Sherlock Holmes, has been found dead at his London home. Richard Lancelyn Green, 51, was discovered by his sister Cilla in his South Kensington flat last week. An inquest has been opened...."
2608. Chittenden, Maurice. "Holmes solves death of a fan." Sunday Times (London), December 12, 2004: 6.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The mystery of how Britain's leading expert on Sir Arthur Conan Doyle came to be lying garrotted to death on his own bed may have been solved by the author's greatest creation, Sherlock Holmes. Amateur sleuths probing the unsolved death of Richard Lancelyn Green believe he took a leaf out of one of the Victorian detective's adventures. In one inquiry Holmes deduces that a woman arranged her suicide to look like murder. Friends of Lancelyn Green now believe he might have tried the same tactic in an attempt to get revenge from beyond the grave for an imagined deception...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

2609. Churcher, Sharon, and Adam Luck. "Solved the Last Sherlock Holmes Mystery." Mail on Sunday, Dec 12, 2004: 47.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "On March 26, [Richard Lancelyn Green] dined with a former lover, Lawrence Keen. It was then, according to Keen, that Green confided that 'an American was trying to bring him down'. After they left the restaurant in Kensington High Street, Green agitatedly told his friend they were being followed...."
2610. Davies, Catriona. "Mysterious death of Holmes expert." The Daily Telegraph (London), Apr 24, 2004: 13.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Mr [Richard Lancelyn Green]'s friend Nicholas Rathbone Utechin, a relative of the Sherlock Holmes actor Basil Rathbone, said his death had revived rumours of 'the curse of [Arthur Conan Doyle]', that several people associated with the late author have suffered breakdowns or untimely deaths."
2611. Day, Elizabeth. "Case of the Sherlock Holmes fanatic 'who killed himself but made it look like murder'." Sunday Telegraph (London), December 12, 2004: 05.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "A leading authority on Sherlock Holmes took his own life in a way meant to suggest that a rival had murdered him, it is claimed. Richard Lancelyn Green, 50, a prolific author and collector of memorabilia relating to the fictional detective, was found garotted on his bed by police in March after trying to stop a pounds 2million auction of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's papers. Although the coroner returned an open verdict, friends and relatives of Mr Lancelyn Green now claim that the evidence suggests he took his own life in a manner that would implicate an American rival...."
2612. ———. "Case of the Sherlock Holmes fanatic 'who killed himself but made it look like murder'." The Sunday Telegraph (London), Dec 12, 2004: 05.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "In an interview with The New Yorker magazine, James Gibson, who co-edited the first comprehensive Conan Doyle bibliography with Mr [Richard Lancelyn Green] in 1983, concludes that his colleague had 'wanted [his death] to look like murder', and that he had set up a trail of 'false clues'. Mr Lancelyn Green's body was found in his flat in Kensington, west London, on March 27 with a shoelace tied round his neck and a wooden spoon, which had been used to tighten the noose, still entangled in the cord. In the weeks leading up to his death, Mr Lancelyn Green had expressed concern that a forthcoming auction of Conan Doyle's papers at Christie's, consisted mostly of items that the author's daughter, Dame Jean Conan Doyle, had left as a bequest to the British Library. Mr Lancelyn Green, a former chairman of the Sherlock Holmes Society, wanted access to the papers to research a biography of Conan Doyle. The puzzle of the answering machine message was solved by Mr Lancelyn Green's sister, who said that the machine had been made in America and had a built-in automated message. When her brother took off his message, a pre-recorded American voice answered all calls. The three telephone numbers proved to be unimportant. Two of them were reporters Mr Lancelyn Green spoke to and the other was someone at Christie's. If the theory is proved correct, Mr Lancelyn Green's death would echo the plot of one of the last Sherlock Holmes mysteries, The Problem of Thor Bridge (1922), in which a wife is found lying dead on a bridge, shot in the head at point-blank range. All the evidence points to the governess with whom the husband had been flirting but [Holmes] shows that she had killed herself to frame her rival."
2613. Disley, Jan. "Sherlock Holmes Expert Garrotted." The Mirror, April 24, 2004: 28.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The world's leading expert on fictional detective Sherlock Holmes and his creator Sir Arthur Conan Doyle was found garotted in bed, an inquest heard yesterday...."
2614. ———. "Sherlock Holmes Expert Garrotted." The Daily Mirror, Apr 24, 2004: 28.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The world's leading expert on fictional detective Sherlock Holmes and his creator Sir Arthur Conan Doyle was found garotted in bed, an inquest heard yesterday. A shoelace had been tightened around Richard Lancelyn Green's neck using a wooden spoon. In the days before his death, Mr Green, 50, was paranoid and thought a member of the American Sherlock Holmes Society was trying to discredit him, the inquest heard. Close friend Lawrence Keen said: 'He felt that his flat was bugged. He wasn't his normal self.' Mr Green, who wrote up to 10 books on Conan Doyle, was also upset to learn an archive of the author's private papers was to be auctioned. He had wanted to use them to write a definitive biography. Mr Green, from

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Kensington, London, died from asphyxia. Westminster coroner Dr Paul Knapman said he could not rule out suicide, murder or a deviant sexual act taken too far. Verdict: Open."

2615. Gilbert, Gerard. "Television: Pick of the day." The Independent (London), Dec 26, 2005: 42.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "BBC4's Arthur Conan Doyle season continues with the story of Richard Lancelyn Green (right), a Sherlock Holmes fan whose dreams of writing a biography of Conan Doyle were cut short by his mysterious death in 2004."

2616. Gilchrist, Jim. "Not so elementary." The Scotsman, no. (2007): 22.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "I think when I started out, inevitably, I had a fairly naive view of him,' says [Andrew Lycett], 'based on the available evidence, which tended to present this rather upright English gentleman, forever taking up causes and, of course, his life dominated by writing Sherlock Homes.' We're talking in London, at the Primrose Hill flat of his partner, the literary photographer Sue Greenhill, and he has just obliged our own photographer by donning a T-shirt emblazoned with the single word 'Elementary'. Doyle (whose immortal detective never actually use the phrase 'elementary my dear [John H Watson]', until an 1899 stage dramatisation by the American actor William Gillette) would turn out to be rather more complicated than Lycett expected. 'Now, after looking into his life in some detail, I suppose I'm more aware of the warts-and-all aspect of his character, and that there were these contradictions. I'm much more aware of his sheer complexity and, in a way, I look to Edinburgh as a metaphor for that. It was Robert Louis Stevenson who alighted on the 'divided city' aspect of Edinburgh and you get that in Conan Doyle's character - the fascination with the supernatural alongside that strong belief in reason and science.' But even the field of Conan Doyle scholarship turned out not to be without its dark side: during Lycett's period of research, a leading Doyle scholar and archivist, Richard Lancelyn Green, was found dead amid strange circumstances. Amid the conspiracy theories, Lancelyn Green's own massive collection, as he had bequeathed, went to the City of Portsmouth, where Doyle practised as a doctor and where Lycett was eventually able to access it - though not without some help from the actor and broadcaster Stephen Fry, who is patron of the collection. Among so much fresh documentary material the biographer was able to 'flesh out the details' of the author's close relationship with his second wife while his first, Louise, was dying of tuberculosis. The established picture was one of Doyle, although fond of [Jean Leckie], doing the honourable thing of the day. Lycett refers to Leckie as Doyle's 'mistress', but how certain is he that, prior to Louise's death and his marriage to Leckie in 1907, theirs was a physical affair? 'I think he was in this awful dilemma. He had this wife who was ill, who I don't think he was very passionate about but who he respected and liked. He did his best for her in many ways, taking her abroad to try and ensure she'd live longer. However, during this period he met and fell in love with this younger, attractive and in many ways more suitable woman.'"

2617. Grann, David. "Mysterious Circumstances." New Yorker 80, no. 39 (2004): 58-73.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Details the mystery associated with the death of Richard Lancelyn Green, a biographer of author Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, in London, England.

2618. Hirst, Christopher. "The case of the wooden spoon ; A kitchen implement is just one of the clues surrounding the mysterious death of a leading Sherlock Holmes expert. Christopher Hirst dons his deerstalker and takes up the trail." The Independent (London), Dec 21, 2004: 5.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The Edinburgh-based [Arthur Conan Doyle] specialist Owen Dudley Edwards told [David Grann] he believed [Richard Lancelyn Green] had been murdered. Edwards said that the wine-lover Green would never have drunk gin after dinner. He noted that Green was garrotted with a shoelace, but wore slip-on shoes. Garrotting, Edwards suggested, was 'a method a skilled professional would use'. Warning Grann: 'Please be careful. I don't want to see you garrotted,' he named the American, a defence specialist he described as 'one of Donald Rumsfeld's pals'. Though Grann says the American's job 'has given him a slightly menacing air - at least in the mind of Green's friends', [Jon L Lellenberg] (as we can surely call him) emerges as an admirer of Green. He says a lecture Green gave on The Hound of the Baskervilles was 'dazzling'. Grann writes: 'As he sat up in his chair and his eyes brightened, I realised I was talking not to Green's Moriarty but to his soulmate.' Professor Moriarty was, of course, Holmes's greatest enemy. Green and Lellenberg were collaborators until they fell out in the early Nineties. Lellenberg stressed that he had not seen or spoken to Green for more than a year. He was in London on the night Green died, but he had an alibi: 'He revealed with

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

some embarrassment [that] he was walking through London on a group tour of Jack the Ripper's crime scenes."

2619. Jackson, James. "Multichannel Choice." The Times (London), Dec 24, 2005: 66.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "An evening dedicated to the sleuth begins with The Man Who Loved Sherlock Holmes, a curious, far-from-elementary investigation into the demise of Richard Lancelyn Green, a leading Holmes expert. Having been embroiled in wrangles over the Conan Doyle archive, his death under strange circumstances in March 2004 revived talk of a 'Sir Arthur Conan Doyle curse', and in exploring his fate the programme reveals the obsessive world of Holmes aficionados. Also tonight, last Christmas's BBC One special, with Rupert Everett making a youthful Holmes."

2620. Lister, Sam. "Mystery death of Sherlock scholar." Daily Post, Apr 24, 2004: 7.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Richard Lancelyn Green, a biographer of the sleuth's creator, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, was discovered strangled with a shoelace tightened around his neck with a wooden spoon. In the days leading up to his death, Mr Green had grown increasingly concerned about the imminent auction of Sir Arthur's books and letters at Christie's. Mr Lancelyn Green's family home was Poulton Hall at Poulton Lancelyn."

2621. ———. "'Perfect mystery' of writer's death plot ; Claim on Sherlock Holmes expert." Daily Post, Dec 13, 2004: 9.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Richard Lancelyn Green, a biographer of author Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, was discovered garrotted with a shoelace tightened around his neck with a wooden spoon. John Gibson, who co-edited a Conan Doyle bibliography with Mr Lancelyn Green in 1983, has told how he believes his former colleague set up a false trail of clues to make the death look like foul play. He read English at Oxford University after attending Bradfield school in Berkshire and dedicated his life to researching and writing about Conan Doyle, eventually becoming chairman of the Sherlock Holmes Society of London."

2622. Lyall, Sarah. "A Tussle Over a Cache of Conan Doyle's Artifacts Ends With an Auction." New York Times, May 19, 2004: E.1.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Similar to her article in the International Herald Tribune. "...The unavailability of the material has frustrated and tantalized Conan Doyle scholars for years. A 1949 biography by the American mystery writer John Dickson Carr drew on the papers and included a list without going into detail about their contents, and a French biographer read them in the 1960's, but no researchers have been allowed to see them since. 'Having access to these papers will really open things up,' Miss Cooke said. But like some other Conan Doyle scholars, she is troubled by the sale, she said. There is the fear that the collection would be broken up and sold to anonymous collectors uninterested in making them available to academics. And there is a concern about the murky disposition of what remains of Conan Doyle's prodigious estate...."

2623. McNeil, Robert. "TV Review: A mystery Holmes would have loved." The Scotsman, Dec 27, 2005: 26.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "In March 2004, Richard Lancelyn Green died in mysterious circumstances. The wealthy Sherlock Holmes expert had been garrotted with a bootlace tightened by a wooden spoon. It was a great story for the press but, obviously, a tragedy for his family and friends. The Holmes angle trivialised the awful fact of his death, but it had also been the obsession of his life. The Man Who Loved Sherlock Holmes, narrated by Stephen Fry, traced Green's life while worrying away at his death. The coroner recorded an open verdict, though suicide was thought likely. Or was it murder? It's trite to suggest Holmes would have loved this mystery but, as my old gran never said, there's truth in trite...."

2624. Ng, U. En. "The King Street mystery." New Straits Times, Jun 10, 2004: 05.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Investigating the possibility that [Richard Lancelyn Green] might have been attempting to re-enact a scene from [Holmes], [Paul Knapman] sought references to garrotting in the stories and found one: there was a garrotter in the pay of Professor Moriarty, Holmes's nemesis. [Jon Lellenberg] contributed to the Christie's sale catalogue and met members of the Sherlock Holmes Society. Lellenberg told the Observer from Washington: 'I have no knowledge of why he was paranoid about it. It would be silly and delusional to be concerned about me because the work I do has nothing to do with intelligence and surveillance

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

at any level.' While speculation continues to surround Lancelyn Green's death, the Christie's auction proceeded without further complication...."

2625. O'Briant, Don. "The Newsstand." The Atlanta Journal - Constitution, Dec 7, 2004: D.5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...Not elementary: The New Yorker (Dec. 13) reports on a death that would have intrigued Arthur Conan Doyle. Richard Lancelyn Green, the world's leading Sherlock Holmes scholar, was found garroted in his London flat last March. Was he murdered or did he commit suicide? The evidence seems to point both ways. Green reportedly was upset that Doyle's papers were being offered for sale by Christie's, rather than going to the British Library. He hinted to family members that he was in danger because of his opposition to the auction and that a high-ranking Pentagon official was involved...."
2626. Parry, Rosemary C. "Review--'The Oxford Sherlock Holmes: The Return of Sherlock Holmes' edited with an introduction by Richard Lancelyn Green." The Ritual, no. 12 (1993): 57-59.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2627. Podgurski, David. "Dust Jacket Required." Advocate, May 23, 2004: D.5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Many scholars were baffled by news of the auction, none more so than Richard Lancelyn Green, 50, a leading [Arthur Conan Doyle] scholar, collector and fiercely outspoken opponent of the sale, who was found dead in his bed on March 27, strangled by an apparently makeshift garrot comprised of a shoelace and a wooden spoon. Lancelyn Green, according to friends and family, had said prior that his house was being bugged and that he was worried for his safety, though the coroner recently was cautious of stressing 'conspiracy theories' and ruled an open death, neither confirming nor denying murder. This, plus the fears over losing a superb resource for future Conan Doyle research, has lent the sale an air of foggy Victorian mystery and foul play. If so, it wouldn't be the first, according to those believing in 'The Curse of Conan Doyle' - several people in the past 70 years working closely on the beloved author's works have suffered peculiar fates."
2628. Probert, Sarah. "Writer's Death Link to Curse of Conan Doyle." Birmingham Post, April 24, 2004: 5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "A leading expert on fictional sleuth Sherlock Holmes grew paranoid that people were plotting against him and trying to smear his name before dying in mysterious circumstances, an inquest heard yesterday. Richard Lancelyn Green, aged 50, who co-edited a book about Holmes creator Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, was found garroted in his bed surrounded by cuddly toys and a bottle of gin...."
2629. Ramsey, Terry. "Pick of the Day." Evening Standard (London), Dec 23, 2005: 38.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The Man Who Loved Sherlock Holmes 9pm, BBC4 The world's biggest Sherlock Holmes fan, Richard Lancelyn Green, was found dead in his flat in March 2004, garroted by a bootlace tightened by a wooden spoon. Did the 50-year-old millionaire bachelor commit suicide or was he murdered? This Stephen Fry-narrated documentary digs deep into the origin of a borderline barking obsession with the fictional detective before outlining some very strange conspiracy theories."
2630. Roden, Barbara. "In Memoriam Richard Lancelyn Green." Canadian Holmes 27, no. 4 (2004): 32-34.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2631. Rosser, Nigel. "Sherlock Holmes Expert Garrotted." The Evening Standard (London), April 23, 2004: 20.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "An expert on Sherlock Holmes was found garrotted in bed surrounded by cuddly toys and a bottle of gin at his London home, an inquest heard today. Richard Lancelyn Green, 50, from Kensington, had grown paranoid that people were plotting against him. He coedited a book about Holmes creator Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. Mr Green died after a shoelace was tightened around his neck using a wooden spoon, but it was unclear if he killed himself, Westminster Coroner's Court was told. An open verdict was recorded."
2632. ———. "Sherlock Holmes Expert Garrotted." Evening Standard (London), Apr 23, 2004: 20.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Richard Lancelyn Green, 50, from Kensington, had grown paranoid that people were plotting against him. He coedited a book about Holmes creator Sir Arthur Conan Doyle...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

2633. Sapsted, David. "Conan Doyle fan leaves pounds 2m hoard to library." The Daily Telegraph (London), Aug 6, 2004: 11.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Mr [Richard Lancelyn Green] had collected 20,000 items, including a recreation of 221b Baker Street....His will, published today, leaves them to the library service in Portsmouth, where Conan Doyle lived and worked between 1882-1890 and where he helped to found Portsmouth Football Club, becoming its first goalkeeper. The collection will be catalogued before going on display in 2006."
2634. Smith, David. "One last riddle for the Baker St sleuth." The Observer, May 23, 2004: 12.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Lancelyn Green was a loner. He was gay and never had a live-in partner. His last known lover was Lawrence Keen, around 20 years his junior. They had known each for eight years, the last six as platonic friends. Keen, a carer for elderly people, was the last person to see him alive...."
2635. Smith, Lewis. "'Curse of Conan Doyle' strikes Holmes expert in Pounds 2m challenge." The Times (London), Apr 13, 2004: 8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The body of Richard Lancelyn Green was discovered when police broke into his home in Kensington, London. He was one of the foremost authorities on Conan Doyle and had concerns about the eventual destination of a Pounds 2 million collection of the author's papers that he felt should go to the British Library but which are instead due for auction...."
2636. ———. "The mysterious death of the Conan Doyle expert." The Ottawa Citizen, Apr 24, 2004: A.12.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The world's foremost authority on the fictional detective Sherlock Holmes was found strangled on his bed after trying to stop a $5-million auction of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle papers. In a mystery that would have had [Holmes] reaching for his violin, Richard Lancelyn Green was discovered in his locked millionaire's apartment surrounded by his own Conan Doyle collection...."
2637. ———. "Plot thickens with new clue to death of Sherlock's greatest fan." The Times (London), Jan 9, 2006: 14.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Richard Lancelyn Green, recognised as the leading expert on the work of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, was found garrotted in his bedroom in March 2004 aged 50. His death has intrigued fans of Sherlock Holmes the world over. An inquest was unable to establish if he killed himself, died accidentally attempting a sexual practice, or was murdered as he attempted to prevent a Pounds 1 million auction of Conan Doyle's papers from going ahead...."
2638. ———. "Puzzle of Holmes expert's death by garotte unsolved." The Times (London), Apr 24, 2004: 7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The world's foremost authority on the fictional detective Sherlock Holmes was found garrotted on his bed after trying to stop a Pounds 2 million auction of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle papers....'There was to be a sale of certain books and documents belonging to the late Sir Arthur Conan Doyle,' Dr [Paul Knapman] said. 'There's no doubt Mr Green thought it shouldn't go ahead. He was very anxious these documents should go to the British Library. I'm going to record an open verdict but in doing so I would not wish to stress the importance of any conspiracy theories.'..."
2639. Upton, Jean. "Review--'The Oxford Sherlock Holmes: The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes' edited with an introduction by Richard Lancelyn Green." The Ritual, no. 12 (1993): 49-52.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2640. Ventura, Steven. "Sherlock Riddle; Holmes expert found garotted." Daily Record, Apr 24, 2004: 6.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Richard Lancelyn Green, 50, biographer of the fictional detective's Scottish creator Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, was discovered with a shoelace tightened around his neck with a wooden spoon. Mr Green was believed to have grown increasingly concerned about an auction of Sir Arthur's diaries. The papers also reveal that Doyle clubbed seals to death while working as a surgeon on a ship in the Arctic in 1880."
2641. Wilson, Jamie. "Mystery death of Holmes expert." The Guardian (London), April 24, 2004: 5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The world's foremost expert on Sherlock Holmes was found garrotted in his bed surrounded by cuddly toys and a bottle of gin, an inquest heard yesterday. Richard Lancelyn Green, 50, had become paranoid in the days before his death, telling friends and relatives that his home was bugged and that a mysterious American was out to besmirch his reputation. He died from asphyxiation after a garrotte was tightened around his neck. Yesterday coroner Paul Knapman called it a "very unusual death" and recorded an open verdict. He said there was insufficient evidence to rule whether it was suicide, murder or a deviant sexual act taken too far that had caused the death of the former chair man of the Sherlock Holmes Society of London...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

2642. Woods, Audrey. "Conan Doyle's archive wrapped up in mystery; Author's 'lost' papers on display before sale Auction follows bizarre death of Holmes scholar." Toronto Star, May 15, 2004: A.08.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Family and friends said [Richard Lancelyn Green] had become fixated on the Conan Doyle archive, believing it should be available to students and scholars, not sold and dispersed. 'He might have been in the prime position to write the definitive biography of Conan Doyle,' said his friend, Nicholas Utechin, editor of The Sherlock Holmes Journal. At Christie's, [Tom Lamb] said the auction house had consulted Lancelyn Green - co-author of an important bibliography of Conan Doyle - as an expert and 'he was very happy to help us.' In fact, eight of the photographs that illustrate the sale catalogue are 'by courtesy of Richard Lancelyn Green.' The auctioneer expects the sale will earn about $3.5 million (U.S.) for the beneficiaries of the author's daughter-in-law, Anna Conan Doyle. In the 1940s and 1960s, two Conan Doyle scholars had access to the papers, but after the death in 1970 of the author's son Adrian, court battles broke out over the estate, and the collection was locked up in a lawyer's office for about 25 years."
2643. ———. "Mystery Attends Conan Doyle Auction; Sale Follows Strange Death of Sherlock Holmes Scholar." St. Louis Post-Dispatch (St. Louis, MO), May 16, 2004: A.15.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Sherlock Holmes enthusiasts got a rare glimpse into the private world of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle as thousands of personal papers - from his passport to his jotted-down story ideas - went on display Friday. At the same time, the archive has become entwined in a mystery worthy of Conan Doyle's celebrated fictional detective: the bizarre death of a Holmes scholar. The papers are to be auctioned Wednesday, perhaps to disappear again into the obscurity of private ownership, a fate that had obsessed Richard Lancelyn Green, a former chairman of the Sherlock Holmes Society of London...."
2644. Wordsworth, Araminta. "Conan Doyle auction opens amid mystery: Sherlock Holmes expert who opposed sale found dead." National Post, May 18, 2004: A.3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "A treasure-trove of material on the life and works of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle is to be auctioned off at Christie's in London tomorrow against the backdrop of a mysterious death that might have fascinated the man who created Sherlock Holmes. Mr. [Richard Lancelyn Green], a former chairman of the Sherlock Holmes Society and author of a biography of Conan Doyle, was discovered dead in his bed on March 27. He was surrounded by fluffy toys. Nearby was a bottle of gin. Friends and relatives of Mr. Lancelyn Green said the biographer was upset that the Conan Doyle papers were going to be sold off at auction piecemeal. He wanted them to be given to the British Library so they could be used by scholars, rather than disappear into private hands."
2645. Wright, Jonathan. "The Guide: Television and Radio: Television: Boxing Day: Watch this: The Man Who Loved Sherlock Holmes 9pm, BBC4." The Guardian (London), Dec 24, 2005: 71.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "In March 2004, Richard Lancelyn Green was found dead, garrotted by a bootlace tightened with a wooden spoon. Millionaire Green was the world's foremost Sherlock Holmes expert, a man whose collection of Conan Doyle memorabilia was valued at pounds 2m when it was bequeathed to Portsmouth Library Service. But was Green's death a case of suicide or was it, as some have speculated, somehow related to an auction of Conan Doyle's so-called 'lost papers' at Christie's? A portrait of the kind of mystery that Holmes himself might have investigated, and a glimpse into the obsessive world of Sherlockians."

07A SHERLOCKIANS AND THE SOCIETIES -- SHERLOCKIANS -- H (23)

2646. "50 Years Ago: Howard Haycraft and Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 1, no. 3 (1997): 5.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Highlights Howard Haycraft's contributions to Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine and reprints part of a 1947 column by Haycraft in EQMM. Includes a reproduction of a cover of EQMM from the John Bennett Shaw Collection and the first page of an article by Haycraft in the November 1947 EQMM (from the Haycraft Collection).

2647. "Peter Haining Writer and anthologist whose industrious output included horror, crime, cricket and history." The Daily Telegraph (London), December 28, 2007: 31.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Peter Haining, who has died aged 67, was a prolific writer and editor of more than 130 anthologies on subjects ranging from crime to horror, witchcraft and fantasy. In all, Haining produced more than 200 books, including what one critic acclaimed as 'some of the best anthologies of fantasy and horror of our time'....As well as his collections of other people's writing, Haining wrote history and biographies of fictional historical characters such as Sweeney Todd and Spring-Heeled Jack. He wrote an early novel under his own name and produced several crime anthologies using the pseudonyms Ric Alexander and Richard Peyton....Haining also published several reference books about the television series Doctor Who, notably Doctor Who: a Celebration; Two Decades in Time and Space (1983) and Doctor Who: the Key To Time, a Year-by-Year Record (1984). Another area of Haining's expertise was the Sherlock Holmes oeuvre, of which he had an encyclopaedic knowledge; he edited A Sherlock Holmes Compendium (1980) and several further books on the detective. Other film and television tie-ins featuring characters from literature included books on Maigret, Poirot and James Bond. Eccentrically given to outrageous shirts and silly hats, Haining habitually clipped and tore items out of newspapers and magazines and filed them away, a magpie habit that yielded ideas for many of his books....While working on his horror collections, Haining was told by a book dealer about four boxes of cuttings and scrapbooks on Sherlock Holmes, the lifetime collection of a solicitor who had started it in about 1910. This became The Sherlock Holmes Scrapbook (1975), a pull-together of articles, clippings and illustrations supporting the myth of Conan Doyle's character. The book prompted interest from Granada Television, which was making a series starring Jeremy Brett as Holmes, and Haining was invited to produce a book on the making of it, The Television Sherlock Holmes (1991)....Haining assembled 28 pieces on cricket by, among others, Trollope, Travers, Conan Doyle and John Arlott in LBW - Laughter Before Wicket (1986)...."

2648. "Rogue's Gallery, Potted Biographies of Noted Sherlockians, Robert W. Hahn, BSI; The Five Hundred Year Old Sherlockian: An Interview by Mike Malice, CBS*." The Ritual, no. 22 (1998): 51-54.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

2649. "Rogue's Gallery, Potted Biographies of Noted Sherlockians, William Hyder." The Ritual, no. 20 (1997): 48-50.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

2650. "Sherlock Holmes: Victorian Sleuth to Modern Hero [advertisement]." Canadian Holmes 17, no. 3 (1994): 48.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Announcement of a conference held at Bennington College in Vermont, June 23-26, 1994. Featured speakers include Nicholas Meyer and Edward Hanna.

2651. Bergquist, John. "100 Years Ago." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 5, no. 1 (2001): 2.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses a letter in the December, 1901 issue of The Strand magazine (#132, Vol. 22, labeled "Grand Christmas Double Number") contained in the "Curiosities" section titled "Where Sherlock Holmes Died" dealing with the Reichenbach Falls (along with additional comment on Dr. Philip Hench's later interest in the Falls).

2652. Cochran, William R. "From the Editor's Commonplace Book." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 1 (1994): 62-63.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // On the demise of the periodical Baker Street Miscellanea, Julie and Al Rosenblatt's 4-day mini-course on Holmes at Vassar College, an article in MHQ by Thaddeus Holt, the Folio Society's version of the Canon, the 25th anniversary of the Noble Bachelors of St. Louis, the Sherlock Holmes Society of London's "Back to Baker Street" festival, and the Books of Michael Harrison.

2653. Darlington, Frank, George A. Vanderburgh, Thelma Beam, Doug Wigglesworth, Bob Coghill, and Trevor S.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- Raymond. "Bookshelf" Reviews of Oxford's The Sign of the Four, The Memoirs of Sherlock Holmes, The Case Book of Sherlock Holmes, The Return of Sherlock Holmes, The Valley of Fear, His Last Bow and The Books of Michael Harrison. Canadian Holmes 17, no. 4 (1994): 30-36.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2654. Davies, David Stuart. "Review--'The Worth of the Game' by David L. Hammer." The Musgrave Papers, no. 6 (1993): 108.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2655. Dunn, Dave. "Strictly Personal: Edmund Bruce Holmes." Canadian Holmes 23, no. 2 (1999): 37-38.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2656. ———. "Strictly Personal: Evelyn Herzog." Canadian Holmes 23, no. 3 (2000): 44-45.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2657. ———. "Strictly Personal: Mark Hacksley." Canadian Holmes 22, no. 3 (1999): 38-39.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2658. Farrell, John. "On the Terrace (Don Hardenbrook, BSI)." Shoso-In Bulletin 12, no. (2002): 205-206.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2659. ———. "Passings -- Don Hardenbrook." Baker Street West 17, no. 1 (2001): 57.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2660. Hall, John. "Review--'From Baltimore to Baker Street' by William Hyder." The Ritual, no. 17 (1996): 72-79.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "A past Gasogene of The Six Napoleons of Baltimore offers Sherlockian essays and dramatic readings that combine erudition with humour - and occasionally challenge such revered scholars as Vincent Starrett, Michael Harrison, and William S. Baring-Gould."
2661. ———. "Robert W. Hahn." The Ritual, no. 23 (1999): 47.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2662. Levin, Alfred A. "Remembrances of Bob Hahn." Shoso-In Bulletin 9, no. (1999): 1-3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2663. Raymond, Trevor S. "Michael Harrison." Canadian Holmes 17, no. 4 (1994): 36.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Notes the work of Tina Rhea in assembling a bibliography of the works of Michael Harrison, now in a monograph, The Books of Michael Harrison, and available from the compiler.
2664. Sveum, Richard J. "50 Years Ago." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 4, no. 4 (2000): 3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on Charles Honce and his work. "In 1950, the latest of Charles Honce's fine press Christmas books was published by the Golden Eagle Press in Mount Vernon. The 58-page To Talk of Many Things was limited to 88 copies. It was designed and printed by S. A. Jacobs, who attended the 1950 BSI Dinner with Honce. The Sherlock Holmes Collections has John Bennett Shaw's copy of this book, whose cover page indicates it is "A Book Lovers Opinion on a Lot of Other Subjects Including Eating, Drinking, Traveling, Decorating, Entertaining, and Dressing and Undressing...."
2665. ———. "From the President." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 3, no. 2 (1999): 4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Words of thanks to Jamie Hubbs, Collections Specialist, who leaves to go back to school and Bruce Southworth, who concludes his work as editor of the newsletter. Also a word on the upcoming Friends membership meeting and on the donation of collections.
2666. ———. "The Hubbs Family Gift." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 3, no. 4 (1999): 1, 5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on the gift of the Hubbs family for the cataloging of the book and serial

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

portions of the Collections. The project gift, which will take three years, was matched by the University Libraries. Additional information is provided on members of the Hubbs family who have played such an important role with the collections. Includes a photograph.

2667. ———. "The View from Laurel Cottage." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 2, no. 4 (1998): 1-4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Profile of lawyer, scholar, writer, publisher, philanthropist, and Sherlockian David L. Hammer.
2668. Vande Water, Bill. "Howard Haycraft and the Detective Story." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 3, no. 3 (1999): 1, 6.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Observations on Howard Haycraft, a graduate of the University of Minnesota and later president of the H. W. Wilson Company, and his connections with the Sherlockian world.

07A SHERLOCKIANS AND THE SOCIETIES -- SHERLOCKIANS -- HAMMER, DAVID L. (4)

2669. Diamond, Susan Z. "Review - A Distinct Touch, Watson by David L. Hammer." The Serpentine Muse 21, no. 4 (2005): 24.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2670. Pollock, Donald K. "Book Review--'The Worth of the Game, Being a Final Guide to the England of Sherlock Holmes' by David L. Hammer." Baker Street Miscellanea, no. 74 (1994): 52.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2671. Sveum, Richard J. "A Word from our President." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 2, no. 4 (1998): 3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Notes his visit with David and Audrey Hammer and the many donations of correspondence with John Bennett Shaw and back issues of periodicals that have been received by the Collections.
2672. White, Kathryn. "Review--'The Before-Breakfast Pipe' by David Hammer." The Musgrave Papers, no. 8 (1995): 118-119.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

07A SHERLOCKIANS AND THE SOCIETIES -- SHERLOCKIANS -- HOLLYER, CAMERON (3)

2673. Doyle, Michael et al. "Letters to the Editor concerning Cameron Hollyer." Canadian Holmes 24, no. 2 (2000): 45.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2674. Dunn, Dave. "Strictly Personal: Cameron Hollyer." Canadian Holmes 20, no. 4 (1997): 28-29.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2675. McCausland, Dayna et al. "His Last Bow: Cameron Hollyer, 1926-2000." Canadian Holmes 24, no. 1 (2000): 14-29.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

07A SHERLOCKIANS AND THE SOCIETIES -- SHERLOCKIANS -- HOWLETT, ANTHONY D. (4)

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

2676. "Anthony Howlett." The Times (London), September 16, 2003: 31.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Barrister who started the Sherlock Holmes Society but had a soft spot for the detective's nemesis, Moriarty. Anthony Howlett, Remembrancer of the City of London and founder of the Sherlock Holmes Society of London, was born on December 30, 1924. He died on August 21, 2003, aged 78....He revived the society under its present name after the Second World War, and acted for more than 30 years as secretary, chairman and, finally, president. Under his management, its membership grew from 130 to more than 1,000 members, acquiring in the process a long waiting list...."
2677. "Barrister was Sherlock Holmes fanatic: 'I've spent my life being pompous,' he said. He relaxed with the great detective." The Gazette (Montreal), August 30, 2003: E5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Obituary of Anthony Howlett. "I've spent my life being pompous,' he said. He relaxed with the great detective. Anthony Howlett, who died on Aug. 21 aged 78, was a barrister at the Board of Trade and Remembrancer of the City of London; but he was more widely known as founder and presiding inspiration of the Sherlock Holmes Society of London. The original Sherlock Holmes Society, founded by A.G. Macdonell in 1934, had been a casualty of the war (and of the founder's indiscretion with the wife of the president). The origins of the new society were laid in 1951 at the time of the Sherlock Holmes Exhibition, which was mounted by Marylebone Public Library as its contribution to the Festival of Britain. Tony Howlett, then a newly fledged barrister with too much time on his hands, had haunted the Marylebone library to lend what help he could; the frequency of his visits was not uninfluenced by the presence of Freda Pearce, the assistant librarian who, a year later, became his wife...."
2678. "In Memorial Anthony Howlett." Baker Street West 19, no. 2 (2003): 28-30.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2679. "Obituary of Anthony Howlett Barrister who restarted the Sherlock Holmes Society and re-enacted the encounter at Reichenbach Falls." The Daily Telegraph (London), August 27, 2003.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Anthony Howlett, who died on August 21 aged 78, was a barrister at the Board of Trade and Remembrancer of the City of London; but he was more widely known as founder and presiding inspiration of the Sherlock Holmes Society of London. The original Sherlock Holmes Society, founded by A G Macdonell in 1934, had been a casualty of the war (and of the founder's indiscretion with the wife of the president). The origins of the new society were laid in 1951 at the time of the Sherlock Holmes Exhibition, which was mounted by Marylebone Public Library as its contribution to the Festival of Britain. Tony Howlett, then a newly-fledged barrister with too much spare time on his hands, had haunted the Marylebone library to lend what help he could; the frequency of his visits was not uninfluenced by the presence of Miss Freda Pearce, the assistant librarian who, a year later, became his wife...."

07A SHERLOCKIANS AND THE SOCIETIES -- SHERLOCKIANS -- J (2)

2680. Raymond, Trevor S. "In memoriam Owen C. Jones." Canadian Holmes 28, no. 3 (2005): 47.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2681. Tinsley, Debbie. "Nan James obituary." The Camden House Journal 18, no. 6 (1996): insert.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

07A SHERLOCKIANS AND THE SOCIETIES -- SHERLOCKIANS -- K (4)

2682. "Letters to Baker Street." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 2 (1994): 118-119.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Letters from Jon Lellenberg, Tina Rhea, and Brad Keefauver.
2683. Baker, Jody. "In the Beginning Was Ronald Knox." Shoso-In Bulletin 8, no. (1998): 7-9.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

2684. Dunn, Dave. "Strictly Personal: Joseph Theodore Kessel." Canadian Holmes 22, no. 4 (1999): 39-40.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

2685. Sexton, David. "Spoofs and dupes Radio." Sunday Telegraph (London), April 28, 2002: 11.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // All the Knoxes loved jokes and spoofs, as Penelope Fitzgerald shows in her wonderful joint biography of them, The Knox Brothers, just republished. As boys, for example, they wrote a letter to Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, denouncing inconsistencies in the Sherlock Holmes stories and including five dried orange pips, in allusion to the threatening letter in The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes. Later, Ronald Knox expanded the joke into an essay called "Studies in the Literature of Sherlock Holmes", a parody of Biblical scholarship in which he pretended to detect, from careful study of the text, that some of the stories must be fictitious inventions by a drunken Watson. Conan Doyle was delighted by the spoof and wrote to Ronald Knox to thank him. Nowadays we're rather more sensitive. Or so it would seem from the first programme, called Panic in the Streets, in a new series, The History of Fear (Radio 4, Monday), presented by the feminist historian, Joanna Bourke. On January 16, 1926, Father Ronald Knox (as he was by then) went into a studio in Edinburgh and delivered a talk over the air called 'Broadcasting from the Barricades'. An introductory statement explained that the talk was a work of humour and imagination and would be illustrated with 'sound effects', then a novelty. Knox proceeded to describe a riot of the unemployed in central London as though it were happening in real time. Parliament and the Savoy Hotel were blown up and the Minister of Traffic was hanged from a lamp-post. Meanwhile, an assistant in the studio produced crashes and bangs and even the sound of breaking glass. The broadcast took in many listeners, and Father Knox was much reprimanded in the press...."

07A SHERLOCKIANS AND THE SOCIETIES -- SHERLOCKIANS -- KLINGER, LESLIE S. (43)

2686. "Columnist's Choice." Booklist 102, no. 9/10 (2006): 78-78.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article presents the author's top ten list of series, sets, and multivolume works from 2005 and earlier. Topping the list are "The Complete Calvin and Hobbes," by Bill Watterson, "The Complete Peanuts," by Charles Schulz, "The New Annotated Sherlock Holmes," edited by Leslie S. Klinger, "Oxford Illustrated Dickens," and the "Oxford Illustrated Jane Austen."

2687. "The New Annotated Dracula." Publishers Weekly 255, no. 34 (2008): 48-48.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "The New Annotated Dracula," by Bram Stoker and edited by Leslie S. Klinger. Norton, $39.95 (624p) ISBN 978-0-393-06450-6. "Klinger brings the same impressive breadth of knowledge that distinguished The New Annotated Sherlock Holmes to this definitive examination of one of the classic horror novels of all time. Adopting the conceit that Stoker's narrative is based on fact, Klinger elucidates the plot and historical context for both Stoker devotees and those more familiar with Count Dracula from countless popular culture versions. Because he had privileged access to the typescript Stoker delivered to his publisher, Klinger is able to note changes between it and the first edition and comment on the reasons for them. Through close reading, Klinger raises questions about such matters as the role of lead vampire-hunter Van Helsing and whether the villainous count is actually dispatched at book's end. An introduction by Neil Gaiman, numerous illustrations, essays on topics ranging from Dracula in the movies to the academic response, and much more enhance the package. 8-city author tour."

2688. "The New Annotated Sherlock Holmes (Book)." Publishers Weekly 251, no. 36 (2004): 48-48.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book "The New Annotated Sherlock Holmes," by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, compiled by Leslie S. Klinger.

2689. "The New Annotated Sherlock Holmes: The Novels." Publishers Weekly 252, no. 35 (2005): 37.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book "The New Annotated Sherlock Homes: The Novels," by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, edited by Leslie S. Klinger.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

2690. Albrecht, Bob, and Paul Davis. "Elemental, my dear Holmes, elemental." Learning and Leading with Technology 27, no. 8 (2000): 22-27.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Web sites and activities that invite students to examine some of the mysteries of Mars and the human body are presented. The Web sites offer information on the percentages by mass of the elements of the human body, the atmospheres of the Earth and some other planets, and the structures of Earth and Mars. The activities encourage students to make a table and bar chart showing the masses in kilograms of the elements in their bodies and create a table and bar chart showing the percent by mass of water, fats, carbohydrates, proteins, and bone in the human body of their choice. The introduction and concluding sections of the article contain multiple references to Holmes and Doyle. The last section includes information on the first appearance of the phrase "elementary, my dear Watson, elementary." There are additional references to the timeline created by Les Klinger as part of his research.
2691. Baker, Simon. "The Character Who Refused to Die." Spectator 299, no. 9254/9255 (2005): 64-64.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews books "The New Annotated Sherlock Holmes, Volume III: The Novels," by Arthur Conan Doyle and "Sherlock Holmes: The Unauthorized Biography," by Nick Rennison.
2692. Bollen, Rebecca. "The New Annotated Sherlock Holmes. 2 vols. (Book)." Library Journal 129, no. 19 (2004): 60-60.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book "The New Annotated Sherlock Holmes," by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle.
2693. Brown, Craig. "Clued up; Avast tome that pores over every detail of Sherlock Holmes's life means you'll always be." Mail on Sunday (London), January 1, 2006: 59.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of The New Annotated Sherlock Holmes by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, edited with notes by Leslie S. Klinger. "...The Annotated Sherlock Holmes is a mad and magnificent undertaking: 3,500 beautiful pages, spread across three weighty volumes, containing every Sherlock Holmes story ever written, hundreds of apposite pictures, ranging from film stills to maps to contemporary illustrations, plus acres of witty and scholarly (and how rarely those two adjectives go together!) notes...."
2694. Chapman, Paul M. "Review--'The Sherlock Holmes Reference Library: The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes' by Leslie S. Klinger." The Ritual, no. 22 (1998): 71-72.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2695. ———. "Review--'The Sherlock Holmes Reference Library: The Memoirs of Sherlock Holmes' by Leslie S. Klinger." The Ritual, no. 25 (2000): 63-64.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2696. Cochran, William R. "A Review of The New Annotated Sherlock Holmes: The Novels by Leslie Klinger." The Camden House Journal 27, no. 10 (2005): insert.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2697. Dahlin, Robert, Natalie Danford, Charles Hix, Karole Riippa, and Laurele Riippa. "Fall 2004 Hardcovers: Fiction/Mystery & Suspense." Publishers Weekly 251, no. 32 (2004): 161-164.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Features several mystery and suspense books including a Holmes citation: "The New Annotated Sherlock Holmes (Nov., $75, boxed), Edited by Leslie S. Klinger, is an illustrated two-volume edition that reassembles 56 classic stories in chronological order, and includes biographies, historical and cultural details."
2698. Dalrymple, Theodore. "Holmes and his commentators." The New Criterion 24, no. 3 (2005): 4-8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Avid Sherlock Holmes fan Theodore Dalrymple takes issue with the annotations in three canonical editions of Arthur Conan Doyle's work. The three are William S. Baring-Gould's of 1967; the Oxford Sherlock Holmes of 1993; and the just published The New Annotated Sherlock Holmes: The Novels, edited by Leslie S. Klinger.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

2699. Fisher, Benjamin Franklin. "The Poets of the Nineties." Victorian Poetry 40, no. 3 (2002): 328-332.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes reference to Doyle and Holmes. "Several recent books merit attention as important contributions to 1890s studies....Two books that might not immediately suggest '1890s,' but that nevertheless relate to our concerns, merit notice in the anniversary year of the primary text, Conan Doyle's The Hound of the Baskervilles, one of the most poetic pieces of fiction during the era, and certainly his most poetic piece of prose. First, a new edition, edited and annotated by Leslie S. Klinger (Gasogene Books), a title in the 'Sherlock Holmes Reference Library' series, offers a useful text of the novel, with explanations for variant readings (most from published texts, as only a small part of Doyle's novel survives in manuscript form), with helpful explanatory notes and an extensive, equally valuable, bibliography of secondary works. Despite the admittedly zany nature of some of the secondary items, sufficient meat and potatoes for the more serious make this a book not to be overlooked by students of the era. Dovetail reading appears in The Hound of the Baskervilles, Chapter XI (Baker Street Irregulars in cooperation with the New York Public Library--Berg Collection [2001]), which offers a facsimile of the one entire chapter extant in manuscript form, along with essays by eminent Doyle scholars concerning the nature of the novel. Reiterated comments about the importance of sense of place and landscape reveal just how linked The Hound is to other Nineties texts, such as Housman's, and how poetic is its technique, with, for example, Watson as 'chorus' (p. 68). One critic also compares this revival of legend and myth (Victorian poets' repeated practices), folk hero (Holmes) and all, to Beowulf (pp. 64-65)."
2700. Fuller, Graham. "The Game's Afoot: Dr. Watson gives his verdict on a must-have Sherlock Holmes edition." Daily News (New York), January 9, 2005: 19.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of Les Klinger's The New Annotated Sherlock Holmes. "...That quibble aside, I am led to believe this is the most important edition dedicated to our collaboration since William S. Baring-Gould's 'The Annotated Sherlock Holmes' of 1967. Reading the stories again, I conclude that, above and beyond their enormous criminological value, they paint an extraordinarily rich picture of the Victorian and Edwardian eras, a notion enhanced by the copious photographs and amusing illustrations by Mr. Paget and others. (The cinematic 'stills' will indubitably annoy you)."
2701. Glenn, Joshua. "Posner V. Sherlock." The Boston Globe, October 10, 2004: D2.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Richard Posner's scathing reviews of everything from feminist legal theory to the 9/11 commission report have earned him a reputation as a kind of literary hanging judge. Now, the eminent jurist and legal scholar has taken aim at a new target - Sherlock Holmes. In a review of 'The New Annotated Sherlock Holmes: The Complete Short Stories' (Norton) in the Oct. 11 issue of The New Republic, Posner heaps scorn upon the forensic methods of Conan Doyle's fictional sleuth...."
2702. Goldfarb, Clifford S. "Holmes: The game is truly afoot." The Globe and Mail (Toronto), December 18, 2004: D6.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of Les Klinger's The New Annotated Sherlock Holmes. "...Les Klinger is a Los Angeles tax lawyer and a highly respected Sherlockian scholar. He set out to produce The Sherlock Holmes Reference Library, a nine-volume work intended for serious devotees, summarizing the literature on each of the stories. Partway through this process, which still has three volumes to go, Klinger undertook to produce a more popular work, intended to appeal to the general reader. The result is the very attractive, massive two-volume (1,945 pages) The New Annotated Sherlock Holmes, containing all 56 short stories, in the order in which they were published in The Strand Magazine between 1891 and 1927. A third volume, containing the four novels, will be published in late 2005...."
2703. Gray, Patrick. "The New Annotated Sherlock Holmes." Touchstone: A Journal of Mere Christianity 19, no. 1 (2006): 51-52.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book "The New Annotated Sherlock Holmes," written by Arthur Conan Doyle and edited by Leslie S. Klinger.
2704. Herbert, Paul. "'Insensibly one begins to twist facts to suit theories, instead of theories to suit facts': a response to Leslie S. Klinger's 'From Prussia with Love'." The Ritual, no. 23 (1999): 36-38.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

2705. Hickling, Alfred. "Saturday Review: A four-pipe poseur: Alfred Hickling on the definitive guide to Holmes: The New Annotated Sherlock Holmes edited by Leslie S Klinger 1,878pp, Norton, GBP35." The Guardian (London), December 4, 2004: 9.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Ever since Holmes made his debut in Arthur Conan Doyle's novel A Study in Scarlet in 1887, there has been no shortage of bizarre theories to explain the perplexing inconsistencies of the detective's career. Did he tumble to his death at the Reichenbach Falls? Where was he educated? Did he know Freud? And just how many wives had Dr Watson? These are questions that have tickled the imaginations of Holmes addicts since approximately 1911, when the first piece of Sherlockian scholarship was published by Father Ronald Knox, who proposed to apply the detective's own methods of deduction to the narrative....A small army of narrative sleuths has been sifting through the canon ever since, on the basis that there is nothing scholars love more than a giant, contradictory codex in which nothing adds up. The first notable attempt to present an overall digest of Sherlockian suppositions came with the publication of William S Baring-Gould's monumental Annotated Sherlock Holmes in 1967, which is still considered to be the standard work of reference. A more recent milestone was reached with the 1993 publication of the Oxford Sherlock Holmes, the most authoritative modern edition of the texts, though its editor, Owen Dudley Edwards, insists on regarding the stories as fictions created by Conan Doyle, a position that makes him, in the eyes of certain Sherlockians, a bit of a killjoy. Leslie S Klinger's enormous New Annotated Sherlock Holmes now arrives to remedy that position.
2706. Hobbs, Don. "Review--A Study in Scarlet edited by Leslie Klinger." The Holmes & Watson Report 8, no. 3 (2004): 21.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2707. Hoffert, Barbara. "Prepub Alert." Library Journal 133, no. 10 (2008): 72-76.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews several books including Stoker, Bram. The New Annotated Dracula. Norton. Oct. 2008. 464p. ISBN 978-0-393-06450-6. $39.95. "Leslie S. Klinger (The New Annotated Sherlock Holmes) digs through myth, culture, and graveyards in Transylvania to illuminate Stoker's dark and creepy tale. With an eight-city tour."
2708. Jackson, Lorne. "Homing in on Holmes; Books, Leslie S. Klinger, The Annotated Sherlock Holmes - Volume III (Norton, pounds 30)." Sunday Mercury, January 15, 2006: 6.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "That famously obsessive-compulsive detective, Sherlock Holmes, has always attracted his fair share of obsessive-compulsive fans....But even the most ardent Sherlockian is likely to be overpowered by the Annotated Sherlock Holmes, which wallows in the minutiae surrounding the master detective. The third and final volume contains all the novels that Conan Doyle wrote about the pipe-puffing sleuth (*2). Of course, the books are available elsewhere, and at a cheaper price. What makes this edition, and two previous ones, indispensable is the addition of maps, film images, contemporary illustrations and a free-for-all of fabulous footnotes (*3) (*4). Leslie S Klinger, the editor of the voluptuous volume, is the pedant's pedant, having pored over the Holmes canon with a pin-prick passion for painstaking detail...."
2709. ———. "How trail of The Hound led to Brum; Unmasked: the Baskerville who inspired Sherlock Holmes classic." Sunday Mercury, February 26, 2006: 14.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "A leading Sherlock Holmes expert claims The Hound Of The Baskervilles might never have been written if Arthur Conan Doyle had not lived in Birmingham. Leslie Klinger says the creator of the famous Baker Street sleuth copied the name from the influential 18th century Birmingham printer, John Baskerville. Although studying for his medical degree in Edinburgh, Doyle spent several months working in the West Midlands from 1879 until 1882. Based in Aston, he took up a temporary medical assistantship with a local general practitioner. And while living in the area, he is believed to have come across the name of Baskerville...."
2710. Keefauver, Brad. "Review--'The Date Being---? A Compendium of Chronological Data Expanded and Revised' by Andrew Jay Peck and Leslie S. Klinger." The Holmes & Watson Report 1, no. 1 (1997): 20.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

2711. Klinger, Leslie S. "Review: The Broker, by John Grisham." Los Angeles Times, January 9, 2005: 4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // In Books section. Review of The Broker by John Grisham.
2712. Leitch, Thomas. "The Long & the Short." Kirkus Reviews 73, no. 17 (2005): 928-928.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Offers observation on the disparity between achievement in short mystery fiction and long. Praise for Leslie S. Klinger's editing of the book "New Annotated Sherlock Holmes"; Critique of the novels included in the book; Strength of Agatha Christie's anthology "Masterpieces in Miniature."
2713. Leith, Sam. "A man of many dressing-gowns." Spectator 296, no. 9200 (2004): 36.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book "The New Annotated Sherlock Holmes," edited by Leslie Klinger.
2714. Levin, Martin. "Holmes eternal." The Globe and Mail (Toronto), April 23, 2005: D17.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Arthur Conan Doyle believed in fairies, ectoplasmic emanations and spirits beyond the grave. Still, this credulous man also gave us a rationalist immortal in Sherlock Holmes. The Sherlockian canon, 56 stories and four novels, is, despite more internal contradictions than Marx's capitalism, still read and revered by millions, has spawned countless films and television series, and numberless imitations, homages and pastiches. The unabated fascination with the great consulting detective since his first appearance in A Study in Scarlet in Beeton's Christmas Annual of 1887 shows a staying power unmatched among his sleuthing rivals...." A number of current works, e.g. Klinger's annotated, Chabon's Final Solution, are noted.
2715. McGrath, Charles. "Sherlock Holmes's eternal appeal." The International Herald Tribune, May 24, 2005: 10.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Mention of recent works on Holmes including Klinger's Annotated and Carr's Italian Secretary, among others. "Sherlock Holmes, the subject of a spate of recent books, has enjoyed what must surely be the most extensive afterlife of any character in fiction. To begin with, he survived the attempt of his own creator, Arthur Conan Doyle, to kill him off in the 1893 story 'The Final Problem,' the one that begins with Watson writing, 'It is with a heavy heart that I take up my pen'..."
2716. Miller, Laura. "Zelig on Baker Street." New York Times Book Review 154, no. 52998 (2004): 31-31.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents an essay on Sherlock Holmes and his many resurrections since his invention some 150 years ago. Contention that the book "Curious Incident of the Dog in the Night-Time," by Mark Haddon, not only gets its title from author Arthur Conan Doyle but also parallels the way that trusty Watson could notice facts without grasping their meaning; "The Hamilton Case," by Michelle de Kretser which also makes mention of Holmes; "Final Solution," by Michael Chabon where an elderly unnamed man (suggested to be Holmes) is brought out of retirement to solve a case; Criticism of "The New Annotated Sherlock Holmes" edited by Leslie S. Klinger who is a confirmed Sherlockian; How the campiness of the stories remains a winning feature after all this time.
2717. Nawotka, Edward. "Sherlock Holmes stories, and much more." The Gazette (Montreal), January 22, 2005: H6.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of The New Annotated Sherlock Holmes: The Complete Short Stories, Edited by Leslie Klinger, Norton, 1,878 pages.
2718. Olding, Alan C. "Wigmore Street Postbag: Klinger's Annotated." The Sherlock Holmes Journal 27, no. 2 (2005): 88.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2719. Picker, Leonard. "Not So elementary." Publishers Weekly 251, no. 36 (2004): 49-49.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Interviews author Leslie S. Klinger about his book "The New Annotated Sherlock Holmes." Comparison between his book "The New Annotated Sherlock Holmes" and the original "Annotated Sherlock Holmes"; His method of researching and choosing his sources; Reason behind his decision to give hints to the mysteries' solutions in each story introduction.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

2720. Posner, Richard A. "CSI: Baker Street." New Republic 231, no. 15 (2004): 47-49.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book The New Annotated Sherlock Holmes: The Complete Short Stories, by Arthur Conan Doyle, edited by Leslie S. Klinger.
2721. Ross, Oscar, Nicholas Utechin, M. J. Elliott, Catherine Cooke, William Nadel, and Roger Johnson. "I Am an Omnivorous Reader': reviews of On the Trail of Arthur Conan Doyle: An Illustrated Devon Tour by Brian W. Pugh and Paul Spiring, A Remarkable Mixture: Award-Winning Articles from The Baker Street Journal by Steve Rothman, Anthony Boucher: A Bibliography by Jeffery Marks, The Science of Sherlock Holmes--from Baskerville Hall to The Valley of Fear: The Real Forensics Behind the Great Detective's Greatest Cases by E. J. Wagner, Rathbone Returns! A Misadventure Called Sherlock Holmes by S. E. Dahlinger and Glen S. Miranker, The Casebook of Sherlock Holmes 2 by Arthur Conan Doyle, The Speckled Band and The Beryl Coronet by The Sherlock Holmes Society of London, You Know My Methods, Watson by David Hammer, Baker Street Rambles by Leslie S. Klinger, From the Archives of Sherlock, A Study in Celluloid, The Quintessential Sherlock Holmes by Richard L. Boyer, and The Game's Afoot edited by David Stuart Davies." The Sherlock Holmes Journal 29, no. 4 (2008): 157-161.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2722. Sullivan, Greg. "Review--The Sherlock Holmes Reference Library: A Study in Scarlet edited by Leslie Klinger." The Holmes & Watson Report 5, no. 4 (2001): 21, 30.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2723. Tardiff, Jill A., Randy Kato, Shannon Maughan, John Niernberger, Diane Patrick, Karole Riippa, Laurele Riippa, and Mary Ann Tennenhouse. "Working the Floor." Publishers Weekly 251, no. 18 (2004): 59-165.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents information on several exhibitors at the 2004 BookExpo America. Empire Publishing Service lists The Ultimate Sherlock Holmes Encyclopedia by Jack Tracy. W.W. Norton & Co. lists the New Annotated Sherlock Holmes by Leslie Klinger.
2724. Weingarten, Marc. "Case of the Lawyer With a Sherlock Holmes Bent." The New York Times, December 30, 2004: E1.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Portrait of Klinger and review of his "New Annotated Sherlock Holmes." "Leslie S. Klinger is not one of those Sherlock Holmes obsessives who feel compelled to actually live as if they were distant relatives of the fictional detective. He doesn't greet visitors wearing a deerstalker hat and an Inverness cape, and his cheerful contemporary home in Malibu, Calif., is a far cry from the Victorian lodging house at 221B Baker Street where Holmes and his trusty sidekick, Dr. John Watson, lived in London. But as Holmes himself could attest, first impressions can be deceiving. Step into Mr. Klinger's home office and you will find the evidence of his abiding passion: Thousands of books about one of the world's most famous crime busters. This is the raw material for Mr. Klinger's project 'The New Annotated Sherlock Holmes,' a two-volume, 10-pound collection of all 56 Holmes short stories by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, complete with Mr. Klinger's exhaustive footnotes...."
2725. ———. "A lawyer's Sherlockian pursuit." The International Herald Tribune, January 14, 2005: 9.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Leslie Klinger is not one of those Sherlock Holmes obsessives who feel compelled to actually live as if they were distant relatives of the fictional detective. He doesn't greet visitors wearing a deerstalker hat and an Inverness cape, and his cheerful contemporary home in Malibu, California, is a far cry from the Victorian lodging house at 221B Baker St. where Holmes and his trusty sidekick, Dr. John Watson, lived in London. But as Holmes himself could attest, first impressions can be deceiving. Step into Klinger's home office and you will find the evidence of his abiding passion: Thousands of books about one of the world's most famous crime busters. This is the raw material for Klinger's project 'The New Annotated Sherlock Holmes,' a hefty two-volume collection of all 56 Holmes short stories by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, complete with Klinger's exhaustive footnotes...."
2726. ———. "Sinking his critical teeth into 'Dracula'; After investigating and annotating Doyle's Sherlock Holmes tales, Leslie Klinger focuses on Stoker's novel." Los Angeles Times, October 31, 2008: E14.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "After writing nearly 2,000 footnotes for Arthur Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

corpus, one might think Leslie Klinger would take a respite. After all, he has a thriving tax law practice in Los Angeles. But when the three volumes of 'The New Annotated Sherlock Holmes' received glowing reviews upon their publication beginning in 2004 and wound up selling more than 50,000 copies, Klinger felt emboldened to ask his publisher, W.W. Norton, what his next project might be...."

2727. Wheatcroft, Geoffrey. "The New Annotated Sherlock Holmes." Wall Street Journal - Eastern Edition 2005: P10.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book "The New Annotated Sherlock Holmes," edited by Leslie S. Klinger.
2728. Whittington-Egan, Richard. "Living with and Annotating Sherlock Holmes." Contemporary Review 286, no. 1669 (2005): 95-101.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article focuses on a fictitious character [sic], Sherlock Homes, with reference to the book "The New Annotated Sherlock Holmes," edited with a foreword and notes by Leslie S. Klinger. The book consists of two volumes and it is a collection of 56 short stories. The original edition of this books was edited by William S. Baring-Gould. In the original (1968) edition, Baring-Gould elected to go nap on his own personal and controversial concept of the chronology of the stories, Klinger decided to relegate all such data to a most useful Chronological Table at the end of Volume One. Something in the region of two thousand annotations are scattered broadcast throughout the book, lifting the curtain on the modes, manners and events of Victorian England, and ventilating, and where necessary explaining, Sherlockian theoretical constructs past and present.

07A SHERLOCKIANS AND THE SOCIETIES -- SHERLOCKIANS -- L (5)

2729. "In Memoriam Brant Lopez and Ronald Weyman." Canadian Holmes 30, no. 4 (2007): 41-42.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2730. "Rogue's Gallery, Potted Biographies of Noted Sherlockians, Alfred A. Levin, BSI." The Ritual, no. 19 (1997): 50-52.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2731. "Sherlock Holmes in many languages." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 2, no. 1 (1998): 1-3, 5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Profile of Fred Levin's interest in Yiddish language versions of the Sherlock Holmes stories. Includes photograph of Bruce Southworth, Fred Levin, and Dr. Richard Sveum.
2732. Gil, Olga et al. "In Memoriam: Anne Skene Melvin, Mary Campbell, Stephen R. Tolins, Robin W. Links, Kathleen Morrison, and Frank Darlington." Canadian Holmes 26, no. 4 (2003): 20-27.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2733. Sveum, Richard J. "Library Receives Maiwand Jezails Artifacts." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 5, no. 3 (2001): 1, 4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Notes the donation by Richard D. Lesh, BSI, of souvenirs of the June 2, 2001 Maiwand Jezail dinner in Omaha, Nebraska to the Holmes Collections. Also provides additional information on Professor Lesh and the Maiwand Jezail scion society. Includes a photograph of Lesh and the author at the dinner.

07A SHERLOCKIANS AND THE SOCIETIES -- SHERLOCKIANS -- LELLENBERG, JON L. (23)

2734. "Arthur Conan Doyle: A Life in Letters." Publishers Weekly 254, no. 32 (2007): 52-52.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book Arthur Conan Doyle: A Life in Letters, edited by Jon Lellenberg, Daniel Stashower and Charles Foley.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

2735. "Arthur Conan Doyle: A Life in Letters." Kirkus Reviews 75, no. 18 (2007): 973-973.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "Arthur Conan Doyle: A Life in Letters," by Jon Lellenberg and edited by Daniel Stashower and Charles Foley.
2736. "Arthur Conan Doyle: A Life in Letters." Library Journal 132, no. 20 (2007): 114.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of Arthur Conan Doyle: A Life in Letters. Penguin Pr: Penguin Group (USA). 2007. c.608p. ed. by Jon Lellenberg & others, index. ISBN 978-1-59420-135-6. $37.95.
2737. "The Ghosts of Baker Street." Publishers Weekly 252, no. 47 (2005): 26-26.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of The Ghosts of Baker Street. Edited by Martin H. Greenberg, Jon Lellenberg and Daniel Stashower (Carrol & Graf), $16.95 paper (240p) ISBN 0-7867-1400-X
2738. "The Italian Secretary: A Further Adventure of Sherlock Holmes." Publishers Weekly 252, no. 14 (2005): 44.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book "The Italian Secretary: A Further Adventure of Sherlock Holmes," by Caleb Carr, with an afterword by Jon Lellenberg.
2739. "Letters to Baker Street." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 2 (1994): 118-119.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Letters from Jon Lellenberg, Tina Rhea, and Brad Keefauver.
2740. "A man divided." Economist 385, no. 8549 (2007): 98-99.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article reviews the books "Conan Doyle: The Man Who Created Sherlock Holmes," by Andrew Lycett and "Arthur Conan Doyle: A Life in Letters," edited by Jon Lellenberg.
2741. "The Mythmaker." New Republic 238, no. 4 (2008): 46-50.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "Arthur Conan Doyle: A Life in Letters," by Jon Lellenberg, Daniel Stashower and Charles Foley.
2742. "Trade Paperbacks." Publishers Weekly 248, no. 33 (2001): 233.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a list of paperbacks including Sound & Vision (dist. by Firefly) Quotable Alice and Quotable Sherlock (Dec., $14.95 each), edited by David W. Barber, "collect quotes from the works of Lewis Carroll and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle." Berkley Prime Crime's More Holmes for the Holidays (Oct., $13), edited by Martin H. Greenberg, Jon L. Lellenberg and Carol-Lynn Waugh, "features the famous detective."
2743. "The World of Paperbacks." Contemporary Review 290, no. 1691 (2008): 521-524.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Lists a few titles related to Doyle and Holmes. "Also from Phoenix we have...Andrew Lycett's Conan Doyle: The Man Who Created Sherlock Holmes (GBP10.99) whose hardback edition was hailed in this journal as 'the best and . . . certainly the fullest' biography of the writer...Vintage Classics have brought out Arthur Conan Doyle's famous novel. The Hound of the Baskervilles and have included with it not only the short story, The Adventure of the Speckled Band, which Doyle judged his best story, but an introduction by Ruth Rendell and all for GBP5.99....The life of Arthur Conan Doyle is arguably best seen in his correspondence and Harper Perennial has brought out Arthur Conan Doyle: A Life in Letters (GBP12.99), edited by Jon Lellenberg, Daniel Stashower and Charles Foley. The review of the hardback edition praised this 'valuable collection', based on Doyle's letters to his mother, letters which were 'frank and revealing'and which showed his 'many and varied interests'...."
2744. Birch, Dinah. "Elementary love." TLS, no. 5458 (2007): 3-5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the books "Conan Doyle: The Man Who Created Sherlock Holmes," by Andrew Lycett and "Arthur Conan Doyle: A Life in Letters," edited by Jon Lellenberg, Daniel Stashower, and Charles Foley.
2745. Carey, John. "Outwitted by his own creation." The Sunday Times (London), August 26, 2007: 39.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of Conan Doyle: The Man Who Created Sherlock Holmes by Andrew Lycett and Arthur Conan Doyle: A Life in Letters edited by Daniel Stashower, Jon Lellenberg and Charles Foley.

2746. Foden, Giles. "Review: Book of the week: The case of the mysterious author: Giles Foden is glad that a new biography of Conan Doyle focuses on work rather than wacky beliefs." The Guardian (London), September 22, 2007: 7.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of Andrew Lycett's biography, Conan Doyle: The Man Who Created Sherlock Holmes by Andrew Lycett: 525pp, Weidenfeld & Nicolson, GBP20. "...Conan Doyle has found a biographer of distinction in Andrew Lycett, who has previously written lives of Rudyard Kipling, Ian Fleming and Dylan Thomas. Lycett's brilliant piece of detective work on the author of the Sherlock Holmes stories now allows us to judge his literary worth against that of his peers and properly to set him in the context of his times...." Mention also made of Arthur Conan Doyle: A Life in Letters, edited by Jon Lellenberg, Daniel Stashower "and Conan Doyle's great-nephew Charles Foley (HarperCollins, pounds 25)."

2747. Hirst, Christopher. "The case of the wooden spoon ; A kitchen implement is just one of the clues surrounding the mysterious death of a leading Sherlock Holmes expert. Christopher Hirst dons his deerstalker and takes up the trail." The Independent (London), Dec 21, 2004: 5.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The Edinburgh-based [Arthur Conan Doyle] specialist Owen Dudley Edwards told [David Grann] he believed [Richard Lancelyn Green] had been murdered. Edwards said that the wine-lover Green would never have drunk gin after dinner. He noted that Green was garrotted with a shoelace, but wore slip-on shoes. Garrotting, Edwards suggested, was 'a method a skilled professional would use'. Warning Grann: 'Please be careful. I don't want to see you garrotted,' he named the American, a defence specialist he described as 'one of Donald Rumsfeld's pals'. Though Grann says the American's job 'has given him a slightly menacing air - at least in the mind of Green's friends', [Jon L Lellenberg] (as we can surely call him) emerges as an admirer of Green. He says a lecture Green gave on The Hound of the Baskervilles was 'dazzling'. Grann writes: 'As he sat up in his chair and his eyes brightened, I realised I was talking not to Green's Moriarty but to his soulmate.' Professor Moriarty was, of course, Holmes's greatest enemy. Green and Lellenberg were collaborators until they fell out in the early Nineties. Lellenberg stressed that he had not seen or spoken to Green for more than a year. He was in London on the night Green died, but he had an alibi: 'He revealed with some embarrassment [that] he was walking through London on a group tour of Jack the Ripper's crime scenes.'"

2748. Hobbs, Don. "Review--More Holmes for the Holidays edited by Martin Greenberg, Jon L. Lellenberg and Carol-Lynn Waugh and The Vital Essence by David L. Hammer." The Holmes & Watson Report 3, no. 6 (2000): 14.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

2749. ———. "Review--Murder in Baker Street edited by Martin H. Greenberg, Jon L. Lellenberg and Daniel Stashower." The Holmes & Watson Report 7, no. 5 (2003): 23.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

2750. McCarter, Jeremy. "One-Hit Wonder." New York Times Book Review 157, no. 54174 (2007): 15-15.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the books "The Man Who Created Sherlock Holmes: The Life and Times of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle," by Andrew Lycett and "Arthur Conan Doyle: A Life in Letters," edited by Jon Lellenberg, Daniel Stashower and Charles Foley.

2751. McKuras, Julie. "The Historian of This Bunch'." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 3, no. 4 (1999): 7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A welcome and brief biographical sketch of Jon Lellenberg, a new member to the newsletter editorial board.

2752. ———. "Musings." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 4, no. 4 (2000): 4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Some observations on the arrival of the Paton Collection, other articles in the newsletter, the identity of "A.M." as Arthur Mee, and a correction to include Jon Lellenberg on the editorial board.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

2753. ———. "Musings." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 3, no. 4 (1999): 2.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Observations on some of the changes that have affected the Collections: the move into the new library, the contributions of new writers for the newsletter, and the addition of Jon Lellenberg to the editorial board.
2754. Muller, Alexandra. "Sleuthing Conan Doyle." New Criterion 26, no. 10 (2008): 25-29.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews two books related to surgeon and writer Arthur Conan Doyle including "The Man Who Created Sherlock Holmes: The Life and Times of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle," by Andrew Lycett and "Arthur Conan Doyle: A Life in Letters," by Jon Lellenberg, Daniel Stashower and Charles Foley.
2755. Ng, U. En. "The King Street mystery." New Straits Times, Jun 10, 2004: 05.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Investigating the possibility that [Richard Lancelyn Green] might have been attempting to re-enact a scene from [Holmes], [Paul Knapman] sought references to garrotting in the stories and found one: there was a garrotter in the pay of Professor Moriarty, Holmes's nemesis. [Jon Lellenberg] contributed to the Christie's sale catalogue and met members of the Sherlock Holmes Society. Lellenberg told the Observer from Washington: 'I have no knowledge of why he was paranoid about it. It would be silly and delusional to be concerned about me because the work I do has nothing to do with intelligence and surveillance at any level.' While speculation continues to surround Lancelyn Green's death, the Christie's auction proceeded without further complication...."
2756. Propson, David. "Sir Arthur Conundrum Doyle." Wall Street Journal - Eastern Edition, 12/08, 2007: W12.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the books "The Man Who Created Sherlock Holmes," by Andrew Lycett and "Arthur Conan Doyle: A Life in Letters," edited by Jon Lellenberg, Daniel Stashower and Charles Foley.

07A SHERLOCKIANS AND THE SOCIETIES -- SHERLOCKIANS -- LIEBOW, ELY M. (3)

2757. Berry, John. "Program picks & pans." Library Journal 120, no. 10 (1995): 46.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Previews the American Library Association's 114th Annual Conference in Chicago, June 22-28, 1995, with reference to Doyle and Holmes. Ely M. Liebow (Dr. Joe Bell: Model for Sherlock Holmes); Let a Woman in Your Life: The Women in Conan Doyle's Life and Fiction. Sublibrarians Scion of the Baker Street Irregulars.
2758. Cohen, George. "Dr. Joe Bell: Model for Sherlock Holmes." Booklist 103, no. 16 (2007): 17.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'Dr. Joe Bell: Model for Sherlock Holmes,' by Ely M. Liebow.
2759. Herguth, Bob. "Ely Liebow." Chicago Sun-Times, Dec 19, 1994: 16.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "He's a Sherlockian. He's an author and a Northeastern Illinois U. English prof who's an expert on Sherlock Holmes. He's a member of the fictional detective's fan club, the Baker Street Irregulars. In 1991, the Irregulars gave him the rare Two-Shilling Award. And a Derlethian. He just edited and produced a book of essays about the late August Derleth, a cult figure who lived in Sauk City, Wis. Derleth wrote more than 150 books, ranging from horror tales to children's classics. Liebow's book is titled August Harvest...." (excerpt)

07A SHERLOCKIANS AND THE SOCIETIES -- SHERLOCKIANS -- M (20)

2760. "100 Years Ago." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 2, no. 4 (1998): 2.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Highlights Sherlockian James Montgomery (b. 1898) and his writings.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

2761. "In Memoriam Mary McMahon." Canadian Holmes 30, no. 3 (2007): 56-57.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2762. "In Memory of Richard Moore." Canadian Holmes 17, no. 3 (1994): 46.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2763. "Letters to Baker Street." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 1 (1994): 56-57.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Letters from Donald K. Pollock, Wayne and Francine Swift, Robert A. Moss
2764. "News Notes." Canadian Holmes 17, no. 3 (1994): 44-47.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // News of various events. Includes an obituary notice for Richard Moore of Oak Park, Illinois.
2765. "Sherlock Holmes: Victorian Sleuth to Modern Hero [advertisement]." Canadian Holmes 17, no. 3 (1994): 48.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Announcement of a conference held at Bennington College in Vermont, June 23-26, 1994. Featured speakers include Nicholas Meyer and Edward Hanna.
2766. Dunn, Dave. "Strictly Personal: Ann Melvin." Canadian Holmes 21, no. 4 (1998): 36-37.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2767. ———. "Strictly Personal: Dayna McCausland." Canadian Holmes 18, no. 2 (1994): 35-36.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2768. ———. "Strictly Personal: Ihor Mayba." Canadian Holmes 25, no. 3 (2002): 32-32.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2769. ———. "Strictly Personal: Kae MacKenzie." Canadian Holmes 26, no. 1 (2002): 26-27.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2770. ———. "Strictly Personal: Kae MacKenzie." Canadian Holmes 24, no. 2 (2000): 29-30.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2771. ———. "Strictly Personal: Margaret Murray." Canadian Holmes 20, no. 1 (1996): 27-28.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2772. ———. "Strictly Personal: Peter Knox Mutchler." Canadian Holmes 27, no. 2 (2003): 18-19.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2773. Gassner, C. Bryan, and Morrow Hall. "The Haunted Bookplate: Six Decades from Crosswords to Shilling." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 3 (1994): 141-148.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a biographical sketch of Katherine McMahon, one of the very first who qualified for membership in the BSI, but who was denied that pleasure for nearly sixty years because of her gender.
2774. Gil, Olga et al. "In Memoriam: Anne Skene Melvin, Mary Campbell, Stephen R. Tolins, Robin W. Links, Kathleen Morrison, and Frank Darlington." Canadian Holmes 26, no. 4 (2003): 20-27.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2775. Green, Maureen, and Kate Karlson. "In Memoriam: Mary E. Campbell and Ann Skene Melvin." The Serpentine Muse 19, no. 3 (2003): 7-9.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2776. Shelby, Joyce. "Brooklyn People in Profile." Daily News (New York), January 11, 1999: 2.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Pam McAllister says she isn't that big a fan of mysteries, but she has loved Sherlock Holmes since she was a teen. 'He's a real free spirit. When he wants to sleep, he sleeps. When he gets engrossed in a mystery, he throws himself into it. But in the middle of it, if he wants to go to the opera, he goes to the opera.' With Dick Riley, McAllister recently co-wrote 'The Bedside, Bathtub & Armchair Companion to Sherlock Holmes.' While researching the book, McAllister said, she uncovered a world of facts and fans...."

2777. ———. "Metro People in Profile." Daily News (New York), January 12, 1999: 3.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Pam McAllister says she isn't that big a fan of mysteries, but she has loved Sherlock Holmes since she was a teen. 'He's a real free spirit. When he wants to sleep, he sleeps. When he gets engrossed in a mystery, he throws himself into it. But in the middle of it, if he wants to go to the opera, he goes to the opera.' With Dick Riley, McAllister recently co-wrote 'The Bedside, Bathtub & Armchair Companion to Sherlock Holmes.' While researching the book, McAllister said, she uncovered a world of facts and fans...."

2778. Stix, Thomas L., Jr. "Stand With Me Here Upon the Terrace. . . Edith Meiser, BSI." The Serpentine Muse 12, no. 2 (1993): 5.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

2779. Sveum, Richard J. "From the President." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 5, no. 1 (2001): 4.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Notes the Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Annual Meeting scheduled for Friday, June 29, 2001, at the Elmer L. Andersen Library and that the membership meeting will be held in conjunction with the Norwegian Explorers conference -- 2001: A Sherlockian Odyssey, A Journey Among the Shaw 100, scheduled for June 29 to July 1, 2001. Also notes the University's sesquicentennial year fundraising campaign (and support for the Collections), the fifth year of this newsletter, and the 2001 Baker Street Irregular's investiture of the newsletter editor, Julie McKuras.

07A SHERLOCKIANS AND THE SOCIETIES -- SHERLOCKIANS -- MACKENZIE, STANLEY (9)

2780. "GBP148,000 is paid by fans of the great detective." The Times (London), July 25, 1995: 1.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Addition, not deduction, is clue to Sherlock Holmes sale. A Twitch of a deerstalker or the tap of a Meerscham pipe was enough to catch the auctioneer's eye at Sotheby's yesterday as an outstanding Sherlock Holmes collection was sold for Pounds 148,000. Magazines, books, papers and memorabilia collected by Stanley MacKenzie, a renowned Sherlockian and Basil Rathbone-lookalike who died aged 82 in February, fetched more than double the estimated value...."

2781. "Sherlock Holmes collection sold." The Toronto Star, July 25, 1995: C7.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "American bidders pushed up prices yesterday at an auction of Sherlock Holmes memorabilia from the late British Holmes expert, Stanley MacKenzie, which sold for nearly $236,000 at Sotheby's. That figure was nearly double pre-auction estimates."

2782. "Sherlock Holmes items to be sold." The Gazette (Montreal), July 11, 1995: C7.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "One of the finest collections of Sherlock Holmes material ever offered for sale is expected to fetch $150,000 Canadian at auction in London this month, Sotheby's said yesterday. The July 24 auction will feature first editions, papers and memorabilia relating to one of the world's most famous fictional detectives and his creator, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. The collection was amassed by Stanley Mackenzie, a former custodian of London's Sherlock Holmes Society, who died this year. The items for sale include the pipe used by Peter Cushing in his film portrayal of the Victorian detective and a gold cigarette case inscribed, by Conan Doyle, 'Sherlock Holmes.'"

2783. "Two pipes, a pile of earth." USA Today, July 12, 1995: 09A.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Two pipes, a pile of earth . . . and a cigarette case? What can it all mean? Elementary: one of the most comprehensive collections of Sherlock Holmesia is going on sale later this month, Sotheby's auction house announced. The collection, from the estate of Stanley MacKenzie, a senior member of

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- the Sherlock Holmes Society, includes a rare edition of Beeton's 1887 Christmas Annual."
2784. Davies, David Stuart. "Review--Sotheby's Auction, The Stanley MacKenzie Collection." The Musgrave Papers, no. 8 (1995): 212.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2785. Davies, David Stuart, and Roger Johnson. "Stanley Mackenzie 1913-1995." The Musgrave Papers, no. 8 (1995): 125-126.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2786. Shaw, John. "Last chapter in strange case of the literary detective." The Times (London), July 11, 1995: 1.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "A fascination with Sherlock Holmes, which turned a schoolboy into a literary detective, will lead to a Pounds 70,000 book sale in London this month. Stanley MacKenzie became a world authority on Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's fictional detective and his collection of first editions, reference books and papers is regarded as the finest in Europe. As an honorary member of the Sherlock Holmes Society of London, Mr MacKenzie, who lived in west London and died aged 82 earlier this year, had been consulted frequently by playwrights and film-makers. The material he collected will now be sold at Sotheby's on July 24...."
2787. Watson, Peter. "For Sale all the Evidence of a Great Detective." The Guardian (London), June 11, 1995: 6.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Baker Street Irregulars will this week be invited to one of the greatest gatherings Sherlock Holmes buffs have known. The jamboree is not at 221B Baker Street, mythical home of the great pipe-smoking detective, but round the corner in Bond Street, where the world's largest and most important collection of Conan Doyle and Sherlock Holmes memorabilia is about to go under the hammer at Sotheby's. The collection of Stanley MacKenzie, actor and deputy stage manager of the Royal Shakespeare Company -- who died in February, aged 82 -- probably contains not just everything Arthur Conan Doyle wrote on Holmes, but everything written about Holmes, together with memorabilia from every play, film and TV adaptation...."
2788. ———. "Sherlock Holmes collection on London auction block." The Ottawa Citizen, June 15, 1995: F16.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Baker Street Irregulars will this week receive invitations to one of the greatest gatherings Sherlock Holmes buffs have known. The jamboree is not at 221B Baker Street, mythical home of the great pipe-smoking detective, but round the corner in Bond Street, where the world's largest and most important collection of Conan Doyle and Sherlock Holmes memorabilia is about to go under the hammer at Sotheby's. The collection of Stanley MacKenzie, actor and deputy stage manager of the Royal Shakespeare Company -- who died in February, aged 82 -- probably contains not just everything Arthur Conan Doyle wrote on Holmes, but everything written about Holmes, together with memorabilia from every play, film and television adaptation...."

07A SHERLOCKIANS AND THE SOCIETIES -- SHERLOCKIANS -- MCDIARMID, ERRET W. (15)

2789. "The Best and Wisest Man." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 4, no. 2 (2000): 1.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Notes the passing of Erret W. "Mac" McDiarmid on April 27, 2000. Includes a photograph of McDiarmid and Bryce Crawford.
2790. "Remembrances." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 4, no. 3 (2000): 12.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // List of donors who made contributions in memory or honor of a special individual. Includes a photograph of Peter Blau, E. W. McDiarmid and Mike Whelan and another of three of the founders of the Norwegian Explorers: E. W. Ziebarth, Mac McDiarmid, and Bryce Crawford.
2791. "You may have read of the remarkable explorations of a Norwegian named Sigerson..." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 1, no. 2 (1997): 1-3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Biographical profile of E.W. "Mac" McDiarmid. Includes photograph of McDiarmid and Dorothy Rowe Shaw, reproduction of McDiarmid bookplate for the University of Minnesota

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Libraries Sherlock Holmes Collections

2792. Bergquist, John. "E. W. McDiarmid: A Friend to All Who Knew Him." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 4, no. 3 (2000): 9.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Based on a spoken appreciation delivered at the Annual Meeting of the Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota on August 2, 2000.
2793. Johnson, Timothy J. "An Update from the Collections." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 5, no. 1 (2001): 5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Notes recent activities including recent class visits, preparations for the summer conference and exhibit, work with the Weisman Museum on their "Cabinet of Curiosities" exhibit, and an article on the Collections in the St. Paul Pioneer Press. Also noted is progress on fund-raising for McDiarmid curatorship, work with the Law Library on a conference tie-in with the exhibit, and the passing of Wayne Swift.
2794. ———. "An Update from the Collections." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 4, no. 2 (2000): 5, 8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Comments on the final move into and grand opening of the Elmer L. Andersen Library. work on the Hubbs cataloging project, the latest exhibit, "Better Holmes and Gardens: Sherlock Holmes, Arthur Conan Doyle, and Architectural Design 'Down Under' and the passing of E. W. McDiarmid.
2795. ———. "An Update From the Collections." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 4, no. 3 (2000): 6-7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // An abbreviated version of the 'State of the Collections' address given at the annual membership meeting of the Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections. Includes a photograph of Richard Sveum and Anne McDiarmid and another photograph of Jim Deleo, Mary McDiarmid, and the author.
2796. ———. "An Update from the Collections." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 4, no. 4 (2000): 4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on the status of the cataloging project funded by the Hubbs family and on a gift by Mary McDiarmid towards the endowed curator position.
2797. Malec, Andrew. "Some Personal Recollections of the Early Days of the Sherlock Holmes Collections." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 4, no. 3 (2000): 1, 10-11.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A reminiscence from an Irregular who played a role in the early days of the collections. Includes a picture of the author with E. W. McDiarmid and another photograph from the July 1983 "Adventures on the Air" with John Bennett Shaw, Austin McLean, Edith Meiser, and McDiarmid.
2798. McKuras, Julie. "A McDiarmid Bibliography." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 4, no. 3 (2000): 10.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A list of E. W. McDiarmid's Sherlockian writings.
2799. ———. "Musings." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 4, no. 2 (2000): 7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Comments on the writings in this issue; the newest contributor/writer for the newsletter, John Bergquist; and the passing of E. W. McDiarmid. Includes a photograph of "the Man behind Mrs. Hudson."
2800. ———. "Musings." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 4, no. 3 (2000): 5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Some reflections on E. W. McDiarmid and friends of the collections. Includes a photograph of Paul Smedegaard, Tim Johnson, Fred and Sunnie Levin.
2801. Sveum, Richard J. "From the President." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 4, no. 2 (2000): 4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Notes the upcoming August Friends annual meeting, the opening of the Elmer L.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Andersen Library, and the passing of E. W. McDiarmid.

2802. ———. "From the President." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 4, no. 3 (2000): 4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Highlights events at the annual membership meeting of the Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections including meeting in the new Andersen Library, awarding Lucy Brusic the volunteer of the year, the establishment of an endowment named in honor and memory of E. W. McDiarmid for the curator's position, and tributes to McDiarmid. Includes a photograph of Lucy Brusic and Tim Johnson.
2803. ———. "From the President." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 4, no. 4 (2000): 4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Notice of the next Friends annual meeting in conjunction with the 2001 conference co-sponsored with the Norwegian Explorers. Also information on the University's capital campaign and the desire to raise funds for the McDiarmid endowed curator position.

07A SHERLOCKIANS AND THE SOCIETIES -- SHERLOCKIANS -- MORLEY, CHRISTOPHER (2)

2804. McKuras, Julie. "Morley and Company." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 3, no. 2 (1999): 1, 6.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on the visit of Anthony J. Morley, son of the late Felix Morley, to the Collections, information on the Morley family, and the donation of materials to the Collections. Includes a photograph of Jamie Hubbs, Collections Specialist, and Anthony Morley.
2805. McKuras, Julie, and Steven Rothman. "50 Years Ago." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 3, no. 2 (1999): 3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on the publication of two books by Christopher Morley in 1949: The Ironing Board, a collection of essays, and The Man Who Made Friends With Himself, a novel. Additional information on the editions and copies held by the Collections.

07A SHERLOCKIANS AND THE SOCIETIES -- SHERLOCKIANS – N (1)

2806. Dunn, Dave. "Strictly Personal: Hartley Ronald Nathan." Canadian Holmes 23, no. 4 (2000): 26-27.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

07A SHERLOCKIANS AND THE SOCIETIES -- SHERLOCKIANS – O (4)

2807. "Passings Syd Goldberg, John J. Brousch, Donald O'Connor." Baker Street West 19, no. 2 (2003): 46.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2808. "The Second Shoso-In Bulletin Award Is Presented to Alan C. Olding." Shoso-In Bulletin 13, no. (2003): 3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2809. Barnes, Bill. "Interview with Alan Olding BSI." Shoso-In Bulletin 14, no. (2004): 10-13.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2810. Raymond, Trevor S. "Obituary, Gerry O'Hara." Canadian Holmes 22, no. 2 (1998): 28.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

07A SHERLOCKIANS AND THE SOCIETIES -- SHERLOCKIANS – P (7)

2811. "Bimetallic Question, Obituary for Charles Purdon." Canadian Holmes 26, no. 1 (2002): 27.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

2812. "Letters to Baker Street." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 1 (1994): 56-57.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Letters from Donald K. Pollock, Wayne and Francine Swift, Robert A. Moss
2813. Bergquist, John. "The Paton Collection Comes to Minnesota." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 4, no. 4 (2000): 1, 6.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Highlights the arrival of Jennie Paton's audio-visual collection to Minnesota.
2814. Cleveland, Ceil. "Murder and Mirth at 'Ghoul School'." Chronicle of Higher Education 49, no. 41 (2003): B5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Talks about the experience of attending a mystery writing seminar attended by members of the Mystery Writers of America and other academics, held in the National Arts Club on Gramercy Park South in New York City. Includes a reference to Holmes and Judge Andrew Peck. "...Among the classmates with whom I've shared the corpse of a Cornish hen and a bottle of Chianti are an epidemiologist, an international lawyer, and a judge -- Andrew J. Peck, who wrote an important reference work on Sherlock Holmes, The Date Being ... ? (Magico Press, 1996)."
2815. Howlett, Tony. "His Last Bow: Michael E. Pointer, A Personal Reminiscence." The Ritual, no. 23 (1999): 44-45.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2816. McKuras, Julie. "100 Years Ago." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 4, no. 4 (2000): 2.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Sherlock Holmes Baffled was made in 1900, and marked the premier of the Master Detective in the new entertainment medium of the motion picture. Although the film lasts less than one minute, the impact of Holmes on the screen is still felt 100 years later. Jennie Paton has donated a copy of this film to the Sherlock Holmes Collections.
2817. Thomalen, Robert E., Howard Brody, and William Hyder. "'Stand with me here upon the terrace...!'" Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 3 (1994): 188-189.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Obituaries for Robert N. Brodie, Ralph F. Turner, and R. Irving Paxton.

07A SHERLOCKIANS AND THE SOCIETIES -- SHERLOCKIANS -- PATON, JENNIE (1)

2818. McKuras, Julie. "The Paton Collection." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 4, no. 4 (2000): 7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Provides additional information on the newly acquired Paton collection of audio-visual materials.

07A SHERLOCKIANS AND THE SOCIETIES -- SHERLOCKIANS -- PENZLER, OTTO (5)

2819. "Notes on current books: Fiction." Virginia Quarterly Review 74, no. 2 (1998): 59.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'The Best American Mystery Stories, 1997,' edited by Robert B. Parker. Reference to Doyle and Holmes. "Series editor Otto Penzler reminds us that the short story, not the novel, is the natural form of the traditional mystery and, when Parker observes that Conan Doyle's invention of Sherlock Holmes created the very category of the mystery, he validates Penzler's claim, since the best Holmes fiction comes in the form of the short story."
2820. Dahlin, Robert. "Publishers Are Getting Really Series-ous." Publishers Weekly 249, no. 16 (2002): 38.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents remarks from several editors of mystery books regarding the popularity and the challenges in launching mystery books. Includes reference to Holmes from Otto Penzler (Otto Penzler Books, Carroll & Graf). "...I believe that we all have a sense of extended family in our lives--this includes our friends, the colleagues we work with, all of the people we look forward to seeing on a regular basis. That sense of family applies to mystery characters as well. When writers create characters that we really enjoy being with, we're happy to go back and visit them again and again in a series. This is especially true when there is a coterie of others surrounding that character. They become family too. It's like visiting Sherlock Holmes at 221B Baker Street or Nero Wolfe in his New York apartment...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

2821. Spake, Amanda. "It's no mystery." U.S. News & World Report 124, no. 3 (1998): 58.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Looks at the history of crime fiction. The booming sales in mystery fiction; The popularity of P.D. James, and others; How the success of crime fiction threatens its future; Editors and writers suggesting that publishers tried to cash in on crime; The glut on the market; The mystery bookstores that have a tradition of making the reputations of local writers; What mystery writing provides the reader. Includes a reference to Doyle and Holmes as well as Otto Penzler. "...A few of mystery's grandmasters: The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes by Arthur Conan Doyle; a gentleman and his sidekick...."
2822. Steinberg, Sybil, and Jonathan Bing. "Forecasts: Fiction." Publishers Weekly 245, no. 10 (1998): 51.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'Murder for Revenge,' edited by Otto Penzler.
2823. Zipp, Yvonne. "Lots of crime, not much 'whodunit' in 1997's best American mysteries." Christian Science Monitor, Jan 14, 1998: 12.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'The Best American Mystery Stories 1997,' edited by Robert B. Parker and series editor Otto Penzler.

07A SHERLOCKIANS AND THE SOCIETIES -- SHERLOCKIANS -- R (14)

2824. "Antiques & Collecting: Collecting Dates." Birmingham Post, December 12, 1998: 47.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...Next Thursday at Sotheby's sale rooms in New Bond Street, London, letters, photographs and other documents are being sold which show that this literary giant of extraordinary intellect and maturity was completely and utterly fooled by two small schoolgirls. The documents are among a magnificent collection of Sherlockiana which is being dispersed at an auction, efforts having failed to keep the entire collection - hundreds of books and thousands of other documents together. The collection was formed by Mr Norman L Rosenbaum who began when he was a student at London University, scouring the bookshops of Charing Cross Road and Cecil Court for the author's works...."
2825. "Bill Rabe material comes to Sherlock Holmes Collections." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 1, no. 4 (1997): 1-3, 5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses acquisition and contents of the Bill Rabe Collection acquired by the University of Minnesota Libraries.
2826. "Gaslight Grimoire: Fantastic Tale of Sherlock Holmes." Publishers Weekly 255, no. 36 (2008): 39-39.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "Gaslight Grimoire: Fantastic Tale of Sherlock Holmes," edited by J. R. Campbell and Charles Prepolec. Edge (www.edgewebsite.com), $16.95 paper (336p) ISBN 978-1494063-17-3. "In his foreword, David Stuart Davies asserts that the authors of these 11 stories pitting Holmes against the supernatural 'are very well-versed in the world of Sherlock Holmes and Doctor Watson.' Unfortunately, this authority fails to come through. The eloquence of the one standout, Barbara Roden's 'The Things That Shall Come Upon Them,' only emphasizes what the others lack. Roden effortlessly involves Holmes in a mystery derived from M.R. James's classic tale of terror, 'Casting the Runes,' featuring psychic sleuth Flaxman Low. By contrast, Martin Powell's 'Sherlock Holmes in the Lost World' sees Holmes battling ape-men and dinosaurs without any display of his remarkable intellect, and M.J. Elliott's 'The Finishing Stroke' pays so much homage as to neglect originality. As a whole, this mixed bag fails to differentiate itself from other similar anthologies."
2827. "In Memoriam William E. (Bill) Ricker." Canadian Holmes 25, no. 2 (2001): 38.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

2828. "Letters to Baker Street." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 2 (1994): 118-119.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Letters from Jon Lellenberg, Tina Rhea, and Brad Keefauver.
2829. "Strictly Personal: Trevor Scott Raymond." Canadian Holmes 30, no. 3 (2007): 34-35.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2830. Blau, Peter E. "About Bill Rabe." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 1, no. 4 (1997): 3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Biographical information and personal reflections and insights about Bill Rabe.
2831. Cochran, William R. "From the Editor's Commonplace Book." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 1 (1994): 62-63.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // On the demise of the periodical Baker Street Miscellanea, Julie and Al Rosenblatt's 4-day mini-course on Holmes at Vassar College, an article in MHQ by Thaddeus Holt, the Folio Society's version of the Canon, the 25th anniversary of the Noble Bachelors of St. Louis, the Sherlock Holmes Society of London's "Back to Baker Street" festival, and the Books of Michael Harrison.
2832. Dunn, Dave. "Strictly Personal: Barbara Rusch." Canadian Holmes 19, no. 4 (1996): 30-31.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2833. ———. "Strictly Personal: Christopher Roden." Canadian Holmes 25, no. 4 (2002): 18-19.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2834. ———. "Strictly Personal: Warren Randall." Canadian Holmes 24, no. 3 (2001): 40-41.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2835. Elliott, Doug. "In Memoriam: Dr. Al Rodin." Canadian Holmes 28, no. 1 (2004): 13.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2836. Green, Richard Lancelyn. "Obituary: Samuel Rosenberg." The Independent (London), Jan 19, 1996: 16.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The presence of Friedrich Nietzsche at the Reichenbach Falls in 1877 was the premiss for Rosenberg's theory that Sir Arthur Conan Doyle based the character of Professor Moriarty on the German philosopher and that Doyle's detective stories were the 'pre-Freudian psycho-dramatic confessions' of a 'self-revealing allegorist'. His findings were published in 1974 by Bobbs Merrill (or Boobs Merrill as he referred to them). The book, Naked is the Best Disguise: the death and resurrection of Sherlock Holmes, enjoyed great success in America (where it sold over 25,000 copies in hardback and was on the 'Book-of-the-Month' list for several months), and there was success of a different sort in England where Desmond Elliott of Arlington Books was forced to remainder many thousand copies to the delight of bemused Sherlockians, who were able to purchase them for as little as 50p a copy."
2837. Thomas, Robert McG, Jr. "Samuel Rosenberg, 85, Explorer Of Secrets of Sherlock Holmes." The New York Times, January 12, 1996: 25.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Samuel Rosenberg, a photographer, author and raconteur who turned his voracious reading habits, prodigious memory and hyperactive imagination into a subsidiary career as a literary psychosleuth, died last Friday at the New York Hospital Medical Center in Queens. He was best known for 'Naked Is the Best Disguise,' his 1974 study of the literary and libidinous wellsprings of the Sherlock Holmes canon...."

07A SHERLOCKIANS AND THE SOCIETIES -- SHERLOCKIANS -- S (16)

2838. "Letters to Baker Street." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 1 (1994): 56-57.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Letters from Donald K. Pollock, Wayne and Francine Swift, Robert A. Moss

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

2839. Dahlinger, Susan E. "A Remembrance: Paul Smedegaard, BSI, 1941-2007." The Serpentine Muse 24, no. 3 (2008): 7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2840. Dunn, Dave. "Strictly Personal: David J. Sanders." Canadian Holmes 20, no. 3 (1997): 36-37.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2841. ———. "Strictly Personal: Dolores (Dee) Rossi Script." Canadian Holmes 27, no. 3 (2004): 31-32.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2842. ———. "Strictly Personal: Gary Wayne Shorney." Canadian Holmes 24, no. 4 (2001): 20-21.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2843. ———. "Strictly Personal: Lewis David St. Columb Skene-Melvin." Canadian Holmes 18, no. 3 (1995): 30-31.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2844. ———. "Strictly Personal: Rabbi Steven Saltzman." Canadian Holmes 25, no. 1 (2001): 40, 48.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2845. Dunning, William. "Dorothy Shaw Draws a Full House." Baker Street West 1 2, no. 1 (1996): 25-27.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2846. Ewing, Geoff. "In Memoriam: Harry Sutherland." Canadian Holmes 29, no. 4 (2006): 47.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2847. ———. "In Memoriam: Trudy Schuurman." Canadian Holmes 28, no. 1 (2004): 11-13.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2848. Lellenberg, Jon L. "'A Certain Gracious Lady'." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 3, no. 4 (1999): 7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A remembrance of Dorothy Rowe Shaw who died on November 24, 1999.
2849. ———. "Norman Schatell." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 2, no. 2 (1998): 1-2-5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Portrait of Norman Schatell.
2850. McKuras, Julie. "Using the Sherlock Holmes Collections." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 3, no. 3 (1999): 8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on the tour given to Paul Smedegaard and Ed Christenson, from Wisconsin, during their attendance at the annual meeting of the Friends. Includes a photograph.
2851. Raymond, Trevor S. et al. "In Memoriam Eric Silk M.Bt B.S.I." Canadian Holmes 28, no. 1 (2004): 14-23.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2852. Stix, Dorothy K. "Dorothy Rowe Shaw, April 29, 1924 - November 24, 1999." The Serpentine Muse 16, no. 2 (2000): 7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2853. Sveum, Richard J. "From the President." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 3, no. 2 (1999): 4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Words of thanks to Jamie Hubbs, Collections Specialist, who leaves to go back to school and Bruce Southworth, who concludes his work as editor of the newsletter. Also a word on the upcoming Friends membership meeting and on the donation of collections.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

07A SHERLOCKIANS AND THE SOCIETIES -- SHERLOCKIANS -- SARJEANT, WILLIAM A. S.
(10)

2854. "Obituary for W. A. S. (Bill) Sarjeant." Canadian Holmes 26, no. 1 (2002): 47.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2855. "The Record." Report / Newsmagazine (National Edition) 29, no. 17 (2002): 50.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a number of obituaries for notable Canadians as of September 2, 2002. Included is paleontologist, geologist and naturalist William A.S. (Bill) Sarjeant, 66; of liver cancer, in Saskatoon, July 8, who "once co-authored a book arguing that Sherlock Holmes was actually a woman."
2856. "Using the Sherlock Holmes Collections." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 5, no. 2 (2001): 8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Notes the visit of Dr. William A. S. Sarjeant to the Collections in April, along with a photograph from his visit.
2857. Bradley, Alan et al. "Remembering W. A. S. (Bill) Sarjeant." Canadian Holmes 26, no. 2 (2002): 14-20.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2858. Dunn, Dave. "Strictly Personal: William Anthony Swithin Sarjeant." Canadian Holmes 19, no. 3 (1996): 22-23.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2859. Klinger, Leslie S. "Letter to the Editor, 'W. A. S. Sarjeant'." Canadian Holmes 26, no. 3 (2003): 4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2860. Pemberton, S. George, Richard T. McCrea, and Martin G. Lockley. "William Antony Swithin Sarjeant (1935-2002)." Ichnos 10, no. 2-4 (2003): 55-56.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Points out that William Anthony Swithin Sarjeant, ichnologist, palynologist, philosopher, science fiction writer, historian, cultural heritage patron, poet, educator, folk singer and Sherlock Holmes scholar, was a man for all seasons. Outstanding attributes of a research scientist; Well-rounded fusion of dynamic researcher, an inspired teacher, and a dedicated worker for the discipline.
2861. ———. "William Antony Swithin Sarjeant (1935-2002): A Celebration of His Life and Ichnological Contributions." Ichnos 11, no. 3/4 (2004): 181-181.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the life and works of William Antony Swithin Sarjeant, ichnologist, palynologist, philosopher, science fiction writer, historian, cultural heritage patron, poet, educator, folk singer, and Sherlock Holmes scholar. Causal factor for the death of Sarjeant; Career highlights; Work achievements.
2862. Spalding, David A. E., S. George Pemberton, Richard T. McCrea, and Martin G. Lockley. "William Antony Swithin Sarjeant (1935-2002)." Ichnos 10, no. 2-4 (2003): 57-68.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a short biography of ichnologist William Antony Swithin Sarjeant. Education at the University of Sheffield; Teaching and marriage; Transatlantic visits; Nottingham; Saskatoon; Honors; Ichnological contributions.
2863. Tokaryk, Tim. "Obituary: William Anthony Swinton Sarjeant, 1935-2002." Geology Today 18, no. 6 (2002): 210.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Pays tribute to geologist William Sarjeant of Saskatoon, Saskatchewan. Contributions in the field of geology; Awards received; Personality.

07A SHERLOCKIANS AND THE SOCIETIES -- SHERLOCKIANS -- SHAW, JOHN BENNETT (17)

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

2864. "The Charm of Variety." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 1, no. 2 (1997): 5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Call for letters written by John Bennett Shaw for addition to the Holmes Collections.
2865. "It was in a city in Russia..." (Golden Pince-Nez)." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 1, no. 3 (1997): 1-2, 4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses John Bennett Shaw's acquisition of the Czarina's Tauschnitz editions of The Hound of the Baskervilles, A Study in Scarlet, and The Memoirs of Sherlock Holmes. Includes photographs of the Tauschnitz editions and the Czarina.
2866. "Libraries around the country." Civilization 2, no. 5 (1995): 92.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a calendar of events for libraries in the United States. Includes "University of Minnesota--Sherlock Holmes and John Bennett Shaw: The Detective and the Collector. Celebrates the university's establishment of Shaw's personal library as a source for Holmes research. October 13 through November 30 at the Wilson Library..."
2867. Bergquist, John. "50 Years Ago." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 4, no. 2 (2000): 3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses John Bennett Shaw's 1950 notebook that contains a political cartoon that appeared that year in the January 27 Chicago Tribune. "The White House Sleuth" depicts President Harry S. Truman in Sherlockian garb peering through a magnifying glass. Truman is standing in a coal field atop a lit stick of dynamite labeled "miners' revolt" while saying in effect "What coal crisis?" Additional information is given on the coal crisis and President Truman. Also includes a photo of the cartoon.
2868. Blau, Peter E. "'Stand with me here upon the terrace...': John Bennett Shaw." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 4 (1994): 243.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Brief obituary of the pre-eminent Sherlockian, John Bennett Shaw who died on Oct. 2 of a heart attack.
2869. De Waal, Ronald B. "Tribute to the Master Collector John Bennett Shaw, 1914-1994." Shoso-In Bulletin 5, no. (1995): 6.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2870. Decker, Jeff. "Tales from Dartmoor: John Bennett Shaw, 1913-1994." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 4 (1994): 245.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Memorial cartoon for John Bennett Shaw.
2871. France, F. Dennis. "Sherlock Holmes and John Bennett Shaw, The Detective and the Collector." Shoso-In Bulletin 6, no. (1996): 15-17.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2872. Hollyer, Cameron et al. "'The Godfather of the Bootmakers': John Bennett Shaw, 1913-1994." Canadian Holmes 18, no. 2 (1994): 10-20.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2873. Johnson, Roger. "Editorial: John Bennett Shaw 1914-1994." The Sherlock Holmes Journal 22, no. 1 (1994): 1-2.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2874. Lovisi, Gary. "A Short Appreciation of John Bennett Shaw." Shoso-In Bulletin 6, no. (1996): 18.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2875. McKuras, Julie. "The Basic Holmesian Library." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 5, no. 3 (2001): 1, 5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Some observations on John Bennett Shaw's "List of 100" and the exhibit based on Shaw's list that was displayed during the conference "2001: A Sherlockian Odyssey". Includes seven

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

photographs from the exhibit and visitors during the conference including Les Klinger, Jon Lellenberg, Richard Lancelyn Green, and Dan Posnansky.

2876. ———. "Pipes, Matches and Tobacco." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 4, no. 2 (2000): 1, 6.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses John Bennett Shaw's notebook of tobacco-related ephemera and his collection of matchbooks. Includes a photograph of Doyle on a cigarette card and two other photos of items from the collection.
2877. Rice, Susan. "Holmes Thoughts From Abroad: John Bennett Shaw 1913-1994." The Ritual, no. 14 (1994): 32-34.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2878. Sarjeant, William A. S. "'what we do is a great game': John Bennett Shaw as Correspondent." Canadian Holmes 18, no. 2 (1994): 21-30.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2879. Stix, Thomas L., Jr. "Salute to Shaw." The Musgrave Papers, no. 6 (1993): 97.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2880. Sveum, Richard J. "A Word from our President." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 2, no. 4 (1998): 3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Notes his visit with David and Audrey Hammer and the many donations of correspondence with John Bennett Shaw and back issues of periodicals that have been received by the Collections.

07A SHERLOCKIANS AND THE SOCIETIES -- SHERLOCKIANS -- STARRETT, VINCENT (9)

2881. "50 Years Ago: 'you will send for a hansom'." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 1, no. 2 (1997): 5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses The Second Cab and other "Cab" publications of the Speckled Band of Boston. Also discusses Vincent Starrett's short story, "A Picture for Ronald Colman."
2882. "Review--'The Somnambulist and the Detective' by Susan Rice." The Holmes & Watson Report 4, no. 6 (2001): 45.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2883. Ashworth, Peter. "Review--The Somnambulist and the Detective, Vincent Starrett and Sherlock Holmes Musgrave Monograph Number Ten by Susan Rice." The Ritual, no. 27 (2001): 56-57.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2884. Blau, Peter E. "The Adventure of the Acephalous Agronomist." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 4, no. 1 (2000): 1.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Provides some background on Vincent Starrett's parody, first published in 1944, in a limited edition of the three copies.
2885. Dahlinger, Susan E. "Sherlock Holmes, a centenary essay." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 3, no. 4 (1999): 1, 6, 8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // An essay on the life and work of the actor, William Gillette, on the centennial of his first performance of the play "Sherlock Holmes," the art of Frederic Dorr Steele (who fixed Gillette's image of Holmes in the minds of many), Vincent Starrett's work with Gillette on the publication of the script, and the materials related to all three of these men in the Holmes Collections.
2886. Hall, John. "Review--'From Baltimore to Baker Street' by William Hyder." The Ritual, no. 17 (1996): 72-79.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "A past Gasogene of The Six Napoleons of Baltimore offers Sherlockian essays and dramatic readings that combine erudition with humour - and occasionally challenge such revered scholars as Vincent Starrett, Michael Harrison, and William S. Baring-Gould."

2887. Hobbs, Don. "Review--Sherlock Holmes Visits a Cemetery by Don Izban." The Holmes & Watson Report 3, no. 5 (1999): 10, 40.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

2888. Rice, Susan. "Vincent Starrett: The Chicago Columns." The Serpentine Muse 18, no. 2 (2002): 16-24.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

2889. Ruber, Peter. "A Newly Discovered Sherlockian Poem by Vincent Starrett." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 46, no. 2 (1996): 23-26.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

07A SHERLOCKIANS AND THE SOCIETIES -- SHERLOCKIANS -- STASHOWER, DANIEL (31)

2890. "American Literature." Reference & Research Book News 22, no. 3 (2007): 273-278.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews several books including The Beautiful Cigar Girl; Edgar Allan Poe, Mary Rogers, and the invention of murder. Stashower, Daniel. Dutton Books, 326 p. $25.95 "Stashower (mystery writer and Edgar Award-winning biographer of Arthur Conan Doyle) tells the sensational real-life story of the 1841 murder of Mary Rogers, New York City's 'beautiful cigar girl'--along with the real-life story of how Edgar Allen Poe transformed the crime into the short story that would invent modern detective fiction and that he hoped would turn his failing career around. During the decline of his wife's health and particular personal hardship, Poe expanded his character C. Auguste Dupin's passion and talent for deductive reasoning to compose the longer-than-usual 'The Mystery of Mary Roget,' debuting the formula that would find its literary legacy in Sherlock Holmes and others."

2891. "Arthur Conan Doyle: A Life in Letters." Publishers Weekly 254, no. 32 (2007): 52-52.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book Arthur Conan Doyle: A Life in Letters, edited by Jon Lellenberg, Daniel Stashower and Charles Foley.

2892. "Arthur Conan Doyle: A Life in Letters." Kirkus Reviews 75, no. 18 (2007): 973-973.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "Arthur Conan Doyle: A Life in Letters," by Jon Lellenberg and edited by Daniel Stashower and Charles Foley.

2893. "The Ghosts of Baker Street." Publishers Weekly 252, no. 47 (2005): 26-26.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of The Ghosts of Baker Street. Edited by Martin H. Greenberg, Jon Lellenberg and Daniel Stashower (Carrol & Graf), $16.95 paper (240p) ISBN 0-7867-1400-X

2894. "The Gullible Creator of Sherlock Holmes." The Toronto Star, May 16, 1999: 1.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of Daniel Stashower's Teller of Tales. "...As a London bookseller told American Daniel Stashower, author of Teller Of Tales: The Life Of Arthur Conan Doyle, 'Doyle went a bit potty at the end, didn't he?' Certainly it's intriguing, to say the least, that the creator of the world's ultra-rational detective and thinking machine ended up seeing fairies at the bottom of his garden. Not at all elementary, you might say (which Holmes wouldn't, since it turns out he never used that much abused phrase). Yet there must surely be something in the connection between Sherlock Holmes and his incongruous author. After all, both are spun from the same ectoplasm (Doyle, I mean). So it was in anticipation of a daring and maybe even creepy ride that I turned to Teller Of Tales, which spends about a quarter of its bulk on the issue. Only to be disappointed...."

2895. "The Mythmaker." New Republic 238, no. 4 (2008): 46-50.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "Arthur Conan Doyle: A Life in Letters," by Jon

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Lellenberg, Daniel Stashower and Charles Foley.

2896. "Reviewed Elsewhere." Biography 23, no. 3 (2000): 583-638.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes Doyle reference. Doyle, Arthur Conan. Teller of Tales: The Life of Arthur Conan Doyle. Daniel Stashower. London: Allen Lane/Penguin, 1999. 472 pp. GBP18.99. "Stashower is wonderfully gentle and quite sympathetic to Doyle. . . ." He is "particularly good at describing the way in which Conan Doyle . . . entered into the weird world of the paranormal. . . . [T]his is a good, solid and above all sympathetic introduction" to the life. A. N. Wilson. TLS, Feb. 25, 2000: 36
2897. "Reviewed Elsewhere." Biography 23, no. 1 (1999): 264-301.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes Doyle reference. Teller of Tales: The Life of Arthur Conan Doyle. Daniel Stashower. New York: Holt, 1999. 472 pp. $32.50. "Daniel Stashower's rather jaunty biography returns us to the days of George Gissing and New Grub Street, the age of an awakening mass literacy and of popular fiction magazines like The Strand, the perhaps latent connection between Victorian optimism and the stirrings of science fiction." Christopher Hitchens. NYRB, Nov. 4, 1999: 25
2898. "Teller of Tales (Book)." Publishers Weekly 246, no. 11 (1999): 41.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'Teller of Tales: The Life of Arthur Conan Doyle,' by Daniel Stashower.
2899. "The World of Paperbacks." Contemporary Review 290, no. 1691 (2008): 521-524.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Lists a few titles related to Doyle and Holmes. "Also from Phoenix we have...Andrew Lycett's Conan Doyle: The Man Who Created Sherlock Holmes (GBP10.99) whose hardback edition was hailed in this journal as 'the best and . . . certainly the fullest' biography of the writer...Vintage Classics have brought out Arthur Conan Doyle's famous novel. The Hound of the Baskervilles and have included with it not only the short story, The Adventure of the Speckled Band, which Doyle judged his best story, but an introduction by Ruth Rendell and all for GBP5.99....The life of Arthur Conan Doyle is arguably best seen in his correspondence and Harper Perennial has brought out Arthur Conan Doyle: A Life in Letters (GBP12.99), edited by Jon Lellenberg, Daniel Stashower and Charles Foley. The review of the hardback edition praised this 'valuable collection', based on Doyle's letters to his mother, letters which were 'frank and revealing'and which showed his 'many and varied interests'...."
2900. Baker, John F. "Hot Deals." Publishers Weekly 247, no. 30 (2000): 16.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on some book rights deals as of July 24, 2000 with a reference to Doyle. "...That's the next book project for Daniel Stashower, who won both the Edgar and the Agatha awards for last year's Holt biography of Arthur Conan Doyle, Teller of Tales. His agent, Donald Maass, has just sold his proposal for A Gleaning of Light for a six-figure bid (including bonuses) for world rights to Charles Conrad at Broadway.... Stashower's tale centers on Philo T. Farnsworth, a 15-year-old technological genius who built the first prototype of a TV set in his San Francisco garage some 80 years ago, and on the long patent battle with RCA's David Sarnoff that eventually followed."
2901. Binyon, Tj. "If only he'd listened to Holmes." The Evening Standard (London), February 21, 2000: 56.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of Teller of Tales: The Life of Arthur Conan Doyle by Daniel Stashower (Allen Lane/The Penguin Press, 18.99). "...Stashower's book is certainly a worthy addition to the long shelf of Conan Doyle biographies. Elegant and scholarly, it is, perhaps, the sanest and most balanced of all...."
2902. Birch, Dinah. "Elementary love." TLS, no. 5458 (2007): 3-5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the books "Conan Doyle: The Man Who Created Sherlock Holmes," by Andrew Lycett and "Arthur Conan Doyle: A Life in Letters," edited by Jon Lellenberg, Daniel Stashower, and Charles Foley.
2903. Bliss, Laurel M. "Book Reviews: Arts & Humanities." Library Journal 124, no. 3 (1999): 152.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'Teller of Tales: The Life of Arthur Conan Doyle,' by Daniel Stashower.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

2904. Carey, John. "Outwitted by his own creation." The Sunday Times (London), August 26, 2007: 39.
 NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of Conan Doyle: The Man Who Created Sherlock Holmes by Andrew Lycett and Arthur Conan Doyle: A Life in Letters edited by Daniel Stashower, Jon Lellenberg and Charles Foley.
2905. Cohen, Edward H. "Victorian Bibliography for 1999." Victorian Studies 43, no. 4 (2001): 699-839.
 NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes Doyle references. --Baccolini, Raffaella, Carla Comellini, & Vita Fortunati, eds. Culture di lingua inglese a confronto. Bologna: CLUEB, 1998. 256 pp. Includes Barrie, Doyle, and Stevenson; --Baxter, Kent B. "Identity in Crisis: Modernism and the Texts of Adolescence." DAIA 59:2972. Includes Doyle and Kipling; --Calanchi, Alessandra. Quattro studi in rosso: I confini del privato maxchile nella narrativa vittoriana. Cesena: Societa Editrice "Il Ponte Vecchio," 1997. 216 pp. Includes Collins, Doyle, and Stevenson; --Cockerell, Hugh. "Tobacco and Victorian Literature," in IIIsc, Lock, Reynolds, & Tansey, pp. 89-99. Includes Dickens, Doyle, and A. Trollope; --Drever, Tiffany E. "Medical Mysteries: Dragging the Victorian Hysteria into the Machine Age." DAIA 59:3827. Includes Collins, Dickens, and Doyle; --Fraser, Robert W. Victorian Quest Romance: Stevenson, Haggard, Kipling, and Conan Doyle. Plymouth: Northcote, 1998. 93 pp.; --Hendershot, Cyndy. The Animal Within: Masculinity and the Gothic. Ann Arbor: U of Michigan P, 1998. 281 pp. Includes C. Bronte, Conrad, Doyle, Stevenson, and Stoker; --Hennessey, Rosemary, & Chrys Ingraham, eds. Materialist Feminism: A Reader in Class, Difference, and Women's Lives. London: Routledge, 1997. 430 pp. Includes Doyle; --Krebs, Paula M. Gender, Race, and the Writing of Empire: Public Discourse and the Boer War. Cambridge UP. 205 pp. Includes Doyle, Haggard, Kipling, and Schreiner; --Otis, Laura. Membranes: Metaphors of Invasion in Nineteenth-Century Literature, Science, and Politics. Baltimore: Johns Hopkins UP. 210 pp. Includes Doyle; --Ramirez, Luz E. "Empire and Americanism: British Representations of Latin America." DAIA 59: 3468. Includes Conrad and Doyle; --Reitz, Caroline W. "The Necessary Detective: Police, Empire and Victorian National Identity." DAIA 60:1576. Includes Burton, Collins, Dickens, Doyle, and Kipling; --Baker Street Inventory." BSJ Mar:59-63; Jun:53- 55; Sep:58-61; Dec:59-61. --Calanchi, Alessandra. "'Others Will Follow': Lo strano caso di Jekyll, Hyde e Sherlock Holmes." RdSV 3, 5(1998):133-43. --Calanchi, Alessandra. "Rovinare le sacre simbiosi: Rosencrantz, Guildenstern e Sherlock Holmes." Poetiche: Letteratura ed Altro 4/5(1996):145-55. --Edwards, Owen Dudley. "Arthur Conan Doyle," in V, Winks & Corrigan, pp. 301-30. --Frank, Lawrence. "The Hound of the Baskervilles, the Man on the Tor, and a Metaphor for the Mind." NCL 54:336-72. --Genis, Aleksandr. "Zakon i poriadok: Moi Sherlock Holmes." Znamia Dec:195-201. --Goldfarb, Clifford. The Great Shadow: Arthur Conan Doyle, Brigadier Gerard and Napoleon. Ashcroft, BC: Calabash, 1997. 232 pp. Rev. by N. Dames in VPR 32:181-82. --Hennessey, Rosemary, & Rajeswri Mohan. "The Construction of Women in Three Popular Texts of Empire: Toward a Critique of Materialist Feminism," in V, Hennessey & Ingraham, pp. 186-206. Includes "The Speckled Band." --Holland-Toll, Linda J. "Holmes the Prole: Or, a Marxist, Definitely Manque." Clues 20, 1:37-48. --Jenkins, William D. The Adventure of the Detected Detective: Sherlock Holmes in James Joyce's "Finnegan's Wake". Westport, CT: Greenwood, 1998. 149 pp. --Jurkowska-Krupa, Beata. "Modes of Storytelling: A Rhetorical Analysis of Film and Television Adaptations of Arthur Conan Doyle's The Hound of the Baskervilles and Leo Tolstoy's Anna Karenina." DAIA 59:3265. --Keep, Christopher, & Don Randall. "Addiction, Empire, and Narrative in Arthur Conan Doyle's The Sign of Four." Novel 32:207-21. --Kestner, J. Sherlock's Men. . . . See VB 1997, 794. Rev. by E. Lauterbach in ELT 42:212-16; by R. Jann in VS 42:314-16. --McConchie, R. W. "Privileged and Displaced Persons: Henry Lawson in Sherlock Holmes's England." CE&S 21, 2:83-100. --Otis, Laura. Membranes: Metaphors of Invasion in Nineteenth-Century Literature, Science, and Politics. Baltimore: Johns Hopkins UP. 210 pp. Includes Doyle. --Schumacher, Hans. "Sherlock Holmes und der Höllenhund: Mythologie der Detektivgeschichte," in V, Chiarini, Kruse, & Todini, pp. 265-84. --Stashower, Daniel. Teller of Tales: The Life of Arthur Conan Doyle. London: Pan; NY: Holt. 512 pp. Rev. by A. Lejeune in NRev 31 May:68-69.
2906. Cox, Jim. "Book Review Teller of Tales by Daniel Stashower." Baker Street West 1 6, no. 2 (2000): 35-40.
 NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2907. Foden, Giles. "Review: Book of the week: The case of the mysterious author: Giles Foden is glad that a new biography of Conan Doyle focuses on work rather than wacky beliefs." The Guardian (London), September 22,

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- 2007: 7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of Andrew Lycett's biography, Conan Doyle: The Man Who Created Sherlock Holmes by Andrew Lycett: 525pp, Weidenfeld & Nicolson, GBP20. "...Conan Doyle has found a biographer of distinction in Andrew Lycett, who has previously written lives of Rudyard Kipling, Ian Fleming and Dylan Thomas. Lycett's brilliant piece of detective work on the author of the Sherlock Holmes stories now allows us to judge his literary worth against that of his peers and properly to set him in the context of his times...." Mention also made of Arthur Conan Doyle: A Life in Letters, edited by Jon Lellenberg, Daniel Stashower "and Conan Doyle's great-nephew Charles Foley (HarperCollins, pounds 25)."
2908. Hobbs, Don. "Review--Murder in Baker Street edited by Martin H. Greenberg, Jon L. Lellenberg and Daniel Stashower." The Holmes & Watson Report 7, no. 5 (2003): 23.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2909. Hodgkinson, Thomas. "Books: Sherlock Holmes the Aesthete; Teller of Tales: the Life of Arthur Conan Doyle by Daniel Stashower Allen Lane Pounds 18.99." The Independent (London), February 27, 2000: 51.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of Stashower's biography of Doyle.
2910. Hughes, David. "More than meets the eye, Watson." Spectator 284, no. 8953 (2000): 41.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'Teller of Tales: The Life of Arthur Conan Doyle,' by Daniel Stashower.
2911. Lewis, Peter. "It's elementary my dear Watson, I've been misunderstood." Daily Mail (London), March 24, 2000: 60.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of Teller of Tales: The Life of Arthur Conan Doyle by Daniel Stashower (Penguin Press, 18.99). "Everyone knows the standard portrait of the creator of Sherlock Holmes: he was the bluff Scottish doctor with no patients who based his immortal detective on his onetime teacher, Dr Joseph Bell of Edinburgh. He killed off Holmes because he was tired of him, reluctantly brought him back to make a fortune and spent the rest of his life writing unread historical novels and going barmy about spirits and fairies. So a book about the other side of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle is overdue. This well-told tale by an American crime writer is constantly surprising and shrewdly entertaining. It left me viewing Conan Doyle with enhanced respect as an honourable and quixotic man...."
2912. McCarter, Jeremy. "One-Hit Wonder." New York Times Book Review 157, no. 54174 (2007): 15-15.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the books "The Man Who Created Sherlock Holmes: The Life and Times of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle," by Andrew Lycett and "Arthur Conan Doyle: A Life in Letters," edited by Jon Lellenberg, Daniel Stashower and Charles Foley.
2913. McDermid, Val. "Crime and the literary solution;Scotland is the spiritual home of the crime thriller but, after Wilkie Collins, the genre's greatest exponent remains an enigma." The Sunday Herald, February 20, 2000: 11.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of Teller of Tales: The Life of Arthur Conan Doyle by Daniel Stashower (Penguin, 18.99). "Sherlock Holmes, like Coca Cola, is a brand name recognised across the globe. There are societies dedicated to studying the canon; a monthly magazine devoted to all matters Sherlockian; websites and newsgroups on the internet that discuss the great detective; and hundreds of novels and short stories picking up the character where his creator left off. Since the death of Conan Doyle, Holmes has been resurrected to meet Freud, to solve the Jack the Ripper murders, even to marry a young heiress 40 years his junior. And the house where Conan Doyle grew up in Edinburgh is marked not by a statue to the man himself, but by one of Holmes. But who is the man behind the myth? That is the question Daniel Stashower attempts to answer in this new biography...."
2914. Muller, Alexandra. "Sleuthing Conan Doyle." New Criterion 26, no. 10 (2008): 25-29.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews two books related to surgeon and writer Arthur Conan Doyle including "The Man Who Created Sherlock Holmes: The Life and Times of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle," by Andrew Lycett and "Arthur Conan Doyle: A Life in Letters," by Jon Lellenberg, Daniel Stashower and Charles Foley.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

2915. Pfeiffer, John R. "A Continuing Checklist of Shaviana." SHAW The Annual of Bernard Shaw Studies 20, no. (2001): 265-289.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Two entries with reference to Doyle. The first: Stashower, Daniel. Teller of Tales: The Life of Arthur Conan Doyle. New York: Henry Holt and Company, 1999. "There was substantial connection between Doyle, and Shaw, and Stashower presents it here, drawing upon the Holroyd Bernard Shaw and the Laurence Collected Letters as well as the Doyle archive. The most extensive example is in 'The Ruthless Vegetarian,' an even-handed chapter detailing the Shaw/Doyle newspaper duel over the report of the Titanic disaster. Shaw's posture was that the newspapers had lied in their descriptions of the acts of heroism, especially by the captain of the ship. Doyle's view was sentimental, rationalizing that glossing the brutal facts (if such facts were present) was salutary since there was already immense shock and pain from the tragedy. He believed, in addition, that Shaw's attack was not sincere, but a typical Shavian ploy of self-advertisement. The exchange was bitter but did not change their 'kindly personal relations.' Doyle wrote, 'Shaw is a genial creature to meet, and I am prepared to believe that there is a human kindly side to his nature though it has not been presented to the public. It took a good man to write Saint Joan.'..." The second entry: Hampton, Aubrey. GBS & Company: A Biographical Celebration in Two Acts Presided Over by Bernard Shaw. Tampa: Organica Press, 1989 (1988). "Copies may be ordered from Organica Press, 4419 North Manhattan Avenue, Tampa Florida 33614. World premiere production at Gorilla Theatre (Tampa, Florida), 5 February 1999. From the playbill: 'Where else can you spend the evening with Ellen Terry, Mrs. Patrick Campbell, Albert Einstein, Houdini, Oscar Wilde, W. B. Yeats, Henry George, Bo [sic] & Sidney Webb, H.G. Wells, Gene Tunney, Bertrand Russell, Beerbohm Tree, Richard Mansfield, Harley Granville-Barker, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, Madame Blavatsky, Annie Besant, Florence Farr, and, of course, George Bernard Shaw.'"

2916. Propson, David. "Sir Arthur Conundrum Doyle." Wall Street Journal - Eastern Edition, 12/08, 2007: W12.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the books "The Man Who Created Sherlock Holmes," by Andrew Lycett and "Arthur Conan Doyle: A Life in Letters," edited by Jon Lellenberg, Daniel Stashower and Charles Foley.

2917. Randolph, Justus J. "Angela Thody. Writing and Presenting Research. London: Sage Publications, 2006. Pp. xvi, 264. Paper: ISBN-13 978-1-4129-0293-9, UKGBP19.99." Journal of Scholarly Publishing 38, no. 3 (2007): 174-182.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "Writing and Presenting Research," by Angela Thody. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...My red pen is more important to me than a spell checker, and I think more clearly away from a computer screen. I wonder if this approach is plausible only for those of us who regularly travel by public transport or otherwise have regular chunks of time to kill (shades of the writing habits of the young Arthur Conan Doyle)?..." Footnote to this part of article is from Daniel Stashower, Teller of Tales: The Life of Arthur Conan Doyle (London: Penguin 2000), 63-5.

2918. Ripley, Mike. "Books: the Return of the Hound; One of English Fiction's most Celebrated Books Celebrates its Centenary this Month. Post Crime Book Mike Ripley Looks at the Publications Surrounding the Event." Birmingham Post, August 4, 2001: 53.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...To celebrate the centenary of The Hound of the Baskervilles, Penguin books have produced attractive (and reasonably priced) re- issues of the entire Holmes canon and in addition, Doyle's science fiction adventure The Lost World, to which homage is paid in the continuing Jurassic Park saga. There is also a new biography of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle: Teller of Tales by Daniel Stashower (Penguin, pounds 8.99). But for the real Holmes fan - and there are dedicated 'Holmesians' in virtually every country on earth - the truly unmissable commemorative volume must be Starring Sherlock Holmes by David Stuart Davies (Titan Books, pounds 29.99), a leading authority on all things Sherlockian and the editor of the Sherlock Holmes Detective Magazine...."

2919. Tonkin, Boyd. "Books: Summer Crime: Not quite so Elementary, Dear Readers; Win a Stash of Sherlock Holmes Books in our Penguin Summer Quiz." The Independent (London), July 28, 2001: 10.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "In August 1901, Arthur Conan Doyle brought his creation Sherlock Holmes back from the dead when The Hound of the Baskervilles started its serialisation in the Strand magazine. To mark the centenary of this famous resurrection, Penguin has published a range of Conan Doyle's works as Penguin Classics for the first time. And 10 Independent readers can win the whole set, along with Daniel Stashower's much-praised new biography of Conan Doyle, in our Summer Crime quiz...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

2920. Wilson, A. N. "In Holmes's shadow." TLS, no. (2000): 36.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'Teller of Tales: The life of Arthur Conan Doyle,' by Daniel Stashower.

07A SHERLOCKIANS AND THE SOCIETIES -- SHERLOCKIANS -- STIX, THOMAS L., JR. (4)

2921. "His Last Bow: Thomas L. Stix, Jr." The Musgrave Papers, no. 11 (1998): 140.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2922. "Thomas L. Stix, Jr, BSI." Shoso-In Bulletin 8, no. (1998): 233.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2923. Raymond, Trevor S. "Obituary, Thomas L. Stix." Canadian Holmes 22, no. 2 (1998): 51.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2924. Southworth, Bruce E. "Stix-Shaw Bolo Tie Comes to Minnesota." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 3, no. 1 (1999): 1.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Highlights gift from Dorothy Stix of a bolo tie that had belonged to her husband, Tom, and John Bennett Shaw, given to the Collections during the Holmes birthday weekend in New York.

07A SHERLOCKIANS AND THE SOCIETIES -- SHERLOCKIANS -- STOCK, RANDALL (2)

2925. "Using the Sherlock Holmes Collections." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 5, no. 1 (2001): 8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Notes the recent visit of Luci Zahray accompanied by her good friend who writes under the name Mary Monica Pulver. Mary Monica also has a current mystery series written under the name of Monica Ferris, which includes Crewel World, Framed in Lace, and A Stitch in Time, and features her character Betsy Devonshire. While touring the Collections, Mary Monica was inspired, and has planned a future book featuring the Elmer L. Andersen Library and Betsy Devonshire. Randall Stock's return research visit in December is also noted. Includes a photograph of Mary Monica Pulver, Luci Zahray, and Tim Johnson.
2926. "Using the Sherlock Holmes Collections." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 4, no. 4 (2000): 8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Notes the visits of Randall Stock and Adam Sveum, with photographs of both.

07A SHERLOCKIANS AND THE SOCIETIES -- SHERLOCKIANS -- SWIFT, WAYNE B. (3)

2927. Calamai, Peter. "In Memoriam: Wayne Bradley Swift, May 9, 1927-January 15, 2001." Canadian Holmes 25, no. 2 (2001): 41-42.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2928. Johnson, Timothy J. "An Update from the Collections." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 5, no. 1 (2001): 5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Notes recent activities including recent class visits, preparations for the summer conference and exhibit, work with the Weisman Museum on their "Cabinet of Curiosities" exhibit, and an article on the Collections in the St. Paul Pioneer Press. Also noted is progress on fund-raising for McDiarmid

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

curatorship, work with the Law Library on a conference tie-in with the exhibit, and the passing of Wayne Swift.

2929. McKuras, Julie. "Musings." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 5, no. 1 (2001): 4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Notes the arrival of the Eve Titus manuscript archive, her current illness, and her contributions to the article about this acquisition. Also noted are other articles in the newsletter relating to Theodore Blegen, the Reichenbach Falls, and the passing of Sherlockian Wayne Swift.

07A SHERLOCKIANS AND THE SOCIETIES -- SHERLOCKIANS -- T(7)

2930. "Eve Titus Update." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 5, no. 2 (2001): 7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Notes Eve Titus's investiture in the Baker Street Irregulars in 1993 as "Young Master Rucastle" along with two photographs.
2931. Dunn, Dave. "Strictly Personal: Christine Thomas." Canadian Holmes 26, no. 3 (2003): 35.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2932. ———. "Strictly Personal: Stephanie Thomas." Canadian Holmes 26, no. 2 (2002): 37-38.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2933. Gil, Olga et al. "In Memoriam: Anne Skene Melvin, Mary Campbell, Stephen R. Tolins, Robin W. Links, Kathleen Morrison, and Frank Darlington." Canadian Holmes 26, no. 4 (2003): 20-27.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2934. Mason, Bill. "Review--On the Shoulders of Giants: Jack Tracy and the Encyclopaedia Sherlockiana by Christopher and Barbara Roden." The Holmes & Watson Report 5, no. 6 (2002): 27-29.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2935. Roden, Christopher. "On the Shoulders of Giants: Jack Tracy and The Encyclopaedia Sherlockiana." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana, no. (2001): 3-63.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2936. Thomalen, Robert E., Howard Brody, and William Hyder. "'Stand with me here upon the terrace...'" Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 3 (1994): 188-189.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Obituaries for Robert N. Brodie, Ralph F. Turner, and R. Irving Paxton.

07A SHERLOCKIANS AND THE SOCIETIES -- SHERLOCKIANS -- U (1)

2937. Dunn, Dave. "Strictly Personal: Gerry Uba." Canadian Holmes 22, no. 1 (1998): 30-31.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

07A SHERLOCKIANS AND THE SOCIETIES -- SHERLOCKIANS -- V (2)

2938. Raymond, Trevor S. "In memoriam Tony Van Bridge." Canadian Holmes 28, no. 3 (2005): 46.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2939. Vanderburgh, George A. "My African Adventure -- The Reminiscences of a Peripatetic Bootmaker." Shoso-In Bulletin 5, no. (1995): 51-65.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

07A SHERLOCKIANS AND THE SOCIETIES -- SHERLOCKIANS -- W (8)

2940. "In Memoriam Brant Lopez and Ronald Weyman." Canadian Holmes 30, no. 4 (2007): 41-42.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2941. Dunn, Dave. "Strictly Personal: Doug Wrigglesworth." Canadian Holmes 17, no. 4 (1994): 28-29.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Biographical sketch of Doug Wrigglesworth.
2942. ———. "Strictly Personal: Larry Wagner." Canadian Holmes 21, no. 1 (1997): 42-43.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2943. ———. "Strictly Personal: Peter H. Wood." Canadian Holmes 25, no. 2 (2001): 32.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2944. ———. "Strictly Personal: Philip K. Wilson." Canadian Holmes 27, no. 4 (2004): 35-36.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2945. Gurr, Ted. "In Memoriam: Pete Wysocki." Canadian Holmes 29, no. 4 (2006): 47.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2946. McArthur, Douglas. "Hot on the trail of the master of deduction A white company? A scarlet study? Five orange pips? Look for these -- and Sherlock Holmes himself -- in the countryside that Arthur Conan Doyle once called home." The Globe and Mail (Toronto), June 5, 1999: F3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Account of a tour with Philip Weller. "My friend Peter is a Sherlockian, North America's term for otherwise sane folk who go gaga over Sherlock Holmes. The guide he had prearranged for a day tour in southern England was a Holmesian -- the British name for people similarly obsessed...."
2947. Stix, Dorothy K., and Susan Rice. "Margaret Walsh, July 28, 1921 - July 7, 2005." The Serpentine Muse 21, no. 4 (2005): 6.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

07A SHERLOCKIANS AND THE SOCIETIES -- SHERLOCKIANS -- Y (1)

2948. "Rogue's Gallery Dr. Hirayama Yuichi, BSI." The Ritual, no. 26 (2000): 21-22.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

07B SHERLOCKIANS AND THE SOCIETIES -- THE SOCIETIES (51)

2949. "Calling all Scion Societies." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 1, no. 1 (1997): 3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Call for materials from scion societies for the University of Minnesota Libraries' Sherlock Holmes Collections.
2950. "From the Editor's Commonplace Book." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 2 (1994): 127.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Peter Blau's report on Doyle manuscripts offered at Sotheby's, The Scowlers and Molly Maguires Third International Seminar, the passing of Patsy Dalton, and The Watsonian Weekend III.
2951. "Photomontage I. Birthday 2001." The Serpentine Muse 17, no. 2 (2001): 6-7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

2952. "Photomontage II. Bash 2001." The Serpentine Muse 17, no. 2 (2001): 10.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2953. "Sir Hugo's Wild and Profane Sinema--Milking Sacred Cows: Revisiting Brett Bash '95." The Holmes & Watson Report 4, no. 2 (2000): 22-27.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2954. Bateson, Jean. "Review -- 'In the Footsteps of a Gigantic Hound, Multi-Society Meeting, Granada Studios 11 June 1994'." The Musgrave Papers, no. 7 (1994): 97-98.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2955. Bruxner, Pamela. "Review -- Aspects of Holmes II: Scrutinizing Holmes, York 11-13 June 1993." The Musgrave Papers, no. 6 (1993): 98-103.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2956. Campbell, Mary, and Bob Coghill. "Footprints of FOTH, A Reminiscence." Canadian Holmes 25, no. 2 (2001): 4-12.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2957. Capolupo, Maria. "Review--Sherlock in Summer, The Mini Tonga Cruise--Part II." The Ritual, no. 22 (1998): 58-59.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2958. Cochran, William R. "From the Editor's Commonplace Book." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 1 (1994): 62-63.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // On the demise of the periodical Baker Street Miscellanea, Julie and Al Rosenblatt's 4-day mini-course on Holmes at Vassar College, an article in MHQ by Thaddeus Holt, the Folio Society's version of the Canon, the 25th anniversary of the Noble Bachelors of St. Louis, the Sherlock Holmes Society of London's "Back to Baker Street" festival, and the Books of Michael Harrison.
2959. Davies, David Stuart. "Ten Years of Musgravia." The Musgrave Papers, no. 8 (1995): 16-21.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2960. Gunson, Eilidh. "Review--The Stonyhurst Experience: Sherlock in Summer, The Musgraves' Garden Party, Stonyhurst College, 22 July 1995." The Musgrave Papers, no. 8 (1995): 103-106.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2961. ———. "Review--The Stonyhurst Experience: Stonyhurst College, 22-24 August 1997." The Musgrave Papers, no. 10 (1997): 132-137.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2962. Hall, John. "Review--Write on Sherlock." The Ritual, no. 18 (1996): 60-63.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2963. Henderson, Lynda. "Review--Mr. Holmes and Dr. Conan Doyle, The George Hotel, Huddersfield, 26 March 1994." The Musgrave Papers, no. 7 (1994): 95-96.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2964. Izban, Donald B. "Reporting on the Torists International, SS (an edifying Canonical experience)." Shoso-In Bulletin 12, no. (2002): 55-59.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2965. Keefauver, Brad. "A STUDian Banquet and the Morning After." The Holmes & Watson Report 1, no. 2 (1997): 7-10.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

2966. Keefauver, G. Hunter. "Fear and Fake Rowing on the Campaign Trail: The Dayton Sherlockian Convention of '00." The Holmes & Watson Report 4, no. 3 (2000): 19-24.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

2967. Kegley, Jerry. "Scion Rendezvous." Baker Street West 19, no. 1 (2003): 42-46.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

2968. ———. "Scion Rendezvous." Baker Street West 19, no. 2 (2003): 42-43.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

2969. ———. "Scion Rendezvous." Baker Street West 18, no. 1 (2002): 46-48.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

2970. ———. "Scion Rendezvous." Baker Street West 18, no. 2 (2002): 46-47.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

2971. ———. "Scion Rendezvous." Baker Street West 17, no. 1 (2001): 42-47.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

2972. ———. "Scion Rendezvous." Baker Street West 17, no. 2 (2001): 39-44.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

2973. ———. "Scion Rendezvous." Baker Street West 16, no. 1 (2000): 42-48.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

2974. ———. "Scion Rendezvous." Baker Street West 16, no. 2 (2000): 45-50.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

2975. ———. "Scion Rendezvous." Baker Street West 15, no. 1 (1999): 32-35.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

2976. ———. "Scion Rendezvous." Baker Street West 15, no. 2 (1999): 25-27.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

2977. ———. "Scion Rendezvous." Baker Street West 14, no. 1 (1998): 32.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

2978. ———. "Scion Rendezvous." Baker Street West 14, no. 2 (1998): 26-30.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

2979. ———. "Scion Rendezvous." Baker Street West 14, no. 3 (1998): 27-30.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

2980. ———. "Scion Rendezvous." Baker Street West 13, no. 1 (1997): 33-34.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

2981. ———. "Scion Rendezvous." Baker Street West 13, no. 2 (1997): 28-29.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

2982. ———. "Scion Rendezvous." Baker Street West 13, no. 3 (1997): 30.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

2983. ———. "Scion Rendezvous." Baker Street West 1 2, no. 1 (1996): 36-39.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2984. ———. "Scion Rendezvous." Baker Street West 1 2, no. 2 (1996): 26-28.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2985. ———. "Scion Rendezvous." Baker Street West 1 2, no. 3 (1996): 38-40.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2986. ———. "Scion Rendezvous." Baker Street West 1 1, no. 1 (1995): 24-25.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2987. ———. "Scion Rendezvous." Baker Street West 1 1, no. 2 (1995): 20-22.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2988. ———. "Scion Rendezvous." Baker Street West 1 1, no. 3 (1995): 28-33.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2989. Kunnath, Mary Jane. "The Canonical Convocation and Caper--A Time to Remember." Shoso-In Bulletin 8, no. (1998): 155-158.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2990. ———. "The Cononical Convocation and Caper 1996--A Souvenir." Shoso-In Bulletin 7, no. (1997): 118-120.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2991. Macintyre, Ben. "The strange case of Monsieur Sherlock Holmes." The Times (London), May 16, 1996: 1.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Was Sherlock Holmes really French? An exhibition exploring this unlikely question opened in Paris yesterday, bringing together clues to suggest that beneath the famous deerstalker of the world's most enduring fictional detective were the mind, heart and blood of a Frenchman. Holmes is a cult figure in France and, like every aspect of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's beloved sleuth, the mystery of his ancestry is hotly debated and the deductions anything but elementary...."
2992. MacLachlan, Donald, Elliott M. Black, George A. Vanderburgh, Doug Elliott, Mark Hacksley, Rachel Alkally, and Rose Wilkins. "A Clinking of Toasts." Canadian Holmes 17, no. 3 (1994): 6-10.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presentation of "the third annual sampling of toasts from recent Sherlockian dinners from Montreal to Vancouver--and points south."
2993. McCafferty, Jonathan, and Elaine Hamill. "Review--Aspects of Holmes V." The Ritual, no. 26 (2000): 62-65.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2994. Moore, Richard. "Review--Aspects of Holmes III: A Study in Scotland, Scandic Crown Hotel, Edinburgh, 4-5 May 1995." The Musgrave Papers, no. 8 (1995): 95-103.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2995. Penner, Marilyn. "FOTH Revisited: When Toronto was the Centre of the Universe." Canadian Holmes 25, no. 4 (2002): 24-27.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
2996. Schulte, Eileen. "Devotion to Holmes elementary to fans." St. Petersburg Times (Florida), May 7, 1997: 11.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The floor-length curtains cloaked the crowd in darkness, thick and ominous, inside the Surf Room at the Dolphin Beach Resort. The question before the assembled participants of the first Sunshine State Sherlockian Scion Symposium was provocative. Was Sherlock Holmes related to Spock?...It was all part of a celebration marking the 25th anniversary of the Pleasant Places of Florida, a local group of Sherlock Holmes enthusiasts based, fittingly, in Holmes Beach. (At least one of the Holmes mysteries had a local connection. Part of The Five Orange Pips takes place in Florida.)..."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

2997. ———. "Pure devotion to Holmes is elementary to his fans." St. Petersburg Times (Florida), May 8, 1997: 6.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Similar to article from previous day.

2998. Silverstein, Albert. "Sherlock Holmes, Jews and Rhode Island." Rhode Island Jewish Historical Notes 14, no. 2 (2004): 336-352.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The author, a psychologist and professor at the University of Rhode Island, describes his own and others' 20th-century studies of Sherlock Holmes, the detective character created by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. The article considers Rhode Island's Sherlock Holmes societies and examines both specific references to Jews in the Holmes canon and evidence of Doyle's attitudes toward victims of persecution.

2999. Weller, Philip, and Jane Weller. "Franco-Midland Hardware Company Contributions to The Kamakura Seminar and the Kawasaki Convention." Shoso-In Bulletin 8, no. (1998): 206-222.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

07B SHERLOCKIANS AND THE SOCIETIES -- THE SOCIETIES -- ADVENTURESSES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (24)

3000. "Adventuresses at Saratoga." The Serpentine Muse 20, no. 1 (2003): inside rear cover.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3001. "Adventuresses at the Silver Blaze, Delaware 2005." The Serpentine Muse 21, no. 4 (2005): inside rear cover.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3002. "ASH at Mycroft's League." The Serpentine Muse 19, no. 4 (2003): inside rear cover.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3003. "ASH at the BSI Silver Blaze in Saratoga." The Serpentine Muse 22, no. 4 (2006): 12.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3004. "ASH at the Watsonian Weekend." The Serpentine Muse 18, no. 4 (2002): inside rear cover.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3005. "ASH goes to London." The Serpentine Muse 23, no. 2 (2007): 16.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3006. "ASH in Chicago." The Serpentine Muse 19, no. 3 (2003): inside rear cover.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3007. "The Ashenpoof Song." The Serpentine Muse 24, no. (2008): inside rear cover.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3008. "The Ashenpoof Song." The Serpentine Muse, no. (2007): inside rear cover.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3009. "The Ashenpoof Song." The Serpentine Muse, no. (2006): inside rear cover.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3010. "The Ashenpoof Song." The Serpentine Muse, no. (2005): inside rear cover.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

3011. "The Ashenpoof Song." The Serpentine Muse, no. (2004): inside rear cover.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3012. "The Ashenpoof Song." The Serpentine Muse, no. (2003): inside rear cover.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3013. "The Ashenpoof Song." The Serpentine Muse, no. (2002): inside rear cover.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3014. "The Ashenpoof Song." The Serpentine Muse, no. (2001): inside rear cover.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3015. "The Ashenpoof Song." The Serpentine Muse, no. (2000): inside rear cover.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3016. "The Ashenpoof Song." The Serpentine Muse, no. (1999): inside rear cover.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3017. "The Ashenpoof Song." The Serpentine Muse, no. (1998): inside rear cover.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3018. Rhea, Tina. "New York Without Snow: the Spring ASH Dinner 1997." The Holmes & Watson Report 1, no. 3 (1997): 29-31.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3019. Rice, Susan. "Dubious and Questionable Memories: A History of the Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana, no. (2004): 3-64.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3020. Rich, Mary Ellen. "The Next Decade of ASH." The Serpentine Muse 23, no. 1 (2006): 12-13.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3021. ———. "The Woman: a toast prepared for the June 19, 1999 Spring Dinner." The Serpentine Muse 15, no. 4 (1999): 5-6.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3022. Vande Water, Bill. "The ASH Constitution and Buy Laws." The Serpentine Muse 16, no. 1 (1999): 5-8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3023. Vizoskie, Susan. "Report on the 2004 Autumn Members Meeting." The Serpentine Muse 21, no. 1 (2004): 6-7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

07B SHERLOCKIANS AND THE SOCIETIES -- THE SOCIETIES -- AN IRISH SECRET SOCIETY AT BUFFALO (1)

3024. "'Sherlock Holmes' A Melodrama in Four Acts at The Shaw Festival, Niagara-on-the-Lake [Advertisement]." Canadian Holmes 17, no. 3 (1994): 5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Advertisement for "a convocation of Sherlockians sponsored by The Bootmakers of Toronto and An Irish Secret Society at Buffalo

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

07B SHERLOCKIANS AND THE SOCIETIES -- THE SOCIETIES -- ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE SOCIETY
(1)

3025. Elliott, Philip et al. "ACD at Thirty-Five." Canadian Holmes 30, no. 2 (2006): 24-39.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

07B SHERLOCKIANS AND THE SOCIETIES -- THE SOCIETIES -- BAKER STREET IRREGULARS (36)

3026. "50 Years Ago." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 2, no. 4 (1998): 4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Highlights the 1948 publication of The Adventure of the Blue Carbuncle by the Baker Street Irregulars.
3027. "60th Anniversary Weekend Activities." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 1 (1994): 49-50.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Recap on the Annual Christopher Morley New York Memorial Walk, the Mrs. Hudson Breakfast, the William Gillette Memorial Luncheon, and the reception
3028. "The 60th Anniversary Weekend Continued: The Woman." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 2 (1994): 117.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Photograph, with caption, of Theresa Thomalen, The Woman at the 1994 BSI dinner.
3029. "ALA/CLA Annual Conference." American Libraries 34, no. 3 (2003): 97.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents the schedule and highlights for the 2003 American Library Association/Canadian Library Association Annual Conference, held in Toronto, Canada. Notes "Sherlock Holmes in Toronto" and The Sub-Librarian Scion of the Baker Street Irregulars in the ALA meeting with an invitation to "come and tour the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection at the Toronto Reference Library. This is one of the world's finest collections of materials by and about Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. Victoria Gill, Curator, will give an introduction to the Collection, emphasizing Sherlock Holmes. Afterwards, there will be a complimentary 'Coffee and Sticky Buns' light reception, hosted by the Bootmakers of Toronto, the local Sherlock Holmes scion society. Meet the Bootmakers and the Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection. Speaker: Victoria Gill, Curator of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection"
3030. "ASH at the BSI Silver Blaze in Saratoga." The Serpentine Muse 22, no. 4 (2006): 12.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3031. "Awards and Honors." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 1 (1994): 54-55.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Recap, with photographs, of honorees receiving their Irregular Shilling or Two Shilling awards.
3032. "Sir Hugo's Wild and Profane Sinema--Sir Hugo's BSI Weekend (Y2K Edition)." The Holmes & Watson Report 4, no. 1 (2000): 4-8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3033. "The Weekend at a Glance." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 4 (1994): 248-249.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Schedule of events surrounding the 141st birthday weekend in New York.
3034. Baesch, John F. "It's Not just a Dinner and a Cocktail Party: On the Fringe of the New York Celebration." The Holmes & Watson Report 1, no. 7 (1998): 6-8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

3035. Cagnat, Jean-Pierre. "Drawings -- 'Baker Street Irregulars Dinner 1993'." Shoso-In Bulletin 3, no. (1993): 23-28.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3036. ———. "Drawings -- 'Baker Street Irregulars Dinner 1994'." Shoso-In Bulletin 4, no. (1994): 47-50.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3037. ———. "Drawings -- 'Baker Street Irregulars Dinner 1996'." Shoso-In Bulletin 6, no. (1996): 93-96.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3038. ———. "Drawings -- 'Baker Street Irregulars Dinner 1999'." Shoso-In Bulletin 9, no. (1999): 93.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3039. ———. "Impressions of the BSI Dinner, 1993." Baker Street Miscellanea, no. 71 (1992): 22-23.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3040. Calamai, Peter. "Tracking Down the Authentic Sherlock Holmes." The Toronto Star, January 24, 1999: 1.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Baffled by the talk of fellow passengers on an elevator at the fabled Algonquin Hotel, the 30-something woman blurted out, 'Are you here for some sort of conference?' 'Yes,' replied Dr. George Vanderburgh, a family physician from Shelburne, northwest of Toronto. 'We're all Sherlockians, people who admire Sherlock Holmes.' The woman scrunched her brow. 'You mean, you sit around and read the stories together?' Not quite. This annual gathering of several hundred devoted Sherlockians every January in New York is much more an exercise in contemporary idolatry than a study of Victorian literature...."
3041. Cochran, William R. "The Editor's Gas-lamp." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 1 (1994): 5-6.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Comments on Sherlockians "of the first order--one who was fond of socializing with literary types," "of the second order--one who exhibits total devotion to the cause," and "of the third order" of "often think of themselves as non-Sherlockians" who were all present in New York for the 60th anniversary gathering.
3042. ———. "The Editor's Gas-lamp: 'If I have one quality upon earth it is common sense'--Houn." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 3 (1994): 133-134.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Highlights two points from a letter sent out by 'Wiggins' of the BSI: the status and importance of the Watson Fund and the status of scion societies recognized by the BSI.
3043. Davies, David Stuart. "The Toasts of New York: The BSI Celebrations, January 1994." The Ritual, no. 13 (1994): 32-36.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3044. De Waal, Ronald B. "Days and Thoughts in the Life of Mr. Ron. A Weekend With the Baker Street Irregulars January 13-16, 2000." Shoso-In Bulletin 10, no. (2000): 191-195.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3045. Dirda, Michael. "Excursions." The Washington Post, February 6, 2000: X15.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A report on the BSI Birthday Weekend festivities by an honored speaker and Sherlockian. "The game is afoot' as our intrepid reporter encounters the Baker Street Irregulars, meets admirers of Irene Adler, 'of dubious and questionable memory,' and learns a story for which the world may not yet be prepared...."
3046. Green, Richard Lancelyn. "Tilting at Windmills: Denis Conan Doyle and the Baker Street Irregulars." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana, no. (2002): 5-64.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

3047. Johnson, Timothy J. "An Update from the Collections." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 4, no. 1 (2000): 4, 8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Provides some observations on this year's trip to New York and the BSI weekend and on preparations for the opening of the Elmer L. Andersen Library.
3048. Keefauver, Brad, and Kathy Carter. "A Tale of Two Dinners: The BSI/Bash Scoop for 2003." The Holmes & Watson Report 6, no. 6 (2003): 17-19, 22.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3049. Keefauver, Brad, and Kathryn R. Carter. "Meanwhile. . . The BSI/Bash Dinners 2001." The Holmes & Watson Report 4, no. 6 (2001): 29, 32-37.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3050. Lellenberg, Jon L. "The BSI at Seventy." The Sherlock Holmes Journal 26, no. 3 (2003): 103-106.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3051. ———. "Footnotes: Baker Street Irregulars." The Washington Post, January 31, 1999: X11.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The Irregulars, who insist that Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson are far more real than the cast of characters in 'The Adventure of the Impeached Politician,' met in New York earlier this month for their 65th year. Their annual dinner, 'perpetuating the myth that Sherlock Holmes is not a myth,' has grown into four days of festivities, leaving celebrants enervated but happy at the end of a remarkable menu of lunches, dinners, and cocktail parties for the devotee to choose from. The tone reflects not the ascetic life of the Great Detective, but the gregarious and thirsty tendencies of the Manhattan literati led by Christopher Morley who gestated the Baker Street Irregulars in the back room of a speakeasy in the later years of Prohibition. These days there is a more explicit scholarly note, but even the weekend's keynote address by Edinburgh University historian Owen Dudley Edwards was a clarion call to let the revels begin -- not that Irregulars need much urging. At the BSI dinner, the governor of New York watched amused as his latest appointment to the Court of Appeals donned a British barrister's wig to conduct a mock trial of some of the Sherlock Holmes stories. 'Will you be wearing that wig in Albany?' asked one Irregular. 'No!' the governor answered for him."
3052. ———. "The March of Time." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 1 (1994): 40-45.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The 1930s through the 1990s through the eyes of a Sherlockian historian, performed at the Sherlockian cocktail party, January 8, 1994.
3053. ———. "The Origins of the Baker Street Journal Part I: Prehistory." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 46, no. 1 (1996): 20-30.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3054. ———. "The Origins of the Baker Street Journal Part II: The Game Is Afoot." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 46, no. 2 (1996): 7-21.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3055. Maloney, Jennifer. "Not a mystery meeting; Baker Street Irregulars mark Sherlock Holmes' birthday in Roslyn." Newsday (New York), January 12, 2009: A15.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "With tweed coats, tweed hats and even the odd deerstalker, the visitors tramped through icy woods yesterday to the cabin of Christopher Morley, the Roslyn author who 75 years ago founded the Baker Street Irregulars, New York's society of Sherlock Holmes devotees. Called The Knothole, the one-room cabin, preserved in a Roslyn park bearing the author's name, holds a desk, a fireplace, a bunk bed and Morley's Underwood typewriter...."
3056. McKuras, Julie. "Treasures From the John Bennett Shaw Library." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 4, no. 1 (2000): 7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Provides some additional information on the selection of items for the New York

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

BSI exhibit, those who assisted in developing the exhibit, and a list of the items that were displayed. Includes a photograph of the curator near one of the cases at the National Arts Club.

3057. Meyer, Karl E. "The Curious Incident of the Sleuth in the Meantime." The New York Times, January 19, 2000: E1.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Of the singular mysteries addressed by Sherlock Holmes, perhaps none is more intriguing than "The Case of the Undying Detective." His creator, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, vowed to kill him in the 1890's and turned to the archcriminal Professor Moriarty to do the job. 'You won't! You can't! You musn't!' the author's mother protested. Holmes survived, only to face rival creations by others who shamelessly copied his methods, and a legion of parodists who trifled with his name. Nevertheless Holmes is entering a third century, standing taller than ever. Several hundred Americans and a sprinkling of foreign guests gathered in Manhattan over the weekend to salute the master detective on his 146th birthday. For more than half a century this has been an annual rite, organized by the Baker Street Irregulars, the organization of Holmes devotees...."
3058. Rich, Mary Ellen. "BSI Dinner 1995." The Ritual, no. 15 (1995): 27.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3059. Rosenblatt, Albert M. "BSI: 1994." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 1 (1994): 46-48.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A poetic recap of this year in the life of the Irregulars.
3060. Speck, Gordon R. "The BSI Weekend, January 1997." The Holmes & Watson Report 1, no. 1 (1997): 9-10.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3061. Whelan, Michael F. "A Brief Early History of the Baker Street Irregulars." Shoso-In Bulletin 8, no. (1998): 232-235.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

07B SHERLOCKIANS AND THE SOCIETIES -- THE SOCIETIES -- BIMETALLIC QUESTION (5)

3062. "Professor Moriarty's not invited." The Gazette (Montreal), January 20, 2001: W1.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "You don't have to be a member of the Sherlock Holmes Society to appreciate the legendary amateur sleuth. The Bimetallic Question, Montreal's chapter of the international group dedicated to promoting Holmes, celebrates the fictional detective's 147th birthday today at 6 p.m. at the Vieux Port Restaurant, 39 St. Paul St E. in Old Montreal. $35."
3063. Hustak, Alan. "A double dose of Sherlock Holmes." The Gazette (Montreal), June 2, 2000: D1.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Sherlockians unite! Sherlock Holmes will be put under the magnifying glass during a three-day colloquium that begins today at the Montreal Amateur Athletic Association's clubhouse. About 50 of the world's leading authorities are meeting here to talk about England's most famous fictional detective and his faithful companion, Dr. John Watson. The seminar, which is closed to the public, is being sponsored by the Bimetallic Question, Montreal's chapter of the international Sherlock Holmes Society...."
3064. ———. "It's elementary!; Sherlock Holmes fans mark sleuth's 140th birthday." The Gazette (Montreal), January 16, 1994: A3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "At first glance, the setting last night in Old Montreal might have been 221B Baker St., Sherlock Holmes's fictitious London address. The gas lights on the narrow street outside Auberge Le Vieux St. Gabriel are suitably Victorian. Guests inside dressed in various guises - deerstalker caps, meerschaum pipes and Inverness capes - added an appropriate touch. But one thing was elementary - you couldn't mistake the stinging frost for London fog. In spite of the cold, 50 Holmes devotees turned out last night for a dinner to observe Holmes's 140th birthday....The dinner guests were members of the Bimetallic

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Question, Montreal's chapter of the international Sherlock Holmes Society...."

3065. Kratina, Al. "You don't have to be an expert to wear a cape once in a while; Sherlock Holmes fans like to pretend sleuth is still alive." The Gazette (Montreal), November 22, 2008: B2.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "It might be difficult for younger sleuths to imagine, but there was a time when mysteries were solved not with DNA sequencers and ballistic analysis, but rather with deductive reasoning, keen observational skills and the occasional syringe of pharmaceutical-grade cocaine. Those were the tools of master detective Sherlock Holmes, the 1854 creation of author Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. But while the Victorian era has passed into history, Holmes is very much alive, according to the Bimetallic Question, a Montreal society dedicated to the fictional character...."
3066. Lash, Rochelle. "Literary lionizing: A flurry of fetes in honour of Holmes, Burns, author Austin Clark." The Gazette (Montreal), January 15, 1999: B7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The Montreal Sherlock Holmes Society, otherwise known as the Bimetallic Question, will hold a dinner to celebrate the 145th birthday of the renowned fictional detective, Sherlock Holmes. The society's goal is to bring together people who enjoy the world of Sherlock Holmes and the Victorian era in general...."

07B SHERLOCKIANS AND THE SOCIETIES -- THE SOCIETIES -- BOOTMAKERS OF TORONTO (74)

3067. "Bootmaker's Diary." Canadian Holmes 30, no. 3 (2007): 38-43.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3068. "Bootmaker's Diary." Canadian Holmes 30, no. 4 (2007): 43-48.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3069. "Bootmaker's Diary." Canadian Holmes 29, no. 3 (2006): 23-27.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3070. "Bootmaker's Diary." Canadian Holmes 29, no. 4 (2006): 36-43.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3071. "Bootmaker's Diary." Canadian Holmes 30, no. 1 (2006): 47-49.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3072. "Bootmaker's Diary." Canadian Holmes 30, no. 2 (2006): 45-49.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3073. "Bootmaker's Diary." Canadian Holmes 28, no. 3 (2005): 28-34.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3074. "Bootmaker's Diary." Canadian Holmes 28, no. 4 (2005): 28-34.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3075. "Bootmaker's Diary." Canadian Holmes 29, no. 1 (2005): 29-32.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3076. "Bootmaker's Diary." Canadian Holmes 29, no. 2 (2005): 39-45.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3077. "Bootmaker's Diary." Canadian Holmes 27, no. 3 (2004): 33-40.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

3078. "Bootmaker's Diary." Canadian Holmes 27, no. 4 (2004): 44-48.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3079. "Bootmaker's Diary." Canadian Holmes 28, no. 1 (2004): 41-44.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3080. "Bootmaker's Diary." Canadian Holmes 28, no. 2 (2004): 30-35.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3081. "Bootmaker's Diary." Canadian Holmes 26, no. 3 (2003): 49-55.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3082. "Bootmaker's Diary." Canadian Holmes 26, no. 4 (2003): 37-43.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3083. "Bootmaker's Diary." Canadian Holmes 27, no. 1 (2003): 32-34.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3084. "Bootmaker's Diary." Canadian Holmes 27, no. 2 (2003): 27-31.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3085. "Bootmaker's Diary." Canadian Holmes 25, no. 3 (2002): 34-41.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3086. "Bootmaker's Diary." Canadian Holmes 25, no. 4 (2002): 39-41.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3087. "Bootmaker's Diary." Canadian Holmes 26, no. 1 (2002): 38-43.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3088. "Bootmaker's Diary." Canadian Holmes 26, no. 2 (2002): 39-44.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3089. "Bootmaker's Diary." Canadian Holmes 24, no. 3 (2001): 47-54.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3090. "Bootmaker's Diary." Canadian Holmes 24, no. 4 (2001): 22-27.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3091. "Bootmaker's Diary." Canadian Holmes 25, no. 2 (2001): 33-36.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3092. "Bootmaker's Diary." Canadian Holmes 23, no. 3 (2000): 46-53.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3093. "Bootmaker's Diary." Canadian Holmes 23, no. 4 (2000): 31-38.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3094. "Bootmaker's Diary." Canadian Holmes 24, no. 1 (2000): 37-47.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3095. "Bootmaker's Diary." Canadian Holmes 24, no. 2 (2000): 34-44.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

3096. "Bootmaker's Diary." Canadian Holmes 22, no. 4 (1999): 43-46.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3097. "Bootmaker's Diary." Canadian Holmes 23, no. 1 (1999): 43-47.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3098. "Bootmaker's Diary." Canadian Holmes 23, no. 2 (1999): 39-45.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3099. "Bootmaker's Diary." Canadian Holmes 21, no. 3 (1998): 40-45.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3100. "Bootmaker's Diary." Canadian Holmes 21, no. 4 (1998): 40-43.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3101. "Bootmaker's Diary." Canadian Holmes 22, no. 1 (1998): 40-43.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3102. "Bootmaker's Diary." Canadian Holmes 22, no. 2 (1998): 32-39.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3103. "Bootmaker's Diary." Canadian Holmes 22, no. 3 (1998): 42-47.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3104. "Bootmaker's Diary." Canadian Holmes 20, no. 3 (1997): 40-42.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3105. "Bootmaker's Diary." Canadian Holmes 20, no. 4 (1997): 36-41.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3106. "Bootmaker's Diary." Canadian Holmes 21, no. 1 (1997): 46-48.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3107. "Bootmaker's Diary." Canadian Holmes 21, no. 2 (1997): 39-42.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3108. "Bootmaker's Diary." Canadian Holmes 19, no. 3 (1996): 35-41.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3109. "Bootmaker's Diary." Canadian Holmes 19, no. 4 (1996): 38-40.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3110. "Bootmaker's Diary." Canadian Holmes 20, no. 1 (1996): 38-41.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3111. "Bootmaker's Diary." Canadian Holmes 20, no. 2 (1996): 49-55.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3112. "Bootmaker's Diary." Canadian Holmes 18, no. 3 (1995): 36-45.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3113. "Bootmaker's Diary." Canadian Holmes 18, no. 4 (1995): 44-47.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

3114. "Bootmaker's Diary." Canadian Holmes 19, no. 1 (1995): 51-60.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3115. "Bootmaker's Diary." Canadian Holmes 19, no. 2 (1995): 36-43.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3116. "Bootmaker's Diary." Canadian Holmes 17, no. 3 (1994): 36-43.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Diary of events in the lives of the Bootmakers of Toronto from November 23, 1993 to March 5, 1994. Includes photographs.
3117. "Bootmaker's Diary." Canadian Holmes 17, no. 4 (1994): 37-46.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Notes the activities of various Bootmakers from January 7, 1994 through May 24, 1994.
3118. "Bootmaker's Diary." Canadian Holmes 18, no. 1 (1994): 35-44.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3119. "Bootmaker's Diary." Canadian Holmes 18, no. 2 (1994): 37-44.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3120. "Bootmaker's Diary." Canadian Holmes 17, no. 1 (1993): 32-39.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3121. "Bootmaker's Diary." Canadian Holmes 17, no. 2 (1993): 34-40.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3122. "From the Bootbox." Canadian Holmes 17, no. 3 (1994): 52.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents an unidentified photograph and asks for assistance with its identification.
3123. "From the Bootbox." Canadian Holmes 17, no. 4 (1994): 52.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes the logo of the Arts & Letters Club of Toronto with a drawing of Holmes playing the violin. "The verso of this notice invited Bootmakers and their guests to a free evening of 'The music enjoyed by Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson' at the Arts & Letters Club of Toronto on 17 April, 1985. Isadore Desser was the featured violinist, accompanying soprano Marianne Karklins."
3124. "Inane Discussions Twenty Years Ago, The Bootmaker's Second Year." Canadian Holmes 17, no. 2 (1993): 30-31.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3125. "'Not some sinister secret society. . .' Twenty years ago: The Bootmaker's Third Year." Canadian Holmes 18, no. 2 (1994): 45-46.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3126. "Our Annual Dinner." Canadian Holmes 29, no. 3 (2006): 28-29.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3127. "Postcards From Peregrinating Bootmakers." Canadian Holmes 29, no. 4 (2006): 10-15.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3128. "'Sherlock Holmes' A Melodrama in Four Acts at The Shaw Festival, Niagara-on-the-Lake [Advertisement]." Canadian Holmes 17, no. 3 (1994): 5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Advertisement for "a convocation of Sherlockians sponsored by The Bootmakers of Toronto and An Irish Secret Society at Buffalo

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

3129. Aig, Marlene. "Bootmaker Meeting, 22 January 1994." The Serpentine Muse 12, no. 4 (1994): 7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3130. Campbell, Mary. "January 1999 The Bootmakers of Toronto Celebrate Sherlock Holmes, A Photo Album." Canadian Holmes 22, no. 4 (1999): 23-27.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3131. Campbell, Patrick. "Grant Allen: The Bootmaker Connection." Canadian Holmes 26, no. 3 (2003): 21-23.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3132. Coghill, Bob. "The Blessing for the Annual Dinner of the Bootmakers of Toronto." Canadian Holmes 22, no. 3 (1999): 17.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3133. Coren, Michael. "Lest civility entirely perish in our times, it behooves us to cherish eccentricity." Alberta Report / Newsmagazine 22, no. 43 (1995): 42.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Opinion. Relates the author's experiences at a one-day conference on Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and Sherlock Holmes at a Toronto library. View that eccentrics, such as Holmes aficionados, help defend the right to be different; Their fight against political correctness; Analysis of the psychology of eccentrics; Problems that the modern age has with eccentrics and with Conan Doyle's books.
3134. Dunn, Dave. "Strictly Personal: David Patrick Drennan." Canadian Holmes 17, no. 3 (1994): 34-35.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Brief biographical sketch of Dave Dunn.
3135. Elliott, Doug. "Top Ten Reasons Sherlock Holmes Should Join the Bootmakers." Canadian Holmes 25, no. 4 (2002): 23.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3136. Murdock, Karen. "To the Bootmakers at Their Banquet 31st January." Canadian Holmes 27, no. 3 (2004): 41.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3137. Randall, Warren. "FOTH Revisited (3) At the Sound of the Hound." Canadian Holmes 25, no. 4 (2002): 31-35.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3138. Raymond, Trevor S. "'They're all decent folk I suppose and friends of Mr. Sherlock Holmes': Twenty years ago: The Bootmaker's Fourth year." Canadian Holmes 19, no. 2 (1995): 44-45.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3139. Roden, Barbara. "A Bootmaker Abroad." Canadian Holmes 17, no. 4 (1994): 47-48.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Now that we Toronto Bootmakers have had a chance to view The Last Vampyre and The Eligible Bachelor, we can compare our reactions to the programs to those of expatriate Master Bootmaker Barbara Roden, who wrote these thoughts on the programs when they first were telecast in Britain."
3140. Silk, Eric. "The Bootmakers of Toronto: A Midnight Reverie." Canadian Holmes 28, no. 1 (2004): 24-27.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

07B SHERLOCKIANS AND THE SOCIETIES -- THE SOCIETIES -- GREAT HERD OF BISONS OF THE FERTILE PLAINS (1)

3141. Great Herd of Bisons of the Fertile, Plains. "Twenty-Fifth Anniversary Greetings." Canadian Holmes 21, no. 1 (1997): 5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

07B SHERLOCKIANS AND THE SOCIETIES -- THE SOCIETIES -- HOUNDS OF THE BASKERVILLES (SIC) (1)

3142. Levin, Alfred A. "The Hounds of the Baskervilles (sic) at 60." Shoso-In Bulletin 14, no. (2004): 136-137.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

07B SHERLOCKIANS AND THE SOCIETIES -- THE SOCIETIES -- ILLUSTRIOUS CLIENTS OF INDIANAPOLIS (3)

3143. "50 Years Ago." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 2, no. 2 (1998): 3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Highlights the 1948 publication of The Client's Case-Book by The Illustrious Clients of Indianapolis.
3144. "The December Holiday Meeting." The Illustrious Clients News 32, no. 9 (2009): 3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3145. Karlson, Katherine. "Dark Deeds in the City of Lights Why Anarchists Love Paris in the Springtime." The Serpentine Muse 26, no. 1 (2009): 7-8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

07B SHERLOCKIANS AND THE SOCIETIES -- THE SOCIETIES -- JAPAN SHERLOCK HOLMES CLUB (3)

3146. Higurashi, Masamichi. "The East Wind in 1999: JSHC Activity and Holmes-related Publishing in Japan." Shoso-In Bulletin 10, no. (2000): 185-190.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3147. Hirayama, Yuichi. "Preface to a Report on the 10th Japan Sherlock Holmes Club Kamakura Seminar and The Japan Sherlock Holmes Club 40th General Meeting." Shoso-In Bulletin 8, no. (1998): 169.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3148. Large, Tim. "Sherlock Holmes alive and well in the East." The Daily Yomiuri (Tokyo), August 5, 2000: 1.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "One woman is an authority on Sherlock Holmes and toilets. Another will tell you 'Hound of the Baskervilles' is brimming with allusions to illicit sex. A botanist from Sapporo, having scoured Sherlock Holmes stories for vegetable references, has isolated 59 varieties of Victorian-era plant life. Welcome to the world of Japanese Sherlockiana. Like their counterparts internationally, Holmes devotees in Japan have one thing in common: a near-obsessive fascination with Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's brilliant and eccentric detective, and the milieu he inhabited at the turn of the century...."

07B SHERLOCKIANS AND THE SOCIETIES -- THE SOCIETIES -- LA QUINCAILLERIE FRANCO-MIDLANDS (3)

3149. Bell, Susan. "A case for Holmes intrigues French." The Times (London), May 27, 1995: 1.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The King and Queen of Bohemia were there, as was the chief of police and a certain Inspector Valentine. Whispers that the evil Professor Moriarty and his accomplice Colonel Moran were in the vicinity sent a frisson through the crowd. Sixty in all, resplendent in Victorian frock coats and crinolines, they had gathered on Thursday afternoon beneath the clock at the Gare du Nord to investigate the case of the missing suitcases, sent to the station's left- luggage office by Sherlock Holmes in April 1891, and never

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

reclaimed. Founded three years ago, La Quincaillerie Franco-Midlands, the French equivalent of the Sherlock Holmes Society, already boasts 135 branches with more than 300 members in France...."

3150. Howard, Philip. "Philip Howard Column." The Times (London), June 9, 1995: 1.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...But they came not from his old hunting-ground of human drama, the Agony Column of The Times, but from foreign journals with unfamiliar print and strange names such as Le Figaro and Le Canard Enchaîné. And they reported that the French have at last taken up my friend in a big way, and now run 135 Sherlock Holmes societies. They are named after the Franco Midland Hardware Company Limited (La Quincaillerie Franco-Midlands), the company in The Stockbroker's Clerk that supposedly operated 134 branches in France...."
3151. Saint-Joanis, Thierry. "Introducing the Societe Sherlock Holmes de France. Les Quincailliers de la Franco-Midland." Shoso-In Bulletin 10, no. (2000): 159-173.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

07B SHERLOCKIANS AND THE SOCIETIES -- THE SOCIETIES -- MAIWAND JEZAILS (5)

3152. Hass, Victor P. "The Maiwand Jezails and The Book Editor (Edited by Richard D. Lesh and Yuichi Hirayama)." Shoso-In Bulletin 7, no. (1997): 76-83.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3153. Lesh, Richard D. "Maiwand Jezails." Shoso-In Bulletin 13, no. (2003): 140.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3154. ———. "The Maiwand Jezails." Shoso-In Bulletin 11, no. (2001): 204.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3155. ———. "The Maiwand Jezails Correspondence." Shoso-In Bulletin 10, no. (2000): 48-49.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3156. Sveum, Richard J. "Library Receives Maiwand Jezails Artifacts." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 5, no. 3 (2001): 1, 4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Notes the donation by Richard D. Lesh, BSI, of souvenirs of the June 2, 2001 Maiwand Jezail dinner in Omaha, Nebraska to the Holmes Collections. Also provides additional information on Professor Lesh and the Maiwand Jezail scion society. Includes a photograph of Lesh and the author at the dinner.

07B SHERLOCKIANS AND THE SOCIETIES -- THE SOCIETIES -- NORTHERN MUSGRAVES (5)

3157. "The Northern Musgraves Crown a new Sherlockian award." The Musgrave Papers, no. 7 (1994): 123.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3158. Alldritt, Keth. "Sherlock in Summer: The Northern Musgraves' Garden Party, Saturday 20 July 1966." The Musgrave Papers, no. 9 (1996): 118-119.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3159. Black, M. C. "Review -- Milverton on the Moor, Joint Sherlockian Meeting with The Poor Folk Upon the Moor and The Northern Musgraves June 22, 1996." The Musgrave Papers, no. 9 (1996): 120-121.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

3160. Brett, Jeremy. "Message to the Musgraves." The Ritual, no. 16 (1995): 23-27.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

3161. Cox, Michael. "Review--Back to Baker Street, An Evening with the Northern Musgraves, The Charing Cross Hotel 21 May 1994." The Musgrave Papers, no. 7 (1994): 99-103.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

07B SHERLOCKIANS AND THE SOCIETIES -- THE SOCIETIES -- NORWEGIAN EXPLORERS OF MINNESOTA (11)

3162. "50 Years Ago." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 2, no. 3 (1998): 3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Highlights the founding of the Norwegian Explorers scion society in 1948.
3163. "50 Years Ago: From the archives of the Norwegian Explorers." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 1, no. 4 (1997): 5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on material in the Norwegian Explorers archive related to its inaugural meeting in 1947 and first general meeting in 1948.
3164. "Mark Your Calendars." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 1, no. 1 (1997): 4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Announcement of the 1998 membership meeting of the Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections in conjunction with the 50th anniversary celebration of the Norwegian Explorers, August 7-9.
3165. "Mark Your Calendars." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 1, no. 2 (1997): 6.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Announcement of the 1998 membership meeting of the Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections in conjunction with the 50th anniversary celebration of the Norwegian Explorers, August 7-9.
3166. "Mark Your Calendars." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 1, no. 3 (1997): 6.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Announcement of the 1998 membership meeting of the Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections in conjunction with the 50th anniversary celebration of the Norwegian Explorers, August 7-9.
3167. "Mark Your Calendars." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 1, no. 4 (1997): 6.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Announcement of the 1998 membership meeting of the Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections in conjunction with the 50th anniversary celebration of the Norwegian Explorers, August 7-9.
3168. France, F. Dennis. "Founder's Footprints: The Fiftieth Anniversary Conference of the Norwegian Explorers of Minnesota." The Serpentine Muse 15, no. 1 (1998): 16-20.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3169. Johnson, Timothy J. "The Adventure of the Unopened Box: Building the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota Libraries." Collection Management 29, no. 3/4 (2004): 121-141.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article traces the historical development and description of significant acquisitions that comprise major portions of the Sherlock Holmes Collections of the University of Minnesota Libraries Special Collections. Beginning with the formation of the Norwegian Explorers, a local scion society of the Baker Street Irregulars of New York, in 1948, the article presents the intertwined nature in the development of this local interest group and the growth of the Holmes Collections. Various strategic acquisitions methodologies, such as donor relations, exhibitions, scholarly publications, and conference development are presented as part of the narrative. Reprinted by permission of the publisher.
3170. Sveum, Richard J. "50 Years Ago." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 5, no. 1 (2001): 3.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the 1951 book The Crowded Box-Room; the author, Theodore Blegen; and the printer, Emerson Wulling. "In 1951 there appeared a small book in blue wrapper with a silhouette of Sherlock Holmes on the cover. It was titled The Crowded Box-Room, Sherlock Holmes as Poet by Theodore C. Blegen, Charter Member of the Norwegian Explorers: Minneapolis and Saint Paul Chapter of the Baker Street Irregulars....This book was the first of many fine press publications written by the members of the Norwegian Explorers and printed by Emerson G. Wulling and his Sumac Press...." Includes a photograph of Blegen, Harry Truman, and Hubert Humphrey.

3171. ———. "From the President." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 5, no. 1 (2001): 4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Notes the Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Annual Meeting scheduled for Friday, June 29, 2001, at the Elmer L. Andersen Library and that the membership meeting will be held in conjunction with the Norwegian Explorers conference -- 2001: A Sherlockian Odyssey, A Journey Among the Shaw 100, scheduled for June 29 to July 1, 2001. Also notes the University's sesquicentennial year fundraising campaign (and support for the Collections), the fifth year of this newsletter, and the 2001 Baker Street Irregular's investiture of the newsletter editor, Julie McKuras.
3172. ———. "From the President." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 4, no. 4 (2000): 4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Notice of the next Friends annual meeting in conjunction with the 2001 conference co-sponsored with the Norwegian Explorers. Also information on the University's capital campaign and the desire to raise funds for the McDiarmid endowed curator position.

07B SHERLOCKIANS AND THE SOCIETIES -- THE SOCIETIES -- OCCUPANTS OF THE EMPTY HOUSE (2)

3173. "'A Singular Set of People...'" Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 2, no. 1 (1998): 2.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Notes the decisions by two scion societies of the Baker Street Irregulars to make contributions to the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota, The Arthur Conan Doyle Collection at The Metropolitan Toronto Library, and The Sherlock Holmes Collection at the Marylebone Library in London.
3174. Burr, Robert C. "Review--Commanding Views From the Empty House edited by William R. Cochran and Gordon R. Speck." The Holmes & Watson Report 1, no. 1 (1997): 15.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A delightful anthology of essays, puzzles, cartoons, and even a play, by the members of one of the most active and dedicated Sherlockian societies, The Occupants of the Empty House.

07B SHERLOCKIANS AND THE SOCIETIES -- THE SOCIETIES -- PARALLEL CASE OF ST. LOUIS (1)

3175. "'A Singular Set of People...'" Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 2, no. 1 (1998): 2.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Notes the decisions by two scion societies of the Baker Street Irregulars to make contributions to the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota, The Arthur Conan Doyle Collection at The Metropolitan Toronto Library, and The Sherlock Holmes Collection at the Marylebone Library in London.

07B SHERLOCKIANS AND THE SOCIETIES -- THE SOCIETIES -- POOR FOLK UPON THE MOOR (1)

3176. Black, M. C. "Review -- Milverton on the Moor, Joint Sherlockian Meeting with The Poor Folk Upon the Moor and The Northern Musgraves June 22, 1996." The Musgrave Papers, no. 9 (1996): 120-121.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

07B SHERLOCKIANS AND THE SOCIETIES -- THE SOCIETIES -- RED CIRCLE OF WASHINGTON, DC (1)

3177. Cohen, Karen. "Sherlock Holmes is their Man Club Members Say there is no Mystery to their Passion. Nothing is Too Arcane for those on the Great Detective's Trail." The Philadelphia Inquirer, December 17, 1995: A17.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "One by one, the club's members materialize out of a dark and stormy Washington night to talk of murder most foul and detection most sublime. The club's vice president disappeared long ago and two other officers are dead, but that does not stop the Red Circle Sherlockian Society, where Sherlock Holmes, his loyal companion Doctor Watson and their adventures are analyzed and savored over and over again...."

07B SHERLOCKIANS AND THE SOCIETIES -- THE SOCIETIES -- REICHENBACH IRREGULARS (1)

3178. Przybilka, Thomas. "Letter to the Editor ('Annual Meeting of the Reichenbach Irregulars and Von Herder Airgun, Ltd.')." Shoso-In Bulletin 6, no. (1996): 156-157.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

07B SHERLOCKIANS AND THE SOCIETIES -- THE SOCIETIES -- SCOWRERS AND MOLLY MAGUIRES OF SAN FRANCISCO (1)

3179. "From the Editor's Commonplace Book." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 2 (1994): 127.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Peter Blau's report on Doyle manuscripts offered at Sotheby's, The Scowrers and Molly Maguires Third International Seminar, the passing of Patsy Dalton, and The Watsonian Weekend III.

07B SHERLOCKIANS AND THE SOCIETIES -- THE SOCIETIES -- SHERLOCK HOLMES SOCIETY (1)

3180. Green, Richard Lancelyn. "The Sherlock Holmes Society (1934-1938)." The Sherlock Holmes Journal 22, no. 1 (1994): 6-15.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

07B SHERLOCKIANS AND THE SOCIETIES -- THE SOCIETIES -- SHERLOCK HOLMES SOCIETY OF LONDON (16)

3181. "Abbey National Unveil Bronze of Sherlock Holmes." Birmingham Post, October 9, 1999: 32.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "In the detective's shadow: Abbey National has tried to dilute the image of banks as soulless organisations, whose only driving force is the creation of profit, by unveiling a three-metre high bronze of Sherlock Holmes as part of its 150th anniversary celebrations. The move commemorates the bank's 'association' with the detective, dating back to 1932, when Abbey's head offices moved to Baker Street and incorporated Holmes' fictional address of 211b. Abbey still receives letters addressed to the crime-buster, which are answered by his 'secretary' who works for the bank."

3182. "Annual Dinner, The Morse Hudson Endeavour, 17th January 1998." The Sherlock Holmes Journal 23, no. 4 (1998): 148-150.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

3183. "Holmes' place." The Evening Standard (London), August 4, 1999: 12.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Lord Tugendhat is hoping the cash registers of the Abbey National will be going ching! ching! over the Abbey's links with Sherlock Holmes. The bank, of which he is chairman, is sponsoring a statue of Conan Doyle's great detective as part of its 150th anniversary celebrations. 221b Baker Street, where Holmes and Watson were so capably looked after by Mrs Hudson, has been occupied by Abbey National since 1932, and the Sherlock Holmes Society has long pleaded for a statue there...."

3184. "Holmes' Statue is on the Case!". Birmingham Evening Mail, September 24, 1999: 37.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "A bronze statue of the world's best-known fictional detective was unveiled in London. The statue of Sherlock Holmes stands outside Baker Street underground station, near to where the detective lived at the fictional number 221b. Abbey National, whose head office is located on the site of what would be 221b Baker Street, has sponsored the work to mark its 150th anniversary...."

3185. "Into the falls." Economist 319, no. 7706 (1991): 88-88.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on the re-enactment by the London Sherlock Holmes Society of the tragic struggle between the literary detective Holmes and his arch-rival, Professor Moriarty, at Reichenbach Falls on May 4, 1991, exactly 100 years after the event. Description of the centenary pilgrimage; Familiarity with the canon of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's work; Details.

3186. "Obituary of Patsy Dalton." The Daily Telegraph (London), May 3, 1994: 23.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...The most celebrated recreation was at the Reichenbach Falls in 1968, when, watched by a large crowd of bemused Swiss, the society staged the desperate struggle between Holmes and Moriarty (played by Lord Gore-Booth and Charles Scholefield, QC, respectively). Her editor, Barbi Boxall, recognised her qualities, and Dalton quickly became an associate editor, deputising for Boxall, who appreciated her eye for detail. Dalton stayed on for more than a decade and continued to work part-time until her retirement. Dalton was infuriated when rheumatoid arthritis confined her to a wheelchair. She hated to be thought an invalid and was as active as her painful debility permitted. At the time of her death she was planning a trip to Madeira...."

3187. "Rage over civil servant's fun." The Independent (London), January 1, 1999: 7.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Richard Crossman, the crusty Lord President in Wilson's government, nearly choked with rage when he saw a photograph of Sir Paul Gore-Booth, the head of the Foreign Office, in his Daily Telegraph on 1 May 1968. Sir Paul and his wife were dressed as Sherlock Holmes and Irene Adler. They were pictured at the airport with the Sherlock Holmes Society. Mr Crossman condemned Sir Paul's 'antics' at a meeting in Downing Street. The dismissive reply to his complaint angered him further."

3188. "Sherlock homes in on London address." The Evening Standard (London), September 21, 1999: 19.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The final touches are being put to a 9ft statue of the great sleuth Sherlock Holmes which will stand outside Baker Street Tube station - close to the fictional detective's London address. The bronze, by Essex sculptor John Doubleday, has been commissioned by the Sherlock Holmes Society whose chairman Lord Tugendhat will unveil it on Thursday...."

3189. Cooke, Catherine. "Vintage 1951 - a Festival, a Society and a Collection." Shoso-In Bulletin 8, no. (1998): 186-198.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

3190. Graham, Robert. "In Pursuit of the Aurora: an outing by the Sherlock Holmes Society of London, 2 March 2005." The Sherlock Holmes Journal 27, no. 2 (2005): 81.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

3191. Grandia, Rick. "The Society's Sandhurst Expedition." The Sherlock Holmes Journal 23, no. 1 (1996): 27-28.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

3192. Leith, Sam. "Few sillier spectacles does the English countryside afford." The Daily Telegraph (London), June 06, 2001: 22.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Few sillier spectacles does the English countryside afford than that which will take place at West Wycombe cricket ground on Sunday morning. The P G Wodehouse Society is playing the Sherlock Holmes Society at cricket: in full Victorian costume. 'We're resigned to the fact that the Sherlockians will win the sartorial contest, because they're very into dressing up anyway,' grumbles a Wodehousian. 'Whenever they go off on their trips to the Reichenbach Falls, they get dressed up in Victorian costume as a matter of course, and they've had 1895-style cricket caps made up specially.'"
3193. Pollock, Donald K. "Book Review--'Hound and Horse: A Dartmoor Commonplace Book. The Handbook of the Dartmoor Expedition of the Sherlock Holmes Society of London, 19th June - 21st June 1992,' edited by Shirley Purves." Baker Street Miscellanea, no. 73 (1993): 47-48.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3194. Swift, Francine Morris, and Wayne B. Swift. "The Empty House-Warming Weekend: London, 15-16 January, 1994." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 1 (1994): 51-53.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A report on the Sherlock Holmes Society of London's annual event.
3195. Thorpe, Vanessa. "The answer, my dear Watson, is elementary. One of these new Sherlock Holmes is an impostor." The Observer, June 20, 2004: 13.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Few fictional characters divide audiences so passionately. Some are fans of Basil Rathbone's Sherlock Holmes, others are devotees of the Peter Cushing version, while many argue that no actor quite caught the manner of the greatest consulting detective of them all until Jeremy Brett took up his deerstalker. Now two more actors are to take on the challenge of playing the heroic detective in a TV battle between rival interpretations, one ITV, the other BBC, which is likely to equal the struggle between Holmes and Moriarty atop the Reichenbach Falls. In the ITV corner is Stephen Fry, a passionate scholar of the work of the character's creator, Arthur Conan Doyle....Over in the BBC corner is a relative newcomer, Rupert Everett, 45, the glamorous Hollywood star who made his name on the British stage in the early Eighties....Members of the Sherlock Holmes Society of London are poised to make their judgment and, at first sight, neither actor appears to pass muster...."
3196. Watson-Smyth, Kate. "Sherlock Holmes and the mystery of the missing statue is solved." The Independent (London), February 21, 1999: 13.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // It is more than 70 years since Sherlock Holmes solved his last case, but he is still sent more than 40 letters a month to his rooms in Baker Street. One of the most enduring mysteries, however, is how this most famous of detectives came to be commemorated in Japan, Switzerland and Edinburgh but never by his home at 221B. The answer, when it finally emerged, was elementary, my dear Watson -- nobody had ever got round to it. But now, more than 60 years after the death of author G K Chesterton, who was the first to suggest a statue of the sleuth, planning permission for one has been granted to the Sherlock Holmes Society...."

07B SHERLOCKIANS AND THE SOCIETIES -- THE SOCIETIES -- SOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES
(2)

3197. Shiffman, Stu. "Sound of the Baskervilles White Paper Number 1: The Battle of Maiwand." Shoso-In Bulletin 7, no. (1997): 32-37.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3198. ———. "Sound of the Baskervilles White Paper Number 2: Contents of an Ancient British Burrow." Shoso-In Bulletin 7, no. (1997): 112-117.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

07B SHERLOCKIANS AND THE SOCIETIES -- THE SOCIETIES -- SPECKLED BAND OF BOSTON
(2)

3199. "50 Years Ago: "you will send for a hansom"." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 1, no. 2 (1997): 5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses The Second Cab and other "Cab" publications of the Speckled Band of Boston. Also discusses Vincent Starrett's short story, "A Picture for Ronald Colman."
3200. Dondis, Harold, and Patrick Wolff. "Chess Notes." The Boston Globe, May 20, 2002: C8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The matter of how to handle women's chess has been a dilemma for American chess for years. Women have traditionally been weaker players than men and there has been much debate over this subject. There has been the feeling that women shy from head-to-head competition and, perhaps, from defeating men. However, by winning at chess, they will earn respect. One role model must surely be Irene Adler, the only person in the works of Conan Doyle ever to outwit Sherlock Holmes. In the short story 'A Scandal of Bohemia,' Dr. Watson wrote of Adler, 'To Sherlock Holmes, she was always the woman. I have seldom heard him mention her under any other name. In his eyes she eclipses and predominates the whole of her sex.'...Still, the only person to outwit Sherlock Holmes would not be able to join the Speckled Band, which is the Sherlock Holmes Club that meets annually on Boylston Street. The popular Speckled Band simply does not admit women."

07B SHERLOCKIANS AND THE SOCIETIES -- THE SOCIETIES -- STORMY PETRELS OF BRITISH COLUMBIA (1)

3201. "The Stormy Petrels of British Columbia cordially invite you to the Sixth International Holmesian Games [advertisement]." Canadian Holmes 17, no. 4 (1994): 24.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Advertisement for the upcoming games, 17-18 September, 1994.

07B SHERLOCKIANS AND THE SOCIETIES -- THE SOCIETIES -- STUD SHERLOCKIAN SOCIETY (3)

3202. Levin, Alfred A. "STUD--Watsonian Weekend 2002." Shoso-In Bulletin 12, no. (2002): 194-196.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3203. ———. "STUD--Watsonian Weekend 2003." Shoso-In Bulletin 13, no. (2003): 141-144.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3204. ———. "STUD--Watsonian Weekend 2004." Shoso-In Bulletin 14, no. (2004): 140-143.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

07B SHERLOCKIANS AND THE SOCIETIES -- THE SOCIETIES -- SUB-LIBRARIANS SCION OF THE BAKER STREET IRREGULARS IN THE AMERICAN LIBRARY ASSOCIATION (3)

3205. "ALA conference preview. (Cover story)." American Libraries 29, no. 4 (1998): 106.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents information on the American Library Association (ALA) annual conference in Washington, D.C. from June 25 to July 1, 1998. Includes "Sherlock Holmes In Washington." Peter E. Blau of The Red Circle of Washington and the infamous "Black Peter" of the Baker Street Irregulars, will be our host for Sherlockian presentation toasts, and canonical discussion at the National Press Club on the 13th floor of the National Press Building. Speakers: Gayle T. Harris, past-pres., libn., Lib. of Congress, "Skeletons in the Stacks"; Peter E. Blau, "Insights and Revelations on the World of Sherlockian Scholarship"

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

and Conviviality"; Francine Morris Swift, sr. surviving member of Sublibns., member, Baker Street Irregulars, Sherlock Holmes Society of London, "The Good Old Days of the Sublibrarians Scion."

3206. "ALA/CLA Annual Conference." American Libraries 34, no. 3 (2003): 97.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents the schedule and highlights for the 2003 American Library Association/Canadian Library Association Annual Conference, held in Toronto, Canada. Notes "Sherlock Holmes in Toronto" and The Sub-Librarian Scion of the Baker Street Irregulars in the ALA meeting with an invitation to "come and tour the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection at the Toronto Reference Library. This is one of the world's finest collections of materials by and about Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. Victoria Gill, Curator, will give an introduction to the Collection, emphasizing Sherlock Holmes. Afterwards, there will be a complimentary 'Coffee and Sticky Buns' light reception, hosted by the Bootmakers of Toronto, the local Sherlock Holmes scion society. Meet the Bootmakers and the Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection. Speaker: Victoria Gill, Curator of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection"

3207. Berry, John. "Program picks & pans." Library Journal 120, no. 10 (1995): 46.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Previews the American Library Association's 114th Annual Conference in Chicago, June 22-28, 1995, with reference to Doyle and Holmes. Ely M. Liebow (Dr. Joe Bell: Model for Sherlock Holmes); Let a Woman in Your Life: The Women in Conan Doyle's Life and Fiction. Sublibrarians Scion of the Baker Street Irregulars.

07B SHERLOCKIANS AND THE SOCIETIES -- THE SOCIETIES -- THREE GARRIDEBS (2)

3208. Dahlinger, Susan E. "The Annual Picnic and Victorian Tea Party of The Three Garridebs of Westchester County." The Holmes & Watson Report 1, no. 5 (1997): 20.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

3209. Hershenson, Roberta. "Holmes Fans Mark Birthday." The New York Times, February 13, 1994: 16.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The story for the evening, 'The Adventure of the Sussex Vampire,' was a succinct masterpiece of Victorian suspense, a whodunit with a Freudian twist. It might easily have passed for something more recently composed, were it not for a certain polished elegance and an occasional giveaway phrase -- like 'Rubbish, Watson, rubbish!' But the group of 35 people who assembled at Town Hall here to celebrate the 140th birthday of Sherlock Holmes needed no reassurance of their hero's relevance. Many in the group, which is named the Three Garridebs -- the title of another story by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle about the master detective -- were dressed like illustrations of Holmes in deerstalker caps, three-button jackets and high-collar shirts. They had come to match wits and exchange scholarly views about what they call 'the canon,' the 56 short stories and 4 novels by Doyle featuring the sleuth of Baker Street...."

07B SHERLOCKIANS AND THE SOCIETIES -- THE SOCIETIES -- UNO STUDIO IN HOLMES (1)

3210. Owen, Richard. "Sherlock Holmes's Italian connection." The Times (London), April 19, 2002: 40.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Sherlock Holmes enthusiasts in Italy have unveiled a bronze bust of the Great Detective at a Florence railway station to mark Holmes's -and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's -little-known Italian connection. Gianluca Salvatori, head of the Italian Sherlock Holmes society Uno Studio in Holmes (A Study in Holmes), said it was not widely known that Holmes had visited Florence after his struggle to the death with Professor Moriarty at the Reichenbach Falls. In 'The Adventure of the Empty House', the first story in The Return of Sherlock Holmes, the detective tells the astonished Dr Watson (who like everyone else thought that Holmes had perished) that after surviving the encounter with Moriarty thanks to a hidden ledge, 'I took to my heels, did ten miles over the mountains in the darkness, and a week later found myself in Florence, with the certainty that no one in the world knew what had become of me'...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

07B SHERLOCKIANS AND THE SOCIETIES -- THE SOCIETIES -- WATSONIANS (9)

3211. Levin, Alfred A. "STUD--Watsonian Weekend 2002." Shoso-In Bulletin 12, no. (2002): 194-196.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3212. ———. "STUD--Watsonian Weekend 2003." Shoso-In Bulletin 13, no. (2003): 141-144.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3213. ———. "STUD--Watsonian Weekend 2004." Shoso-In Bulletin 14, no. (2004): 140-143.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3214. ———. "Watsonian Weekend IX." Shoso-In Bulletin 11, no. (2001): 44-47.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3215. ———. "Watsonian Weekend V." Shoso-In Bulletin 7, no. (1997): 17-19.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3216. ———. "Watsonian Weekend VI." Shoso-In Bulletin 8, no. (1998): 75-77.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3217. ———. "Watsonian Weekend VII." Shoso-In Bulletin 9, no. (1999): 169-174.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3218. ———. "Watsonian Weekend VIII." Shoso-In Bulletin 10, no. (2000): 26-29.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3219. ———. "Watsonian Weekend X." Shoso-In Bulletin 12, no. (2002): 191-193.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

08 MEMORIALS AND MEMORABILIA (9)

3220. "The best of Brickish; Japanese flock to admire our building blocks of history." Daily Mail (London), May 5, 1998: 25.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Squat and solid, they are regarded with hushed awe by the visitors who file past every day. Treasured for their shape and texture and marvelled at for their lasting quality, these are the precious prize exhibits in a Japanese museum. British bricks, it seems, are building up a reputation for themselves. Back home, they can be found cluttering up back gardens, littering building sites or even propping open doors. But the Japanese believe our bricks deserve more respect. At the World Brick Museum in Maizuru, north-west of Kyoto, specimens are kept lovingly in glass cases and treated as works of art. More than 10,000 visitors a month go to look at them. The Japanese fascination with British bricks probably has something to do with the rarity of brick buildings in Japan. The high risk of earthquakes has made building with bricks a risky business. So when the museum hosted an exhibition of just 16 bricks, titled 'Sherlock Holmes and English Bricks', record numbers of visitors flocked through the doors. They feasted their eyes on a collection of clay from Covent Garden, Scotland Yard, the Royal Albert Hall, St Pancras Station and 221B Baker Street - the detective's home address. The museum curators enlisted the help of the city of Portsmouth to compile the exhibition after discovering that Sir Arthur Conan Doyle created the character of Sherlock Holmes while living there in 1887...."
3221. "The Game's Afoot! Hot on the Trail of a Deerstalker." The Toronto Star, July 10, 1999: 1.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // In response to a reader query, some suggested places in London from which to buy (or order) a deerstalker hat.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

3222. "Sherlockian London." British Heritage 21, no. 1 (1999): 19.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the Sherlock Holmes Memorabilia Co. shop in London, England. Showcase of the set from the Sherlock Holmes television series starring Jeremy Brett; Exhibition prices.
3223. Gore-Langton, Robert. "Holmes and away!" Daily Mail (London), September 4, 2004: 56-57.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Switzerland was where Sir Arthur Conan Doyle plotted the death of Sherlock Holmes. Sick of writing stories about the sleuth, the author, who was a keen hiker, travelled around Switzerland and decided to make the spectacular Reichenbach Falls, near the village of Meiringen, the place to bump off his great detective. And, so, on May 4, 1891, Holmes and his arch- enemy Professor Moriarty ('the Napoleon of crime') did battle on a tiny ledge at the top of the falls. They supposedly vanished into the raging torrent whose noise was like a 'half-human shout which came booming up with the spray out of the abyss'. The Reichenbach Falls are these days a shrine for fans of literature's famous character. A star marks the chilling spot from where Holmes fell...."
3224. Jenkins, Rebecca. "Detective work at Baker Street." The Times (London), September 25, 1999: 30.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Looking for clues on a tour of Sherlock Holmes's fictional patch. We were on the trail of Sherlock Holmes. Nine of us, mostly American tourists and fellow sleuths, were scouring Marylebone for the haunts of a fictional character. It was a strange way to spend a Tuesday afternoon...."
3225. MacNeille, Suzanne. "Q and A." The New York Times, June 11, 1995: 28.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Answers questions from readers, including one about Holmes. "Q. Do you know of any literary tours of Britain? I'd like to visit places where famous authors have lived and written. My husband likes mysteries like Sherlock Holmes. -- Barbara Frederickson, Great Neck, L.I. A. There are several companies in Britain that offer literary tours, including packages with Sherlock Holmes themes. Among them are the following...."
3226. McGrory, Daniel. "Conan Doyle's town detects its fortune." The Times (London), July 5, 1997: 8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "A Sussex town with ambitions to be a big tourist attraction will double its population this weekend as 25,000 visitors descend to celebrate the creator of Sherlock Holmes. The great detective might have been puzzled at why Crowborough waited so long to cash in on its connections with Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, who lived there during his last 23 years. Julian Roup, who conceived the idea of the world's only annual Sherlock Holmes festival, said: 'Interest in England's greatest sleuth just gets bigger every year and we are sitting on a literary brand name worth millions that is worshipped the world over - and until recently have done nothing about it. For years Baker Street has cashed in and its links are purely fictitious. We are sitting on the real thing.'..."
3227. Pool, Hannah. "This Week's Winners and Losers." The Guardian (London), June 30, 1997: T9.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Passing reference. "Sherlock Holmes fans should make their way to the Sherlock Holmes festival, Crowborough, Sussex from Friday to Sunday."
3228. Sherwood, Claudia. "The Dreadful Fete of Conan Doyle." The Observer, July 6, 1997: 8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The great detective himself would no doubt have described it as a three-pipe problem. Why is the world dotted with statues of Sherlock Holmes while there is none to his creator? The anomaly may soon be corrected as Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, general practitioner, spiritualist and the man behind the world's most famous detective, realises his final vocation - as a marketing opportunity. Just as Rochester has reclaimed Dickens, Chawton cherishes Jane Austen and the Brontes have put Howarth on the map, a town is now trying to harness the commercial potential of Holmes. But it is not Edinburgh, where he studied, or Southsea, where he practised, but the apparently unexceptional East Sussex town of Crowborough. A Sherlock Holmes Festival culminating this weekend in a Victorian street fair and crime-writing bonanza at his former home, Windlesham Manor, is forging ahead...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

08 MEMORIALS AND MEMORABILIA -- BOOKPLATES (1)

3229. Johnson, Timothy J. "The Cover." Libraries & Culture 36, no. 2 (2001): 366.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Describes the bookplate for the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota Libraries in Minneapolis. Illustration of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle; Background on the titles included in the collections; Significance of the collections.

08 MEMORIALS AND MEMORABILIA -- BOOKSELLERS (2)

3230. "The Merchant of Menace [Advertisement]." Canadian Holmes 17, no. 3 (1994): 33.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Advertisement for the Sleuth of Baker Street in Toronto.
3231. "The Merchant of Menace [Advertisement]." Canadian Holmes 17, no. 4 (1994): 27.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Advertisement for the Sleuth of Baker Street in Toronto.

08 MEMORIALS AND MEMORABILIA -- BUSINESS ESTABLISHMENTS -- CONAN DOYLE PUB (EDINBURGH)(1)

3232. "When Visiting." British Heritage 23, no. 3 (2002): 39.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents information on Edinburgh, Scotland. Location of the Conan Doyle Pub; Hotels and restaurants; Landmarks.

08 MEMORIALS AND MEMORABILIA -- BUSINESS ESTABLISHMENTS -- SHERLOCK HOLMES HOTEL (LONDON) (5)

3233. "Excess Baggage." The Dominion Post (Wellington), December 24, 2002: A9.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Sherlock Holmes fans can immerse themselves in the fictional detective's world, spending a weekend at the Sherlock Holmes Hotel in Baker St, London. The two-night break includes entry to Madame Tussaud's waxworks and a guided walk in the footsteps of Holmes with Historical Walks of London...."
3234. "M2: Travel: It's Elementary!". Birmingham Evening Mail, August 20, 2002: 44.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Finding a decent hotel in London is, to pinch a phrase from Sherlock Holmes, a three-pipe problem. Either you need to negotiate a second mortgage just to pay the bill or you arrive in an airless identi-kit concrete block with all the charm of a multistorey carpark. And you still get charged a small fortune. It was, then, with some trepidation that I headed for the Sherlock Holmes Hotel in Baker Street. The name alone conjured up visions of gullible American tourists being fleeced...."
3235. "M2: Travel: the Holmes Trail." Birmingham Evening Mail, February 27, 2003: 21.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "'It is a hobby of mine to have an exact knowledge of London,' said world-famous sleuth Sherlock Holmes. Now 'Sherlock's Discovery' is the name given to a package offered by the new boutique-style Sherlock Holmes Hotel on Baker Street which involves history and culture, luxury, good food and a lie-in on Sunday...."
3236. "On the Trail of Sherlock Holmes." British Heritage 24, no. 3 (2003): 10.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on a package tour 'Sherlock Discovery,' organized by the Sherlock Holmes Hotel in London. Places to be visited in the tour; Duration of the package; Contact information for the package tour.
3237. Williams, Gill. "Between the Sheets; Inside our Hotel of the Week Sherlock Holmes Hotel, London." Sunday

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Mirror, June 10, 2007: 17.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Short review of the hotel.

08 MEMORIALS AND MEMORABILIA -- BUSINESS ESTABLISHMENTS -- SHERLOCK HOLMES INNS (MELBOURNE, AUSTRALIA) (1)

3238. James, David. "Sherlock Holmes and the case of the profit share." Brw 17, no. 8 (1995): 52.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the profit share system adopted by European Taverns with its employees in operating the Sherlock Holmes Inns in Melbourne, Australia. Comments from executive chairman John Webb; Staff's reaction to the profit sharing scheme; Establishment of the first Australian franchise of the English-based fish shop chain Harry Ramsden's.

08 MEMORIALS AND MEMORABILIA -- BUSINESS ESTABLISHMENTS -- SHERLOCK HOLMES MEMORABILIA COMPANY (LONDON) (2)

3239. Dalby, Stewart. "Play dough: Hot on the trail of the man who never was: Sherlock Holmes was a fictional character but that doesn't stop people collecting anything to do with him." The Guardian (London), July 15, 2000: 24.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Sherlock Holmes never existed, of course. Nor did his much-loved dwellings at 221b Baker Street in London. But try telling Kazie Kamaza, one of the thousands of visitors who flock to the Sherlock Holmes Memorabilia Company in Baker Street each year....Almost exactly opposite is the Sherlock Holmes Museum, housed in a former Victorian lodging house. A blue plaque on the wall claims that this is the original 221b Baker Street. Not so, says the Abbey National Bank. Its modern, 60s built former headquarters a few doors along is where numbers 205 to 229 Baker Street used to be. And Abbey National still gets mail, as does the museum, addressed to Sherlock Holmes and asking him to help with a problem. They are reluctant to tell you at the museum just how many visitors they receive. In fact, they are disinclined to tell you anything if they suspect you have been across the road talking to the Memorabilia Company. The two see themselves as strong competitors...."

3240. Riley, Grace. "Holmes's City." The New York Times, June 11, 2000: 16.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "To the Editor: Reading "Deducing Holmes's City" (April 2) was enjoyable. Any Sherlock enthusiast may deduce that there is scarcely an area in London where one cannot recall some part of the great detective's adventures. I wish to comment, however, upon the reference to the Sherlock Holmes Memorabilia shop, which credits its owner with having forged a new Baker Street identity a decade ago. As director of the Sherlock Holmes Museum, I must assert that the credit for changing the face of Upper Baker Street belongs to the museum. When we purchased the museum building in July 1989, we had to weather many storms before and after opening it to the public in March 1990. Two years later a small shop across the road became the Sherlock Memorabilia Company, in competition with our souvenir business. Grace Riley, London"

08 MEMORIALS AND MEMORABILIA -- BUSINESS ESTABLISHMENTS -- SHERLOCK HOLMES PUB (LONDON) (1)

3241. Huntington, Tom. "Franklin's Last Home." American Heritage 57, no. 2 (2006): 49-52.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article presents information about Benjamin Franklin, the inventor of electricity and the archaeological research on his residence home. Of the many houses Franklin lived in over his eight decades, only one survives, which has been restored just in time for his 300th birthday in London, England. The Benjamin Franklin House is ideally located in central London, close to Trafalgar Square, Charing Cross, and the Strand. The two nearest tube stops are Charing Cross and Embankment, at opposite ends of Craven Street. Information on the life of Franklin has also been offered in the article. Includes a reference to Holmes. "...There are a few good pubs nearby. Franklin probably frequented the Ship and Shovel,

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

just down Craven Street and around the corner. If you turn onto Craven Passage, you'll find the Sherlock Holmes Pub. Franklin lived in a world without Sherlock Holmes, but that shouldn't keep you from stopping in, enjoying a pint, and surveying the pub's collection of Sherlockiana, including the re-creation of Holmes's famous sitting room that was originally built for the Festival of Britain in 1951."

08 MEMORIALS AND MEMORABILIA -- BUSINESS ESTABLISHMENTS -- SHERLOCK HOLMES PUB-RESTAURANT (2)

3242. Alexander, Marlene. "While in London, Lunch with the Great Detective." The Toronto Star, November 4, 2000: 16.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...The Sherlock Holmes Public House and Restaurant proves an irresistible lure for a long-time fan of the Great Detective. My husband and teenage daughter agree, in view of its being the noon hour, that the situation bears further investigation. Ha, the game is afoot! Inside, we find that the lower floor is devoted to the bar. It seems the typical English pub except for the memorabilia that adorns the walls, among them Dr. Watson's service revolver and the stuffed and mounted head of the Hound of the Baskervilles...."

3243. Bennett, Suzy. "Scenes of the crime." The Daily Telegraph (London), May 12, 2007: 13.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...For fans of Britain's original detective, the Sherlock Holmes Museum at 221b Baker Street, London, is an obvious place to visit...along with the Sherlock Holmes pub on nearby Northumberland Avenue, which exhibits props used in the films. Further afield, in Devon, mist-wreathed Dartmoor was the inspiration for Arthur Conan Doyle's The Hound of the Baskervilles, although most of the 2002 film version of the story took place in Glen Maye, Jurby and Druidale on the Isle of Man...."

08 MEMORIALS AND MEMORABILIA -- BUSINESS ESTABLISHMENTS -- SHERLOCK HOLMES SHOPPE (1)

3244. Walker, Maxton. "Holmes from Holmes: Websites reviewed." The Independent (London), October 3, 1998: 80.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Short review of www.sherlock-holmes.com (The Sherlock Holmes Shoppe). "I'm lucky enough to be endowed with a terrible memory. The main advantage of this is that I get to read all of the Sherlock Holmes short stories every five years and enjoy them thoroughly every time. And then, when they've been exhausted, I can only feed my addiction with what the Internet has to offer. An excellent starting point for anybody in the same boat is The Sherlock Holmes Shoppe, which exists primarily in order to sell Sherlock-related paraphernalia...."

08 MEMORIALS AND MEMORABILIA -- EXHIBITIONS (12)

3245. "Consumptive." Economist 330, no. 7849 (1994): 91-91.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the exhibition 'The Davos Phenomenon,' at the Strauhof Museum, Zurich with a reference to Doyle. "...Arthur Conan Doyle was not ill but arrived with his sick wife in 1893. For the next two years the Doyle family lived in the Villa Am Stein once occupied by Symonds. Doyle wrote little in Davos. He was too busy with the English billiards club, sledging, attending masked balls and learning the newly imported art of skiing. He left it to Symonds's daughter, Katherine Furse, to write the pioneering treatise, "Ski-Running", in 1924...."

3246. "Datebook." American Libraries 36, no. 7 (2005): 90-91.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a calendar of conferences, exhibits and other events in library science scheduled for 2005. Under the "Exhibits" section, note is made of the ongoing online exhibit at the Indiana University Lilly Library, "Bloomington by Gaslight: Sherlock Holmes in the Lilly Library."
<http://www.indiana.edu/~liblilly/holmes/index.shtml>

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

3247. "Datebook." American Libraries 34, no. 3 (2003): 95.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents the calendar for events related to the American Library Association for March-April 2003. Reference and photo from Newberry Library exhibit, "Sir Arthur Conan Doyle: Beyond Sherlock Holmes."
3248. "Photography of the Paranormal." USA Today Magazine 134, no. 2726 (2005): 64-68.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article provides information on the exhibition "The Perfect Medium: Photography and the Occult." The exhibit brings together some 120 photographs culled from public and private archives throughout Europe and North America, focusing primarily on the period from the 1860s through World War II, when occult and paranormal phenomena were a hot topic of debate and supporters and skeptics summoned photographs as evidence. Approaching the material from a historical perspective, the exhibition presents the photographs on their own terms, without authoritative comment as to their veracity. Included in the exhibition will be Mumler's portrait of Fanny Conant, a well-known Boston medium, who appears in the photograph with her control spirit. The Perfect Medium is organized in three sections, emphasizing different roles photography has played in its encounters with the occult. The article notes that "As the Spiritualist movement gained momentum in the late 19th century, spirit photography became a hotly debated topic, attracting the attention of major intellectual figures, including psychologist William James, scientists Alfred Russell Wallace and Charles Richet, and author Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, the latter best known for his tales of Sherlock Holmes."
3249. "The Sherlock Holmes exhibition." Festival Times 1, no. 5 (1990): 10-12.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A report on the Festival of Britain 'Sherlock Holmes' exhibition, held at Abbey House, Baker Street, London, 22 May-22 September 1951.
3250. Cameron, Lucinda. "Sherlock Holmes and Amazing Case of the Doctor Who Inspired Him; Conan Doyle Archive Material to Go on show for First Time." Daily Mail (London), April 17, 2006: 28.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses new exhibit in Edinburgh. "'A fantastically observant man', he was a doctor rather than a detective, though he did wear a deerstalker hat and cloak. Dr Joseph Bell even used a magnifying glass, although it is not clear whether he ever smoked a pipe. Now, fascinating archive material about to go on public display for the first time has revealed just how much of an inspiration he was for Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's famous detective...."
3251. Chalmers, John. "You write the festival reviews." The Independent (London), August 7, 2006: 20.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of the exhibit in Edinburgh, "Conan Doyle and Joseph Bell: The Real Sherlock Holmes," Surgeons' Hall Museums. "This is a small but fascinating exhibition on Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and his teacher, the surgeon Joseph Bell, who was his inspiration for Sherlock Holmes. Bell's ability to learn much about his patients simply from his powers of observation is legendary, and several examples are given in this show...."
3252. Cooke, Catherine. "Vintage 1951 - a Festival, a Society and a Collection." Shoso-In Bulletin 8, no. (1998): 186-198.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3253. Donnelly, Brian. "Doors open free for St Andrew's Day." The Herald (Glasgow), November 14, 2007: 7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "More than 60 of Scotland's top visitor attractions will open their doors free of charge on St Andrew's Day, it was announced yesterday. Castles, museums, gardens and abbeys from Orkney to Dumfries and Galloway will all take part in the initiative designed to encourage Scots and tourists to celebrate Scotland's heritage and culture. Culture Minister Linda Fabiani, announcing the joint initiative by the National Trust for Scotland, Historic Scotland and the Association of Visitor Attractions, said: 'St Andrews Day is a day to celebrate Scotland.'...Ms. Fabiani made the announcement at the Royal College of Surgeons in Edinburgh which is hosting the Real Sherlock Holmes exhibition, one of the free attractions on St Andrew's Day...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

3254. Horne, Marc. "Letter makes real Holmes elementary." The Sunday Times (London), April 16, 2006: 13.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "He wore a deerstalker hat and cloak, frequently gazed through a magnifying glass and boasted a razor-sharp mind, but, as far as history can tell, he never smoked a pipe or uttered the immortal words: 'Elementary, my dear Watson.' A new archive to be displayed in Edinburgh this summer shows the remarkable extent to which Sir Arthur Conan Doyle drew inspiration for Sherlock Holmes from his cerebral university tutor...."
3255. Macintyre, Ben. "The strange case of Monsieur Sherlock Holmes." The Times (London), May 16, 1996: 1.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Was Sherlock Holmes really French? An exhibition exploring this unlikely question opened in Paris yesterday, bringing together clues to suggest that beneath the famous deerstalker of the world's most enduring fictional detective were the mind, heart and blood of a Frenchman. Holmes is a cult figure in France and, like every aspect of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's beloved sleuth, the mystery of his ancestry is hotly debated and the deductions anything but elementary...."
3256. Stuttaford, Andrew. "Feywatch." National Review 50, no. 25 (1998): 52-52.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the exhibition "Victorian Fairy Painting" at the Frick Collection in New York City in 1998. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...It is no coincidence that a number of the most striking works on display at the Frick are by painters who were outsiders. The greatest of them all, Richard Dadd, murdered his father. His obsessively detailed masterpiece, The Fairy Feller's Master Stroke, was the product of nine years' work in a lunatic asylum. That's also where Charles Doyle (father of the creator of Sherlock Holmes) ended up. His Self-Portrait, A Meditation, shows a man all too aware that the spirits surrounding him are the product of a troubled mind...."

08 MEMORIALS AND MEMORABILIA -- MINIATURES -- 221B BAKER STREET (1)

3257. "Product Briefs." Architectural Record 189, no. 11 (2001): 221.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents several architectural products including models of Timothy Richards, with a passing Holmes reference. "Richards has been commissioned by the Victoria & Albert Museum, Sir Terence Conran, and the Royal Ontario Museum. His repertoire in miniature includes precise replications of such famous architectural structures as 10 Downing Street, Twin Towers of Wembley, Kensington Palace, The Hoover Building, Charlotte Square, and the Temple of Four Winds, along with the homes of Sherlock Holmes, Jane Austen, and Charles Dickens."

08 MEMORIALS AND MEMORABILIA -- MUSEUMS (1)

3258. Hirayama, Yuichi, and Hiroko Hirayama. "Revisit to the Sherlock Holmes Museum." Shoso-In Bulletin 4, no. (1994): 101-107.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

08 MEMORIALS AND MEMORABILIA -- MUSEUMS -- SHERLOCK HOLMES MUSEUM (LONDON) (15)

3259. "Holmes loan fraud; [3 Edition]." The Independent (London), December 7, 1994: No page citation.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "John A-----, 37, a businessman, of Belgravia, central London, who was behind the Sherlock Holmes museum in Baker Street, was convicted at Southwark Crown Court of founding it with the proceeds from a pounds 1.2m mortgage fraud. He will be sentenced next month."
3260. "Holmes Museum Owner is Accused of Mortgage Fraud." The Guardian (London), November 16, 1994: 5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "A businessman turned to fraud to help develop a museum dedicated to fictional detective Sherlock Holmes, a court heard yesterday. John A----- raised further mortgages on the building as

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- part of a pounds 1.2 million fraud, Southwark crown court heard. A-----, who owns the three-storey museum at 239 Baker Street, is representing himself in the case. He is using a metal dustbin to store thousands of pages of documents served on him by the Crown Prosecution Service. The building is in Baker Street, where the fictional detective lived, and was one of three used by A-----, aged 37, to obtain eight mortgages, said Charles Miskin, prosecuting...."
3261. "Superb Take Holmes Pay; Job Vacancy for Sherlock Holmes Lookalike at Museum." The Mirror, January 29, 1998: 34.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Looking for a job with a difference? It's elementary, dear Watson. The Baker Street Museum has a vacancy for a Sherlock Holmes lookalike at its famous address in London. It is just one of a range of opportunities you'll find in Summer Jobs Britain '98 and Summer Jobs Abroad '98 (both GBP 8.99)...."
3262. Bennett, Suzy. "Scenes of the crime." The Daily Telegraph (London), May 12, 2007: 13.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...For fans of Britain's original detective, the Sherlock Holmes Museum at 221b Baker Street, London, is an obvious place to visit...along with the Sherlock Holmes pub on nearby Northumberland Avenue, which exhibits props used in the films. Further afield, in Devon, mist-wreathed Dartmoor was the inspiration for Arthur Conan Doyle's The Hound of the Baskervilles, although most of the 2002 film version of the story took place in Glen Maye, Jurby and Druidale on the Isle of Man...."
3263. Berdan, Marshall S. "Sherlock Holmes 101." The Washington Post, January 11, 2004: 2.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "WHAT: Tracing the Victorian London of Sherlock Holmes; his colleague and biographer, Dr. John H. Watson; and his creator, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. WHY NOW: Because as devotees of Holmes -- 'the world's first and still most famous consulting detective' -- have collectively deduced, he was born Jan. 6, 1854, thus making 2004 his sesquicentennial celebration. SHERLOCKIAN SITES: The exact site of Holmes's 221B Baker St. residence remains a matter of debate. Because the entire Portman Square neighborhood in which it was located was reduced to rubble in World War II, the 'modern' world of Sherlock Holmes has been relocated to the northern end of the extended -- and renumbered -- Baker Street. Highlights include: "The Great Detective." Standing vigil outside the Marylebone Road exit of the Baker Street tube station is this statue, erected in 1999 by the Abbey National Bank (the residents of 221 Baker since 1932)....Sherlock Holmes Museum....Sherlock Holmes Memorabilia Co...."
3264. Dalby, Stewart. "Play dough: Hot on the trail of the man who never was: Sherlock Holmes was a fictional character but that doesn't stop people collecting anything to do with him." The Guardian (London), July 15, 2000: 24.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Sherlock Holmes never existed, of course. Nor did his much-loved dwellings at 221b Baker Street in London. But try telling Kazie Kamaza, one of the thousands of visitors who flock to the Sherlock Holmes Memorabilia Company in Baker Street each year....Almost exactly opposite is the Sherlock Holmes Museum, housed in a former Victorian lodging house. A blue plaque on the wall claims that this is the original 221b Baker Street. Not so, says the Abbey National Bank. Its modern, 60s built former headquarters a few doors along is where numbers 205 to 229 Baker Street used to be. And Abbey National still gets mail, as does the museum, addressed to Sherlock Holmes and asking him to help with a problem. They are reluctant to tell you at the museum just how many visitors they receive. In fact, they are disinclined to tell you anything if they suspect you have been across the road talking to the Memorabilia Company. The two see themselves as strong competitors...."
3265. Dorn, Jennifer. "Streetlights of London." British Heritage 27, no. 5 (2006): 11-12.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article presents information on the Marylebone neighborhood in London, England. The address 221B was not there in Baker Street, Marylebone during the years of the Sherlock Holmes stories. But Baker Street was extended and renumbering of the buildings was done in 1930. 221B became a real address and the popular Sherlock Holmes Museum was made there. The beautiful Regent's Park is the famous residential area of Marylebone. Medical services are offered in Wimpole and Harley streets.
3266. Fernz, Helena. "Probing the residence at 221b Baker Street, London." Business Times, December 7, 2001: 13.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Let's play the sleuth on this occasion and investigate the famed residence at 221b Baker Street, London, by stopping at http:// www.sherlock- holmes.co.uk/ The notable occupants of this well-known abode at Baker Street are none other than Sherlock Holmes and his colleague John H. Watson, MD. Well, actually, this will probably be the easiest 'case' ever to be investigated, for 'The Sherlock Holmes Museum' that is online provides a colourful and in-depth tour to anyone who actually takes the time to visit and explore...."

3267. Friedman, Kinky. "Mad Cowboy Disease." Texas Monthly 31, no. 5 (2003): 244.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Relates the experience of a cowboy when he visited London, England. Reaction of the city workers to the cowboy's outfit; Details of the cowboy's meeting with Mike Levy, former record producer and tennis partner of Great Britain's Prime Minister Tony Blair. Includes a reference to Holmes. "...On my last night in London, I walked through the fog until I came to the most famous address in the world, 221B Baker Street. On the door was a small bronze plaque that read 'Visitors for Mr. Sherlock Holmes or Doctor Watson please ring the bell.' I rang the bell, walked up one flight of seventeen steps, and suddenly I was standing in Sherlock Holmes's living room. There was a cheery fire in the fireplace. Holmes's violin stood poignantly nearby, along with the old Persian slipper where he kept his Turkish tobacco. And in the room were Japanese, Russians, Africans, people from seemingly every nation on earth, all bound together by a common, passionate belief that Sherlock Holmes was real. It was, I thought, a perfect United Nations...."

3268. Jenkins, Lin. "Elementary Fraud at the Sherlock Holmes museum." The Times (London) 1994: 3.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "[John A-----], 38, of Belgravia, central London, used false details to obtain mortgages. Each time he applied for money he claimed falsely that he had no outstanding debts on other properties. He netted Pounds 890,000 on the Sherlock Holmes museum building and Pounds 228,000 from a house in Battersea, south London. A further Pounds 100,000 was obtained on a flat in Stockwell, south London, under the name Peter Neville. A----- wrote references claiming that Neville worked for him at his free newspaper distribution firm, Rollerteam Ltd."[excerpt]

3269. Laidlaw, Joanna. "The fun of museum shopping." Victoria 12, no. 3 (1998): 16.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on museum shops in London, England that sell souvenirs and other gift items. Henry VIII's Tudor palace; Tower of London; Victoria & Albert Museum; Pollock's Toy Museum; Museum of Garden History; Twinings Tea Museum. Includes passing references to Holmes. "...Come along with Londoner Joanna Laidlaw on an enlightening stroll that leads directly to artful and unusual souvenirs -- from a silk scarf to a Beefeater teddy bear and a Sherlock Holmes hat....Snoop around the real 221b Baker Street (011 44 171 935 8866), and see where Sherlock Holmes lived. The fictitious English sleuth still receives thousands of letters, birthday cards, and invitations to speak. The museum shop sells everything from Baker Street street signs and meerschaum pipes to capes, and handsome tweed deerstalker hats. You can even buy a real London Times from the last century and a chess set featuring characters from the tales (the pawns are London bobbies)...."

3270. McAteer, Michael. "Holmes' legend lives." Toronto Star, January 3, 2002: L14.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The small room with the two windows overlooking Baker Street is on the first floor of the Sherlock Holmes Museum. Here, shrouded in blue tobacco smoke, the great consulting detective pondered the criminal mind as gas lamps flickered in the fog outside and hansom cabs rattled over cobbles. A museum visitor- an American by his accent- glances over the room crammed with Holmes memorabilia before addressing a young woman decked out as a Victorian maid. 'Did Sherlock Holmes die in this house?' he asks...."

3271. Muller, Lynne. "The case of the fictional flat: A quirky London museum pays tribute to Sherlock Holmes and Watson." The Globe and Mail (Toronto), May 16, 1998: F3.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...I'll never know if she believed Sherlock Holmes had really lived, because I didn't pursue the conversation. But the obsession she and other Sherlockians share must be the ultimate tribute to Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, Holmes' creator. Fascination with the Holmes persona is so strong almost 70 years after Doyle's death that there are more than 300 Sherlockian organizations worldwide, 17 in Japan alone. And the fiction is complete in Baker Street's Sherlock Holmes Museum, which allows fans to visit the small flat,

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

reproduced with style and good humour, that Holmes shared with Dr. Watson from 1881 to 1904. The museum contains no mention of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, no background on how he came to create his famous sleuth. A project of the Sherlock Holmes International Society, the museum simply reproduces Holmes' flat (and sells a few souvenirs along the way). Thankfully, there's not too much schlock amidst the Sherlockiana...."

3272. Nurton, James. "The King and I." Managing Intellectual Property, no. (2000): 5p.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the story Elvisly Yours owner Sid Shaw to illustrate the limits of trademark protection for the memorabilia and collectibles about Elvis Presley. Lawsuit filed by Elvis Presley Enterprises against the company; Details of how Shaw won various lawsuits against his business; Forecasts of how Shaw's legal troubles will end. Includes a reference to Holmes. "...If you're looking for celebrities, London's Baker Street would be a good place to start. On one side of the road is the famous Madame Tussauds waxworks, the country's biggest tourist attraction, and home to models of thousands of politicians, monarchs, sports stars, artists, entertainers and criminals. On the other side is number 221 B, the residence of Sherlock Holmes, probably the world's most famous detective. Now there is a new face in the neighbourhood. The King is in town. Next to the Sherlock Holmes museum, the greatest rock and roll star of all time has just moved in to number 233. Elvis the Pelvis, the Memphis Flash, is here...."

3273. Riley, Grace. "Holmes's City." The New York Times, June 11, 2000: 16.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "To the Editor: Reading "Deducing Holmes's City" (April 2) was enjoyable. Any Sherlock enthusiast may deduce that there is scarcely an area in London where one cannot recall some part of the great detective's adventures. I wish to comment, however, upon the reference to the Sherlock Holmes Memorabilia shop, which credits its owner with having forged a new Baker Street identity a decade ago. As director of the Sherlock Holmes Museum, I must assert that the credit for changing the face of Upper Baker Street belongs to the museum. When we purchased the museum building in July 1989, we had to weather many storms before and after opening it to the public in March 1990. Two years later a small shop across the road became the Sherlock Memorabilia Company, in competition with our souvenir business. Grace Riley, London"

08 MEMORIALS AND MEMORABILIA -- PLAQUES (1)

3274. Atchison, Marc. "A date with history." The Toronto Star, November 15, 2003: K22.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Hotel du Louvre offers as many thrills as famous Paris museum. From room 131 in the historic Hotel du Louvre, I could see three semi-naked women staring stone-faced into the darkness of night....I was looking into the world famous Musee du Louvre- at a statue standing in a window directly across the street from my room...The next morning, I made it a priority to find out who the three women were. However, finding that particular sculpture among the thousands on display at the incredible Louvre would no doubt take the sleuthing skills of a Sherlock Holmes, who, by the way- according to his creator Sir Arthur Conan Doyle- preferred the Hotel du Louvre to all other Paris properties. There's even a plaque in the hotel's lobby from the Sherlock Holmes Society verifying that fact...."

08 MEMORIALS AND MEMORABILIA -- SCULPTURES AND STATUES (18)

3275. "Abbey National Unveil Bronze of Sherlock Holmes." Birmingham Post, October 9, 1999: 32.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "In the detective's shadow: Abbey National has tried to dilute the image of banks as soulless organisations, whose only driving force is the creation of profit, by unveiling a three-metre high bronze of Sherlock Holmes as part of its 150th anniversary celebrations. The move commemorates the bank's 'association' with the detective, dating back to 1932, when Abbey's head offices moved to Baker Street and incorporated Holmes' fictional address of 211b. Abbey still receives letters addressed to the crime-buster, which are answered by his 'secretary' who works for the bank."

3276. "Acquisitions." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 2, no. 3 (1998): 4.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Highlights the acquisition of "On Grimpen Mire," a bronze sculpture donated by

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

the sculptor Lynette Yencho and her husband Michael.

3277. "Holmes' place." The Evening Standard (London), August 4, 1999: 12.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Lord Tugendhat is hoping the cash registers of the Abbey National will be going ching! ching! over the Abbey's links with Sherlock Holmes. The bank, of which he is chairman, is sponsoring a statue of Conan Doyle's great detective as part of its 150th anniversary celebrations. 221b Baker Street, where Holmes and Watson were so capably looked after by Mrs Hudson, has been occupied by Abbey National since 1932, and the Sherlock Holmes Society has long pleaded for a statue there...."
3278. "Holmes' Statue is on the Case!". Birmingham Evening Mail, September 24, 1999: 37.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "A bronze statue of the world's best-known fictional detective was unveiled in London. The statue of Sherlock Holmes stands outside Baker Street underground station, near to where the detective lived at the fictional number 221b. Abbey National, whose head office is located on the site of what would be 221b Baker Street, has sponsored the work to mark its 150th anniversary...."
3279. "News in Brief." Nature 419, no. 6909 (2002): 770.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents international news briefs as of October 24, 2002. Presentation of a silver medal to the statue of Sherlock Holmes in London, England.
3280. "Sherlock Holmes Statue to Appear in Moscow." 2006, no. (2006): 1.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "He never visited Russia over the course of his fictitious life, but Sherlock Holmes will soon grace Moscow in statue form, authorities are quoted by DPA news agency as saying. '(Moscow City Hall's) Monuments Committee has decided that there needs to be a monument of Sherlock Holmes and Doctor Watson in Moscow,' Sergei Petrov, head of the committee, said in remarks carried by the Interfax news agency. The statue is to open near the British Embassy on the banks of the Moscow River under the auspices of the Moscow-based non-profit foundation Cultural Dialogue/One World. The organisation has said it wants to unveil the monument later this year or early 2007...."[excerpt]
3281. "Sherlock homes in on London address." The Evening Standard (London), September 21, 1999: 19.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The final touches are being put to a 9ft statue of the great sleuth Sherlock Holmes which will stand outside Baker Street Tube station - close to the fictional detective's London address. The bronze, by Essex sculptor John Doubleday, has been commissioned by the Sherlock Holmes Society whose chairman Lord Tugendhat will unveil it on Thursday...."
3282. Barlay, Nick. "Statues of the London." The Times (London), May 15, 2004: 31.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Unveiled by Harold Wilson in 1966, Mohandas Karamchand Gandhi's serene sculptural presence in Tavistock Square Gardens has become a focal point for peace memorials and events, just as his strategy of non-violent non-cooperation (satyagraha) has become a byword for peaceful resistance. Pandit Nehru, the former Prime Minister of India, planted a copper beech tree near by to commemorate his visit to London in 1953, and a cherry tree was planted in 1967 for the victims of Hiroshima. Each year on October 2, Gandhi's birth is celebrated with a huge display of flowers. To find Gandhi's statue, the great man's own instructions will help: "There is no way to peace. Peace is the way." The recent murder of Lancelyn Green, the renowned Sherlock Holmes expert, only fuels the transatlantic excitement of American and British fans: is there a Conan Doyle curse? What is true, of course, is that Holmes lived at 221b Baker Street, which is now a museum complete with very real souvenirs. Around the corner in front of Baker Street station is a statue of the famous detective by the sculptor John Doubleday, who is responsible for a number of London's more populist enterprises. The statue was unveiled in 1999 by Lord Tugendhat, the chairman of Abbey National Bank. The association with Holmes goes back to 1932, when the company built its headquarters at 200 Baker Street. Soon, a "secretary to Sherlock Holmes" had to be appointed to deal with the constant letters addressed to 221b. A permanent memorial to the world's most translated and performed playwright after Shakespeare was first proposed by the film director Derek Jarman, but it wasn't until 1998 that Oscar Wilde secured a place in Central London. Maggi Hambling's bronze in Adelaide Street near Trafalgar Square was unveiled by Stephen Fry and is less formal than the blue plaque at Wilde's residence in Tite Street in Chelsea. Entitled A Conversation with Oscar Wilde 1854-1900, the memorial consists of a sarcophagus, out of which pokes the writer's head. According to Hambling, the sculpture is "completed" when a member of the public sits down on the sarcophagus to have a chat with the author. In addition, the rebellious Wilde is depicted smoking, once a symbol of moral decay. Inscribed on the memorial is that wonderful quote by Wilde: "We are all in the gutter, but some of us are looking at the stars."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

3283. Berdan, Marshall S. "Sherlock Holmes 101." The Washington Post, January 11, 2004: 2.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "WHAT: Tracing the Victorian London of Sherlock Holmes; his colleague and biographer, Dr. John H. Watson; and his creator, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. WHY NOW: Because as devotees of Holmes -- 'the world's first and still most famous consulting detective' -- have collectively deduced, he was born Jan. 6, 1854, thus making 2004 his sesquicentennial celebration. SHERLOCKIAN SITES: The exact site of Holmes's 221B Baker St. residence remains a matter of debate. Because the entire Portman Square neighborhood in which it was located was reduced to rubble in World War II, the 'modern' world of Sherlock Holmes has been relocated to the northern end of the extended -- and renumbered -- Baker Street. Highlights include: "The Great Detective." Standing vigil outside the Marylebone Road exit of the Baker Street tube station is this statue, erected in 1999 by the Abbey National Bank (the residents of 221 Baker since 1932)....Sherlock Holmes Museum....Sherlock Holmes Memorabilia Co...."
3284. Green, Richard Lancelyn. "Editorial: A Sherlock Holmes Statue for Baker Street." The Sherlock Holmes Journal 23, no. 2 (1997): 41-42.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3285. Hanlon, Michael. "Sleuthing the case of statue in the square." The Toronto Star, October 4, 2003: no page citation.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Here I am in my room at the Parkhotel du Sauvage, indulging myself in Meiringen's two major pursuits. I'm munching on a meringue while at the same time gazing at Reichenbach Falls cascading down the mountain beyond my window. And, though I've been here only 24 hours, I've already solved both The Case of the Statue in the Square and The Mystery of the Bakery Window. My brilliant powers of observation and deduction of the statue's deerstalker cap, meerschaum pipe, and the astonishing likeness to the many Sherlock Holmeses we've seen on film, led me to conclude that the statue depicted none other than the Great Detective...."
3286. Hirayama, Yuichi. "The Japanese Sherlock Holmes Statue Now." The Ritual, no. 24 (1999): 29-31.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3287. Kegley, Jerry. "Immortalized in Bronze: The London Statue Dedication." Baker Street West I 6, no. 1 (2000): 38-41.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3288. Nosowicz, Dorota. "Comment: 10 Key Things About...Sherlock Holmes." The Observer, September 19, 1999: 27.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Elementary, dear reader, and not before time. The esteemed sculptor, Mr John Doubleday, will unveil his latest statue outside Baker Street Underground railway station in London's district of Marylebone on Thursday. It is a likeness of the greatest detective ever, Mr Sherlock Holmes, whose lodgings were at 221B Baker Street, where now resides the Abbey National celebrating 150 years of financial ministration. 1. Nascence: In 1887, the legend of Sherlock Holmes and Dr Thomas Watson was born in Beeton's Christmas Annual...."
3289. Owen, Richard. "Sherlock Holmes's Italian connection." The Times (London), April 19, 2002: 40.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Sherlock Holmes enthusiasts in Italy have unveiled a bronze bust of the Great Detective at a Florence railway station to mark Holmes's -and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's -little-known Italian connection. Gianluca Salvatori, head of the Italian Sherlock Holmes society Uno Studio in Holmes (A Study in Holmes), said it was not widely known that Holmes had visited Florence after his struggle to the death with Professor Moriarty at the Reichenbach Falls. In 'The Adventure of the Empty House', the first story in The Return of Sherlock Holmes, the detective tells the astonished Dr Watson (who like everyone else thought that

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Holmes had perished) that after surviving the encounter with Moriarty thanks to a hidden ledge, 'I took to my heels, did ten miles over the mountains in the darkness, and a week later found myself in Florence, with the certainty that no one in the world knew what had become of me'...."

3290. Reid, T. R. "For Sherlock Holmes, A Study in Bronze." The Washington Post, September 24, 1999: A23.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "In the bustling neighborhood that was home to the World's Greatest Detective, who pondered the mystery of the dog that didn't bark, London today finally resolved the riddle of the statue that wasn't there. Just around the corner from their hero's famous flat--at 221B Baker Street--a boisterous cluster of fans from around the world doffed their deerstalkers and waved their magnifying glasses in the air at the unveiling of London's first statue honoring Sherlock Holmes...."
3291. Skoyles, Lesley. "The Edinburgh Sherlock Holmes Statue." The Ritual, no. 24 (1999): 24-25.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3292. Watson-Smyth, Kate. "Sherlock Holmes and the mystery of the missing statue is solved." The Independent (London), February 21, 1999: 13.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // It is more than 70 years since Sherlock Holmes solved his last case, but he is still sent more than 40 letters a month to his rooms in Baker Street. One of the most enduring mysteries, however, is how this most famous of detectives came to be commemorated in Japan, Switzerland and Edinburgh but never by his home at 221B. The answer, when it finally emerged, was elementary, my dear Watson -- nobody had ever got round to it. But now, more than 60 years after the death of author G K Chesterton, who was the first to suggest a statue of the sleuth, planning permission for one has been granted to the Sherlock Holmes Society...."

09 GAMES, PUZZLES AND QUIZZES -- CHESS (3)

3293. Dondis, Harold, and Patrick Wolff. "Chess Notes." The Boston Globe, May 20, 2002: C8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The matter of how to handle women's chess has been a dilemma for American chess for years. Women have traditionally been weaker players than men and there has been much debate over this subject. There has been the feeling that women shy from head-to-head competition and, perhaps, from defeating men. However, by winning at chess, they will earn respect. One role model must surely be Irene Adler, the only person in the works of Conan Doyle ever to outwit Sherlock Holmes. In the short story 'A Scandal of Bohemia,' Dr. Watson wrote of Adler, 'To Sherlock Holmes, she was always the woman. I have seldom heard him mention her under any other name. In his eyes she eclipses and predominates the whole of her sex.'...Still, the only person to outwit Sherlock Holmes would not be able to join the Speckled Band, which is the Sherlock Holmes Club that meets annually on Boylston Street. The popular Speckled Band simply does not admit women."
3294. Hartston, William. "Chess." The Independent (London), October 21, 1996: 26.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A chess problem involving Holmes and Watson. "'Professor Moriarty is defeated,' exclaimed Dr Watson,' as he peered at the position that stood upon the chess board on a table in the centre of the floor. Sherlock Holmes and Dr Watson had rushed to the rooms of Reichenbach Falls chess club when they heard that Moriarty was contesting the final of the club championship. They were at first dismayed to find the game over and Moriarty gone by the time they arrived, yet Watson's sadness quickly turned to joy on seeing the position. Black was checkmated, and, as the name cards clearly insisted, Moriarty had been playing Black...."
3295. Pein, Malcolm. "Chess." The Sunday Telegraph (London), March 23, 2008: 7.93.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Given that Sherlock Holmes possessed one of the finest analytical minds in fiction, it seems extraordinary that he was not a fine chess player. There is no mention of him playing the game in the writings of Arthur Conan Doyle. To amplify the point I ran a quick check on a chess database of more than three million games and there was not a single one attributed to anyone by the name of S. Holmes. I am indebted to Edward Winter's unerringly excellent Chess Notes, a regular digest of matters to do with chess

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

history, for the following quotation from The Adventure of the Retired Colourman in 'The Case Book of Sherlock Holmes': 'Amberley excelled at chess - one mark, Watson, of a scheming mind.' So perhaps Holmes did not have a high opinion of the game or its practitioners. There are many chess stories that parody the Sherlock Holmes adventures, including The Chess Mysteries of Sherlock Holmes by Professor Raymond Smullyan, which can be found secondhand on Amazon...."

09 GAMES, PUZZLES AND QUIZZES -- COMPUTER GAMES (27)

3296. "Case Study - Sherlock Holmes, Consulting Detective: A study in DVD." Journal of Engineering and Applied Science 13, no. 3 (2000): 26.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3297. "Dracula Unleashed: Interactive movie with a bite." PC Magazine 13, no. 3 (1994): 422.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Features Viacom New Media's 'Dracula Unleashed' interactive CD-ROM. Setting; Comparison with Sherlock Holmes series; Video and sound quality; Price and availability; Contact information.
3298. "Sherlock Holmes." The News of the World (England), October 19, 2008: 19.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The classic point-and-click adventure Sherlock Holmes gets a facelift on Thursday with the release of the Awakened Remastered Edition of the PC hit by Ascaron and 93 Games....Players can now choose between stepping into the first person mode of Sherlock Holmes himself or the new third person mode."
3299. Andrew, D. T. "Arthur Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes available on CD-ROM." PC Magazine 11, no. 11 (1992): 481.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the CD-ROM computer game Sherlock Holmes on Disc! from CMC Research. Features; Purchase price and address.
3300. Armstrong, Rebecca. "Computer Games." The Independent (London), September 4, 2004: 66.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of the computer game "Sherlock Holmes: The Case of the Silver Earring," Publisher: Digital Jesters. "Get out your deerstalker: this is a Sherlock Holmes adventure for anyone who has ever dreamt of stepping into the famous sleuth's shoes. Unfortunately, unless you've dreamt of asking question after question after question of dull characters with limited AI, you may wish to avoid this otherwise enjoyable romp...."
3301. Breeden, John, II. "Awakened: The Game Is Afoot." The Washington Post, October 19, 2007: WE53.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "It has been a while since Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's famous detective, Sherlock Holmes, and his loyal sidekick, Dr. Watson, have solved mysteries on our computer screens. In Sherlock Holmes: The Awakened, they battle unholy minions created by another famous writer, Howard Phillips Lovecraft, including the elder god Cthulhu and the crazy cultists who worship him. Fans of either writer should feel at home. Holmes is top-notch at solving mysteries with attitude, and the Lovecraft angle makes the game creepy. The Awakened, played in first person, features extremely good-looking 3-D environments....The game features traditional puzzles...; physical puzzles...; and even the analysis of chemicals and other substances in Holmes's laboratory....Combining the worlds of two great writers into one game is ingenious. And although at first they don't seem to go together, it ultimately works."
3302. Crossman, Craig. "Citizen Comes Through with Small Printer." The Salt Lake Tribune (Salt Lake City, UT), Dec 25, 1994: E7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Sirius has packaged 10 CD-ROM disks in a small square bundle called the '5-Ft. 10-Pak' that zigzag opens into a five-foot-long flat plastic streamer. One side is opaque; the transparent sleeve side shows off the colorful printed face of each disk. The new Volume II contains Battle Chess Enhanced; Space Quest IV; Rock Rap 'N Roll; Sherlock Holmes; Arts & Letters Warbirds; Movie Select; PC Karaoke; Family Fun; Fantasia's 2000 Fonts; Microsoft Multimedia Jumpstart and The Home Medical Advisor...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

3303. English, David. "The best in CD-ROM games." Compute! 16, no. 1 (1994): S-13.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the best in CD-ROM games. Includes a Holmesian game. "Sherlock Holmes: Consulting Detective Volumes II & III (Viacom New Media, 708-520-4440, $69.95 each) are the follow ups to Sherlock Holmes: Consulting Detective Volume I ($69.95), which was one of the first games to integrate video clips into the game's action."
3304. Foster, Hugh. "Reviews." Computer Life 4, no. 2 (1997): 110.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Evaluates the computer game Sherlock Holmes: Case of the Rose Tattoo from Electronic Arts.
3305. Franklin, Deborah. "Play games." Health 11, no. 8 (1997): 76.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the role of computer games in the stimulation of the minds of adults, according to game inventor and geriatric psychiatrist Gene Cohen. Evidences that play can influence a person's intellect; Analysis of the cognitive effects of games. List of games includes 221 B Baker Street " Solve the cases of the great Sherlock Holmes. Two to six players, $20, Hansen."
3306. Goldberg, Ron. "Interactive." Sound & Image 3, no. 3: 93.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Features the software Sherlock Holmes, Consulting Detective Volume III from Icon Simulations. Price; Storyline.
3307. Himowitz, Michael J. "Argue Over Dead Parrot and Tour the Enterprise, Program Fun Into Your PC." Times - Picayune (New Orleans, LA), December 24, 1994: C2.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a reference to a Holmes game. "...If you're new to the PC market, it's hard to beat some of the CD-ROM bundles that are finding their way to dealers shelves. Usually priced at $25 to $40, they contain six to 10 CD-ROMs, including games that may be a year or two old but are still great entertainment. For example, the second release of the 5-foot 10 Pak from Sirius Publishing includes Interplay's insane Battle Chess, Sierra's Space Quest IV, the first volume of Icom's delightful Sherlock Holmes Consulting Detective, Paramount's Rock, Rap 'n Roll, a nifty music production program for kids, and Sirius' own P.C. Karaoke. (I've wasted more than a few hours with this one.)..."
3308. ———. "For Pure PC Fun, Try These Programs." St. Louis Post-Dispatch (St. Louis, MO), Dec 28, 1994: 05C.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a reference to a Holmes game. "...If you're new to the PC market, it's hard to beat some of the CD-ROM bundles on dealers shelves. Usually priced at $25 to $40, they contain anywhere from six to 10 CD-ROMs, including games that may be a year or two old but are still great entertainment. For example, the second release of the 5-foot 10 Pak from Sirius Publishing includes Interplay's insane Battle Chess, Sierra's Space Quest IV, the first volume of Icom's delightful Sherlock Holmes Consulting Detective, Paramount's Rock, Rap 'n Roll, a nifty music production program for kids, and Sirius' own P.C. Karaoke (I've wasted more than a few hours with this one)...."
3309. Ketron, Holly. "The 10 video games your kid (all right, you) want most." Money 23, no. 1 (1994): 145.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Lists some popular video games in early 1994. Disney's 'Aladdin'; NHL '94; El-Fish; Videos for children under ten, teenagers and adults. Includes Sherlock Holmes Consulting Detective II (Sega, $49.99). Gumshoeing that's inventive and fit for the whole family. The game provides eight different whodunits to solve.
3310. Low, Bob. "The Razz: Games Reviews: What's this Ear?; Adventures of Sherlock Holmes : Case of the Silver Earring." Daily Record, August 13, 2004: 65.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...Most of the crisis-hit UK games industry seems to be holding out for Christmas. However, there are a few good releases on the go and this is one, another in the saga of interactive detective tales from Frogwares. The biggest mystery in this is Sherlock's trousers, which Gap would make a mint out of selling. I mean, these pants can hold every conceivable item you might need - including a small dog. Frogwares started this Sherlock Holmes obsession some two years ago with The Mystery of the Mummy...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

3311. May, Scott A. "The best in adventure game software." Compute! 16, no. 1 (1994): S-8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents an overview of the best in adventure game software, currently the most popular form of computer entertainment. Sierra's King Quest series, created by Roberta Williams; The Legend of Kyrandia from Virgin Games; Indiana Jones and the Fate of Atlantis from LucasArts; Lost Treasures of Infocom from Activision; More; Prices; Contact points; The top ten adventure games. Includes one Holmes game. "...For more old-fashioned detective fare, crack open The Lost Files of Sherlock Holmes (Electronic Arts, 800-245-4525, $69.95), a large-scale murder mystery that's anything but elementary. This one's notable for its intuitive icon interface, context-sensitive musical score, and handsomely drawn artwork...."
3312. McGowan, Chris. "Multimedia. Interactive companies use CES to show their soft side." Billboard 106, no. 2 (1994): 48.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the multimedia software introduced at the 1993 Winter Consumer Electronic Show (CES). Includes Holmes software. "Viacom New Media: The three 'Sherlock Holmes, Consulting Detective' titles (released originally by Icom Simulations, which Viacom has purchased) are available in many desktop and set-top platforms and are among the most heavily bundled of all CD-ROM programs. "Dracula Unleashed" (MS-DOS, $59.95), a combination detective game and horror adventure, includes 96 minutes of live-action footage. Mac and Sega versions are due soon."
3313. McNamara, John. "Sherlock Holmes and the case of the Silver Earring." The Times (London), September 18, 2004: 23.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Brief review of the computer game by Digital Jesters/PC (Pounds 29.99). "It's a mystery. Spin-off games from recent movies are not uncommon, but one from a 60-year-old film? As ever with Sherlock Holmes, things are not quite as they seem. This point-and-click adventure does actually come with a DVD copy of the Basil Rathbone adventure The Secret Weapon, but that is just a bonus with this excellent game...."
3314. Misek, Maria. "Sherlock Holmes, Consulting Detective: A Study in DVD." EMedia 13, no. 3 (2000): 26.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a case study about digital video disc (DVD) based on the development of the video game Sherlock Holmes, Consulting Detective. Conversion of the game from CD-ROM to DVD; Entertainment value; Overview of the technology.
3315. Pae, Peter. "What Do You Do When It Won't Compute?; PC Stores, Hot Lines Swamped With Gifts That Won't Start Giving; [FINAL Edition]." December 30, 1994: a01.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to a Holmes computer game. "Every day since Christmas, Marti Snyder and her 23-year-old son, Tom, had tried to get a new CD-ROM game to work on their computer. A gift from Tom to his mother, the "Sherlock Holmes" mystery game was, well, mysteriously silent...."
3316. Shannon, L. R. "Karaoke to fonts, CD-ROM sampler has it | For about $30, Sirius Publishing offers second '5-ft. 10-Pak'." The San Diego Union - Tribune, December 4, 1994.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Mentions Icom's Sherlock Holmes Consulting Detective, with three cases to solve.
3317. Spiwak, Marc. "Step up to CD-ROM." Popular Electronics 11, no. 2 (1994): 31.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on CD-ROM technology. Includes reference to a Holmes game. "Far older kids and adults as well, there's Sherlock Holmes, Consulting Detective Volume II. This game lets you solve three different cases as you walk through the interactive streets of London. If solving mysteries is your bag of tricks, then this is $69.95 well spent."
3318. Szadkowski, Joseph. "Holmes game a bit elementary." The Washington Times, July 20, 2008: M18.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of computer game "Lost Cases of Sherlock Holmes" (Legacy Interactive, single CD-ROM for PC or Intel-based Macintosh computer systems, $19.99). "The title requires junior proteges of the legendary literary character work through 16 cases by deciphering a variety of visual puzzles. This fun, casual gaming experience set in Victorian England offers environmental conundrums and the use of reasoning, observation and memorization to quickly isolate evidence and suspects and solve a crime."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Unfortunately, the presentation is definitely elementary, dear Watson. (I couldn't resist.) This is not a third-person action-adventure game, folks...."

3319. Trivette, Donald B. "Entertainment." PC Magazine 13, no. 15 (1994): 160.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews Viacom New Media's Sherlock Holmes Consulting Detective CD-ROM.
3320. Wapshott, Tim. "Sherlock Holmes : Nemesis." The Times (London), August 23, 2008: 14.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Very short review of the computer game "Sherlock Holmes: Nemesis." "The intrepid supersleuth Sherlock Holmes and Doctor Watson take on a notorious cat burglar, who lays down the gauntlet to the duo in a letter promising that he will carry out five thefts in five days. The adventure is played out in the first person, with Watson doing much of the donkey work around the 3-D world. The graphics are detailed and the voice acting competent. All the same, this makes for fairly laborious gaming...."
3321. Wong, Edwin. "Hone your investigation skills!" New Straits Times (Malaysia), February 28, 2009: 6.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Using the computer game "Sherlock Holmes Consulting Detective to hone skills. "Well before the millions of viewers began tuning into the CSI (Crime Scene Investigation) series every week to get their 'investigative fix', fans of logic and deduction were already captivated by the crime-solving mysteries of the great Sherlock Holmes. While our day jobs may seem far removed from the adrenaline rush of crime-busting, you don't really need to wear a cape to get your share of it. The fact is, logic, deduction and investigative skills are very much at the core of more day jobs than one may realise! Unfortunately, there doesn't seem to be 'Logic, deduction and investigation 101' syllabus either in schools or universities, so unless your employer offers it, I guess you are expected to pick up the finer points from television or novels! Well, here's a better way. Playing designer games that not only teaches you the basics and helps you to hone your skills, but also transports you to the world of Sherlock Holmes, Jack the Ripper and more!..."
3322. Yee, Bernard. "Reviews." Compute! 16, no. 6 (1994): 108.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the computer software Dracula Unleashed, by Viacom New Media. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...A marked improvement over ICOM's initial multimedia releases (the Sherlock Holmes games), Dracula Unleashed gives you a chance to rewrite the Bram Stoker tale using well-implemented technology that would have seemed quite magical even to Dracula himself."

09 GAMES, PUZZLES AND QUIZZES -- GAMES (2)

3323. "A gaggle of games." USA Today Magazine 126, no. 2630 (1997): 79.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Spotlights board games being released for the 1997 Christmas season. Green Eggs and Ham and The Cat in the Hat from University Games; 221B Baker Street: The Master Detective Game and Medical Monopoly from John N. Hansen Co.; Bethump'd With Words from Mamopalire Inc.
3324. Pattinson, Georgina. "Miss Scarlet in the Living Room with a Board Game. . .; Cluedo Celebrates 50 Years and is Played in 23 Countries. Georgina Pattinson Looks Back at the History of the Boardgame." Birmingham Post, August 14, 1999: 53.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "We British do murder very well. Look at Sherlock Holmes and Agatha Christie and the famous unsolved cases like Jack the Ripper. The victim is called Monsieur Cluedo in Switzerland, he is Dr Lemon in Spain and in the US Spanish edition, he is Senor Caddaver. When solicitor's clerk Anthony Pratt dreamed up a little board game called Murder to while away the dark nights of World War Two, he could hardly have realised what an impact it would have...."

09 GAMES, PUZZLES AND QUIZZES -- PUZZLES (6)

3325. "Puzzle It Out." Scholastic Scope 57, no. 6 (2008): 32-32.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A crossword puzzle related to the vocabulary of terms published within the issue is

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

presented. A few of the clues relate to Holmes and Watson.

3326. Addy, John. "Review--The Sherlock Holmes I.Q. Book by Eamonn Butler and Madsen Pirie." The Ritual, no. 15 (1995): 53-54.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3327. Brodie, Brian S. "'Bookshelf' Review of The Parlour Games of Sherlock Holmes." Canadian Holmes 21, no. 1 (1997): 45.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3328. Burr, Robert C. "Review--Commanding Views From the Empty House edited by William R. Cochran and Gordon R. Speck." The Holmes & Watson Report 1, no. 1 (1997): 15.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A delightful anthology of essays, puzzles, cartoons, and even a play, by the members of one of the most active and dedicated Sherlockian societies, The Occupants of the Empty House.
3329. Skopik, Elizabeth, and Linda Dietz. "A Sherlockian Birthday Word Puzzle." Canadian Holmes 21, no. 4 (1998): 34-35.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3330. ———. "A Sherlockian Birthday Word Puzzle." Canadian Holmes 21, no. 2 (1997): 36-38.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

09 GAMES, PUZZLES AND QUIZZES -- QUIZZES (54)

3331. "Book Bag #845." The Washington Post, July 16, 1995: X10.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The game is afoot! Name the following: 1) One of his Oxford lectures virtually established Sherlock Holmes's "career" as a topic for "scholarly" investigation. 2) This witty novelist scandalously suggested that Dr. Watson might actually be a woman. 3) His introduction to a standard collected edition of Sherlock Holmes may be the best known appreciation of the canonical stories ever written. 4) Though noted for his interest in Sherlock Holmes, he was also the author of treatise on binomial theorem and of the once highly regarded "Dynamics of an Asteroid." 5) A friend of Aldous Huxley, he composed novels and tales about a Sherlockian figure known as Mr. Mycroft. 6) Among his books are "Chaldean Roots in the Ancient Cornish Language" and "Polyphonic Motets of Lassus." 7) To Sherlock Holmes, she is always the woman. All entries (one per person) must be clearly written on postcards and mailed to: Book Bag, The Washington Post...
3332. "No-Sweat Test Prep." Scholastic Scope 57, no. 6 (2008): 20-20.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A quiz is presented after reading the play "The Hound of the Baskervilles," based on the novel by Arthur Conan Doyle, adapted by Zach Jones.
3333. "Quiz--'Police Court'." The Holmes & Watson Report 3, no. 6 (2000): 28-29, 39.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3334. "Quiz--'Police Court'." The Holmes & Watson Report 3, no. 3 (1999): 38-39, 60.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3335. "Quiz--'The Police Court Transposals.'" The Holmes & Watson Report 5, no. 1 (2001): 9-10, 15.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3336. "Quiz--'The Police-Court Transposals'." The Holmes & Watson Report 5, no. 2 (2001): 28-29, 37.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

3337. Brown, Lloyd W., Jr. "Quiz--A Canonical Quiz on 'The Adventure of the Golden Pince-nez.'" The Holmes & Watson Report 3, no. 2 (1999): 34-35, 40.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3338. ———. "Quiz--A Canonical Quiz on 'The Adventure of the Norwood Builder.'" The Holmes & Watson Report 3, no. 5 (1999): 35-36, 40.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3339. Campbell, Patrick. "Death in the Coop? A quiz on 'The Adventure of Black Peter'." Canadian Holmes 30, no. 3 (2007): 49.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3340. Gibson, Brian Neil. "Pandora's Tin Box: a Quiz on the Untold Tales of the Canon." Canadian Holmes 18, no. 4 (1995): 27, 39.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3341. ———. "Pundora's Tin Box Reopened: a Quiz on the Canon." Canadian Holmes 22, no. 4 (1999): 39-40, 51.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3342. Gibson, Brian Neil, and Dave Sanders. "Disguises in the Canon: a quiz." Canadian Holmes 23, no. 4 (2000): 9, 42.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3343. ———. "A Hotel Quiz." Canadian Holmes 19, no. 4 (1996): 26.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3344. Hobbs, Don. "Review--The Sherlock Holmes Triviography and Quiz Book by Kathleen Kaska." The Holmes & Watson Report 4, no. 5 (2000): 23.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3345. Hultgren, Joella. "Three Pipe Problem." Baker Street West 19, no. 2 (2003): 16-18, 38.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3346. Jordan, Anne. "Gardens Through the Keyhole: A Canonical Quiz." The Ritual, no. 14 (1994): 30-31, 44.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3347. Martindale, David. "The game's afoot so don those deerstalkers." The Globe and Mail (Toronto), April 16, 1994: E6.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A film quiz of fifteen questions. "Attention, Sherlock Holmes fans: Put on your thinking caps (deerstalkers, naturally) and break out the tobacco for the following Sherlock-on-the-screen quiz."
3348. Richards, Dana. "Quiz--'Body Parts Quiz'." The Holmes & Watson Report 2, no. 4 (1998): 18-19, 25.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3349. ———. "Quiz--'The Police Court'." The Holmes & Watson Report 6, no. 3 (2002): 18-19, 44.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3350. ———. "Quiz--'The Police Court'." The Holmes & Watson Report 4, no. 6 (2001): 14-15, 54.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3351. ———. "Quiz--'The Police Court'." The Holmes & Watson Report 5, no. 5 (2001): 15-16, 52.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

3352. ———. "Quiz--'The Police Court'." The Holmes & Watson Report 4, no. 5 (2000): 29-30, 35.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3353. ———. "Quiz--'The Police Court'." The Holmes & Watson Report 2, no. 6 (1999): 18-19, 32.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3354. ———. "Quiz--'The Police Court'." The Holmes & Watson Report 3, no. 1 (1999): 35-36.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3355. ———. "Quiz--'The Police Court'." The Holmes & Watson Report 2, no. 5 (1998): 11, 27.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3356. ———. "Quiz--'The Police Court: A Lemon Tree Mightier Wads In'." The Holmes & Watson Report 7, no. 1 (2003): 9-10, 40.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3357. ———. "Quiz--'The Police Court: More Edges'." The Holmes & Watson Report 8, no. 2 (2004): 18-19, 36.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3358. ———. "Quiz--'The Police Court: more Mondregreens'." The Holmes & Watson Report 7, no. 4 (2003): 19, 51.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3359. ———. "Quiz--'The Police-Court'." The Holmes & Watson Report 5, no. 6 (2002): 20, 36.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3360. ———. "Quiz--'The Police-Court'." The Holmes & Watson Report 5, no. 4 (2001): 12-13, 36.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3361. ———. "Quiz--'The Police-Court'." The Holmes & Watson Report 4, no. 1 (2000): 30-32.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3362. ———. "Quiz--'The Police-Court'." The Holmes & Watson Report 4, no. 3 (2000): 14-15, 40.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3363. ———. "Quiz--'The Police-Court'." The Holmes & Watson Report 4, no. 4 (2000): 26-27, 40.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3364. ———. "Quiz--'The Police-Court'." The Holmes & Watson Report 3, no. 5 (1999): 9-10, 39.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3365. ———. "Quiz--'The Police-Court Cryptic Crosswords'." The Holmes & Watson Report 8, no. 5 (2004): 9-11, 28.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3366. ———. "Quiz--'The Police-Court Doublets'." The Holmes & Watson Report 6, no. 1 (2002): 14-15, 52.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3367. ———. "Quiz--'The Police-Court Doublets--Redux'." The Holmes & Watson Report 6, no. 1 (2002): 10-11, 23.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3368. ———. "Quiz--'The Police-Court Edges'." The Holmes & Watson Report 8, no. 1 (2004): 21-22, 36.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3369. ———. "Quiz--'The Police-Court Form Puzzles'." The Holmes & Watson Report 3, no. 2 (1999): 11-13, 40.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

3370. ———. "Quiz--'The Police-Court Form Puzzles Redux'." The Holmes & Watson Report 4, no. 2: 16-17, 40.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3371. ———. "Quiz--'The Police-Court Guggenheim'." The Holmes & Watson Report 6, no. 6 (2003): 11-12, 40.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3372. ———. "Quiz--'The Police-Court Limergrams'." The Holmes & Watson Report 7, no. 3 (2003): 13-14, 27.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3373. ———. "Quiz--'The Police-Court Minute Mysteries'." The Holmes & Watson Report 8, no. 4 (2004): 15-16.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3374. ———. "Quiz--'The Police-Court Similes'." The Holmes & Watson Report 8, no. 3 (2004): 3-5, 32.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3375. ———. "Quiz--'The Police-Court Singlets'." The Holmes & Watson Report 8, no. 6 (2005): 15-16, 28.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3376. ———. "Quiz--'The Police-Court STERNL Redux'." The Holmes & Watson Report 6, no. 5 (2002): 35-36, 52.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3377. ———. "Quiz--'The Police-Court: Canonical Mnemonics'." The Holmes & Watson Report 7, no. 5 (2003): 10-11.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3378. ———. "Quiz--'The Police-Court: More Form Puzzles'." The Holmes & Watson Report 6, no. 4 (2002): 5-7, 44.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3379. ———. "Quiz--'The Police-Court: Son of STERNL'." The Holmes & Watson Report 7, no. 2 (2003): 17-18, 40.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3380. ———. "Quiz--'The Police-Court: Who Wants to be One of the Richest Men in Kent?'" The Holmes & Watson Report 5, no. 3 (2001): 26-28, 36.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3381. Riippa, Laurele, Lyn Andriani, Dena Croog, Cindi DiMarzo, Karole Riippa, and Bella Stander. "Trade Paperbacks." Publishers Weekly 247, no. 33 (2000): 272.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a list of trade paperback books. Includes Carroll & Graf title The Exploits of Baron de Marbot (Oct., $12.95) by Baron de Marbot "is the classic that inspired Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's stories of Brigadier Gerard and the Napoleonic wars." Taylor title The Sherlock Holmes Trivography and Quiz Book (Oct., $10.95) by Kathleen Kaska "provides hundreds of trivia questions about the detective and other characters created by Conan Doyle."
3382. Shaw, John Bennett. "A Quiz on the Adventure of Charles Augustus Milverton." Canadian Holmes 18, no. 3 (1995): 46-47.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3383. ———. "A Quiz on the Adventure of Charles Augustus Milverton." Canadian Holmes 18, no. 2 (1994): 31.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3384. Tonkin, Boyd. "Books: Summer Crime: Not quite so Elementary, Dear Readers; Win a Stash of Sherlock Holmes Books in our Penguin Summer Quiz." The Independent (London), July 28, 2001: 10.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "In August 1901, Arthur Conan Doyle brought his creation Sherlock Holmes back

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

from the dead when The Hound of the Baskervilles started its serialisation in the Strand magazine. To mark the centenary of this famous resurrection, Penguin has published a range of Conan Doyle's works as Penguin Classics for the first time. And 10 Independent readers can win the whole set, along with Daniel Stashower's much-praised new biography of Conan Doyle, in our Summer Crime quiz...."

10A ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- CRITICISM (47)

3385. "Pulp Fiction in Bangladesh: Super Spies and Transplant Authors." World Literature Today 82, no. 3 (2008): 39-42.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...The 1960s generation and the ones that followed were not the first to flock to thrillers in the Bangla language. Going back to the late 1800s, Bengal has a tradition of crime fiction. The mystery genre known here as rohosscho also includes horror stories, pretty much anything that can't be explained by simple logic and reason. A century ago, inspired by the arrival of Conan Doyle's books in Calcutta, a local writer created a fictional character known as Sorolakkho Hom...."

3386. Chadwick, Peter. "Review--'Sherlock Holmes: The Last Act' by David Stuart Davies." The Ritual, no. 24 (1999): 56-58.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

3387. Chevallier, Jim. "The Spoken Word: Writers. Historic Recordings of Writers Born in the 19th Century (review)." Libraries & Culture 40, no. 1 (2005): 98-100.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of The Spoken Word: Writers. Historic Recordings of Writers Born in the 19th Century. Compiled by Steve Cleary, Richard Fairman, and Toby Oakes. London: British Library, 2003. CD-ROM. GBP9.95. ISBN 0-7123-0516-5. Includes a reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...To a modern American ear most of the voices in this collection share a cultured but bland upper-class English inflection. There are some vivid exceptions: Conan Doyle's slight Scottish burr, James Joyce's dense music, Agatha Christie's down-to-earth exposition, and Noel Coward's theatrical yet distinctive diction. Overall, though, this is not one of those spoken word collections that offer rich auditory pleasures. Still, the content is well chosen and nicely varied. Roughly half the writers read from (or, in Coward's case, perform) their own work. The others offer ideas about writing or other subjects that are, in general, succinct and enlightening. Bernard Shaw begins with an account of the touring companies that were his early bread and butter. Arthur Conan Doyle follows, first with the relatively well-known story of how a medical professor inspired Sherlock Holmes, then with reflections on how Holmes changed not only the mystery genre but also forensics...."

3388. Coleman, Peter. "Review--'The Unopened Casebook of Sherlock Holmes' BBC Radio Five." The Ritual, no. 11 (1993): 31-33.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

3389. Cook, William. "Holmes, sweet Holmes." New Statesman 131, no. 4602 (2002): 31.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the success experienced by film adaptations of books on Sherlock Holmes. Main attraction of the silent films on Sherlock Holmes played by Eille Norwood; Actors who played the role of Sherlock Holmes; Overview of film adaptations of books.

3390. Coules, Bert. "Review--Sherlock Holmes Screen and Sound Guide by Gordon E. Kelly." The Ritual, no. 15 (1995): 52-53.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

3391. Cunneen, Joseph. "An absorbing girls' story, two plots less convincing." National Catholic Reporter 34, no. 5 (1997): 18.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews three motion pictures including 'Fairy Tale: A True Story'. Includes reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...Even better, 'Fairy Tale' follows the case on which it was based by having Gardner pass them on to Arthur Conan Doyle (Peter O'Toole) who, known to all as the creator of the super-logical Sherlock Holmes, had lost his son in the war and become an ardent spiritualist. Doyle in turn was a close friend of the skeptical Houdini, who is shown exposing a seance as an elaborate hoax...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

3392. Davies, David Stuart. "Review--A Sound Achievement: a consideration of Radio Four's Sherlock Holmes series." The Ritual, no. 15 (1995): 40-44.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3393. ———. "Review--Penguin Audio Tapes: 'Four Great Adventures of Sherlock Holmes' read by Douglas Wilmer, 'The Hound of the Baskervilles' read by Freddie Jones." The Musgrave Papers, no. 8 (1995): 107.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3394. ———. "Review--'Peter Cushing: The Gentle Man of Horror and His 91 Films' by Deborah Del Vecchio and Tom Johnson." The Ritual, no. 12 (1993): 39.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3395. ———. "Review--'Sherlock Holmes, The Speckled Band and The Illustrious Client' BBC Video." The Musgrave Papers, no. 9 (1996): 132-133.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3396. ———. "Review--'The Return of Sherlock Holmes,' a play by J. E. Harold Terry and Arthur Rose." The Ritual, no. 13 (1994): 48-49.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3397. ———. "Review--The Return of Sherlock Holmes, BBC Radio Four." The Ritual, no. 11 (1993): 28-31.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3398. ———. "Review--'The Sherlock Holmes Video,' Countryside TV Productions." The Ritual, no. 15 (1995): 57.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3399. ———. "'The Television Sherlock Holmes' by Peter Haining." The Ritual, no. 13 (1994): 52.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3400. Davies, David Stuart, and Kathryn White. "'Port and Lemon' by John Cargill Thompson." The Ritual, no. 14 (1994): 53.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3401. Earnshaw, Tony. "Review--'The Man Who Became Sherlock Holmes' by Terry Manners." The Ritual, no. 19 (1997): 67.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3402. Godden, Lynne. "Review--Four Sherlock Holmes Stories read by Douglas Wilmer." The Ritual, no. 15 (1995): 45-46.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3403. Goodrich, William D. "Book review--'Sherlock Holmes: Screen and Sound Guide' by Gordon E. Kelly." Baker Street Miscellanea, no. 76 (1994): 50.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3404. Haasse, Holger. "Review--'Der Hund von Baskerville (1937)'." The Ritual, no. 21 (1998): 60-64.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3405. Hall, John. "Review--'Bending the Willow: Jeremy Brett as Sherlock Holmes' by David Stuart Davies." The Ritual, no. 18 (1996): 65-70.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

3406. ———. "Review--'His Last Bow' BBC Radio Four." The Ritual, no. 13 (1994): 40-43.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3407. Hargreaves, David. "Review--'The Mask of Moriarty' by Hugh Leonard." The Ritual, no. 21 (1998): 58-59.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3408. Howlett, Anthony. "Review--The Hound of the Baskervilles (1932)." The Musgrave Papers, no. 6 (1993): 104-107.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3409. Hunter-Purvis, Mark. "Review--'Sherlock Holmes and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle in Edinburgh' by Charles Hall and Peter Blythe." The Ritual, no. 15 (1995): 55.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Offers interesting discussions of Sherlockian and Doylean plays performed in Edinburgh (mostly during the Edinburgh Festival Fringe), Conan Doyle's speeches and lectures in Edinburgh, and memorials to him in Edinburgh, with amusing artwork by Hall."
3410. Jancovich, Mark. "The Meaning of Mystery: Genre, Marketing and the Universal Sherlock Holmes Series of the 1940s." Film International 5, no. 17 (2005): 34-45.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3411. Johnson, Roger. "Review--'The Valley of Fear' dramatized by Bert Coules." The Ritual, no. 19 (1997): 61-63.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3412. Jordan, Anne. "Review--'Sherlock Holmes and the Crucifer of Blood' by Paul Giovanni." The Ritual, no. 11 (1993): 43-45.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3413. ———. "Review--'The Seven Per-Cent Solution' adapted by Denny Martin Flinn from Nicholas Meyer's Novel." The Ritual, no. 11 (1993): 34-36.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3414. Kael, Pauline. "The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes." New Yorker 81, no. 35 (2005): 30-30.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the motion picture "The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes," directed by Billy Wilder, starring Robert Stephens.
3415. Keefauver, Brad. "Review--'Angels of Darkness, A Drama in Three Acts' by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle." The Holmes & Watson Report 6, no. 1 (2002): 32-33.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3416. Macnab, Geoffrey. "The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes (Film)." Sight & Sound 14, no. 8 (2004): 77-77.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the DVD videodisc release of the motion picture "The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes," directed by Billy Wilder and starring Robert Stephens.
3417. Masters, Rosalind. "Review--'The Hound of the Baskervilles' Harper Collins Audio Book read by Tony Britton." The Ritual, no. 11 (1993): 36.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3418. Michael, Patrick. "Review--'Ronald Howard as Sherlock Holmes in 'The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes'; Two Original Drawing Room Plays--'The Case of the Violent Suitor' and 'The Case of the Impromptu Performance'." The Ritual, no. 28 (2001): 59-60.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3419. ———. "Review--'Sherlock Holmes and the Deadly Necklace'." The Ritual, no. 27 (2001): 53-55.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

3420. ———. "Review--'Starring Sherlock Holmes' by David Stuart Davies." The Ritual, no. 28 (2001): 57-58.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3421. ———. "Review--'The Hound of the Baskervilles' Second Sight Video." The Ritual, no. 24 (1999): 59-61.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3422. Randi, James. "Fairies, frauds, & fuss." Skeptic 5, no. 3 (1997): 10.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the motion picture 'Fairy Tale: A True Story,' from Paramount Studios.
Includes multiple references to Doyle and a photograph of Doyle and Houdini.
3423. Rebello, Stephen. "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Silk Stocking." Advocate, no. 949 (2005): 64.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the television program 'Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Silk Stocking' directed by Simon Cellan Jones and starring Rupert Everett.
3424. Richards, Jeffrey. "Review--'221 BBC: Writing for the World's First Complete Dramatised Canon' Musgrave Monograph Nine, by Bert Coules." The Ritual, no. 23 (1999): 50-52.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3425. Spencer, Charles. "Hysterical, my dear Watson." The Daily Telegraph (London), April 18, 2007: 30.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Charles Spencer reviews The Hound of the Baskervilles at The Duchess Theatre.
3426. Sprague, Bill. "Sherlock Holmes : Deducing a Character." The New York Times, February 1, 2009: 4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "To the Editor: Re "Is That You, Sherlock?" by Sarah Lyall [Jan. 25]: I would have thought it impossible to write an extensive piece about a dramatization of Sherlock Holmes without mentioning Jeremy Brett. He appeared on the television series, but he certainly set the standard by which the portrayal of the character must be judged. The notion of Holmes as a 19th-century James Bond is disconcerting....Holmes is a respectable Victorian with values appropriate to his situation. He is certainly a respecter of British institutions but hardly a stodgy person; in fact he's rather eccentric, as Watson's accounts make clear. He appreciates classical music and is a good violinist. He's also skilled in the arts of self-defense and is proficient with firearms. If Sherlock Holmes morphs into Jack Bauer, we Baker Street Irregulars camp followers will be disappointed."
3427. White, Kathryn. "Review--'His Last Bow and other Stories' read by Martin Jarvis." The Ritual, no. 14 (1994): 61.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3428. ———. "Review--'Sherlock Holmes, The Musical'." The Ritual, no. 11 (1993): 46-48.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3429. ———. "Review--'The Last Vampyre' screenplay by Jeremy Paul and 'The Eligible Bachelor' screenplay by Trevor Brown." The Ritual, no. 11 (1993): 37-42.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3430. ———. "Review--The Making of Sherlock Holmes, The Royal Television Society, Granada TV, Manchester." The Ritual, no. 13 (1994): 37-39.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3431. ———. "Review--The Memoirs of Sherlock Holmes, Granada Television, 7 March-11 April 1994." The Musgrave Papers, no. 7 (1994): 104-115.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

10B ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- ACTORS AND ACTRESSES (18)

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

3432. "Passings Edwin H. Blum, Eric Porter, Miklos Roza." Baker Street West 1 1, no. 3 (1995): 35.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3433. "Passings Paul Landres." Baker Street West 1 8, no. 1 (2002): 58.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3434. Andrews-Leslie, Coral. "Unsung Heroes: The Supporting Players." Performing Arts & Entertainment in Canada 34, no. 1 (2002): 16.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Features several supporting actors and their views on being a good character actor in the theater field. Includes Jim Mezon's "starring roles in such works as The Petrified Forest and Sherlock Holmes."
3435. Chapman, Paul M. "His Last Bow, Michael Williams." The Ritual, no. 27 (2001): 47-48.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3436. Clapperton, Guy. "Unusual Holmes." The Times (London), December 18, 2004: 10.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Rupert Everett? As Sherlock Holmes? On Boxing Day? Guy Clapperton unearths some even stranger incarnations including Tom Baker, Charlton Heston, Roger Moore, Leonard Nimoy, Michael Caine, and Larry Hagman.
3437. Collins, Tony. "It's elementary, my dear Big Joe!" Birmingham Evening Mail, October 25, 2008: 3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...Big Joe' Egan, who was also a former sparring partner of ex-world champion Mike Tyson, has landed a part in film director Guy Ritchie's latest movie, Sherlock Holmes, which is due for release in 12 months' time...."
3438. Cooper, Barbara Roisman. "Patricia Morison: Still Dressed to Kill." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 55, no. 3 (2005): 42-47.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3439. Coughlan, Gilles. "Elementary, my dear Gayle." The Globe and Mail (Toronto), January 3, 2002: A16.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Letter to the editor. "It is unfortunate that, in an otherwise excellent article on Sherlock Holmes, Gayle MacDonald chose to bring out the tired cliché that 'no one, it is generally agreed, can touch Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce' in portraying Holmes and Watson (The Case Of The Perennial Sleuth -- Jan. 2). While that might have been true 20 years ago, since the mid- to late-1980s, the Sherlockian/Holmesian community has been divided by a friendly debate as to which actor has best portrayed the great detective. For many fans, Jeremy Brett, who appears in the Granada TV series, deserves the title. As far as Nigel Bruce is concerned, most Sherlockians I know agree that the actor's performance had little to do with what the real Dr. Watson was like. As far as I am concerned, his performance in the 1939 Adventures of Sherlock Holmes was atrocious."
3440. Davies, David Stuart. "Conan Doyle and the Actors." The Ritual, no. 16 (1995): 46-50.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3441. Finsbury, M. "My Favorite Sherlock: Nicol Williamson." The Ritual, no. 25 (2000): 24-25.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3442. Fulton, Rick. "Eddie the Viking; Exclusive Marsan's a Cowardly Warrior in Faintheart and Stars in Holmes Flick." Daily Record (Glasgow), January 23, 2009: 30.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "His face is familiar but you probably can't put a name to character actor Eddie Marsan. Yet his CV reads like a Who's Who of Hollywood. He was the bad guy in Will Smith blockbuster Hancock and plays Inspector Lestrade in the new Sherlock Holmes movie, directed by Guy Ritchie. But Eddie, who revealed that Madonna's ex left the turmoil of his divorce at the studio door during filming, may soon get the recognition he deserves for his role as a Viking enthusiast in a ground-breaking internet film, Faintheart...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

3443. Johns, Ian. "Pipe dreams, smoke screens." The Times (London), September 2, 2002: 18.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "As Sherlock Holmes returns to the stage, Ian Johns dons his deerstalker to investigate the pursuit of the whole sleuth. It's quite elementary, if you think about it. Sherlock Holmes was a woman who disguised herself as a man. That high voice and hairless chin, that secrecy about the past and the mysterious childhood. That love of dissembling. How else could a Victorian woman solve crimes in such a chauvinistic age? Curiously, Holmes's trusty chronicler Dr Watson (and Arthur Conan Doyle) failed to note this fact. But Therese Lentz did with her 1994 play 221B Baker Street. When it comes to the world's greatest detective, the theatre has often lifted the curtain on some lesser known aspect of his life. But finding the right tone has always been a three-pipe problem. 'It's the biggest hurdle,' admits the actor-turned-playwright Simon Williams, whose new version of The Hound of the Baskervilles opens this week at the Belgrade in Coventry. 'If it's too reverential and literal then you simply end up with a flat transcription. The best adaptations take a few liberties.'..."
3444. Klinger, Leslie S. "Was Maurice Costello the First Screen Sherlock Holmes?" Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 48, no. 2 (1998): 27-30.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3445. Michael, Patrick. "The Painful Predicament of Charles Chaplin." The Ritual, no. 27 (2001): 31-33.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3446. ———. "Review--'Starring Sherlock Holmes' by David Stuart Davies." The Ritual, no. 28 (2001): 57-58.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3447. Robey, Tim. "Top Five Portrayals of Sherlock Holmes." Sunday Telegraph (London), September 08, 2002: 06.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Brett, Rathbone, Cushing, Richardson, and Caine (with comments).
3448. Ryan, Desmond. "Desmond Ryan: Sherlockian cinema: Follow the evidence." The Philadelphia Inquirer, May 18, 2002: E01.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Brief reviews of MPI video release of Volume 5 of the Brett/Hardwicke series. "For purists, one of the most admirable aspects of this accomplished series, which initially ran in the mid-'80s, is its scrupulous fidelity to Conan Doyle's Holmes stories." Also comments on Rathbone/Bruce and others. "The succession of Sherlocks to follow - notably Peter Cushing, Christopher Lee and John Neville - clung to Rathbone's interpretation. Holmes was cold, brilliant and omniscient. Beginning with Nicholas Meyer's splendid The Seven-Per-Cent Solution...in 1976, a more nuanced Holmes emerged. Nicol Williamson's detective is beset by drug-induced paranoia and nightmares, and he is ably complemented by Robert Duvall as Watson. Williamson and Duvall set a new standard that was almost matched by Christopher Plummer and James Mason as Holmes and Watson in Murder by Decree...three years later. The story of a possible royal involvement in the Jack the Ripper murders is a little muddled, but the leads have enjoyable chemistry. It was left to Brett, who died of a heart attack at age 59 seven years ago, to give us the ideal modern Holmes - cerebral, compassionate and flawed. If you want a different take on Holmes, avoid Gene Wilder's leaden and dumb The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes' Smarter Brother...released in 1975, and try Disney's amusing riff in The Great Mouse Detective.... The 1986 animated feature posits a parallel world where Sherlock is a mouse with amazing deductive powers. Barry Levinson's 1985 contribution to the genre, Young Sherlock Holmes...does well with the ingenious idea that Holmes and Watson met as schoolboys and cracked their first big case in their teens."
3449. Thorpe, Vanessa. "The answer, my dear Watson, is elementary. One of these new Sherlock Holmes is an impostor." The Observer, June 20, 2004: 13.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Few fictional characters divide audiences so passionately. Some are fans of Basil Rathbone's Sherlock Holmes, others are devotees of the Peter Cushing version, while many argue that no actor quite caught the manner of the greatest consulting detective of them all until Jeremy Brett took up his deerstalker. Now two more actors are to take on the challenge of playing the heroic detective in a TV battle between rival interpretations, one ITV, the other BBC, which is likely to equal the struggle between Holmes and Moriarty atop the Reichenbach Falls. In the ITV corner is Stephen Fry, a passionate scholar of the work of

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

the character's creator, Arthur Conan Doyle....Over in the BBC corner is a relative newcomer, Rupert Everett, 45, the glamorous Hollywood star who made his name on the British stage in the early Eighties....Members of the Sherlock Holmes Society of London are poised to make their judgment and, at first sight, neither actor appears to pass muster...."

10B ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- ACTORS AND ACTRESSES -- BARRYMORE, JOHN (1)

3450. Jackson, Donald Dale. "John Barrymore: A profile in just about everything." Smithsonian 28, no. 1 (1997): 88.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Profiles stage and film actor John Barrymore. His background; Plays and motion pictures in which he appeared; His alcoholism and the problems that it caused; Barrymore's personality; Relationships; What part of Barrymore's life is depicted in the 1997 drama 'Barrymore,' by William Luce and starring Christopher Plummer. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...He made several short films when the fledgling movie industry was still centered in New York. By 1925 he had also starred in film versions of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde (playing the lead without special makeup), Sherlock Holmes and Beau Brummel...."

10B ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- ACTORS AND ACTRESSES -- BRETT, JEREMY (29)

3451. "Actor Jeremy Brett Dies at 59; Sherlock Holmes on 'Mystery'." The Washington Post, September 16, 1995: B04.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Jeremy Brett, 59, the actor who since 1984 had brought the legendary detective Sherlock Holmes to life in 41 episodes of public television's "Mystery" series, died of a heart ailment Sept. 12 at his home...."
3452. "Around Town." The Statesman (India), December 8, 2006: 1.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Where's Watson Dear Watson, I am back. This December History Channel will show the adventures of Sherlock Holmes and his trusted aide Dr John Watson through the new series The Adventure of Sherlock Holmes. Indian viewers now have a chance to see Jeremy Brett's brilliant interpretation of Sherlock Holmes in the classic series that airs on 12 December at 9 p.m. An adaptation of the original stories, The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes brings alive mysteries such as A Solitary Cyclist, The Speckled Band, The Naval Treaty and many others...."
3453. "Jeremy Brett." U.S.News & World Report 119, no. 12 (1995): 30.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Comments on the death of Jeremy Brett, an actor who played Sherlock Holmes and other characters. His death of heart failure at the age of 59.
3454. "Jeremy Brett and The Final Four." The Washington Post, December 31, 1995: Y03.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "'Mystery!' begins the last of four Sherlock Holmes stories starring Jeremy Brett, who for many viewers was the definitive detective for a decade. Edward Hardwicke is Dr. Watson, his friend and confidante...."
3455. "McCormick's Quick Takes on Memorable Detectives." U.S.Catholic 70, no. 1 (2005): 44-45.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the performance of several detective characters in motion pictures. Performance of Jeremy Brett in the film "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" and other Sherlock Holmes movies; Physical description of the character Poirot portrayed by David Suchet in the film "Poirot"; Portrayal of detective Jane Tennison by Helen Mirren in the film "Prime Suspect."
3456. "Obituaries." Opera News 67, no. 10 (2003): 79.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Pays tribute to several opera artists who died in 2002 and 2003. Entry under Mary Ellis notes "She retired from the stage in 1970, but continued to act on television until 1994, when she appeared with Jeremy Brett in The Memoirs of Sherlock Holmes."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

3457. "Obituaries Jeremy Brett 1935-1995 and Sir Robert Stephens 1931-1995." Baker Street West 12, no. 1 (1996): 42.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3458. "Obituary for Jeremy Brett." Canadian Holmes 19, no. 1 (1995): 47.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3459. "The original Granada TV Series on videotape starring: Jeremy Brett [Advertisement]." Canadian Holmes 17, no. 3 (1994): 27.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Advertisement from Creative Enterprise for the Granada series.
3460. "Sherlockian London." British Heritage 21, no. 1 (1999): 19.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the Sherlock Holmes Memorabilia Co. shop in London, England. Showcase of the set from the Sherlock Holmes television series starring Jeremy Brett; Exhibition prices.
3461. "Sir Hugo's Wild and Profane Sinema--Milking Sacred Cows: Revisiting Brett Bash '95." The Holmes & Watson Report 4, no. 2 (2000): 22-27.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3462. "TV Holmes, Jeremy Brett dies." The Toronto Star, September 14, 1995: D4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Jeremy Brett, the actor who brought the legendary detective Sherlock Holmes to life on TV died of heart failure Tuesday at his London home. He was 59...."
3463. Alleva, Richard. "'A' is for appalling." Commonweal 122, no. 20 (1995): 20.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents information on the movies 'The Scarlet Letter' and 'To Die For'. Includes a passing reference to Holmes (in the person of Brett). "Edward Harwick (Dr. Watson to the late Jeremy Brett's Sherlock Holmes on PBS) makes the Puritan governor a recognizable human being, but the rest of the supporting cast is spurious, with even the great Joan Plowright reduced to dimpling and twinkling."
3464. Barrett, Wayne M. "The Truth About the Sleuth." USA Today Magazine 133, no. 2716 (2005): 68-69.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the DVD release of the television series Mystery, "about detective Sherlock Holmes and his sidekick John Watson, starring Jeremy Brett and Edward Hardwicke."
3465. Beam, Thelma, and Clarissa Aykroyd. "'Bookshelf' Reviews of The Hound's Collection Volume 5 and A Study in Celluloid: A Producer's Account of Jeremy Brett as Sherlock Holmes." Canadian Holmes 24, no. 2 (2000): 31-33.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3466. Calamai, Peter. "Holmes's attraction? Elementary." The Ottawa Citizen, September 16, 1995: B6.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "In 1891, when Sherlock Holmes plunged over Reichenbach Falls in Switzerland to his seeming death, the news didn't reach the London newspapers for four days. When Jeremy Brett, his most memorable portrayer, died this week in London, the news didn't make papers here for three days. Appearances, however, are deceiving. Brett's death may have seen print in the New York Times and the Citizen only on Thursday, but it flashed around the world via the Internet at 3:28 p.m Tuesday. And the recipients of that first message, a group called the Hounds of the Internet, reacted just as Londoners had a century earlier. They put on black armbands of mourning...."
3467. Decker, Jeff. "Tales from Dartmoor: 'A Night at the Opera'." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 3 (1994): 161.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Cartoon featuring two characters arguing between Verdi and Wagner...and Brett or Rathbone.
3468. Dusterhoff, Ann M. "'My Dear Holmes'." The Washington Post, October 01, 1995: G08.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Letter to the editor on the death of Jeremy Brett

3469. Earnshaw, Tony. "Review--'The Man Who Became Sherlock Holmes' by Terry Manners." The Ritual, no. 19 (1997): 67.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

3470. Gussow, Mel. "Jeremy Brett, an Unnerving Holmes, Is Dead at 59." The New York Times, September 14, 1995: B15.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Jeremy Brett, who incarnated Sherlock Holmes in the long-running 'Mystery!' series on Public Television, died on Tuesday in London. He was 59. The cause was heart failure, according to Granada Television, which produced the series. More than any other actor since Basil Rathbone, Mr. Brett was regarded as the quintessential Holmes: breathtakingly analytical, given to outrageous disguises and the blackest moods and relentless in his enthusiasm for solving the most intricate crimes...."

3471. Hall, John. "Review--'Bending the Willow: Jeremy Brett as Sherlock Holmes' by David Stuart Davies." The Ritual, no. 18 (1996): 65-70.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

3472. Hardwicke, Edward et al. "Memories of Jeremy." The Ritual, no. 16 (1995): 4-16.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

3473. McCormick, Patrick. "Science fiction." U.S.Catholic 70, no. 1 (2005): 44-46.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Criticizes the acceptance of a fundamentalist approach to the evidence used in criminal investigation as popularized in the TV program "CSI: Crime Scene Investigation." Theme of the program; Overview of detective characters in literature; Statistics on crime and criminal investigations; Result of a politicized intelligence report. Includes references to Doyle and Holmes. "...The popularity of the geek detective is nothing new. Arthur Conan Doyle gave us Sherlock Holmes, whose 221 B Baker apartment was regularly filled with the smoke and smells of some experiment and whose desk always had a stack of obscure but relevant scientific monographs. Like Grissom, Holmes loved putting his crime scene evidence under the magnifying glass, checking out footprints, soil samples, and the wear pattern on a pair of boots. Agatha Christie's master detective, Hercule Poirot, did not share Holmes' penchant for lab work, but he, too, had limitless faith in 'the little grey cells' of his very clever brain and was supremely confident in the ability of human intelligence to solve life's most daunting mysteries..." Sidebar on memorable detectives notes "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes (Granada Television, 1984-1994). William Gillette played Holmes on the stage for more than three decades and Basil Rathbone portrayed him in 16 films, but most contemporary fans agree that Jeremy Brett's performance in this British TV series has set the gold standard. In the Adventures, Return, Casebook, and Memoirs of Sherlock Holmes, as well as several TV films made from Conan Doyle's longer stories, Brett gives a meticulous and studied performance of the cerebral but impassioned detective's quest for the truth of the matter."

3474. Morley, Sheridan. "The curse of being Conan." The Sunday Times (London), April 27, 1997: 5.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Brief review of The Man Who Became Sherlock Holmes by Terry Manners, Virgin Pounds 16.99 pp244. "If Terry Manners had written this coolly expert and chillingly excellent biography as a gothic novel about an actor tortured by manic depression and bisexual guilt, gradually overtaken by the performance of his career as Sherlock Holmes to the point where he is found, kneeling, outside Conan Doyle's London home begging for release from the spirit of the great detective, you would dismiss it as over the top. The tragedy is that it happened. Peter Jeremy William Huggins was born in November 1933; he died, after long mental and physical illness, as Jeremy Brett, in September 1995...."

3475. Morris, Sally. "Books: the Man Who Became Sherlock Holmes." Sunday Mirror, March 30, 1997: 26.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Brief review of The Man Who Became Sherlock Holmes (Terry Manners, Virgin pounds 16.99). "Jeremy Brett was a talented classical actor from a wealthy background who should have enjoyed a successful career and happy personal life. Instead, he suffered from depression, a love life confused by his bisexuality, and poor health made worse by his dependence on drink and drugs...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

3476. Nye, Doug. "Jeremy Brett is Sherlock Holmes - 8 New Tapes." The Philadelphia Inquirer, April 6, 1995: E01.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "I was intimidated by Rathbone at first,' Brett said during a chat in Los Angeles. 'It was depressing, because Rathbone looked exactly like the old drawings of Holmes.' Rathbone played Holmes in 14 movies during the 1940s as well as on radio for several years. Nevertheless, when Brett was offered the role in a series produced by Granada for the BBC, he was determined to bring his own interpretation to the character. 'I reread everything I could about the character,' Brett said. The results are nearly 10 years of marvelous adaptations of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's fictional detective. Not only has the series been a hit in England, but it also has won loyal fans in America with airings as part of PBS's Mystery! series and as Sherlock Holmes on cable's Arts & Entertainment network. Not surprisingly, the Holmes/Brett series has become popular on the home-video market. MPI has released many episodes of the series on video and recently made eight more available...."
3477. Roden, Christopher. "Little things." The Sunday Times (London), May 11, 1997: 2.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Letter to the editor. "I have to take issue with Sheridan Morley that Terry Manners's biography of Jeremy Brett is 'coolly expert and chillingly excellent' (April 27). In his acknowledgments, Manners notes: 'But to those who, for reasons best known to themselves, did not contribute to remembering Jeremy, I say thank you. You made me even more determined to tell his true story.' Manners admits that he was unable to obtain the views of a number of people who could have spoken authoritatively on the subject. Without those views, his book cannot be considered expert. He also records that The Sherlock Holmes Society of London has 50,000 members; it has 1,000. Morley's review is his own assessment of Brett's life, but here, too, there is a significant error. He writes, 'with the deaths of his early lover Gary Bond (of Aids) and (Robert) Stephens, he (Brett) saw little point in survival'. Stephens died on November 12, 1995, two months after Brett. Some might consider these trivial points, but, as Holmes said, 'It has long been an axiom of mine that the little things are infinitely the most important'." Christopher Roden. The Sir Arthur Conan Doyle Society. Canada
3478. ———. "Review--The Jeremy Brett Memorial Luncheon." The Ritual, no. 17 (1996): 66-71.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3479. Rose, Lloyd. "Brett, Perfectly at Home on Baker Street." The Washington Post, September 24, 1995: G10.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "To many fans of Sherlock Holmes, he was always the actor. Jeremy Brett, who died this month in London at the age of 59, first incarnated the great detective in 1984 in 'A Scandal in Bohemia,' the first of 41 BBC productions of the Arthur Conan Doyle stories in which he starred...."

10B ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- ACTORS AND ACTRESSES -- BROOKE, HILLARY (1)

3480. Bergan, Ronald. "Hillary Brooke; Sherlock's favourite film star." The Guardian (London), June 10, 1999: 22.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Although the tall, beautiful, blonde actress Hillary Brooke, who has died aged 84, did appear in a number of A-movies, and was seen a few times in Technicolor, she will always be associated with the small, monochrome second features that were the staple of picture- going in the 1940s and early 1950s. As such she retained the affection of the many collectors of cinema arcana. Brooke's fame, such as it was, came mainly from her appearances in a couple of the pacy and atmospheric Sherlock Holmes films, starring the witty duo of Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce, and as comic foil to a less sophisticated pair, Bud Abbott and Lou Costello, in their popular TV series...."

10B ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- ACTORS AND ACTRESSES -- BRUCE, NIGEL (14)

3481. "The master detective on screen." The Times (London), September 2, 2002: 19.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Sherlock Holmes has been played by nearly 100 actors in more than 200 films. Ellie Norwood, a hit as Holmes in 47 films in the early 1920s, tackled the role with a De Niro-like intensity. He read all the stories, learnt to play the violin (presumably badly) and wore a dressing gown given to him by Arthur Conan Doyle. But he grew weary of the part. Basil Rathbone, partnered by Nigel Bruce's amiable old buffer of a Watson, made the role his own in the 1940s....Most post-Rathbone Holmeses have been a rather dreary lot. Perhaps the role's need for both restraint and flamboyance cancel each other out....Their old foe Moriarty features in the forthcoming The League of Extraordinary Gentlemen, in which he does battle with Dr Jekyll and Captain Nemo. Holmes's big-screen future currently looks as if he'll have to play second fiddle. As we know already, that's not a sweet- sounding prospect."

3482. Bauers, Sandy. "Readers will get vocal over these stocking stuffers; [Morning Edition]." Orange County Register, Dec 11, 1994: F32.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This version of Dickens' classic is read by Patrick Stewart. Although my annual favorite still is the Caedmon recording by Sir John Gielgud, this is the one that gets more hype, and Simon & Schuster has just released it in a fancy new CD version.; With the publication of this recording, Simon & Schuster has completed its series of vintage Holmes radio broadcasts starring Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce. The series is available singly or in packaged sets.; The novelized version of the Battle of Gettysburg is read by George Hearn with an afterword by [Michael Shaara]'s son Jeffrey. This is not only a great recording, it also has an elegant box and a four-page folder with a map.

3483. Bergan, Ronald. "Hillary Brooke; Sherlock's favourite film star." The Guardian (London), June 10, 1999: 22.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Although the tall, beautiful, blonde actress Hillary Brooke, who has died aged 84, did appear in a number of A-movies, and was seen a few times in Technicolor, she will always be associated with the small, monochrome second features that were the staple of picture- going in the 1940s and early 1950s. As such she retained the affection of the many collectors of cinema arcana. Brooke's fame, such as it was, came mainly from her appearances in a couple of the pacy and atmospheric Sherlock Holmes films, starring the witty duo of Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce, and as comic foil to a less sophisticated pair, Bud Abbott and Lou Costello, in their popular TV series...."

3484. Blowen, Michael. "Video Watch." The Boston Globe, May 7, 2000: C9.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...Fans of Sherlock Holmes can rejoice with the release on Tuesday of "An Evening With Sherlock Holmes." Actually, it should be titled several evenings because this boxed set contains four movies - "Sherlock Holmes and the Secret Weapon" (1942), "Woman In Green" (1945), "Terror by Night" (1946), and "Dressed To Kill" (1946). And that's not all. It also includes an interview with Holmes creator Sir Arthur Conan Doyle filmed in 1927 and 30 original radio broadcasts starring the film's leads, Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce...."

3485. Burke, Ken. "Charting relationships in American popular film, part 1." International Journal of Instructional Media 24, no. 4 (1997): 341-361.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // As an extension of some of the author's previous writings on American popular cinema, this study presents and explains several diagrams showing the evolution of significant film genres in context of each other and relevant historical trends. Figure 3 includes Sherlock Holmes by way of The Hound of the Baskervilles (1939) and the series of films with Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce.

3486. Corliss, Richard. "7 Sharpest Detectives on DVD." Time 166, no. 4 (2005): 72-72.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents information about several older classic sleuth films now or soon to be available on DVD. Includes Sherlock Holmes, the Collection. "Hawk-visaged Basil Rathbone embodied Conan Doyle's detective in 14 B movies, some transporting him from Victorian to modern London to outwit the Nazis. As Dr. Watson, Nigel Bruce was an ideal foil for the great man."

3487. Kendall, Nigel. "Sherlock Holmes - The Definitive Collection." The Times (London), January 29, 2005: 11.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Sherlock Holmes - The Definitive Collection. Directors: Various. Stars: Basil Rathbone, Nigel Bruce....Ah, Holmes, sweet Holmes! This 7-DVD set comprises all 14 of the adventures starring the inimitable pairing of Rathbone's meerschaum- toting sleuth and Bruce's bumbling sidekick. The

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

films have been restored and reassembled from the best available prints, a process that took ten years but is worth every minute...."

3488. Love, Damien. "Home Movie." The Sunday Herald, June 25, 2000: 45.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Although their hasty flickering worlds have little to do with Arthur Conan Doyle, there will only ever be one quicksilver-sardonic Sherlock Holmes, and, bumbling sweetly beside him, only one Watson. Basil Rathbone, like a sneering rapier, and Nigel Bruce first breathed life into the duo for 20th Century Fox's Hound of the Baskervilles (1939) and the same year's follow-up, The Adventures of ... Both films were moody main features, faithful to Conan Doyle in plot and period. Between 1942-1946 Universal employed the pair to reprise the roles in 12 fine B-movies, transposing Holmes and Watson to (then) modern times. Showing this week are five of these: Sherlock Holmes and the Secret Weapon (1942), The Pearl of Death (1944), Pursuit to Algiers (1945), House of Fear (1945) and The Woman in Green (1945), all directed by Roy William Neil...."

3489. Maughan, Shannon. "Spoken Audio for Fall." Publishers Weekly 250, no. 31 (2003): 26.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a list of audiobooks. Includes Holmes and Doyle entries. The Lost World by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. Read by Michael Prichard. Unabridged, seven CDs, 8.5 hours, $39; one MP3 CD, $20, July. Classic Tales of Horror and Suspense by Edgar Allan Poe, H.G. Wells, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and Robert Louis Stevenson. Dramatization. Four cassettes or four CDs, 4.5 hours, $24.95, Aug. The Sign of Four by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. Read by David Timson. Unabridged, four CDs, five hours, $26.98, Nov. The New Adventures of Sherlock Holmes: Volume 1--6 by Anthony Boucher and Dennis Greene. Read by Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce. Abridged, six CDs, six hours, $29.95, Oct.

3490. Nichols, Peter M. "Conan Doyle, On Holmes." The New York Times, May 19, 2000: E1:28.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "It was really terribly important after the war when all the young men needed contacting,' Sir Arthur Conan Doyle says rather breezily on camera during a 10-minute address he delivers on a DVD recently released by Focusfilm, a distributor in Ossining, N.Y. It was 1926, and by his remarks and manner the writer clearly wants to be done with his celebrated creation, the detective Sherlock Holmes, and move on to matters that he considers more serious: psychic experiences and communication with the beyond. The young men he refers to were killed during World War I. Holmes, he seems to imply, would be better off laid to rest himself if only the public would permit it....On the same disc, part of a set of four, is 'Terror by Night,' a Holmes adventure filmed by Universal during the 40's with Basil Rathbone as the detective and Nigel Bruce as Watson....The detective brings off other nice surprises in three other cases on the discs: 'Sherlock Holmes and the Secret Weapon' (1942), 'The Woman in Green' (1945) and 'Dressed to Kill' (1946), which was Rathbone's last Holmes film. By then he had played the role more than 200 times, not only on screen but on the radio in 'The New Adventures of Sherlock Holmes.'...The movies come from the National Film Museum, a large archive in Bangor, Me., that provides old film to producers and distributors...."

3491. Rogers, Michael. "Classic Returns." Library Journal 130, no. 19 (2005): 107.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // An annotated bibliography of re-released classic fiction and nonfiction titles is provided. Includes an entry for Doyle and Holmes. Doyle, Sir Arthur Conan. The Sherlock Holmes Mysteries. 547p. ISBN 1-59609-176-2. Signet. 2005. pap. $14.95 with DVD. "These clever packages combine a classic text with a DVD of a film version. The Holmes volume's 22 stories accompany Terror by Night and The Woman in Green, starring Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce...."

3492. Rosenblum, Trudi Miller. "Avalanche of audiobooks set for holidays." Billboard 106, no. 45 (1994): 89.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on the increased publication of audiobooks in preparation for the 1994 Christmas season. Includes a reference to Holmes. "...Durkin Hayes has two holiday promotions: an Audio Gift Collections line and a Paperback Audio 'Stocking Stuffer' display. The Audio Gift Collections include 'Great Women Authors' (featuring Louisa May Alcott and Jane Austen), a Frederick Forsyth boxed set, a Sherlock Holmes collection, a 'Rumpole Of The Bailey' collection, a set of James Herriott's dog stories, and others, for $24.99 each....Simon & Schuster has a never-before-released 1945 radio broadcast of two Sherlock Holmes dramatizations ('The Night Before Christmas' and 'The Darlington Substitution'), starring Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce ($12.00)...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

3493. Schaefer, Eric, and Dan Streible. "Archival News." Cinema Journal 42, no. 2 (2003): 125.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents an update on film archives as of January 2003. Motion picture collection acquired by the Library of Congress; Film memorabilia acquired by the Herrick Library; Film preservation grant awarded by the Andrew W. Mellon Foundation to the National Film Preservation Foundation. Includes a reference to Holmes, Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce. "The UCLA Film and Television Archive presented its eleventh Festival of Preservation in the summer of 2002. The biennial festival programmed its most diverse line-up ever. More than forty feature films, TV programs, trailers, shorts, and newsreels from 1905 to 1987 were showcased, almost all preserved or restored by the archive....Low-budget efforts were also shown, including two Universal Sherlock Holmes films starring Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce, Sherlock Holmes and the Voice of Terror (1942) and Dressed to Kill (1946)..."
3494. ———. "Archival News." Cinema Journal 40, no. 4 (2001): 104.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents updates on the motion picture industry as of June 2001. Acquisition of nitrate film elements from Warner Bros. by the UCLA Film and Television Archive; Decision of Shaw Brothers Ltd. of Hong Kong to sell its archive of original films to media magnate T. Ananda Krishnan of Malaysia; Development of several projects related to cinema by the Museum of Jurassic Technology in Culver City, California. Includes a reference to Holmes, Basil Rathbone, and Nigel Bruce. "...Warner Bros. has initiated the completion of a preservation project through the UCLA Film and Television Archive that was begun by Hugh Hefner. Funding from Hefner helped preserve six films in Universal's Sherlock Holmes series that starred Basil Rathbone as Holmes and Nigel Bruce as Dr. Watson: Sherlock Holmes and the Secret Weapon (1942), Sherlock Holmes and the Spider Woman (1944), The Scarlet Claw (1944), The Pearl of Death (1944), The Woman in Green (1945), and Terror by Night (1946). Warner Bros., which recently acquired the rights to the series, has already funded the preservation of Sherlock Holmes Faces Death (1943) and The House of Fear (1945) and has committed to funding the preservation of the remaining Universal Holmes films: Sherlock Holmes and the Voice of Terror (1942), Sherlock Holmes in Washington (1943), Dressed to Kill (1946), and Pursuit to Algiers (1945)."

10B ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- ACTORS AND ACTRESSES -- CAINE, MICHAEL (2)

3495. Johnson, B. D. "Spoofing Sherlock." Maclean's 101, no. 45 (1988): 53.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Film review of 'Without A Clue', directed by Thom Eberhardt and starring Michael Caine and Ben Kingsley. The film is a spoof of the Sherlock Holmes and Dr. John Watson characters created by British writer Sir Arthur Conan Doyle.
3496. Martindale, David. "Biograph." Biography 7, no. 4 (2003): 18.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A biographical sketch of the actor Michael Caine. Includes a reference to Holmes. "...In '88, portrays a bungling Sherlock Holmes in Without a Clue, then becomes a brilliant detective in Jack the Ripper, a hit on British TV...."

10B ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- ACTORS AND ACTRESSES -- CHAPLIN, CHARLIE (1)

3497. Silver, Daniel J. "Mime and man." Commentary 103, no. 5 (1997): 66.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the books 'Charlie Chaplin and His Times,' by Kenneth S. Lynn and 'Tramp,' by Joyce Milton. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...A legend which Chaplin loved to retell is that he first appeared on stage as a replacement for his mother and quickly won over the crowd. This is probably apocryphal, but by his early teens Chaplin had indeed taken to the boards as a Cockney street urchin in a popular adaptation of Sherlock Holmes; he got good notices, and was hooked...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

10B ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- ACTORS AND ACTRESSES -- CLOSE, GLENN
(1)

3498. Martindale, David. "Biograph." Biography 5, no. 6 (2001): 22.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a brief biography of film actress Glenn Close. Includes a reference to Holmes. "...1975-82 Glenn spends the next few years cementing her reputation onstage as a dynamic yet nuanced actress, taking on everything from Sherlock Holmes to King Lear. The Crucifer of Blood (1978), a Holmes mystery in which Glenn plays villainess Irene St. Claire, is a Broadway crowd pleaser that delivers more than 200 performances...."

10B ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- ACTORS AND ACTRESSES -- COHEN, SACHA
BARON (1)

3499. Sexton, David. "Borat goes to Baker Street." The Evening Standard (London), July 4, 2008: 12.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Sacha Baron Cohen is some kind of genius. But it still seems improbable that he is going to play Sherlock Holmes in a new comedy film. How's that going to work?..."

10B ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- ACTORS AND ACTRESSES -- CUSHING, PETER (8)

3500. "Obituary for Peter Cushing." Canadian Holmes 18, no. 1 (1994): 51.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

3501. "Peter Cushing at 80." The Musgrave Papers, no. 6 (1993): 92.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

3502. "Sir Hugo's Wild and Profane Sinema--A Walking, Talking Paget Illustration: Peter Cushing's Quarter Century with the Master." The Holmes & Watson Report 6, no. 1 (2002): 43-47.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

3503. Davies, David Stuart. "His Last Bow: Peter Cushing OBE." The Musgrave Papers, no. 7 (1994): 124-126.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

3504. ———. "Review--'Peter Cushing: The Gentle Man of Horror and His 91 Films' by Deborah Del Vecchio and Tom Johnson." The Ritual, no. 12 (1993): 39.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

3505. Earnshaw, Tony. "Peter Cushing and Sherlock Holmes: 25 golden years." The Ritual, no. 14 (1994): 9-24.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

3506. Thorpe, Vanessa. "The answer, my dear Watson, is elementary. One of these new Sherlock Holmes is an impostor." The Observer, June 20, 2004: 13.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Few fictional characters divide audiences so passionately. Some are fans of Basil Rathbone's Sherlock Holmes, others are devotees of the Peter Cushing version, while many argue that no actor quite caught the manner of the greatest consulting detective of them all until Jeremy Brett took up his deerstalker. Now two more actors are to take on the challenge of playing the heroic detective in a TV battle between rival interpretations, one ITV, the other BBC, which is likely to equal the struggle between Holmes and Moriarty atop the Reichenbach Falls. In the ITV corner is Stephen Fry, a passionate scholar of the work of the character's creator, Arthur Conan Doyle....Over in the BBC corner is a relative newcomer, Rupert Everett, 45, the glamorous Hollywood star who made his name on the British stage in the early Eighties....Members of

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

the Sherlock Holmes Society of London are poised to make their judgment and, at first sight, neither actor appears to pass muster...."

3507. Walters, Ben. "The Sherlock Holmes Collection (TV Program)." Sight & Sound 14, no. 9 (2004): 97-97.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the television program "The Sherlock Holmes Collection," starring Peter Cushing and Douglas Wilmer released on DVD format.

10B ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- ACTORS AND ACTRESSES -- DOWNEY, ROBERT JR. (11)

3508. "10 People Who Mattered 2008." Time 172, no. 26 (2008): 100-114.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article discusses U.S. celebrities from 2008. Includes Robert Downey Jr. and mention of Holmes. "...Next year Downey will attempt to breathe new life into Sherlock Holmes. After what he's been through, it should be elementary."
3509. "Downey to play Sherlock Holmes." The Toronto Star, July 11, 2008: E02.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Robert Downey Jr. is trading Iron Man's metal suit for Sherlock Holmes's deerstalker hat. Downey is following his action blockbuster Iron Man with the title role in Sherlock Holmes, a mystery drama based on Arthur Conan Doyle's detective and an upcoming comic-book about Holmes by Lionel Wigram, one of the movie's producers. Madonna's hubby Guy Ritchie (Lock, Stock and Two Smoking Barrels) is directing the Warner Bros. film, which is set to begin shooting in October, the studio said. That should put it ahead of the schedule for a Sherlock Holmes comedy in development at Sony, which will star Sacha Baron Cohen as the detective and Will Ferrell as his partner, Dr. Watson."
3510. "Most Improved...Robert Downey, Jr." Maclean's 121, no. 45 (2008): 90-90.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reports on an incident that befell Robert Downey Jr., an actor, on the set of the motion picture "Sherlock Holmes," directed by Guy Ritchie. According to the piece, a tobacco pipe being used as a prop in the film fell into Downey's lap, igniting a fire on his crotch which was extinguished by co-star Jude Law.
3511. "Pop Chart." Time 172, no. 4 (2008): 19-19.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A chart of events in popular culture is presented, including "recovering addict Robert Downey Jr. to play remorseless addict Sherlock Holmes."
3512. Bamigboye, Baz. "Elocutionary, Dr Watson; It's Friday!" Daily Mail (London), October 3, 2008: 56.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Guy Ritchie has assembled a thoroughly British cast for his Sherlock Holmes movie. But what, you might well ask, about Robert Downey Jr, the all-American star who plays Holmes? 'His accent is perfect!' Kelly Reilly insisted. Kelly plays Mary, the girlfriend of Dr Watson (Jude Law) in Sherlock Holmes, as the film is simply titled...."
3513. Bartolomeo, Joey. "For Better Or for Worse." People 70, no. 4 (2008): 60-61.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article discusses the singer Madonna and husband Guy Ritchie. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "In a few weeks Madonna, Ritchie and their three kids will head back to London so the singer can put the final touches on her tour (which kicks off in Wales on Aug. 23). Come fall they will be leading separate lives again: In October Madonna returns to the U.S. to tour for two months, while Ritchie begins filming Sherlock Holmes with Robert Downey Jr. in London...."
3514. Kidd, Chip. "Robert Downey Jr." The New York Times, February 8, 2009: 45.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Profile of the actor along with photographs from filming "Sherlock Holmes."
3515. Lyall, Sarah. "Is That You, Sherlock?" The New York Times, January 25, 2009: AR1.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "In a filthy, dank labyrinth of rooms below the streets of the East End, Sherlock Holmes was solving a case. That is, Robert Downey Jr., playing Holmes in the forthcoming film 'Sherlock

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Holmes,' was engaged in hand-to-hand, foot-to-stomach combat with a very big and very bad villain (Robert Maillet). Bam! Pow! Ouch! Both characters would end up knocked out on the floor, along with Holmes's trusty sidekick, Dr. John Watson, played by Jude Law. Filmed in December, the scene presented a sharp corrective to the popular cinematic view of Holmes, at least the one propagated by the old films featuring the wonderfully named British actor Basil Rathbone...."

3516. Lynch, Jason. "Robert Downey Jr. Brings the Thunder." People 70, no. 21 (2008): 38-38.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A review of the DVD release of the motion picture "Tropic Thunder" starring Robert Downey Junior (Jr.) is presented, with a passing reference to Holmes. "It turns out Robert Downey Jr. wasn't joking in Tropic Thunder-playing an Aussie Method actor who goes too far playing the part of a black GI in a Vietnam flick (right)-when he said, 'I don't drop character till I done a DVD commentary.' He does just that on the new Tropic DVD, channeling his character in the cast commentary. Whether ribbing his costars or talking about Downey's upcoming Sherlock Holmes film ('Elementary, my dear Watson . . . don't even trip on that'), it's as hilarious as his Oscar-worthy turn in the movie. Don't miss it."

3517. Steinberg, Jacques. "Robert Downey Jr. To Play Sherlock Holmes." New York Times, July 11, 2008: 3.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "In the first role he has signed up for since 'Iron Man,' Robert Downey Jr., left, will forsake his high-tech suit for a woolen cloak and cap. Mr. Downey has agreed to play the lead role in the film 'Sherlock Holmes,' which will be directed by Guy Ritchie for Warner Brothers, Variety reported. The film is scheduled to begin shooting in October, with a screenplay by Anthony Peckham based on the detective stories of Arthur Conan Doyle and on a comic book, also called 'Sherlock Holmes.' Most of the movie will be filmed in London. In the role, which Variety said would plumb Holmes's brawn as well as his brains, Mr. Downey will have some competition. Columbia Pictures is also preparing a movie based on Holmes, this one a comedy with Sacha Baron Cohen as the title character and Will Ferrell as his sidekick, Dr. Watson. [Abstract from publisher]

3518. Wloszczyna, Susan. "Sherlock Holmes? Ritchie's on the case." USA Today, Aug 22, 2008: 8B.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Information on an upcoming Holmes movie. "Guy Ritchie's latest gangster yarn, RocknRolla, won't even be in theaters for another six weeks, but he already has turned his attentions to his next project, a version of Arthur Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes for contemporary tastes. 'It will be a very big production, visceral and intellectual,' Ritchie says. 'His brilliance will percolate into the action.' The expected 2010 Warner release will be set in the olden days, he says, but the emphasis will be as much on Holmes' physical prowess as it is on his keen powers of deduction. 'His intellect was as much of a curse as it was a blessing,' Ritchie says. 'He was a deeply layered character.' No word on the villain yet, but there will be a love interest based on Conan Doyle's Irene Adler. Casting is expected to be finished in six or so weeks. Ritchie already has been lucky to snag Robert Downey Jr., hot off of this summer's Iron Man and Tropic Thunder, as his lead. 'His wife, Susan, was a producer on RocknRolla, and he was one of the first people who saw it and was a big fan,' the filmmaker explains. 'He wanted to do something together, and this was a natural.' As for Downey's English accent, 'it's flawless.' Ritchie has no worries about producer Judd Apatow's competing Sherlock Holmes with Sacha Baron Cohen. As he says: 'They don't even have a script yet. We are way ahead.'

10B ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- ACTORS AND ACTRESSES -- EVERETT, RUPERT (23)

3519. "Everett steps into Sherlock's 'Stocking'." USA Today, October 21, 2005: E1.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of production.

3520. "Hotstuff." Newsday, Oct 23, 2005: C.04.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Silk Stocking. The body of a woman in rags lies on the muddy shore of the Thames, and Holmes is prompted out of retirement by Dr. Watson, who suspects a more complex kind of foul play than the simple murder of a prostitute. Screenplay by Allan Cubitt, who adapted 'The Hound of the Baskervilles' for 'Masterpiece Theatre' in 2003. Rupert Everett stars as Holmes...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

3521. "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Silk Stocking." People 64, no. 18 (2005): 42.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the television program "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Silk Stocking," starring Rupert Everett.
3522. Adams, Guy. "Pandora." The Independent (London), August 24, 2004: 10.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...Fans of Arthur Conan Doyle will be keeping a beady eye on The Return of Sherlock Holmes, which is being made by the BBC. Its leading man, Rupert Everett...looks sure to upset traditionalists...."
3523. Andreoli, Richard. "Broadcast steps up." Advocate, no. (2005): 4p.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article presents an overview of several television programs and films about gays and lesbians. Includes reference to Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Silk Stocking (PBS). "Rupert Everett stars as Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's famous Victorian detective in this new original story."
3524. Clark, Pete. "Seasonal choices." Daily Mail (London), December 23, 2004: 2.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Brief note on "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Silk Stocking." "Television viewers feel snugly at home in the fog-filled streets of Sherlock Holmes' London. The fog, widely reviled at the time, is a crucial part of the chilling atmosphere. Even if nothing is happening, it seems that it might at any moment, and if anything does happen, it will be bad. We meet Holmes, icily played by Rupert Everett, in the middle of an extended drugs bender."
3525. Cubitt, Allan. "Holmes is where the heart is." Daily Mail (London), December 11, 2004: 6.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Although I read and hugely enjoyed The Hound Of The Baskervilles, and many other Sherlock Holmes stories as a child, Holmes is actually a very adult character. Sir Arthur Conan Doyle created the great detective as a manic-depressive with a brooding darkness within him. And that complexity is one of the reasons Holmes has become a classic role on stage and screen. The late Jeremy Brett was Sherlock Holmes on TV for a decade, and described the role as tougher than Hamlet or Macbeth. Brett became so obsessed with playing Holmes that he was once discovered outside Doyle's former London house, begging to be released from the spirit of the master detective. In the 1940s, Basil Rathbone made the role his own in radio broadcasts and Hollywood films. For Christmas 2002, I adapted The Hound Of The Baskervilles for BBC television with Richard Roxburgh playing Holmes. This Christmas, my offering is Sherlock Holmes And The Case Of The Silk Stocking, with Rupert Everett in the lead role. He is a fascinating choice...."
3526. Currier, Jameson. "News." Lambda Book Report 13, no. 1/2 (2004): 50-50.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents an update on issues in the entertainment and media sectors relevant to the gay community as of August 2004. Includes reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...Two of Britain's most famous gay actors will soon be dueling Sherlocks. Stephen Fry will star as Arthur Conan Doyle's quintessential British detective, Sherlock Holmes, in a movie that will air on ITV at Christmastime. Fry's longtime comedy partner, Hugh Laurie, will co-star as Dr. Watson....Rupert Everett will also star as Sherlock Holmes in another TV-movie version which will be shown earlier in the year on BBC, a follow-up to their successful Hounds of the Baskerville feature. This production will have an original screenplay and will not be based on an Arthur Conan Doyle story; Ian Hart will co-star as his Dr. Watson...."
3527. Jackson, James. "Multichannel Choice." The Times (London), Dec 24, 2005: 66.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "An evening dedicated to the sleuth begins with The Man Who Loved Sherlock Holmes, a curious, far-from-elementary investigation into the demise of Richard Lancelyn Green, a leading Holmes expert. Having been embroiled in wrangles over the Conan Doyle archive, his death under strange circumstances in March 2004 revived talk of a 'Sir Arthur Conan Doyle curse', and in exploring his fate the programme reveals the obsessive world of Holmes aficionados. Also tonight, last Christmas's BBC One special, with Rupert Everett making a youthful Holmes."
3528. James, Martin. "Sherlock Holmes And The Case Of The Silk Stocking." Sunday Times (London), December 26, 2004: 86.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...Rupert Everett makes an excellent Holmes, with Ian Hart a sterling Doctor Watson and Neil Dudgeon an amusing Inspector Lestrade in this melodramatic story of the hunt for a serial killer. Though not based on a Conan Doyle story, Allan Cubitt's wholly original screenplay does remain true to the spirit of the canon...."

3529. Jones, Alison. "Culture: Watching the Detective; Rupert Everett Tells Alison Jones He was Born to Play Sherlock Holmes." Birmingham Post, December 23, 2004: 10.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "'Actors always have certain characters they think they should play. Most people think it is Hamlet; I think it is Sherlock Holmes,' admits Rupert Everett, who gets his wish on Boxing Day when he plays the legendary 'tec in The Case of the Silk Stocking. He certainly looks the part. Long, lean and elegant with a kind of sardonic detachment which perfectly suits a man who is an observer rather than a participant of life...."

3530. Keal, Graham. "Culture: Moving Tribute to Pete and Dud; Sherlock Holmes may be Stuck in a Pea Souper, but Don't Risk Missing." Birmingham Post, December 22, 2004: 11.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...Another outing for Sherlock Holmes sounds rather conventional in comparison, but BBC1's Boxing Day offering, Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Silk Stocking...is actually rather wonderful. Rupert Everett is Holmes in this entirely new story by Allan Cubitt - it's not based on any of Conan Doyle's books. Everet gives his brooding, narcotics-abusing Holmes a marvellously arrogant touch, and he's brave enough not to go out of his way to make Holmes likeable...."

3531. Kington, Miles. "All Roads Lead to Baker Street for Writers." The Independent (London), December 31, 2004: 27.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "On Boxing Day on BBC-TV they showed a Sherlock Holmes adventure called The Case of the Silk Stocking, starring Rupert Everett as the great detective. If you are puzzled not to recognise the name of this Holmes story, puzzle no longer. It was written by Alan Cubitt, and although my wife and I thought Everett very good in the role, and enjoyed some of the goings on, the story was shaping up quite preposterously by the time some visitors rang our door bell, and we missed the final five minutes and never found out what happened. What I was not shocked by was the fact that anyone should attempt to concoct a new story based on 221b Baker Street, even if it did involve inventing a completely new fiancée for Dr Watson. Because although it may seem to be sacrilege to imagine you can do the job as well as Conan Doyle, it must also be one of the most universal instincts among writers....Even Bert Coules has done it. He has adapted all the Holmes stories and the four novels for Radio 4, starring Clive Merrison as Holmes. That's 50 stories or more. And when Mr Coules had no more Holmes yarns to adapt, how did he use the skill and knowledge he had gained from vicariously living in Baker Street for so long? Why, he overcame his respect for Conan Doyle and concocted a clutch of brand- new Holmes stories of his own. I heard some of them on Radio 4, and they weren't bad, even if they were slightly far-fetched and over- wrought...."

3532. Lisotta, Christopher. "PBS Sets Scorsese's 'Dylan'; Web Site to Get Downloadable 'Nerd'." Television Week 24, no. 29 (2005): 4-4.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents an update on television broadcasting in the U.S. as of July 18, 2005. Schedule of the availability of the television program "NerdTV" via the Internet on PBS.org; Broadcasting of the Martin Scorsese documentary "No Direction Home: Bob Dylan" for the "American Masters" series on PBS stations; Role of Rupert Everett and Helen Mirren in the film "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Silk Stockings" aired on "Masterpiece Theatre."

3533. McKie, Robin. "OTV: Boxing Day: Pick of the day: Capital Holmes: Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Silk Stocking, BBC1." The Observer, December 19, 2004: 99.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The omens for this year's Sherlock Holmes festive special are scarcely encouraging. The prospect of using an 'original' Holmes mystery by TV playwright Allan Cubitt, rather than picking a Conan Doyle original, is a worry for any aficionado. Nor does Rupert Everett...seem a great choice to play the great detective: a bit too foppish and slight, surely. Holmes should be all brooding menace and frowns. Such prejudices are misplaced, however, for The Case of the Silk Stocking turns out to be a real treat. Everett is especially convincing, turning in a fine, dark performance...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

3534. Pierce, Andrew. "Rupert Everett as Sherlock Holmes." The Times (London), August 24, 2004: 7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Rupert Everett is filming Sherlock Holmes, minus his trademark deerstalker and pipe. The character is not described in the book in this way. It was one actor, Basil Rathbone I think his name was, who invented the hat and the pipe, which have wrongly been associated with the character ever since."
3535. Rabinowitz, Dorothy. "Return of the Master Detective." Wall Street Journal - Eastern Edition 2005: W5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the television program "Sherlock Homes and the Case of the Silk Stocking," starring Rupert Everett and Ian Hart.
3536. Rampton, James. "Arts: Not our Ideal Holmes." The Independent (London), December 16, 2004: 10.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Sherlock Holmes is a national treasure, a literary character who has long enjoyed 'untouchable' status. He arouses especially strong passions among the purists who feel deeply possessive about 'their' man. Mess with him at your peril. So the makers of Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Silk Stocking, BBC1's radical new take on their hero, may be diving for cover after the film goes out on Boxing Day. Ian Hart, who plays the sleuth's companion and chronicler, Dr John Watson, in this new Holmes story written by Allan Cubitt, is certainly bracing himself for some flak from Arthur Conan Doyle devotees...."
3537. Ramsey, Terry. "Pick of the Day." The Evening Standard (London), December 24, 2004: 42.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Silk Stocking. "Was there ever such a brooding, handsome and strangely sexy Sherlock Holmes as this new version? The great Victorian detective is usually portrayed as an academic and austere individual. But in the hands of British Hollywood star Rupert Everett (right) he maintains these qualities while gaining a hint of another fictional hero, the dark and romantic Heathcliffe. Albeit a version of Heathcliffe who wears a dapper hat and polished shoes...."
3538. Rebello, Stephen. "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Silk Stocking." Advocate, no. 949 (2005): 64.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the television program 'Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Silk Stocking' directed by Simon Cellan Jones and starring Rupert Everett.
3539. Stasio, Marilyn. "Attention, Holmes Devotees: Baker Street Is Irregular." New York Times, October 22, 2005: B7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Provides information about the production of the Sherlock Holmes film "Masterpiece Theater," starring Rupert Everett and Ian Hart in the U.S.
3540. Taylor, D. J. "Sherlock Holmes is More than a Brand Name." The Independent (London), August 31, 2004: 33.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "We should be grateful, in a landscape crowded out with the likes of Big Brother and TV's Naughtiest Blunders 14, that any literary classic gets dramatised for the small screen these days. Even so, I was slightly alarmed to discover the BBC's intentions with regard to its latest remake of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's immortal Sherlock Holmes. The attempt to return Baker Street's cadaverous, cocaine- injecting sleuth to the forefront of the public consciousness is to be called The Return of Sherlock Holmes, and the choice of Rupert Everett as the leading man is, according to the pundits, sure to upset the diehard fan...."
3541. Thorpe, Vanessa. "The answer, my dear Watson, is elementary. One of these new Sherlock Holmes is an impostor." The Observer, June 20, 2004: 13.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Few fictional characters divide audiences so passionately. Some are fans of Basil Rathbone's Sherlock Holmes, others are devotees of the Peter Cushing version, while many argue that no actor quite caught the manner of the greatest consulting detective of them all until Jeremy Brett took up his deerstalker. Now two more actors are to take on the challenge of playing the heroic detective in a TV battle between rival interpretations, one ITV, the other BBC, which is likely to equal the struggle between Holmes and Moriarty atop the Reichenbach Falls. In the ITV corner is Stephen Fry, a passionate scholar of the work of the character's creator, Arthur Conan Doyle....Over in the BBC corner is a relative newcomer, Rupert Everett, 45, the glamorous Hollywood star who made his name on the British stage in the early Eighties....Members of the Sherlock Holmes Society of London are poised to make their judgment and, at first sight, neither actor appears to pass muster...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

10B ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- ACTORS AND ACTRESSES -- FAIRBANKS, DOUGLAS SR. (1)

3542. Cape, G. S. "Addiction, stigma and movies." Acta Psychiatrica Scandinavica 107, no. 3 (2003): 163-169.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a reference to Holmes. "...One of the earliest movies (The Mystery of the Leaping Fish, supervised by D.W. Griffith, 1916) depicting drug use shows the antics of Douglas Fairbanks, Sr. as private detective Cokennyday (a parody of Sherlock Holmes) burying his face in a mountain of cocaine or injecting himself whenever his energy is waning...."

10B ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- ACTORS AND ACTRESSES -- FIRTH, COLIN (1)

3543. "Colin Firth to Play Sherlock Holmes in a New Hollywood Blockbuster." Sunday Mirror, November 10, 1996: 15.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Hollywood bosses want Pride and Prejudice star Colin Firth to play Sherlock Holmes in a new blockbuster about the detective...."

10B ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- ACTORS AND ACTRESSES -- FREWER, MATT (2)

3544. "Sherlock on the prowl again." New Straits Times (Malaysia), February 18, 2001: 18.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The Hound Of The Baskervilles, which premiered on Hallmark was the first story to resurrect Sherlock Holmes. The story is an inspired interpretation of the 1902 Doyle masterpiece that re-imagines the inscrutable Holmes and his latest case in a style faithful to the original. In the fifth re-telling of The Hound Of The Baskervilles there's plenty of vintage Doyle intrigue, amusing wordplay, plot twists, and nail-biting suspense to satisfy both the hardcore Holmes fan and newcomers alike....Matt Frewer, a classically trained actor, turns in a surprisingly accomplished performance as the Baker Street detective, delivering lines with the modest irony that Holmes fans love. Frewer is supported by Kenneth Welsh (as the amenable Dr Watson) and Jason London, last seen in Hallmark's Jason And The Argonauts, as Sir Henry, the latest heir apparent to the Baskerville estate - and whose life is on the line...."

3545. Curran, Peggy. "Hound of the Baskervilles puts a new leash on Holmes, Watson." The Gazette (Montreal), October 25, 2000: G7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The Hound of the Baskervilles has lost one of his contact lenses. Eno, a large German shepherd who snarls and growls on cue, has been made up to look like Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's fictional 'monstrous hound from Hell.' With his coat matted and eyes glowing with the magic of red contacts, he does a pretty convincing job. Until one of the lenses pops out, and crew members have to get down on all fours to search for it while their canine star naps in his trailer. Ah, the glamour of film-making. The first instalment in CTV's new take on the classic Sherlock Holmes mysteries, The Hound of the Baskervilles, airs Saturday at 9 p.m., one of a slew of spooky specials on tap to coincide with Halloween. Matt Frewer plays Sherlock Holmes to Kenneth Welsh's Dr. Watson...."

10B ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- ACTORS AND ACTRESSES -- FRY, STEPHEN (4)

3546. Culley, Maureen. "Fry adds weight to the role of Sherlock Holmes." Daily Mail (London), March 31, 2004: 37.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "It is a mystery to tax even the legendary powers of the master detective himself. For almost 120 years, fans of Sherlock Holmes have known him as a tall, hawk-nosed man whose rigorous

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

studies have left him, in the words of his trusty companion Dr Watson, 'excessively lean'. So when makers of a Pounds 2million TV adaptation of the famous sleuth's adventures cast rather more robustly proportioned comedian Stephen Fry as their new Holmes, it seemed a strange choice to say the least. To confuse matters further, Dr Watson often portrayed on screen as a plump and bumbling Victorian gentleman is to be played by Fry's perennially slim comic partner Hugh Laurie...."

3547. Currier, Jameson. "News." Lambda Book Report 13, no. 1/2 (2004): 50-50.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents an update on issues in the entertainment and media sectors relevant to the gay community as of August 2004. Includes reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...Two of Britain's most famous gay actors will soon be dueling Sherlocks. Stephen Fry will star as Arthur Conan Doyle's quintessential British detective, Sherlock Holmes, in a movie that will air on ITV at Christmastime. Fry's longtime comedy partner, Hugh Laurie, will co-star as Dr. Watson....Rupert Everett will also star as Sherlock Holmes in another TV-movie version which will be shown earlier in the year on BBC, a follow-up to their successful Hounds of the Baskerville feature. This production will have an original screenplay and will not be based on an Arthur Conan Doyle story; Ian Hart will co-star as his Dr. Watson...."

3548. Methven, Nicola. "Frying Squad; Fry & Laurie Return as Holmes & Watson." The Mirror, March 30, 2004: 7.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Comedy duo Hugh Laurie and Stephen Fry are to reunite as Sherlock Holmes and Dr Watson in a major new ITV drama. The pair were last on the small screen together as Jeeves and Wooster more than a decade ago. Now Fry, 46, a devoted Holmes fan, will play the Baker St detective, with 44-year-old Laurie co-starring as his loyal friend Watson...."

3549. Thorpe, Vanessa. "The answer, my dear Watson, is elementary. One of these new Sherlock Holmes is an impostor." The Observer, June 20, 2004: 13.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Few fictional characters divide audiences so passionately. Some are fans of Basil Rathbone's Sherlock Holmes, others are devotees of the Peter Cushing version, while many argue that no actor quite caught the manner of the greatest consulting detective of them all until Jeremy Brett took up his deerstalker. Now two more actors are to take on the challenge of playing the heroic detective in a TV battle between rival interpretations, one ITV, the other BBC, which is likely to equal the struggle between Holmes and Moriarty atop the Reichenbach Falls. In the ITV corner is Stephen Fry, a passionate scholar of the work of the character's creator, Arthur Conan Doyle....Over in the BBC corner is a relative newcomer, Rupert Everett, 45, the glamorous Hollywood star who made his name on the British stage in the early Eighties....Members of the Sherlock Holmes Society of London are poised to make their judgment and, at first sight, neither actor appears to pass muster...."

10B ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- ACTORS AND ACTRESSES -- GIELGUD, JOHN (2)

3550. "Spring Audio Blooms." Publishers Weekly 253, no. 6 (2006): 26-38.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article presents a list of audio books including Sherlock Holmes: A Baker Street Dozen by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, read by John Gielgud, Ralph Richardson and Orson Welles.

3551. Gates, David. "The Last Titan of the Theater." Newsweek 135, no. 23 (2000): 75.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents an obituary for Sir John Gielgud (1904-2000). Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "'I spoke rather well,' Sir John Gielgud once said, recalling his early days in the theater, 'but rather too well, and fell in love with my own voice.' So did the rest of the world. How could you ever, ever describe it? Alec Guinness's much-quoted phrase, 'a silver trumpet muffled in silk,' suggests its timbre, its tenor range and its musicality, but not the sense that it was a speaking mind--and speaking directly to you. Theatergoers first heard it in 1921, delivering a nothing line from Shakespeare's Henry V: 'Here is the number of the slaughtered French.' Between this bit part as a herald at the age of 17 and his last performance this spring at 96, Gielgud impersonated Noah, Raskolnikov, Oedipus, Trotsky, Virgil and Sherlock Holmes--as well as Hamlet, Lear, Macbeth, Romeo and (in Edward Bond's Bingo) Shakespeare himself...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

10B ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- ACTORS AND ACTRESSES -- GILLETTE, WILLIAM (22)

3552. "100 Years Ago." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 2, no. 2 (1998): 2.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Highlights the 1898 edition of William Gillette's play "Held By The Enemy."
3553. "Castles of New England." Yankee 68, no. 7 (2004): 114-114.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Lists castles found in New England. Hammond Castle Museum in Massachusetts; Castle in the Clouds in New Hampshire; Gillette Castle State Park in Connecticut; Belcourt Castle in Rhode Island.
3554. "Lyceum Theatre, 10 September 1901; On This Day." The Times (London), September 10, 1996: 1.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reprint of an article from 1901 beginning: "We wonder whether it was quite politic of Dr. Conan Doyle, even with the assistance of Mr. William Gillette, to bring Sherlock Holmes upon the stage. Surely no playhouse is large enough to hold that colossal figure? You might as well attempt to get the Djinn into the bottle. And, then, the stage is fatal to mystery. The mythopoeic tendency has been busy with Sherlock Holmes. He has become the centre of a legend. To see him in the flesh, under the glare of the footlights, is to substitute intimacy for awe...."
3555. "On Stage." American Theatre 24, no. 7 (2007): 92-103.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article presents reviews of a collection of plays with the Theatre Communications Group, which are performing nationwide including "Death Trap," by Ira Levin at Cyrano's Theatre Company in Anchorage, Alaska, from September 7, 2007 to September 30, 2007, "Man of La Mancha," by Dale Wasserman at the Lyric Stage Company of Boston in Boston, Massachusetts, from September 7, 2007 to October 13, 2007 and "The Forgiving Harvest," at the Omaha Theater Company for Young People in Omaha, Nebraska, from September 14, 2007 to September 30, 2007. Includes a Holmes/Doyle listing: The Jungle Theater, Minneapolis, (612) 822-7063, www.jungletheater.com Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure, adapt: Steven Dietz from Arthur Conan Doyle, William Gillette; dir: Joel Sass. Sep 7-Oct 14.
3556. "On Stage." American Theatre 23, no. 3 (2006): 80-95.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article presents a list of theatrical productions shown at several TCG theaters in the U.S. The productions include the Arizona Theatre Company (Tucson) production of Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure, adapt: Steven Dietz from Arthur Conan Doyle, William Gillette; dir: David Ira Goldstein.
3557. "What's going on: Theatre." Performing Arts & Entertainment in Canada 28, no. 4 (1994): 39.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on developments concerning theater in Canada, as of April 1994. Mentions the Shaw Festival production of Sherlock Holmes by William Gillette.
3558. Allen, Mel. "Springtime's Savory Gift." Yankee 69, no. 4 (2005): 96-104.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Highlights the shad season in Connecticut River Valley. Habitat of shads; Factors that contributed to the special attributes of shads in Connecticut; Traditional way of cooking shads. Mention made, under "What Not to Miss," of Gillette Castle: "Gillette Castle, 860-526-2336. 67 River Rd., East Haddam. One of the more unforgettable sights on the river is your first glimpse of the castle, the former home of actor William Gillette, the first American Sherlock Holmes. Now a state park, the grounds are open year-round, while self-guided castle tours begin Memorial Day weekend. A special way to arrive is to cross the river on the historic little ferry from Chester. dep.state.ct.us/stateparks/parks/gillettecastle.htm"
3559. Bemrose, John. "Cynics and sybarites." Maclean's 107, no. 24 (1994): 45.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the Shaw Festival, in integral part of summer at Niagara-on-the Lake, Ontario, for 33 years. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...As well, most of the works being presented later in the summer, from the Victorian melodrama Sherlock Holmes, by William Gillette, to J. B. Priestley's

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

1934 tale of a disillusioned actress, Eden End, feature authors or kinds of drama that have been successful draws in the past...."

3560. Berman, Ruth. "100 Years Ago." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 3, no. 4 (1999): 2.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Observations on William Gillette's work with Conan Doyle on the play "Sherlock Holmes."
3561. Dahlinger, Susan E. "Sherlock Holmes, a centenary essay." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 3, no. 4 (1999): 1, 6, 8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // An essay on the life and work of the actor, William Gillette, on the centennial of his first performance of the play "Sherlock Holmes," the art of Frederic Dorr Steele (who fixed Gillette's image of Holmes in the minds of many), Vincent Starrett's work with Gillette on the publication of the script, and the materials related to all three of these men in the Holmes Collections.
3562. Doyle, Pj. "Joe Connors' Crowded Box Room." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 3, no. 4 (1999): 7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Observations on Joe Connors, member of the Norwegian Explorers, and his recollections of Gillette's performance of "Sherlock Holmes" in 1932 at the Metropolitan Theater in Minneapolis.
3563. Hamilton, Clayton. "The Final Episode of Sherlock Holmes: An Appreciation of William Gillette." Baker Street West 15, no. 1 (1999): 28-30.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3564. Kennedy, Janice. "Theatre: Murder plays provide fun at Shaw Festival." The Ottawa Citizen, June 20, 1994: B9.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Christopher Newton has no illusions about Sherlock Holmes, the adventure play that opened this weekend for a four-month run at the Shaw Festival. 'It's good theatre -- not good dramatic literature,' says Newton, artistic director of the annual celebration of modern theatre at Niagara-on-the-Lake. 'Holmes is St. George, Moriarty is the dragon. It's like doing Richard III without the density of the poetry to support it.' But that doesn't mean it isn't great fun, he adds quickly. And that doesn't mean there isn't a legitimate spot on the Shaw playbill for entertainments like Holmes and the season's other murder mystery, Busman's Honeymoon...."
3565. Kirchhoff, H. J. "Theatre Review Sherlock Holmes." The Globe and Mail (Toronto), July 9, 1994: C7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The thing to keep in mind about William Gillette's Sherlock Holmes, which opened Thursday night at the Shaw Festival, is that it is a Victorian melodrama, not a detective story. Viewing the play on those undemanding terms, it's easy to forgive its unlikely, convoluted plot and one-dimensional characters, and to just sit back and enjoy the hero's swashbuckling and intellectual dexterity...."
3566. Kramer, Richard E. "The Washington Square Players: Art for Art's Sake." Theatre History Studies 25, no. (2005): 149-172.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Talks about the history and accomplishments of the U.S.-based theatrical company, Washington Square Players. Factors that led to the formation of the theatrical company; Musical productions from members of the company; Challenges faced by the company in its major musical productions. Includes a reference to Holmes (and Gillette) (p. 154). "...For the most part, Broadway productions were 'dramatized best sellers and vehicles drawn exclusively by stars.' Among the latter were the long-running title-character appearances of Joseph Jefferson in Rip Van Winkle, William Gillette in Sherlock Holmes, and James O'Neill in the famously career-dominating The Count of Monte Cristo...."
3567. McCormick, Patrick. "Science fiction." U.S.Catholic 70, no. 1 (2005): 44-46.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Criticizes the acceptance of a fundamentalist approach to the evidence used in criminal investigation as popularized in the TV program "CSI: Crime Scene Investigation." Theme of the program; Overview of detective characters in literature; Statistics on crime and criminal investigations; Result of a politicized intelligence report. Includes references to Doyle and Holmes. "...The popularity of the geek

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

detective is nothing new. Arthur Conan Doyle gave us Sherlock Holmes, whose 221 B Baker apartment was regularly filled with the smoke and smells of some experiment and whose desk always had a stack of obscure but relevant scientific monographs. Like Grissom, Holmes loved putting his crime scene evidence under the magnifying glass, checking out footprints, soil samples, and the wear pattern on a pair of boots. Agatha Christie's master detective, Hercule Poirot, did not share Holmes' penchant for lab work, but he, too, had limitless faith in 'the little grey cells' of his very clever brain and was supremely confident in the ability of human intelligence to solve life's most daunting mysteries..." Sidebar on memorable detectives notes "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes (Granada Television, 1984-1994). William Gillette played Holmes on the stage for more than three decades and Basil Rathbone portrayed him in 16 films, but most contemporary fans agree that Jeremy Brett's performance in this British TV series has set the gold standard. In the Adventures, Return, Casebook, and Memoirs of Sherlock Holmes, as well as several TV films made from Conan Doyle's longer stories, Brett gives a meticulous and studied performance of the cerebral but impassioned detective's quest for the truth of the matter."

3568. McWilliam, Rohan. "Melodrama and the Historians." Radical History Review, no. (2000): 28p.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Examines the emphasis on melodrama among historians, its significance, strengths and limitations. Sensitivity of historians to the role of fiction as a cultural resource; Views on melodrama in the 19th century; Factor that governed communication in the 19th-century public sphere. Includes a passing reference to Holmes (and Gillette, p. 65). "...Yet, in the 1970s and 1980s, melodrama was rediscovered with several revivals of melodramatic plays by the Royal Shakespeare Company: Dion Boucicault's London Assurance (1841) and William Gillette's Sherlock Holmes (1901)...."
3569. Rice, Susan. "Holmes Thoughts From Abroad: William Gillette, A Living Memorial." The Ritual, no. 23 (1999): 21-24.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3570. ———. "William Gillette: A Living Memorial." The Serpentine Muse 12, no. 4 (1994): 10-13.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3571. Sperling, Carol. "William Gillette Was Sherlock Holmes, part I." Baker Street West 15, no. 2 (1999): 8-13.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3572. Thomalen, Robert E. "To William Gillette." Canadian Holmes 18, no. 1 (1994): 31.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3573. Zappula, Eve. "2005 06 Season Preview." American Theatre 22, no. 8 (2005): 43-102.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article lists the theatrical productions set to stage at the Theatre Communications Group theatres in the U.S. in 2005-2006. Includes Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure, adapt: Steven Dietz from Arthur Conan Doyle, William Gillette; dir: David Ira Goldstein. Mar 4-Apr 16 by the Arizona Theater Company; Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure, adapt: Steven Dietz from Arthur Conan Doyle, William Gillette; dir: Joseph Hanreddy. Apr 14-May 14 at the Milwaukee Repertory Theater; Sherlock Holmes and The West End Horror, Anthony Dodge, Marcia Milgrom Dodge (also dir). Oct 19-Nov 5 at the Pioneer Theater Company, Salt Lake.

10B ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- ACTORS AND ACTRESSES -- GRAY, CHARLES (4)

3574. "Bond Villain Charles Gray Dies Aged 71." Birmingham Post, March 9, 2000: 10.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Actor Charles Gray, best known for playing arch-villain Ernst Stavros Blofeld in James Bond movie Diamonds Are Forever, has died at the age of 71. The star, who played a string of villains and colonial types in everything from Hammer horror films to TV series such as Hannay and the recent Longitude, died at London's Brompton Hospital on Tuesday. In a theatrical career spanning five decades, Bournemouth-born Gray's steely persona and lip-curling delivery made him a familiar face on stage and

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

screen....With credits including Upstairs Downstairs, Tales of the Unexpected, Porterhouse Blue, and Dennis Potter's Blackeyes, he cropped up again and again as sadistic generals and old-school men of property. In 1976, he starred as Mycroft Holmes alongside fellow thespian Nicol Williamson and Hollywood star Robert Duvall in revisionist Sherlock Holmes movie The Seven Per Cent Solution. He returned to the same role years later, alongside the late Jeremy Brett, in ITV's Adventures of Sherlock Holmes, and The Return of Sherlock Holmes...."

3575. "Charles Gray." The Scotsman, March 9, 2000: 22.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Obituary of the actor.

3576. "The star licensed to chill as Blofeld." Daily Mail (London), March 9, 2000: 27.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Charles Gray, who played James Bond's arch-enemy Blofeld in Diamonds are Forever, died yesterday at 71. With his strapping 6ft 2in frame, lip-curling menace and steely persona, the actor was often cast as the villain in a stage, film and TV career spanning five decades. His most recent appearance was in Channel 4's miniseries Longitude. His TV credits included Upstairs Downstairs, Tales of the Unexpected, Porterhouse Blue, and Dennis Potter's Blackeyes. Again and again, he cropped up in roles ranging from sadistic generals, colonial types and old-school men of property. In 1976, he starred as Mycroft Holmes alongside Nicol Williamson and Robert Duvall in the revisionist Sherlock Holmes movie The Seven Per Cent Solution. He returned to the same role years later, alongside Jeremy Brett, in ITV's Adventures of Sherlock Holmes and The Return of Sherlock Holmes. But it was as the sibilant narrator in The Rocky Horror Picture Show and later as Ernst Stavro Blofeld that Gray became best known...."

3577. Chapman, Paul M. "His Last Bow, Charles Gray 1928-2000." The Ritual, no. 25 (2000): 47-48.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

10B ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- ACTORS AND ACTRESSES -- HARDWICKE, EDWARD (9)

3578. "APA announces Audie winners." Billboard 108, no. 28 (1996): 89.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on the winners of the first Audie Awards, which were presented on June 14, 1996 by the Audio Publishers Association. "Best new voice: 'Sherlock Holmes: Tales Of Suspense,' by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, read by Edward Hardwicke, Tangled Web Audio."

3579. "Jeremy Brett and The Final Four." The Washington Post, December 31, 1995: Y03.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "'Mystery!' begins the last of four Sherlock Holmes stories starring Jeremy Brett, who for many viewers was the definitive detective for a decade. Edward Hardwicke is Dr. Watson, his friend and confidante...."

3580. Alleva, Richard. "'A' is for appalling." Commonweal 122, no. 20 (1995): 20.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents information on the movies 'The Scarlet Letter' and 'To Die For'. Includes a passing reference to Holmes (in the person of Brett). "Edward Harwick (Dr. Watson to the late Jeremy Brett's Sherlock Holmes on PBS) makes the Puritan governor a recognizable human being, but the rest of the supporting cast is spurious, with even the great Joan Plowright reduced to dimpling and twinkling."

3581. Barrett, Wayne M. "The Truth About the Sleuth." USA Today Magazine 133, no. 2716 (2005): 68-69.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the DVD release of the television series Mystery," about detective Sherlock Holmes and his sidekick John Watson, starring Jeremy Brett and Edward Hardwicke.

3582. Larson, Jeanette. "More British Sleuths." Booklist 97, no. 17 (2001): 1615.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews three mystery audiobooks. 'The Fear Sign,' by Margery Allingham and read by Francis Matthews; 'The Secret of Annexe 3,' by Colin Dexter and read by Michael Pennington; 'Sherlock Holmes: 3 Tales of Avarice,' by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and read by Edward Hardwicke.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

3583. Rosenblum, Trudi Miller. "Adult Audio for Fall." Publishers Weekly 247, no. 32 (2000): 43.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews several adult audiobooks for fall 2000 including Audio Partners' Sherlock Holmes: 3 Tales of Avarice by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. Read by Edward Hardwicke. Unabridged, two cassettes, three hours, $17.95; two CDs, $24.95. Sept. Also Commuters Library, Sherlock Holmes: The Musgrave Ritual and The Final Problem by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. Read by Ralph Cosham. Unabridged, two CDs, two hours, $19.95. Oct.
3584. ———. "Spoken Audio for Spring." Publishers Weekly 248, no. 6 (2001): 37.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Provides information on several audiobooks which will be released in the United States in the spring of 2001. Includes Audio Partners' Sherlock Holmes: 3 Tales of Intrigue by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. Read by Edward Hardwicke. Unabridged, two cassettes, three hours, $17.95; three CDs, $24.95. Feb. Scenario Productions' Mystery Theatre Series. Based on CBC archival radio recordings with a full cast. Each two cassettes, two hours, $14.99 (unless noted), Apr: Moby Dick by Herman Melville; The Rime of the Ancient Mariner by Samuel Taylor Coleridge ($18.99); The Forest Warden by E.T.A. Hoffman ($18.99); Dracula by Bram Stoker; The Spare Room by Mordecai Richler; Sherlock Holmes: Hound of the Baskervilles by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle ($18.99). Apr.
3585. Scott, Whitney. "Media: Audiobooks." Booklist 97, no. 22 (2001): 2143.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews four mystery audiobooks. 'Maigret Sets a Trap,' by Georges Simenon and read by Andrew Sachs; 'A Man Lay Dead,' by Ngaio Marsh and read by James Saxon; 'Murder by the Book,' by Rex Stout and read by Michael Prichard; 'Sherlock Holmes: Three Tales of Intrigue,' by Arthur Conan Doyle and read by Edward Hardwicke.
3586. Wright, David. "Hearing the Sound of Murder." Library Journal 129, no. 9 (2004): 15-18.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // An annotated directory of audiobooks focusing on murders and mysteries is provided. It features British classics, American crime fiction, and contemporary crime books. Includes an entry for Holmes. Doyle, Arthur Conan. Sherlock Holmes: 3 Tales of Avarice Audio Partners. 2000. 2 cassettes. 3 hrs. ISBN 1-57270-173-0. $17.95; 3 CDs. ISBN 1-57270-176-5. $24.95 "Edward Hardwicke, a.k.a. Dr. Watson in the popular PBS productions, skillfully navigates nine labyrinthine plots in three story collections. The other series entries are 3 Tales of Betrayal and 3 Tales of Intrigue."

10B ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- ACTORS AND ACTRESSES -- HART, IAN (12)

3587. Barnes, Jon. "A beast just for Christmas." Tls, no. (2002): 16.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the television film 'The Hound of the Baskervilles,' starring Richard Roxburgh and Ian Hart as Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson.
3588. Boshra, Basem. "Baskerville hound barks again: First-class actors star in BBC adaptation of the classic Sherlock Holmes mystery." The Gazette (Montreal), November 18, 2002: D6.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "What to watch: Richard Roxburgh (Moulin Rouge) stars as the legendary Sherlock Holmes and Ian Hart (Harry Potter and the Philosopher's Stone) is his loyal sidekick, Dr. Watson, in a faithful, stylish new BBC adaptation of The Hound of the Baskervilles.... A bevy of top-shelf Brit character actors, including Richard E. Grant, Matt Day and John Nettles, provides admirable support in this delightful version of the Sir Arthur Conan Doyle tale...."
3589. Currier, Jameson. "News." Lambda Book Report 13, no. 1/2 (2004): 50-50.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents an update on issues in the entertainment and media sectors relevant to the gay community as of August 2004. Includes reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...Two of Britain's most famous gay actors will soon be dueling Sherlocks. Stephen Fry will star as Arthur Conan Doyle's quintessential British detective, Sherlock Holmes, in a movie that will air on ITV at Christmastime. Fry's longtime comedy partner, Hugh Laurie, will co-star as Dr. Watson....Rupert Everett will also star as Sherlock Holmes in another TV-movie version which will be shown earlier in the year on BBC, a follow-up to their successful Hounds of the

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Baskerville feature. This production will have an original screenplay and will not be based on an Arthur Conan Doyle story; Ian Hart will co-star as his Dr. Watson...."

3590. James, Martin. "Sherlock Holmes And The Case Of The Silk Stocking." Sunday Times (London), December 26, 2004: 86.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...Rupert Everett makes an excellent Holmes, with Ian Hart a sterling Doctor Watson and Neil Dudgeon an amusing Inspector Lestrade in this melodramatic story of the hunt for a serial killer. Though not based on a Conan Doyle story, Allan Cubitt's wholly original screenplay does remain true to the spirit of the canon...."

3591. Jury, Louise. "Holmes Wears Mantle of Action Hero in Hi-Tech BBC Thriller." The Independent (London), April 2, 2002: 8.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Sherlock Holmes and his sidekick Dr Watson are to be transformed from the intrepid sleuths of modern imagination into muscular men of action in a remake of one of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's classic stories. The Hound of the Baskervilles is to be filmed for a one-off BBC drama this spring, with its leading characters played by the youngest actors since the detective duo were first brought to the screen more than 60 years ago. For those weaned on the likes of Basil Rathbone or Nigel Bruce, the latest castings may appear yet another step in the march of youthful vigour over the wisdom of age. However, the production, by the independent company Tiger Aspect, will take the much-adapted story closer to the original, with Holmes and Watson portrayed as young and athletic men in their mid-30s in contrast to the mature and paternalistic figures of most screen versions. Richard Roxburgh, 40, who played the Duke in the film Moulin Rouge, will star as Holmes while Ian Hart, 38, who portrayed Quill in Harry Potter and the Philosopher's Stone, will be Dr Watson...."

3592. Leonard, Tom. "BBC puts youthful slant on Hound of the Baskervilles." The Daily Telegraph (London), April 01, 2002: 13.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Sherlock Holmes and Dr Watson will be portrayed as athletic young men in their mid-thirties in a glossy new BBC version of The Hound of the Baskervilles. Richard Roxburgh, 40, and Ian Hart, 38 - who played Professor Quirrell in the Harry Potter film - will be the youngest Holmes and Watson since the pair first appeared on screen more than 60 years ago...."

3593. McKie, Robin. "OTV: Boxing Day: Pick of the day: Capital Holmes: Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Silk Stocking, BBC1." The Observer, December 19, 2004: 99.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The omens for this year's Sherlock Holmes festive special are scarcely encouraging. The prospect of using an 'original' Holmes mystery by TV playwright Allan Cubitt, rather than picking a Conan Doyle original, is a worry for any aficionado. Nor does Rupert Everett...seem a great choice to play the great detective: a bit too foppish and slight, surely. Holmes should be all brooding menace and frowns. Such prejudices are misplaced, however, for The Case of the Silk Stocking turns out to be a real treat. Everett is especially convincing, turning in a fine, dark performance...."

3594. Rabinowitz, Dorothy. "Return of the Master Detective." Wall Street Journal - Eastern Edition 2005: W5.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the television program "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Silk Stocking," starring Rupert Everett and Ian Hart.

3595. Rampton, James. "Arts: Not our Ideal Holmes." The Independent (London), December 16, 2004: 10.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Sherlock Holmes is a national treasure, a literary character who has long enjoyed 'untouchable' status. He arouses especially strong passions among the purists who feel deeply possessive about 'their' man. Mess with him at your peril. So the makers of Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Silk Stocking, BBC1's radical new take on their hero, may be diving for cover after the film goes out on Boxing Day. Ian Hart, who plays the sleuth's companion and chronicler, Dr John Watson, in this new Holmes story written by Allan Cubitt, is certainly bracing himself for some flak from Arthur Conan Doyle devotees...."

3596. Ramsey, Terry. "Pick of the Day." The Evening Standard (London), December 24, 2004: 42.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Silk Stocking. "Was there ever

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

such a brooding, handsome and strangely sexy Sherlock Holmes as this new version? The great Victorian detective is usually portrayed as an academic and austere individual. But in the hands of British Hollywood star Rupert Everett (right) he maintains these qualities while gaining a hint of another fictional hero, the dark and romantic Heathcliffe. Albeit a version of Heathcliffe who wears a dapper hat and polished shoes...."

3597. Rebello, Stephen. "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Silk Stocking." Advocate, no. 949 (2005): 64.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the television program 'Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Silk Stocking' directed by Simon Cellan Jones and starring Rupert Everett.
3598. Stasio, Marilyn. "Attention, Holmes Devotees: Baker Street Is Irregular." New York Times, October 22, 2005: B7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Provides information about the production of the Sherlock Holmes film "Masterpiece Theater," starring Rupert Everett and Ian Hart in the U.S.

10B ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- ACTORS AND ACTRESSES -- HENSHALL, DOUGLAS (2)

3599. Fowler, Alice. "Who killed Sherlock Holmes?" Daily Mail (London), July 9, 2005: 11.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Walking down a London street, Arthur Conan Doyle's eye is caught by a stranger, his face in shadow. When the man turns, Conan Doyle sees he is grotesquely mutilated: one ear ripped clean away, his face wet with blood. An instant later, the man - if he existed at all - is gone. At the height of his literary success, the creator of Sherlock Holmes is left doubting his own sanity. For Conan Doyle, as depicted in a new BBC drama, such moments of Gothic horror were all too common. In The Strange Case Of Sherlock Holmes Arthur Conan Doyle, the bestselling author - played by Douglas Henshall - is a troubled man, at war with the fictional detective who made his name. Set in the 1890s, it describes a time in Conan Doyle's life when the pressures of success, coupled with deep personal trauma, threatened to destroy him...."
3600. Hendry, Steve. "Television : Pick of the Week: Conan Doyle Role is Elementary for Doug." Sunday Mail, July 24, 2005: 15.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Sir Arthur Conan Doyle gave life to the world's most famous private detective, Sherlock Holmes And it was the hand of the Scots author which consigned the Baker Street sleuth to death at the height of his popularity in 1893. The decision to kill-off Holmes shocked the world and spawned headlines and hate mail. And public pressure famously forced Conan Doyle to bring Holmes back to life. Just why the writer would even contemplate committing such a murderous act is at the heart of new drama The Strange Case Of Sherlock Holmes And Arthur Conan Doyle. It was the intriguing tale behind the real-life mystery which convinced Douglas Henshall to play Conan Doyle...."

10B ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- ACTORS AND ACTRESSES -- HOWARD, KEN (1)

3601. Dam, Julie K. L., and John Hannah. "A Friend in Deed." People 54, no. 14 (2000): 149.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on professional stuntwoman Jeannie Epper and her donation of a kidney to actor Ken Howard. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...And Howard is determined to take full advantage of his new lease on life. Anxious to get back in shape, he walks on a treadmill for 45 minutes every day ('He has so much more energy,' says Linda), and this fall he'll begin shooting a movie in which he plays Sir Arthur Conan Doyle...."

10B ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- ACTORS AND ACTRESSES -- HOWARD, RONALD (2)

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

3602. Michael, Patrick. "Review--'Ronald Howard as Sherlock Holmes in 'The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes'; Two Original Drawing Room Plays--'The Case of the Violent Suitor' and 'The Case of the Impromptu Performance'." The Ritual, no. 28 (2001): 59-60.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

3603. Pointer, Michael. "The Original Young Sherlock: Ronald Howard 1818-1997." The Ritual, no. 19 (1997): 14-18.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

10B ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- ACTORS AND ACTRESSES -- HUSTON, JOHN (1)

3604. Pollak, Michael. "F.Y.I." The New York Times, January 2, 2005: 14.2.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Questions from readers. "Q. As we Sherlock Holmes fans approach the anniversary of the master's birth, I started wondering: Did Sherlock Holmes ever visit New York? A. Only in the movies. The screen's most-filmed detective came to Manhattan in "Sherlock Holmes in New York," a 1976 pastiche that included Roger Moore as Holmes, Patrick Macnee as Watson, John Huston as the evil Moriarty and Charlotte Rampling as Irene Adler. The fanciful plot has Moriarty seeking world domination by stealing Lower Manhattan's gold supply, and kidnapping Irene Adler's son, who may or may not be Holmes's."

10B ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- ACTORS AND ACTRESSES -- KEATON, BUSTER (1)

3605. Wheeler, Drew. "Kino, Image to issue boxed sets of Keaton." Billboard 106, no. 51 (1994): 57.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports that Kino On Video and Image Entertainment will release the boxed-set videotape series 'The Art of Buster Keaton.' Extensiveness of the collection; Image's release of other Kino titles on disc; Promotion of the boxed sets. Includes a reference to Holmes. "...The first and third volumes of 'The Art of Buster Keaton' contain three cassettes and are priced at $79.95 each; the second comprises four tapes and lists at $109.95. Comparable laser prices are $99.99 and $139.99. While Kino will sell individual cassettes for $29.95 each, the Image releases will be available in boxed sets only. Included are such Keaton-directed masterpieces as 'Our Hospitality,' 'Sherlock Jr.,' and 'The General,' as well as his first starring feature, 'The Saphead.'..."

10B ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- ACTORS AND ACTRESSES -- KINGSLEY, BEN (2)

3606. Johnson, B. D. "Spoofing Sherlock." Maclean's 101, no. 45 (1988): 53.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Film review of 'Without A Clue', directed by Thom Eberhardt and starring Michael Caine and Ben Kingsley. The film is a spoof of the Sherlock Holmes and Dr. John Watson characters created by British writer Sir Arthur Conan Doyle.

3607. Portman, Jamie. "Ben Kingsley, light and dark: Knighted Oscar-winner covers a wide spectrum this summer, from Sherlock Holmes spoof on DVD to villain in Thunderbirds and killer in Suspect Zero." The Gazette (Montreal), August 14, 2004: D8.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...However, the 61-year-old Oscar winner is also delighted by this summer's DVD release of one of his favourite movies - the 1988 Sherlock Holmes spoof, Without a Clue, in which he played a highly resourceful Dr. Watson to Michael Caine's bumbling Holmes. For Kingsley, Thunderbirds and Without a Clue serve as a reminder to audiences (also, he hopes, to producers) that he can be funny on screen. His comedic abilities have never been in question in the world of live theatre, where he has been equally comfortable with the comedy of William Shakespeare or that of Tom Stoppard...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

10B ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- ACTORS AND ACTRESSES -- LACY, TOM (1)

3608. McKuras, Julie. "The Old Globe Theatre, KPBS-FM of San Diego, and "The Mask of Moriarty"." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 1, no. 4 (1997): 4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on the production and playbill for "The Mask of Moriarty" at the Old Globe Theatre in San Diego and the associated radio program, "These Days," on KPBS-FM with the resulting donations to the Sherlock Holmes Collections. Includes photograph of Paxton Whitehead in the role of Holmes and Tom Lacy in the role of Watson

10B ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- ACTORS AND ACTRESSES -- LAING, ROBIN
(4)

3609. "Critic's Choice; It's Elementary for Dr Bell." Daily Record, December 18, 1999: 61.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Murder Rooms BBC 2. Filmed in Glasgow and Edinburgh last summer, this edgy - and somewhat spooky - thriller is inspired by the real life relationship between writer Arthur Conan Doyle and his tutor at Edinburgh University, pioneer forensic pathologist Dr Joseph Bell. The pair become embroiled in a hunt for a serial killer, a journey which reveals the stinking underbelly of Victorian society and inspires Doyle to create the most memorable detective of all time - the one and only Sherlock Holmes. This two-part drama stars a whole host of Scottish talent lead by the excellent Ian Richardson - best known at the scary PM Francis Urquhart in the BBC's House of Cards trilogy and recently seen in Gormenghast and The Magician's House - as Joseph Bell, with Robin Laing (Joey in both series of Jimmy McGovern's The Lakes) as the young Arthur Conan Doyle...."
3610. "Heart of Holmes drama." The Evening Post (Wellington), January 22, 2001: TV3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The world of Sherlock Holmes is reinvented in Dr Bell And Mr Doyle: The Dark Beginnings Of Sherlock Holmes, a story inspired by the real-life relationship between Arthur Conan Doyle (Laing) and his tutor at Edinburgh University, pioneer forensic pathologist, Dr Joseph Bell (Richardson), this week's Summer Mystery. Set in Edinburgh in 1878, the pair become embroiled in a hunt for a serial killer, a journey that reveals the underbelly of Victorian society and inspires Doyle to create the most memorable detective of all time - Sherlock Holmes. Writer David Pirie says this mystery is based on a true story...."
3611. Frame, Anna. "Murder Rooms:The Dark Beginning Of Sherlock Holmes." The Times (London), January 10, 2004: 37.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "According to Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, who left notes to prove it, he was inspired to create Sherlock Holmes by his professor at Edinburgh Medical School, Sir Joseph Bell. A pioneering forensic detective, Bell possessed enviable analytical skills that led to the cracking of many crimes. This evocative dramatisation, well directed by Paul Seed (A Touch of Frost, Auf Wiedersehen, Pet), stars Ian Richardson as Bell and Robin Laing as an unexpectedly rangy Doyle. Their hunt for a serial killer on the loose is involving, but the historical emphasis on early forensic science is fascinating in its own right."
3612. Mason, M. S. "Cracking the case of Sherlock Holmes." Christian Science Monitor, March 3, 2000: 17.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of television program. "Creepy as the title may sound, Murder Rooms: The Dark Origins of Sherlock Holmes is a fascinating fictionalized account of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's first interest in criminal investigation. Despite a plot hole or two, it is well-made, eerie, and complicated - like so many of the Holmes cases. Best of all, the two-part Victorian thriller...provides some insight into Doyle's early life and helps explain where the real prototype for his famous detective came from - a genuine pleasure for Holmes fans...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

10B ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- ACTORS AND ACTRESSES -- LAURIE, HUGH (7)

3613. "Dr House, I presume." The Dominion Post (Wellington), March 8, 2005: 3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Series creator [David Shore] says part of the inspiration for the House character was Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's fictional 19th-century detective Sherlock Holmes, who was highly observant and frequently more interested in solving cases than in social niceties. When Shore and [Hugh Laurie] first met, they discussed the similarities between House and Holmes....Though Laurie's comedy background might seem an odd fit for a dramatic character, Shore says it's good training for an offbeat doctor on a show with comedic touches, including House's Sherlock Holmesian diagnoses of clinic patients."
3614. "Dr House, I presume." The Press (Christchurch, New Zealand), March 8, 2005: T4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "When doctors can't solve a case they turn to a special team of dedicated medical professionals led by a controversial doctor, whose determination and sleuthing skills bring to mind Sherlock Holmes, in House....Series creator David Shore says part of the inspiration for the House character was Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's fictional 19th-century detective Sherlock Holmes, who was highly observant and frequently more interested in solving cases than in social niceties. When Shore and Laurie first met, they discussed the similarities between House and Holmes...."
3615. Culley, Maureen. "Fry adds weight to the role of Sherlock Holmes." Daily Mail (London), March 31, 2004: 37.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "It is a mystery to tax even the legendary powers of the master detective himself. For almost 120 years, fans of Sherlock Holmes have known him as a tall, hawk-nosed man whose rigorous studies have left him, in the words of his trusty companion Dr Watson, 'excessively lean'. So when makers of a Pounds 2million TV adaptation of the famous sleuth's adventures cast rather more robustly proportioned comedian Stephen Fry as their new Holmes, it seemed a strange choice to say the least. To confuse matters further, Dr Watson often portrayed on screen as a plump and bumbling Victorian gentleman is to be played by Fry's perennially slim comic partner Hugh Laurie...."
3616. Currier, Jameson. "News." Lambda Book Report 13, no. 1/2 (2004): 50-50.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents an update on issues in the entertainment and media sectors relevant to the gay community as of August 2004. Includes reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...Two of Britain's most famous gay actors will soon be dueling Sherlocks. Stephen Fry will star as Arthur Conan Doyle's quintessential British detective, Sherlock Holmes, in a movie that will air on ITV at Christmastime. Fry's longtime comedy partner, Hugh Laurie, will co-star at Dr. Watson....Rupert Everett will also star as Sherlock Holmes in another TV-movie version which will be shown earlier in the year on BBC, a follow-up to their successful Hounds of the Baskerville feature. This production will have an original screenplay and will not be based on an Arthur Conan Doyle story; Ian Hart will co-star as his Dr. Watson...."
3617. Koch, Tom. "The doctor in this House: lessons from TV's Gregory House, M.D." CMAJ: Canadian Medical Association Journal 178, no. 1 (2008): 67-68.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the television program "House, M.D.," starring Hugh Laurie, Lisa Edelstein, and Robert Sean. Includes references to Holmes.
3618. Methven, Nicola. "Frying Squad; Fry & Laurie Return as Holmes & Watson." The Mirror, March 30, 2004: 7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Comedy duo Hugh Laurie and Stephen Fry are to reunite as Sherlock Holmes and Dr Watson in a major new ITV drama. The pair were last on the small screen together as Jeeves and Wooster more than a decade ago. Now Fry, 46, a devoted Holmes fan, will play the Baker St detective, with 44-year-old Laurie co-starring as his loyal friend Watson...."
3619. Waldman, Allison J. "Emmy's 500-Pound Gorilla." Television Week 26, no. 32 (2007): 14-14.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the television program "House," starring Hugh Laurie and David Morse. "...According to the creators of the show, there's a link between Gregory House and Sherlock Holmes, especially in their relentless need to uncover the truth...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

10B ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- ACTORS AND ACTRESSES -- LAW, JUDE (4)

3620. "Jude Law to be new Sherlock." The Evening Standard (London), February 25, 2002: 6.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "He will appear as the detective in 'Sherlock Holmes and the Vengeance of Dracula.' A movie source said today: 'With his great looks and accent, Jude will be perfect for the role of Holmes. This will be the darkest Sherlock Holmes project ever made.' In 1990, before he became famous, the 29-year-old actor had a bit part in the TV series The Casebook Of Sherlock Holmes, with Jeremy Brett as Holmes."
3621. "Most Improved...Robert Downey, Jr." Maclean's 121, no. 45 (2008): 90-90.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reports on an incident that befell Robert Downey Jr., an actor, on the set of the motion picture "Sherlock Holmes," directed by Guy Ritchie. According to the piece, a tobacco pipe being used as a prop in the film fell into Downey's lap, igniting a fire on his crotch which was extinguished by co-star Jude Law.
3622. Bamigboye, Baz. "Elocutionary, Dr Watson; It's Friday!" Daily Mail (London), October 3, 2008: 56.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Guy Ritchie has assembled a thoroughly British cast for his Sherlock Holmes movie. But what, you might well ask, about Robert Downey Jr, the all-American star who plays Holmes? 'His accent is perfect!' Kelly Reilly insisted. Kelly plays Mary, the girlfriend of Dr Watson (Jude Law) in Sherlock Holmes, as the film is simply titled...."
3623. Nicholl, Katie. "Whiff of panic for Sienna as Jude elbows her out of Sherlock film." Mail on Sunday (London), November 9, 2008: 20.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Having returned to Britain without her millionaire actor boyfriend Balthazar Getty in tow, it seems things are going from bad to worse for poor Sienna Miller. Friends say the 26-year-old, left, is 'seriously worried' about her acting career after she was dropped from Guy Ritchie's movie Sherlock Holmes - apparently after her ex, Jude Law, agreed to play Dr Watson...."

10B ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- ACTORS AND ACTRESSES -- LEE, CHRISTOPHER
(2)

3624. Brown, Geoff. "Arts." The Times (London), May 18, 2000: 2.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Brief review of "Sherlock Holmes and the Deadly Necklace," Orbit Screen Classics, 12, 1962. "'Sherlock Holmes, Detective,' says the nameplate above the Baker Street doorbell. Inside live Christopher Lee (just right for pipe, deerstalker and logical reasoning) and Thorley Walters's bumbling Dr Watson. But this is a German film, dubbed into English by unknown Americans, none of whom can pronounce Moriarty. The story is not canonical, but there's fun of a kind watching the hunt for an old necklace of Cleopatra's in a vaguely 1920s London...."
3625. Morrill, David F. "Christopher Lee's Memories of Sherlock." The Holmes & Watson Report 1, no. 7 (1998): 20-21, 28-29.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

10B ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- ACTORS AND ACTRESSES -- LLEWELLYN, ROGER (7)

3626. "The most complex case for Sherlock; coffee break Preview Sherlock Holmes Torch Theatre, Milford Haven." The Western Mail, October 1, 2008: 26.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "One of the world's greatest fictional detectives confronts the most complex case

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- of all - his own psyche - in a new Sherlock Holmes production which comes to Wales this week. In this staged fantasy based on fiction, Arthur Conan Doyle tires of his famous sleuth and creates arch-villain Professor Moriarty to dispose of him....Funny, engaging and dark, this tale of murder, mystery and the occult is a play which is packed with ideas - and it's also the perfect form of entertainment....The play features Roger Llewellyn as Holmes....Following his international success in Sherlock Holmes...The Last Act, the new play has been created and directed by the renowned author David Stuart Davies, directed by Gareth Armstrong and it features original music from the Royal Shakespeare Company's composer Simon Slater."
3627. "Sherlock Holmes is centre stage." Birmingham Evening Mail, April 1, 2008: 18.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Theatre goers will get an insight into the mind of the world's greatest fictional detective this month. Roger Llewellyn stars in 'Sherlock Holmes - The Last Act', a solo play that will be performed at the Lichfield Garrick Theatre on April 12 from 7.30pm. Set in 1916, Holmes is drawn out of his retirement in Sussex for the funeral of his good friend, Dr Watson, and returns to Baker Street to resolve the last act of his epic career - understanding his own psyche...."
3628. "Spooky tale of supersleuth Sherlock." Daily Post (Liverpool), January 23, 2009: 21.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The character of Sherlock Holmes is the main talking point in a spiningtling new drama about Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's great detective. The man in the deerstalker is played by Roger Llewellyn in Sherlock Holmes...the Death and Life. In this story at Theatr Colwyn, the supersleuth is becoming somewhat arrogant and so malevolent Moriarty is brought in to take him on. But Doyle's dangerous strategy, combined with his passion for raising the spirits of the dead, has rather more surreal and dramatic consequences than he bargains for....The new play, written by David Stuart Davies and directed by Gareth Armstrong, is billed as a fantasy based on a fiction. Davies, a playwright and author, specialises in adaptations of the Conan Doyle canon. And there's original music by Simon Slater. Sherlock Holmes...the Death and Life, Theatr Colwyn, Colwyn Bay, Wednesday, February 4, 7.30pm."
3629. Beacom, Brian. "Sherlock Holmes The Last Act." Evening Times (Glasgow), September 3, 2004: 29.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Roger Llewellyn appears as the world's greatest fictional detective as he confronts his most complex case of all - his own psyche. Set in 1916, this top-rated one-man play sees Holmes returning to London, after two years retirement in Sussex, to attend the funeral of his friend and colleague Dr Watson. Combining wit, humour, drama and pathos, Sherlock Holmes - The Last Act, takes Holmes back to Baker Street. And in the process it explores the mind of the man, not the detective. What we come to discover is a passionate man with a cutting sense of humour. This vivid dramatisation also examines the close relationship between Holmes and Watson, as Llewellyn moves seamlessly through a gallery of Conan Doyle's characters. The play has toured the world to packed houses and rave reviews."
3630. Clarke, Roger. "Reviews: Llewellyn's excellent role is elementary; Sherlock Holmes...The Death and Life, Lichfield Garrick Theatre." Birmingham Evening Mail, February 13, 2009: 83.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Roger Llewellyn produces an acting masterclass in this sequel to his first venture into Holmes' world. Sherlock Holmes ... the last act, written like the new production by David Stuart Davies, has been touring the world since 1999 and with Holmes killed off and resurrected the new production could be following in its footsteps. Llewellyn, on stage alone for the best part of an hour-and-a-half, plays ten characters living a conflict between Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and the creation he has come to hate, Sherlock Holmes. Into the mix comes Prof James Moriarty, arch villain of his age destined to kill the finest detective of his generation - until the characters develop a mind of their own. The play examines Doyle's frustration at the lack of success of his historical novels, his passion for spiritualism, his letters to his mother, his father's incarceration in an asylum and his relationship with Holmes. It is a test of the actor's art which Llewellyn passes with distinction."
3631. Key, Philip. "The return of . . . The Return of Sherlock Holmes ; 08 Culture Diary." Daily Post (Liverpool), September 23, 2008: 16.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "One-man play The Death and Life of Sherlock Holmes comes to the region tomorrow night as part of the Sefton Celebrates Writing Festival. Renowned actor Roger Llewellyn reprises the role of the famous detective - and several more roles besides - after the first outing proved so successful...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

3632. Leland, Mary. "Review." The Irish Times, March 23, 2006: 2.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Sherlock Holmes - The Last Act! at the Everyman Palace in Cork. "An actor completely in charge of his material, his stage and his own artistry, Roger Llewellyn invests his performance in Sherlock Holmes - The Last Act! with all the tension achieved by Conan Doyle at his best. Written by David Stuart Davies and unfolding in the measured sequences of classic detective fiction, the play is, of course, a brilliant opportunity for any actor with the intelligence to grasp its rhythms and to peel away the sometimes pompous layers of the eponymous hero and reveal the passionate, lonely personality underneath....Presented by Jay Productions in association with the Salisbury Playhouse, the piece is, in fact, something of an exercise in detection in itself, but one of great style and subtlety. This is Holmes in 1916, mourning his colleague Watson whom he is at last able to acknowledge as a dear friend, and re-working through his tribute a series of plots and characters with which both have been memorably associated. It is a fiction upon a fiction, and held its audience captivated through two acts of 45 minutes each....Music by Simon Slater and lighting by Peter Hunter are threaded through Gareth Armstrong's direction in a presentation in which the few props are employed so skilfully that the bravura touches here and there are accents rather than declarations, commas rather than exclamation marks. This is a production which has been touring in England, Europe and America, yet there is nothing stale about it. The playwright - a Conan Doyle enthusiast - seasons his script with implied acknowledgements of contemporary approaches, but both the writing and the performance achieve an almost old-fashioned - and certainly rare - symmetry of excellence and entertainment."

10B ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- ACTORS AND ACTRESSES -- MACNEE, PATRICK (1)

3633. Pollak, Michael. "F.Y.I." The New York Times, January 2, 2005: 14.2.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Questions from readers. "Q. As we Sherlock Holmes fans approach the anniversary of the master's birth, I started wondering: Did Sherlock Holmes ever visit New York? A. Only in the movies. The screen's most-filmed detective came to Manhattan in "Sherlock Holmes in New York," a 1976 pastiche that included Roger Moore as Holmes, Patrick Macnee as Watson, John Huston as the evil Moriarty and Charlotte Rampling as Irene Adler. The fanciful plot has Moriarty seeking world domination by stealing Lower Manhattan's gold supply, and kidnapping Irene Adler's son, who may or may not be Holmes's."

10B ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- ACTORS AND ACTRESSES -- MCKERN, LEO (1)

3634. "Passings Leo McKern and Leslye Wintrob." Baker Street West 18, no. 2 (2002): inside rear cover.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

10B ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- ACTORS AND ACTRESSES -- MEISER, EDITH (1)

3635. "50 Years Ago: 'Cadaver in the Roman Toga' by Edith Meiser airs on November 9, 1947." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 1, no. 1 (1997): 3.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A brief biographical sketch of actress and writer Edith Meiser. Includes a photograph of Meiser and a reproduction of page one of the script for "Cadaver in the Roman Toga."

10B ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- ACTORS AND ACTRESSES -- MERRISON, CLIVE (1)

3636. Donovan, Paul. "So good, it's elementary." The Sunday Times (London), June 21, 1998: 30.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "History is about to be made on Radio 4. For the first time anywhere in the world

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

and on any medium, the entire Sherlock Holmes canon of 56 short stories and four novels has now been dramatised with the same two actors - Clive Merrison as Holmes and Michael Williams as Dr Watson. The Hound of the Baskervilles, which begins next Sunday as a two-part Classic Serial, completes a project that started nine years ago and is unlikely ever to be replicated...."

10B ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- ACTORS AND ACTRESSES -- MOORE, ROGER(1)

3637. Pollak, Michael. "F.Y.I." The New York Times, January 2, 2005: 14.2.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Questions from readers. "Q. As we Sherlock Holmes fans approach the anniversary of the master's birth, I started wondering: Did Sherlock Holmes ever visit New York? A. Only in the movies. The screen's most-filmed detective came to Manhattan in "Sherlock Holmes in New York," a 1976 pastiche that included Roger Moore as Holmes, Patrick Macnee as Watson, John Huston as the evil Moriarty and Charlotte Rampling as Irene Adler. The fanciful plot has Moriarty seeking world domination by stealing Lower Manhattan's gold supply, and kidnapping Irene Adler's son, who may or may not be Holmes's."

10B ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- ACTORS AND ACTRESSES -- NORWOOD, EILLE (3)

3638. "The master detective on screen." The Times (London), September 2, 2002: 19.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Sherlock Holmes has been played by nearly 100 actors in more than 200 films. Ellie Norwood, a hit as Holmes in 47 films in the early 1920s, tackled the role with a De Niro-like intensity. He read all the stories, learnt to play the violin (presumably badly) and wore a dressing gown given to him by Arthur Conan Doyle. But he grew weary of the part. Basil Rathbone, partnered by Nigel Bruce's amiable old buffer of a Watson, made the role his own in the 1940s....Most post-Rathbone Holmeses have been a rather dreary lot. Perhaps the role's need for both restraint and flamboyance cancel each other out....Their old foe Moriarty features in the forthcoming The League of Extraordinary Gentlemen, in which he does battle with Dr Jekyll and Captain Nemo. Holmes's big-screen future currently looks as if he'll have to play second fiddle. As we know already, that's not a sweet- sounding prospect."

3639. Cook, William. "Holmes, sweet Holmes." New Statesman 131, no. 4602 (2002): 31.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the success experienced by film adaptations of books on Sherlock Holmes. Main attraction of the silent films on Sherlock Holmes played by Eille Norwood; Actors who played the role of Sherlock Holmes; Overview of film adaptations of books.

3640. Macnab, Geoffrey. "Friday review: Crime and Punishment: Sherlock Holmes might have been created for the cinema. But playing him cost at least two actors their careers." The Guardian (London), July 12, 2002: 12.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...His creator, who named him after a pair of cricketers called Sherlock and Holmes, had little fondness for him, and many of the actors who played him often became exasperated by him. He was haughty, erratic, self- obsessed and his violin-playing was atrocious. 'I came to the conclusion (as one may in living too closely and too long in seclusion with any one rather unique and difficult personality) that there was nothing lovable about Holmes,' Basil Rathbone admitted after playing the detective in 14 feature films, innumerable radio plays and an ill-fated Broadway show. Eille Norwood, who clocked up 47 screen appearances as Holmes in the early 1920s, grew equally frustrated at being typecast as the man with 'the dressing gown, the violin and the untidy Baker Street rooms'...."

10B ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- ACTORS AND ACTRESSES -- PATERSON, BILL (2)

3641. Hendry, Steve. "Television: Dr Watson's Accent is so Elementary for Paterson." Sunday Mail, March 25, 2007:

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

15.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Bill Paterson did some sleuthing of his own when he took on the role of Sherlock Holmes sidekick, Dr Watson. The Scots actor takes on the iconic role in new series Sherlock Holmes and the Baker Street Irregulars after extensive research into the author and decided to give his own Glasgow accent to the character in tribute to his creator, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. He said: 'I think Watson is how Conan Doyle saw himself. He's a medical man and a Scotsman, as was Conan Doyle. But Watson is very seldom played as Scottish so this was an ideal opportunity for me as I'm from Glasgow. It makes for an interesting contrast with Holmes....'"

3642. ———. "Television: Dr Watson's accent is so elementary for Paterson." Sunday Mail, Mar 25, 2007: 15.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "But [Watson] is very seldom played as Scottish so this was an ideal opportunity for me as I'm from Glasgow. It makes for an interesting contrast with Holmes. [Bill Paterson], 61, star of BBC Scotland supernatural drama Sea Of Souls, hit movies including Miss Potter with Renee Zellweger and Ewan McGregor, and new film Amazing Grace, could not resist the chance to play Watson. "I don't know how many times the Irregulars pop up in the original stories but they are a gang of ruffians who appear in [Holmes]' office, much to Watson's agony.

10B ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- ACTORS AND ACTRESSES -- PLUMMER, CHRISTOPHER (1)

3643. Booth, Matthew. "My Favorite Sherlock: Christopher Plummer." The Ritual, no. 24 (1999): 36-37.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

10B ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- ACTORS AND ACTRESSES -- PORTER, ERIC (2)

3644. "Passings Edwin H. Blum, Eric Porter, Miklos Roza." Baker Street West I 1, no. 3 (1995): 35.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3645. Cox, Michael. "Eric Porter 1928-1995 (and James Moriarty)." The Musgrave Papers, no. 8 (1995): 122-124.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

10B ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- ACTORS AND ACTRESSES -- PRYCE, JONATHAN (2)

3646. Hill, Claire. "Jonathan Pryce puts his mark on the legendary role of Sherlock Holmes." The Western Mail, March 6, 2007: 3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Sherlock holmes is the latest hero to be given a modern makeover to appeal to young audiences following the success of Doctor Who and Robin Hood. Starring Welsh actor Jonathan Pryce as the legendary Holmes, the two-part BBC drama has been written by the people behind the new-look Robin Hood and ITV's Primeval. Most famous recently for his role as Governor Weatherby Swann in the Pirates of the Caribbean films, the Holywell-born actor has wanted to play the detective since watching him as a child...."
3647. Maloney, Jim. "Sheer luck!" The Sun (London), March 24, 2007: 21.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Sherlock Holmes And The Baker Street Irregulars BBC1 Sunday. Playing legendary detective Sherlock Holmes is a dream come true for Pirates Of The Caribbean film star Jonathan Pryce...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

10B ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- ACTORS AND ACTRESSES -- RATHBONE, BASIL (29)

3648. "All I want for Christmas." Newsweek 126, no. 23 (1995): 78.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a gift guide of music, books and other items for Christmas 1995. Photo caption reference to Rathbone as Holmes along with another Holmes reference. "Men who like their mayhem sedate and their detectives celibate will like Baker Street Studies (Otto Penzler. $8), first published in 1934: another anthology of gloriously stodgy essays in the Otto Penzler Sherlock Holmes Library. One essay defends Holmes against imputations of misogyny, and blames the sexless sleuth's cocaine habit on "frustrated desire." We've got our doubts: seems to us they could say the same thing about guys who watch eight hours of football every Sunday. Normal guys."

3649. "Books on TV." Bookseller, no. 5212 (2006): 43-43.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article presents information on certain books that will be serialized in television in Great Britain. "Sherlock Holmes and the House of Fear" will be shown on January 14, 2006, on BBC2 at 1 pm. Basil Rathbone stars in this 1945 adaptation of author Conan Doyle's sleuth yarn. "Johnny and the Bomb" will be shown on January 15, 2006, on BBC1 at 5:35 pm. It is a three-part dramatization of Terry Pratchett's time-travel fantasy, with Zoe Wanamaker. "Balderdash & Piffle" will be shown on January 16, 2006, on BBC2 at 9 pm.

3650. "Edmund Hartmann." The Times (London), January 2, 2004: 39.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Edmund Hartmann, film writer, was born on September 24, 1911. He died on November 28, 2003, aged 92....Although Hartmann was known primarily as a gagman, he also worked in other genres and scripted two of the best Sherlock Holmes films, Sherlock Holmes and the Secret Weapon (1942) and The Scarlet Claw (1944), with Basil Rathbone as the famous detective...."

3651. "Guilty Pleasures Alec Baldwin." Film Comment 39, no. 5 (2003): 8.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents the favorite films of actor Alec Baldwin. 'Midnight Lace,' starring Doris Day and Rex Harrison; Favorite comedies; 'Woman in Green,' starring Basil Rathbone. "My favorite movies of all time? Nothing takes me back to my childhood better and quicker than Basil Rathbone as Sherlock Holmes. Give me Woman in Green or Voice of Terror any day."

3652. "The master detective on screen." The Times (London), September 2, 2002: 19.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Sherlock Holmes has been played by nearly 100 actors in more than 200 films. Ellie Norwood, a hit as Holmes in 47 films in the early 1920s, tackled the role with a De Niro-like intensity. He read all the stories, learnt to play the violin (presumably badly) and wore a dressing gown given to him by Arthur Conan Doyle. But he grew weary of the part. Basil Rathbone, partnered by Nigel Bruce's amiable old buffer of a Watson, made the role his own in the 1940s....Most post-Rathbone Holmeses have been a rather dreary lot. Perhaps the role's need for both restraint and flamboyance cancel each other out....Their old foe Moriarty features in the forthcoming The League of Extraordinary Gentlemen, in which he does battle with Dr Jekyll and Captain Nemo. Holmes's big-screen future currently looks as if he'll have to play second fiddle. As we know already, that's not a sweet-sounding prospect."

3653. "Opening Shots." Film Comment 39, no. 5 (2003): 6.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Looks at various developments in the motion picture industry as of September 2003. Sidebar article with reference to Holmes--Guilty Pleasures Alec Baldwin: "My favorite movies of all time? Nothing takes me back to my childhood better and quicker than Basil Rathbone as Sherlock Holmes. Give me Woman in Green or Voice of Terror any day."

3654. "Rathbone, the Good Baddie; Answers to Correspondants." Daily Mail (London), August 6, 1999: 70.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A brief biography of Basil Rathbone is given in answer to a reader query.

3655. "Terrestrial Pick of the Day." Daily Record, May 3, 2004: 23.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes BBC2, 11.00am. The master sleuth sets out

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- to scupper arch-villain Moriarty's dastardly plan to steal the crown jewels. Compelling detective caper, one of the best Holmes adventures, starring Basil Rathbone....Sherlock Holmes Returns five, 1.35pm. A doctor encounters a man claiming to be Sherlock Holmes in London, and is drawn into the adventure of a lifetime. Crime drama, starring Anthony Higgins...."
3656. Bauers, Sandy. "Readers will get vocal over these stocking stuffers; [Morning Edition]." Orange County Register, Dec 11, 1994: F32.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This version of Dickens' classic is read by Patrick Stewart. Although my annual favorite still is the Caedmon recording by Sir John Gielgud, this is the one that gets more hype, and Simon & Schuster has just released it in a fancy new CD version.; With the publication of this recording, Simon & Schuster has completed its series of vintage Holmes radio broadcasts starring Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce. The series is available singly or in packaged sets.; The novelized version of the Battle of Gettysburg is read by George Hearn with an afterword by [Michael Shaara]'s son Jeffrey. This is not only a great recording, it also has an elegant box and a four-page folder with a map.
3657. Bergan, Ronald. "Hillary Brooke; Sherlock's favourite film star." The Guardian (London), June 10, 1999: 22.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Although the tall, beautiful, blonde actress Hillary Brooke, who has died aged 84, did appear in a number of A-movies, and was seen a few times in Technicolor, she will always be associated with the small, monochrome second features that were the staple of picture-going in the 1940s and early 1950s. As such she retained the affection of the many collectors of cinema arcana. Brooke's fame, such as it was, came mainly from her appearances in a couple of the pacy and atmospheric Sherlock Holmes films, starring the witty duo of Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce, and as comic foil to a less sophisticated pair, Bud Abbott and Lou Costello, in their popular TV series...."
3658. Blowen, Michael. "Video Watch." The Boston Globe, May 7, 2000: C9.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...Fans of Sherlock Holmes can rejoice with the release on Tuesday of "An Evening With Sherlock Holmes." Actually, it should be titled several evenings because this boxed set contains four movies - "Sherlock Holmes and the Secret Weapon" (1942), "Woman In Green" (1945), "Terror by Night" (1946), and "Dressed To Kill" (1946). And that's not all. It also includes an interview with Holmes creator Sir Arthur Conan Doyle filmed in 1927 and 30 original radio broadcasts starring the film's leads, Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce...."
3659. Burke, Ken. "Charting relationships in American popular film, part 1." International Journal of Instructional Media 24, no. 4 (1997): 341-361.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // As an extension of some of the author's previous writings on American popular cinema, this study presents and explains several diagrams showing the evolution of significant film genres in context of each other and relevant historical trends. Figure 3 includes Sherlock Holmes by way of The Hound of the Baskervilles (1939) and the series of films with Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce.
3660. Cawley, Janet, and Michael Todd Boyer. "Freeze Frame." Biography 4, no. 11 (2000): 18.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Profiles actors Basil Rathbone and Jack Lemmon and actress Ginger Rogers. Reference to Rathbone's 14 Holmes films.
3661. Corliss, Richard. "7 Sharpest Detectives on DVD." Time 166, no. 4 (2005): 72-72.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents information about several older classic sleuth films now or soon to be available on DVD. Includes Sherlock Holmes, the Collection. "Hawk-visaged Basil Rathbone embodied Conan Doyle's detective in 14 B movies, some transporting him from Victorian to modern London to outwit the Nazis. As Dr. Watson, Nigel Bruce was an ideal foil for the great man."
3662. Decker, Jeff. "Tales from Dartmoor: 'A Night at the Opera'." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 3 (1994): 161.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Cartoon featuring two characters arguing between Verdi and Wagner...and Brett or Rathbone.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

3663. Kerr, Alison. "Face of the Day." The Herald (Glasgow), June 28, 2000: 32.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "It's ironic that Basil Rathbone is still best remembered for playing Sherlock Holmes, the good guy, in a string of popular B- movies in the 1940s, as he made his name and reputation in Hollywood for his portrayals of dastardly villains in a series of swashbucklers and period dramas. Born Philip St John Basil Rathbone in Johannesburg in 1892, he was educated in England where he made his theatrical debut in 1911. After the First World War, during which he was awarded a Military Cross, he headlined Shakespeare productions at Stratford and finally made his film debut in 1921. Stage work took him to America in 1923, and he wound up in Hollywood the following year, making his American movie debut in Pity the Chorus Girl (1924)...."
3664. Krebs, Josef. "Ways of Looking." Sound & Vision 69, no. 4 (2004): 97-97.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews two motion pictures released on DVD format. "Sherlock Holmes," starring Basil Rathbone; "Cracker," starring Robbie Coltrane.
3665. Lesh, Richard D. "Basil Rathbone's 3-Day Visit to the Wayne Campus." Shoso-In Bulletin 6, no. (1996): 40-42.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3666. Love, Damien. "Home Movie." The Sunday Herald, June 25, 2000: 45.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Although their hasty flickering worlds have little to do with Arthur Conan Doyle, there will only ever be one quicksilver-sardonic Sherlock Holmes, and, bumbling sweetly beside him, only one Watson. Basil Rathbone, like a sneering rapier, and Nigel Bruce first breathed life into the duo for 20th Century Fox's Hound of the Baskervilles (1939) and the same year's follow-up, The Adventures of ... Both films were moody main features, faithful to Conan Doyle in plot and period. Between 1942-1946 Universal employed the pair to reprise the roles in 12 fine B-movies, transposing Holmes and Watson to (then) modern times. Showing this week are five of these: Sherlock Holmes and the Secret Weapon (1942), The Pearl of Death (1944), Pursuit to Algiers (1945), House of Fear (1945) and The Woman in Green (1945), all directed by Roy William Neil...."
3667. Macnab, Geoffrey. "Friday review: Crime and Punishment: Sherlock Holmes might have been created for the cinema. But playing him cost at least two actors their careers." The Guardian (London), July 12, 2002: 12.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...His creator, who named him after a pair of cricketers called Sherlock and Holmes, had little fondness for him, and many of the actors who played him often became exasperated by him. He was haughty, erratic, self- obsessed and his violin-playing was atrocious. 'I came to the conclusion (as one may in living too closely and too long in seclusion with any one rather unique and difficult personality) that there was nothing lovable about Holmes,' Basil Rathbone admitted after playing the detective in 14 feature films, innumerable radio plays and an ill-fated Broadway show. Eille Norwood, who clocked up 47 screen appearances as Holmes in the early 1920s, grew equally frustrated at being typecast as the man with 'the dressing gown, the violin and the untidy Baker Street rooms'...."
3668. Maughan, Shannon. "Spoken Audio for Fall." Publishers Weekly 250, no. 31 (2003): 26.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a list of audiobooks. Includes Holmes and Doyle entries. The Lost World by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. Read by Michael Prichard. Unabridged, seven CDs, 8.5 hours, $39; one MP3 CD, $20, July. Classic Tales of Horror and Suspense by Edgar Allan Poe, H.G. Wells, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and Robert Louis Stevenson. Dramatization. Four cassettes or four CDs, 4.5 hours, $24.95, Aug. The Sign of Four by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. Read by David Timson. Unabridged, four CDs, five hours, $26.98, Nov. The New Adventures of Sherlock Holmes: Volume 1--6 by Anthony Boucher and Dennis Greene. Read by Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce. Abridged, six CDs, six hours, $29.95, Oct.
3669. McCormick, Patrick. "Science fiction." U.S.Catholic 70, no. 1 (2005): 44-46.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Criticizes the acceptance of a fundamentalist approach to the evidence used in criminal investigation as popularized in the TV program "CSI: Crime Scene Investigation." Theme of the program; Overview of detective characters in literature; Statistics on crime and criminal investigations; Result of a politicized intelligence report. Includes references to Doyle and Holmes. "...The popularity of the geek detective is nothing new. Arthur Conan Doyle gave us Sherlock Holmes, whose 221 B Baker apartment was regularly filled with the smoke and smells of some experiment and whose desk always had a stack of obscure but relevant scientific monographs. Like Grissom, Holmes loved putting his crime scene evidence under the magnifying glass, checking out footprints, soil samples, and the wear pattern on a pair of boots. Agatha Christie's master detective, Hercule Poirot, did not share Holmes' penchant for lab work, but he, too, had limitless faith in 'the little grey cells' of his very clever brain and was supremely confident in the ability of human intelligence to solve life's most daunting mysteries..." Sidebar on memorable detectives notes "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes (Granada Television, 1984-1994). William Gillette played Holmes on the stage for more than three decades and Basil Rathbone portrayed him in 16 films, but most contemporary fans agree that Jeremy Brett's performance in this British TV series has set the gold standard. In the Adventures, Return, Casebook, and Memoirs of Sherlock Holmes, as well as several TV films made from Conan Doyle's longer stories, Brett gives a meticulous and studied performance of the cerebral but impassioned detective's quest for the truth of the matter."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

3670. Nichols, Peter M. "Conan Doyle, On Holmes." The New York Times, May 19, 2000: E1:28.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "It was really terribly important after the war when all the young men needed contacting,' Sir Arthur Conan Doyle says rather breezily on camera during a 10-minute address he delivers on a DVD recently released by Focusfilm, a distributor in Ossining, N.Y. It was 1926, and by his remarks and manner the writer clearly wants to be done with his celebrated creation, the detective Sherlock Holmes, and move on to matters that he considers more serious: psychic experiences and communication with the beyond. The young men he refers to were killed during World War I. Holmes, he seems to imply, would be better off laid to rest himself if only the public would permit it....On the same disc, part of a set of four, is 'Terror by Night,' a Holmes adventure filmed by Universal during the 40's with Basil Rathbone as the detective and Nigel Bruce as Watson....The detective brings off other nice surprises in three other cases on the discs: 'Sherlock Holmes and the Secret Weapon' (1942), 'The Woman in Green' (1945) and 'Dressed to Kill' (1946), which was Rathbone's last Holmes film. By then he had played the role more than 200 times, not only on screen but on the radio in 'The New Adventures of Sherlock Holmes.'...The movies come from the National Film Museum, a large archive in Bangor, Me., that provides old film to producers and distributors...."

3671. Rogers, Michael. "Classic Returns." Library Journal 130, no. 19 (2005): 107.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // An annotated bibliography of re-released classic fiction and nonfiction titles is provided. Includes an entry for Doyle and Holmes. Doyle, Sir Arthur Conan. The Sherlock Holmes Mysteries. 547p. ISBN 1-59609-176-2. Signet. 2005. pap. $14.95 with DVD. "These clever packages combine a classic text with a DVD of a film version. The Holmes volume's 22 stories accompany Terror by Night and The Woman in Green, starring Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce...."

3672. Schaefer, Eric, and Dan Streible. "Archival News." Cinema Journal 42, no. 2 (2003): 125.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents an update on film archives as of January 2003. Motion picture collection acquired by the Library of Congress; Film memorabilia acquired by the Herrick Library; Film preservation grant awarded by the Andrew W. Mellon Foundation to the National Film Preservation Foundation. Includes a reference to Holmes, Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce. "The UCLA Film and Television Archive presented its eleventh Festival of Preservation in the summer of 2002. The biennial festival programmed its most diverse line-up ever. More than forty feature films, TV programs, trailers, shorts, and newsreels from 1905 to 1987 were showcased, almost all preserved or restored by the archive....Low-budget efforts were also shown, including two Universal Sherlock Holmes films starring Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce, Sherlock Holmes and the Voice of Terror (1942) and Dressed to Kill (1946)..."

3673. ———. "Archival News." Cinema Journal 40, no. 4 (2001): 104.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents updates on the motion picture industry as of June 2001. Acquisition of nitrate film elements from Warner Bros. by the UCLA Film and Television Archive; Decision of Shaw Brothers Ltd. of Hong Kong to sell its archive of original films to media magnate T. Ananda Krishnan of Malaysia; Development of several projects related to cinema by the Museum of Jurassic Technology in Culver City, California. Includes a reference to Holmes, Basil Rathbone, and Nigel Bruce. "...Warner Bros. has initiated the completion of a preservation project through the UCLA Film and Television Archive that was begun by Hugh Hefner. Funding from Hefner helped preserve six films in Universal's Sherlock Holmes series

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

that starred Basil Rathbone as Holmes and Nigel Bruce as Dr. Watson: Sherlock Holmes and the Secret Weapon (1942), Sherlock Holmes and the Spider Woman (1944), The Scarlet Claw (1944), The Pearl of Death (1944), The Woman in Green (1945), and Terror by Night (1946). Warner Bros., which recently acquired the rights to the series, has already funded the preservation of Sherlock Holmes Faces Death (1943) and The House of Fear (1945) and has committed to funding the preservation of the remaining Universal Holmes films: Sherlock Holmes and the Voice of Terror (1942), Sherlock Holmes in Washington (1943), Dressed to Kill (1946), and Pursuit to Algiers (1945)."

3674. Schwartz, Eleanor N. "Hooray for Hollywood." Life 19, no. 4 (1996): 74.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Features photographs of Hollywood celebrities who were covered by 'Life' magazine. Includes Basil Rathbone and Angela Lansbury in 1955; Sean Connery and Alec Baldwin during the filming of 'The Hunt for Red October'; MGM honcho Louis B. Mayer with his studio's 65 stars in 1943.

3675. Slough, Brian. "A brush with Basil." Times Educational Supplement, no. (1997): VII.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the sound recording 'Audiopacks,' a collection of Sherlock Holmes stories read by Basil Rathbone.

3676. Thorpe, Vanessa. "The answer, my dear Watson, is elementary. One of these new Sherlock Holmes is an impostor." The Observer, June 20, 2004: 13.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Few fictional characters divide audiences so passionately. Some are fans of Basil Rathbone's Sherlock Holmes, others are devotees of the Peter Cushing version, while many argue that no actor quite caught the manner of the greatest consulting detective of them all until Jeremy Brett took up his deerstalker. Now two more actors are to take on the challenge of playing the heroic detective in a TV battle between rival interpretations, one ITV, the other BBC, which is likely to equal the struggle between Holmes and Moriarty atop the Reichenbach Falls. In the ITV corner is Stephen Fry, a passionate scholar of the work of the character's creator, Arthur Conan Doyle....Over in the BBC corner is a relative newcomer, Rupert Everett, 45, the glamorous Hollywood star who made his name on the British stage in the early Eighties....Members of the Sherlock Holmes Society of London are poised to make their judgment and, at first sight, neither actor appears to pass muster...."

10B ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- ACTORS AND ACTRESSES -- RICHARDSON, IAN (6)

3677. "Critic's Choice; It's Elementary for Dr Bell." Daily Record, December 18, 1999: 61.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Murder Rooms BBC 2. Filmed in Glasgow and Edinburgh last summer, this edgy - and somewhat spooky - thriller is inspired by the real life relationship between writer Arthur Conan Doyle and his tutor at Edinburgh University, pioneer forensic pathologist Dr Joseph Bell. The pair become embroiled in a hunt for a serial killer, a journey which reveals the stinking underbelly of Victorian society and inspires Doyle to create the most memorable detective of all time - the one and only Sherlock Holmes. This two-part drama stars a whole host of Scottish talent lead by the excellent Ian Richardson - best known at the scary PM Francis Urquhart in the BBC's House of Cards trilogy and recently seen in Gormenghast and The Magician's House - as Joseph Bell, with Robin Laing (Joey in both series of Jimmy McGovern's The Lakes) as the young Arthur Conan Doyle...."

3678. "Heart of Holmes drama." The Evening Post (Wellington), January 22, 2001: TV3.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The world of Sherlock Holmes is reinvented in Dr Bell And Mr Doyle: The Dark Beginnings Of Sherlock Holmes, a story inspired by the real-life relationship between Arthur Conan Doyle (Laing) and his tutor at Edinburgh University, pioneer forensic pathologist, Dr Joseph Bell (Richardson), this week's Summer Mystery. Set in Edinburgh in 1878, the pair become embroiled in a hunt for a serial killer, a journey that reveals the underbelly of Victorian society and inspires Doyle to create the most memorable detective of all time - Sherlock Holmes. Writer David Pirie says this mystery is based on a true story...."

3679. Banks-Smith, Nancy. "Television: TV review: These ghoulish things." The Guardian (London), September 5,

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

2001: 22.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "In Baker Street I once heard a tourist say 'But where's the fog?' I was fairly befogged in Murder Rooms: the Dark Beginnings of Sherlock Holmes (BBC 1), which featured Dr Bell (Ian Richardson), the inspiration for Sherlock Holmes, and young Dr Doyle (Charles Edwards)....Posh production values have been poured over the film like warm brandy over plum pudding. The writing and acting are better than strictly necessary, the lighting is downright seductive and where did they find those charming bats? Someone has taken a lot of trouble. Being an Anglo-American production, all this is largely for the benefit of the disappointed American tourist in Baker Street. Who will not be disappointed with this drama...."

3680. Frame, Anna. "Murder Rooms:The Dark Beginning Of Sherlock Holmes." The Times (London), January 10, 2004: 37.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "According to Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, who left notes to prove it, he was inspired to create Sherlock Holmes by his professor at Edinburgh Medical School, Sir Joseph Bell. A pioneering forensic detective, Bell possessed enviable analytical skills that led to the cracking of many crimes. This evocative dramatisation, well directed by Paul Seed (A Touch of Frost, Auf Wiedersehen, Pet), stars Ian Richardson as Bell and Robin Laing as an unexpectedly rangy Doyle. Their hunt for a serial killer on the loose is involving, but the historical emphasis on early forensic science is fascinating in its own right."

3681. Gussow, Mel. "Vengeance in the Cotswolds And Other Intrigues." The New York Times, July 7, 2002: 13.4.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Where have all the mysteries gone? Was the death of Morse -- and, later, of John Thaw, the actor who created the role -- a sign of closure? For the past year, viewers of television mysteries have had to satisfy their appetite by judicious cable surfing, snaring a rerun of Morse or Poirot on A&E, catching a 'Cracker' on BBCA, searching for a second 'Second Sight' anywhere, anytime, while always wondering, haven't we seen this before?...Well, at least 'Mystery!' is back for the summer, with a round of three new series, followed by one repeat performance (from Robson Green, who plays the moody detective in 'Touching Evil 3')....Next in line is 'Murder Rooms: The Dark Beginnings of Sherlock Holmes,' a four-part continuation of a series of several seasons ago. 'Murder Rooms' is, we are told, the real-life story behind Sherlock Holmes, in which a doctor named Doyle (short for Arthur Conan Doyle) links up with his professor, Dr. Joseph Bell, a scientist who is also a detective. Bell is played by Ian Richardson, who in common with many other classical British actors, has already played Holmes himself...."

3682. Mason, M. S. "Cracking the case of Sherlock Holmes." Christian Science Monitor, March 3, 2000: 17.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of television program. "Creepy as the title may sound, Murder Rooms: The Dark Origins of Sherlock Holmes is a fascinating fictionalized account of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's first interest in criminal investigation. Despite a plot hole or two, it is well-made, eerie, and complicated - like so many of the Holmes cases. Best of all, the two-part Victorian thriller...provides some insight into Doyle's early life and helps explain where the real prototype for his famous detective came from - a genuine pleasure for Holmes fans...."

10B ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- ACTORS AND ACTRESSES -- RICHARDSON, RALPH (1)

3683. "Spring Audio Blooms." Publishers Weekly 253, no. 6 (2006): 26-38.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article presents a list of audio books including Sherlock Holmes: A Baker Street Dozen by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, read by John Gielgud, Ralph Richardson and Orson Welles.

10B ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- ACTORS AND ACTRESSES -- RITCHIE, GUY (7)

3684. "A Guy Thing." Wall Street Journal - Eastern Edition, 10/10, 2008: W2.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // An interview with filmmaker Guy Ritchie is presented. Ritchie believes that the

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

film "RocknRolla" will make it as good as other British films did in the American film industry like James Bond, Harry Potter, and Sherlock Holmes. When asked how his career would have been different if he was not married to Madonna, Ritchie says that it would have been the same outcome in the end. Though other people say that all publicity is good publicity, Ritchie thinks otherwise.

3685. Bartolomeo, Joey. "For Better Or for Worse." People 70, no. 4 (2008): 60-61.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article discusses the singer Madonna and husband Guy Ritchie. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "In a few weeks Madonna, Ritchie and their three kids will head back to London so the singer can put the final touches on her tour (which kicks off in Wales on Aug. 23). Come fall they will be leading separate lives again: In October Madonna returns to the U.S. to tour for two months, while Ritchie begins filming Sherlock Holmes with Robert Downey Jr. in London...."

3686. ———. "How They're Coping." People 70, no. 19 (2008): 67-68.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article discusses how the singer Madonna is handling the separation from her husband film director Guy Ritchie. "In the U.K., where Ritchie is shooting Sherlock Holmes, life seems brighter...."

3687. Bartolomeo, Joey, and Rennie Dyball. "How it fell apart. (Cover story)." People 70, no. 18 (2008): 54-59.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article looks at the events leading to the divorce of musician Madonna and film director Guy Ritchie. "...A pal says Ritchie, who has been shooting Sherlock Holmes in England, 'is throwing himself into his filmmaking.'..."

3688. Harlow, John. "It's grungy, Watson: Ritchie to film a fighting Holmes." The Sunday Times (London), June 8, 2008: 6.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The film director Guy Ritchie, husband of Madonna, is to try to revive his career by giving Sherlock Holmes a gritty, gangland-style makeover. Ritchie is best known for his violent 1998 hit Lock, Stock and Two Smoking Barrels but has had little success since. The Hollywood studio Warner Bros is backing his attempt to repackage Holmes from his tweedy, cerebral image into a sword-wielding fist-fighter with a short fuse. In Los Angeles last week, an executive at Warner said it was looking for a 'grungy' Holmes. 'This is Sherlock Holmes as a street-fighting man, ready to take on man, monsters, whatever the world can throw at him.' The studio hopes to release the film, to be called Sherlock Holmes, in 2010. The story was conceived as a comic book by Lionel Wigram, a Briton based in Los Angeles who worked on the Harry Potter films. The comic will be published when the film is released...."

3689. Lyall, Sarah. "Is That You, Sherlock?" The New York Times, January 25, 2009: AR1.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "In a filthy, dank labyrinth of rooms below the streets of the East End, Sherlock Holmes was solving a case. That is, Robert Downey Jr., playing Holmes in the forthcoming film 'Sherlock Holmes,' was engaged in hand-to-hand, foot-to-stomach combat with a very big and very bad villain (Robert Maillat). Bam! Pow! Ouch! Both characters would end up knocked out on the floor, along with Holmes's trusty sidekick, Dr. John Watson, played by Jude Law. Filmed in December, the scene presented a sharp corrective to the popular cinematic view of Holmes, at least the one propagated by the old films featuring the wonderfully named British actor Basil Rathbone...."

3690. Wloszczyna, Susan. "Sherlock Holmes? Ritchie's on the case." USA Today, Aug 22, 2008: 8B.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Information on an upcoming Holmes movie. "Guy Ritchie's latest gangster yarn, RocknRolla, won't even be in theaters for another six weeks, but he already has turned his attentions to his next project, a version of Arthur Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes for contemporary tastes. 'It will be a very big production, visceral and intellectual,' Ritchie says. 'His brilliance will percolate into the action.' The expected 2010 Warner release will be set in the olden days, he says, but the emphasis will be as much on Holmes' physical prowess as it is on his keen powers of deduction. 'His intellect was as much of a curse as it was a blessing,' Ritchie says. 'He was a deeply layered character.' No word on the villain yet, but there will be a love interest based on Conan Doyle's Irene Adler. Casting is expected to be finished in six or so weeks. Ritchie already has been lucky to snag Robert Downey Jr., hot off of this summer's Iron Man and Tropic Thunder, as his lead. 'His wife, Susan, was a producer on RocknRolla, and he was one of the first people who saw it and was a big fan,' the filmmaker explains. 'He wanted to do something together, and this was a natural.' As for Downey's English accent, 'it's flawless.' Ritchie has no worries about producer Judd Apatow's competing Sherlock Holmes with Sacha Baron Cohen. As he says: 'They don't even have a script yet. We are way ahead.'

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

10B ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- ACTORS AND ACTRESSES -- ROXBURGH, RICHARD (7)

3691. "Christmas TV: the Dark Side of Sherlock Holmes." Belfast News Letter (Northern Ireland), December 20, 2002: 6.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Sherlock Holmes and his loyal companion Dr Watson are back on the trail of The Hound Of The Baskervilles. But those fans expecting a quaint, pipe-smoking detective in this new production might be in for a few surprises. The well-known detective will be hounding out the culprit on BBC One on Boxing Day and viewers will get to see him injecting morphine into his arm. Australian actor Richard Roxburgh, who plays Holmes, thinks that there is nothing wrong in revealing the super sleuth's darker side...."
3692. Barnes, Jon. "A beast just for Christmas." TIs, no. (2002): 16.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the television film 'The Hound of the Baskervilles,' starring Richard Roxburgh and Ian Hart as Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson.
3693. Boshra, Basem. "Baskerville hound barks again: First-class actors star in BBC adaptation of the classic Sherlock Holmes mystery." The Gazette (Montreal), November 18, 2002: D6.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "What to watch: Richard Roxburgh (Moulin Rouge) stars as the legendary Sherlock Holmes and Ian Hart (Harry Potter and the Philosopher's Stone) is his loyal sidekick, Dr. Watson, in a faithful, stylish new BBC adaptation of The Hound of the Baskervilles.... A bevy of top-shelf Brit character actors, including Richard E. Grant, Matt Day and John Nettles, provides admirable support in this delightful version of the Sir Arthur Conan Doyle tale...."
3694. Jury, Louise. "Holmes Wears Mantle of Action Hero in Hi-Tech BBC Thriller." The Independent (London), April 2, 2002: 8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Sherlock Holmes and his sidekick Dr Watson are to be transformed from the intrepid sleuths of modern imagination into muscular men of action in a remake of one of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's classic stories. The Hound of the Baskervilles is to be filmed for a one-off BBC drama this spring, with its leading characters played by the youngest actors since the detective duo were first brought to the screen more than 60 years ago. For those weaned on the likes of Basil Rathbone or Nigel Bruce, the latest castings may appear yet another step in the march of youthful vigour over the wisdom of age. However, the production, by the independent company Tiger Aspect, will take the much-adapted story closer to the original, with Holmes and Watson portrayed as young and athletic men in their mid-30s in contrast to the mature and paternalistic figures of most screen versions. Richard Roxburgh, 40, who played the Duke in the film Moulin Rouge, will star as Holmes while Ian Hart, 38, who portrayed Quill in Harry Potter and the Philosopher's Stone, will be Dr Watson...."
3695. Leonard, Tom. "BBC puts youthful slant on Hound of the Baskervilles." The Daily Telegraph (London), April 01, 2002: 13.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Sherlock Holmes and Dr Watson will be portrayed as athletic young men in their mid-thirties in a glossy new BBC version of The Hound of the Baskervilles. Richard Roxburgh, 40, and Ian Hart, 38 - who played Professor Quirrell in the Harry Potter film - will be the youngest Holmes and Watson since the pair first appeared on screen more than 60 years ago...."
3696. McNamara, John. "Watson! The game is afoot." The Times (London), January 22, 2005: 28.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "When the American Sir Henry Baskerville (Matt Day) inherits the curse of his family along with the ancient manor, Baskerville Hall, the obvious man to help him with his problem is Sherlock Holmes. It may have come as some surprise, though, to find Holmes being played by an Australian whose most famous role was as the insanely jealous Duke in Baz Luhrmann's musical spectacular Moulin

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Rouge! An odd choice maybe, but Richard Roxburgh proves a good one, perilously locating his detective just the right side of the line that divides genius and madness...."

3697. Rees, Jasper. "The good, the bad and the ugly." The Times (London), December 21, 2002: 38.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Richard Roxburgh was the evil Duke in Moulin Rouge, and next year will carry out more devilish work on our cinema screens as Dracula and Moriarty. But this Christmas he joins the other side, as a surprisingly sexy Sherlock Holmes..."

10B ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- ACTORS AND ACTRESSES -- SCHRAMM, DAVID (1)

3698. Hartigan, Patti. "Not so elementary, my dear Moriarty." The Boston Globe, July 12, 1994: 50.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of "The Mask of Moriarty." Play by Hugh Leonard. Directed by John Tillinger. Set, James Noone. Costumes, Jess Goldstein. Lighting, Rui Rita. Presented by the Williamstown Theatre Festival through July 17. "Folks in the British Isles have a particularly punny sense of humor, with an affinity for wacky sex farces and literary spoofs. Hugh Leonard's 'The Mask of Moriarty' fits the latter category, and it's easy to imagine audiences across the Atlantic gasping with guffaws at this takeoff on Sherlock Holmes. But what's funny on the Thames or the River Liffey doesn't necessarily make it in the Berkshires. Despite the fact that the US premiere production at the Williamstown Theatre Festival is well cast and intelligently directed, it turns out to be a one-joke affair that goes on for two hours. After all the deductions are in, 'Mask of Moriarty' is a who-cares-who-dunnit...Initially, the spoof on Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's legendary detective is very funny, but after the third 'elementary' it wears thin...With one exception, the acting is on target. Paxton Whitehead's Sherlock Holmes is witty and savvy, with perfect elocution and an appealing dose of irony. David Schramm's Watson is a spherical sidekick with a hilarious self-effacing air, and John Curless stands out as the bumbling Bobby. The weak link is Jane Krakowski as Gwen, who is all affectation and speaks her lines with a breathless girlish voice that becomes grating. The rest of the ensemble works well with the material, such as it is...."

10B ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- ACTORS AND ACTRESSES -- STEPHENS, ROBERT (6)

3699. "Obituaries Jeremy Brett 1935-1995 and Sir Robert Stephens 1931-1995." Baker Street West 12, no. 1 (1996): 42.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3700. Kael, Pauline. "The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes." New Yorker 81, no. 35 (2005): 30-30.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the motion picture "The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes," directed by Billy Wilder, starring Robert Stephens.
3701. Macnab, Geoffrey. "The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes (Film)." Sight & Sound 14, no. 8 (2004): 77-77.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the DVD videodisc release of the motion picture "The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes," directed by Billy Wilder and starring Robert Stephens.
3702. Michael, Patrick. "My Favorite Sherlock: Robert Stephens." The Ritual, no. 22 (1998): 55-56.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3703. Moriarty, James. "Was Sherlock Holmes gay?" Advocate, December 9-22, 1970: 20-21.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the motion picture "The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes," starring Robert Stephens.
3704. Roden, Christopher. "Little things." The Sunday Times (London), May 11, 1997: 2.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Letter to the editor. "I have to take issue with Sheridan Morley that Terry Manners's biography of Jeremy Brett is 'coolly expert and chillingly excellent' (April 27). In his acknowledgments, Manners notes: 'But to those who, for reasons best known to themselves, did not contribute to remembering Jeremy, I say thank you. You made me even more determined to tell his true story.' Manners admits that he was unable to obtain the views of a number of people who could have spoken authoritatively on the subject. Without those views, his book cannot be considered expert. He also records that The Sherlock Holmes Society of London has 50,000 members; it has 1,000. Morley's review is his own assessment of Brett's life, but here, too, there is a significant error. He writes, 'with the deaths of his early lover Gary Bond (of Aids) and (Robert) Stephens, he (Brett) saw little point in survival'. Stephens died on November 12, 1995, two months after Brett. Some might consider these trivial points, but, as Holmes said, 'It has long been an axiom of mine that the little things are infinitely the most important'." Christopher Roden. The Sir Arthur Conan Doyle Society. Canada

10B ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- ACTORS AND ACTRESSES -- TENNANT, DAVID (1)

3705. McDonald, Toby. "Elementary, dear Doctor; From the Tardis to 221b Baker Street, Scots actor Tennant is touted to play Holmes in GBP50m Hollywood movie." Mail on Sunday (London), June 15, 2008: 3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "He has played the most famous detective of the future, scouring the universe for alien enemies as Time Lord Doctor Who. But now Scots actor David Tennant is set to swap his futuristic adventures to become the best-loved supersleuth of the past - Sherlock Holmes. The 37-year-old is being lined up to play Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's legendary investigator in a [pounds]50 million Hollywood blockbuster...."

10B ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- ACTORS AND ACTRESSES -- WALTERS, THORLEY (1)

3706. Brown, Geoff. "Arts." The Times (London), May 18, 2000: 2.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Brief review of "Sherlock Holmes and the Deadly Necklace," Orbit Screen Classics, 12, 1962. "'Sherlock Holmes, Detective,' says the nameplate above the Baker Street doorbell. Inside live Christopher Lee (just right for pipe, deerstalker and logical reasoning) and Thorley Walters's bumbling Dr Watson. But this is a German film, dubbed into English by unknown Americans, none of whom can pronounce Moriarty. The story is not canonical, but there's fun of a kind watching the hunt for an old necklace of Cleopatra's in a vaguely 1920s London...."

10B ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- ACTORS AND ACTRESSES -- WELLES, ORSON (1)

3707. "Spring Audio Blooms." Publishers Weekly 253, no. 6 (2006): 26-38.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article presents a list of audio books including Sherlock Holmes: A Baker Street Dozen by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, read by John Gielgud, Ralph Richardson and Orson Welles.

10B ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- ACTORS AND ACTRESSES -- WELSH, KENNETH (2)

3708. "Sherlock on the prowl again." New Straits Times (Malaysia), February 18, 2001: 18.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The Hound Of The Baskervilles, which premiered on Hallmark was the first story to resurrect Sherlock Holmes. The story is an inspired interpretation of the 1902 Doyle masterpiece that re-imagines the inscrutable Holmes and his latest case in a style faithful to the original. In the fifth re-telling of The Hound Of The Baskervilles there's plenty of vintage Doyle intrigue, amusing wordplay, plot twists, and

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

nail-biting suspense to satisfy both the hardcore Holmes fan and newcomers alike....Matt Frewer, a classically trained actor, turns in a surprisingly accomplished performance as the Baker Street detective, delivering lines with the modest irony that Holmes fans love. Frewer is supported by Kenneth Welsh (as the amenable Dr Watson) and Jason London, last seen in Hallmark's Jason And The Argonauts, as Sir Henry, the latest heir apparent to the Baskerville estate - and whose life is on the line...."

3709. Curran, Peggy. "Hound of the Baskervilles puts a new leash on Holmes, Watson." The Gazette (Montreal), October 25, 2000: G7.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The Hound of the Baskervilles has lost one of his contact lenses. Eno, a large German shepherd who snarls and growls on cue, has been made up to look like Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's fictional 'monstrous hound from Hell.' With his coat matted and eyes glowing with the magic of red contacts, he does a pretty convincing job. Until one of the lenses pops out, and crew members have to get down on all fours to search for it while their canine star naps in his trailer. Ah, the glamour of film-making. The first instalment in CTV's new take on the classic Sherlock Holmes mysteries, The Hound of the Baskervilles, airs Saturday at 9 p.m., one of a slew of spooky specials on tap to coincide with Halloween. Matt Frewer plays Sherlock Holmes to Kenneth Welsh's Dr. Watson...."

10B ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- ACTORS AND ACTRESSES -- WHITEHEAD, PAXTON (2)

3710. Hartigan, Patti. "Not so elementary, my dear Moriarty." The Boston Globe, July 12, 1994: 50.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of "The Mask of Moriarty." Play by Hugh Leonard. Directed by John Tillinger. Set, James Noone. Costumes, Jess Goldstein. Lighting, Rui Rita. Presented by the Williamstown Theatre Festival through July 17. "Folks in the British Isles have a particularly punny sense of humor, with an affinity for wacky sex farces and literary spoofs. Hugh Leonard's 'The Mask of Moriarty' fits the latter category, and it's easy to imagine audiences across the Atlantic gasping with guffaws at this takeoff on Sherlock Holmes. But what's funny on the Thames or the River Liffey doesn't necessarily make it in the Berkshires. Despite the fact that the US premiere production at the Williamstown Theatre Festival is well cast and intelligently directed, it turns out to be a one-joke affair that goes on for two hours. After all the deductions are in, 'Mask of Moriarty' is a who-cares-who-dunnit....Initially, the spoof on Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's legendary detective is very funny, but after the third 'elementary' it wears thin...With one exception, the acting is on target. Paxton Whitehead's Sherlock Holmes is witty and savvy, with perfect elocution and an appealing dose of irony. David Schramm's Watson is a spherical sidekick with a hilarious self-effacing air, and John Curless stands out as the bumbling Bobby. The weak link is Jane Krakowski as Gwen, who is all affectation and speaks her lines with a breathless girlish voice that becomes grating. The rest of the ensemble works well with the material, such as it is...."

3711. McKuras, Julie. "The Old Globe Theatre, KPBS-FM of San Diego, and "The Mask of Moriarty"." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 1, no. 4 (1997): 4.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on the production and playbill for "The Mask of Moriarty" at the Old Globe Theatre in San Diego and the associated radio program, "These Days," on KPBS-FM with the resulting donations to the Sherlock Holmes Collections. Includes photograph of Paxton Whitehead in the role of Holmes and Tom Lacy in the role of Watson

10B ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- ACTORS AND ACTRESSES -- WILLIAMS, MICHAEL (1)

3712. Donovan, Paul. "So good, it's elementary." The Sunday Times (London), June 21, 1998: 30.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "History is about to be made on Radio 4. For the first time anywhere in the world and on any medium, the entire Sherlock Holmes canon of 56 short stories and four novels has now been dramatised with the same two actors - Clive Merrison as Holmes and Michael Williams as Dr Watson. The

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Hound of the Baskervilles, which begins next Sunday as a two-part Classic Serial, completes a project that started nine years ago and is unlikely ever to be replicated...."

10B ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- ACTORS AND ACTRESSES -- WILMER, DOUGLAS (4)

3713. Cooper, Barbara Roisman. "Douglas Wilmer: A Study in Sherlock." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 52, no. 3 (2002): 27-34.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

3714. Davies, David Stuart. "Review--Douglas Wilmer, A Vintage Holmes." The Ritual, no. 14 (1994): 49-50.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

3715. Godden, Lynne. "Review--Four Sherlock Holmes Stories read by Douglas Wilmer." The Ritual, no. 15 (1995): 45-46.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

3716. Walters, Ben. "The Sherlock Holmes Collection (TV Program)." Sight & Sound 14, no. 9 (2004): 97-97.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the television program "The Sherlock Holmes Collection," starring Peter Cushing and Douglas Wilmer released on DVD format.

10B ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- ACTORS AND ACTRESSES -- WONTNER, ARTHUR (2)

3717. Traubner, Richard. "Guide to Records: Fraser-Simson & Tate." American Record Guide 64, no. 1 (2001): 127.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the music recording 'The Maid of the Mountains,' composed by Harold Fraser-Simson and James W. Tate. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "... (It should be pointed out that Baldassare was originally written for the non-singing Arthur Wontner, who was one of Britain's Sherlock Holmes portrayals on film--the one fact missing from Andrew Lamb's otherwise extremely informative notes.)..."

3718. ———. "Recordings." Opera News 65, no. 9 (2001): 71.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the recording of the opera 'The Maid of the Mountains,' composed by Harold Fraser-Simson and James W. Tate. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "... Fraser-Simson's waltz 'Love Will Find a Way,' which famously doubles the opening notes of Lehar's Merry Widow waltz, was a showcase for its raven-haired creator, (Miss) Jose Collins, who came back to London to appear as the bandit's moll after an engagement in Ziegfeld's Follies on Broadway. Opposite her was Arthur Wontner as the basically non-singing chief Baldassare; he may be remembered for his 1930s appearances as Sherlock Holmes in several British films...."

10C ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- AUDIO TAPES (84)

3719. "2001 Selected Videos, DVDs, and Audiobooks for Young Adults." School Library Journal 47, no. 4 (2001): 59.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents the winners of the 2001 Selected Videos, DVD and Audiobooks for Young Adults, selected by the Young Library Services Association. Includes Sherlock's Secret Life, by Ed Lang. Read by Karl Malden and performed by N.Y. State Theatre Institute. 2 cassettes. 1:43 hrs. ISBN 1-892613-03-4. 1999. $16.95. New York State Theatre Institute. "The young Sherlock Holmes, and his familiar cohorts, Dr. Watson and Professor Moriarty, are portrayed in this original and fully dramatized story about an early case that brought the detective to the brink of lovelorn heartbreak."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

3720. "APA announces Audie winners." Billboard 108, no. 28 (1996): 89.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on the winners of the first Audie Awards, which were presented on June 14, 1996 by the Audio Publishers Association. "Best new voice: 'Sherlock Holmes: Tales Of Suspense,' by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, read by Edward Hardwicke, Tangled Web Audio."
3721. "Audio Reviews." Library Journal 125, no. 15 (2000): 130.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews several audio tapes. 'The Cliff Walk: A Memoir of a Job Lost and a Life Found,' by Don J. Snyder; 'Checkmates,' by Ron Miller; 'The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes II,' by Arthur Conan Doyle; 'Before I Say Good-Bye,' by Mary Higgins Clark; Others.
3722. "Audio reviews." Publishers Weekly 244, no. 1 (1997): 29.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the sound recording 'The Lost World,' by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle.
3723. "Books, Multimedia, and Web Sites: Grades 4-8." School Library Journal 3, no. 1 (2006): 49-52, 54-6, 58-60, 62, 64, 66-9.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // An annotated directory of books, multimedia products, and Web sites for students in grades 4 to 8 is provided. Includes a number of entries with Holmes or Doyle connections. Down the Rabbit Hole: An Echo Falls Mystery (unabr.). 6 cassettes. Stirs. Recorded Books (recordedbooks.com). 2005. ISBN 1-4193- 5747-6. $37.75; read-along pack: $59.95."...Peter Abrahams's splendid mystery (Laura Geringer, 2005) is ripe with allusions to Lewis Carroll's Alice's Adventures in Wonderland, Arthur Conan Doyle's stories about Sherlock Holmes, and Alfred Hitchcock's Dial M for Murder...."; SPRINGER, Nancy. The Case of the Missing Marques: An Enola Holmes Mystery. 213p. Philomel/Sleuth, 2006. Tr $10.99, ISBN 0-399-24304-6. "When her mother mysteriously disappears on her 14th birthday, Enola Holmes reluctantly turns to her adult brothers, Sherlock and Mycroft, for help, but soon learns that she must take charge of her own destiny. The clever girl heads for London where she dons different disguises, solves a mystery or two, and gets herself into and out of a number of sticky situations. An appealing and resilient heroine takes the Victorians by storm."
3724. "Calendar." Publishers Weekly 253, no. 20 (2006): 12-12.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article presents information on notable events in the month of May, involving prominent persons. In May 21, 2000, Barbara Cartland died at the age of 98. She is a popular romance writer. HighBridge Audio celebrates Arthur Conan Doyle's birth (1859-1930) by reissuing "Sherlock Holmes: A Baker Street Dozen" with John Gielgud as Holmes and Ralph Richardson as Dr. Watson on May 22, 2006. May 23, 2006, seven months after releasing "Predator," Patricia Cornwell is back with a new mystery "At Risk," originally serialized for 15 weeks in the New York Times Magazine.
3725. "The Case of the Left-Handed Lady." School Library Journal 54, no. (2008): 55-55.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the audiobook "The Case of the Left-Handed Lady," by Nancy Springer.
3726. "Language Arts." School Library Journal 45, no. 8 (1999): 91.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a directory of audio-visual materials about language arts. Includes Sherlock Holmes: A Study in Scarlet. 2 cassettes. Prod. by BDD Audio. Dist. by Random House. ISBN 0-553-52553-0. $18. "Gr 7-12-In the first of the Sherlock Holmes stories, Dr. Watson, discharged from military service after suffering wounds, is at loose ends until a chance encounter leads him to take rooms with Sherlock Holmes. When Watson is drawn into the investigation of a bizarre murder in which Holmes is involved, he is unaware that it is the beginning of the most famous partnership in the history of criminal detection." Sherlock Holmes: The Sign of the Four. 2 cassettes. Prod. by BDD Audio. Dist. by Random House. ISBN 0-553-52640-5. $18. "Gr 7 Up-Holmes and Watson accompany a woman on a quest which leads them through the dark heart of London to a one-legged man, a mysterious and terrifying creature, and an incredible tale of greed and revenge." Sherlock Holmes: The Valley of Fear. 2 cassettes. Prod. by BDD Audio. Dist. by Random House. ISBN 0-553-52622-7. $18. "Gr 7 Up-A coded warning of imminent danger sends Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson to the country house of the reclusive Jack Douglas. When they arrive too late to prevent a tragic death, they must follow bewildering clues and find a murderer." The Sharp Wits in the Extraordinary Case of the Essay Test. video. 12 min. with tchr's, guide. Media Inc. ISBN 1-89305807-7. price unavail. "Gr 3-5-An alien

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

has abducted Sherlock. Only the rest of the Sharp Wits can rescue him. It will take steely nerves, quick minds and the answer to an essay question. Join them as they uncover the keys to answering an essay question and save their friend."

3727. "Language arts: literature and drama." School Library Journal 46, no. 8 (2000): 99.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Lists The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes, Vol. III. 3 cassettes or 3 CDs. 3:30 hrs. Prod. by Naxos AudioBooks. Dist. by Naxos of America. cassette, ISBN 9-62634-6914: $17.98; CD, ISBN 9-62634-191-2: $19.98; Historical Recording: Writers & Actors. 2 cassettes or 2 CDs. 2:30 hrs. Prod. by Naxos AudioBooks. Dist. by Naxos of America. cassette, ISBN 9-62634-700-7: $13.98; CD, ISBN 9-62634-200-5: $15.98. Includes some of the greatest historical recording of the works of writers such as Tennyson, Joyce, Shaw, Doyle, Wallace and Tolstoy, as well as actors, Bernhardt, Gielgud, and Olivier; The Hound of the Baskervilles. 2 cassettes. 3 hrs. Prod. by HarperCollins UK Audiobooks. Dist. by Trafalgar Square. ISBN 0-00-104674-8. $14.95. Tony Britton reads the abridged version of Doyle's classic.
3728. "Notable films/videos, recordings & computer software, 1994." School Library Journal 40, no. 4: 34.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a selection of audiovisuals based on their commendable quality for young people through age 14. Includes Mystery! Mystery! Performed by Jim Weiss. 60 min. cassette (#1124-14), $9.95. Greathall Productions. "The exciting worlds of Edgar Allen Poe, G. K. Chesterton, and Arthur Conan Doyle are seamlessly recreated by a master storyteller as he recounts the adventures of three brilliant detectives- Auguste Dupin, Father Brown, and Sherlock Holmes."
3729. "Notes." Publishers Weekly 250, no. 41 (2003): 29-29.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents news briefs related to children's audio and video materials in the U.S. as of October 2003. Launch of the first six titles in the Family Listening Series of Oasis Audio. Oasis has entered an arrangement to distribute at retail dramatizations that were originally produced for the California Artists Radio Theatre program. CART features such performers as Michael York, Roddy McDowall, Samantha Eggar, Lynn Redgrave, William Windom and many others. Each title contains two CDs and two bonus cassettes. Initial releases include Peter and Wendy by James M. Barrie, Little Women by Louisa May Alcott, Treasure Island by Robert Louis Stevenson, Alice in Wonderland by Lewis Carroll, Sherlock Holmes and Selecting a Ghost by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and Hobson's Choice by Harold Brighouse. (Each 2.5 hours, $17.99, ISBN 1-58926-165-8; -180-1; -169-0; -167-4; -184-4; -325-1, all ages, Sept.)
3730. "Selected videos, DVDs and audiobooks for young adults 2001." School Library Journal 47, no. 4 (2001): 59-61.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Annotated reviews of notable young adults' videos, DVDs, and audiobooks, compiled by the Young Adult Library Services Association, are presented. Included is Sherlock's Secret Life. By Ed Lange; read by Karl Malden and performed by N.Y. State Theatre Institute. 2 cassettes. 1:43 hrs. ISBN 1-892613-03-4. 1999. $16.95. New York State Theatre Institute. "The young Sherlock Holmes, and his familiar cohorts, Dr. Watson and Professor Moriarty, are portrayed in this original and fully dramatized story about an early case that brought the detective to the brink of lovelorn heartbreak."
3731. "Sherlock Holmes: A Baker Street Dozen." Publishers Weekly 253, no. 23 (2006): 56-56.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the audiobook "Sherlock Holmes: A Baker Street Dozen," by Arthur Conan Doyle.
3732. "Spring Audio Blooms." Publishers Weekly 253, no. 6 (2006): 26-38.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article presents a list of audio books including Sherlock Holmes: A Baker Street Dozen by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, read by John Gielgud, Ralph Richardson and Orson Welles.
3733. "When We Were Orphans (Book Review)." Publishers Weekly 247, no. 49 (2000): 32.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the audiobook 'When We Were Orphans,' by Kazuo Ishiguro and read by John Lee. Includes a reference to Holmes. "Set in Shanghai on the eve of World War II, Ishiguro's Booker-nominated novel follows the surreal predicament of Christopher Banks, an English expatriate whose overwrought state is perfectly rendered by narrator John Lee. After his parents are mysteriously kidnapped, nine-year-old Christopher is shipped off to England, where he grows up to become the Sherlock Holmes of his

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- times-a man able to right wrongs, restore order."
3734. "YALSA awards." Journal of Youth Services in Libraries 14, no. 3 (2001): 63-68.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // An annotated list of recipients of Young Adult Library Services Association awards is provided. Included in the list is Sherlock's Secret Life, by Ed Lange, narrated by Karl Malden and performed by the New York State Theatre Institute, New York State Theatre Institute, 1999, 2 cassettes, 1 hour and 43 mins., 1-892613-03-4. "The young Sherlock Holmes, and his familiar cohorts Dr. Watson and Professor Moriarty, are portrayed in this original and fully dramatized story about an early case that brought the detective to the brink of lovelorn heartbreak."
3735. Adams, Michael. "Audio." Library Journal 131, no. 5 (2006): 108-110.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // An annotated directory of audiobooks is provided including Carr, Caleb. The Italian Secretary: A Further Adventure of Sherlock Holmes. 4 cassettes. unabridged. 7 hrs. S. & S. Audio. 2005. ISBN 0-7435-5003-X [ISBN 978-0-7435-5003-1]. $26. "When two men are killed during the renovation of the royal palace at Holyrood in Scotland, Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson are summoned. Mycroft Holmes, the famous detective's brother, is a trusted advisor to Queen Victoria and wants to prevent a possible assassination attempt. Clues point to the involvement of David Rizzio, but the Italian secretary of Mary, Queen of Scots, was murdered at Holyrood 300 years earlier. Carr seems a natural to try his hand at a Holmes adventure since the psychologist hero of The Alienist, his best-known novel, uses methods similar to those of the consulting detective. As with The Alienist, this book offers plenty of period detail and is written in a slightly stiff style, approximating that of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. Carr's Sherlock seems a bit vague, with Watson and Mycroft being much more specific and interesting. Simon Prebble, one of the best readers of mysteries, employs a variety of voices and accents to heighten the Victorian verisimilitude. Recommended for all popular collections."
3736. ———. "Holmes on the Range." Library Journal 132, no. 12 (2007): 130-130.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the audiobook "Holmes on the Range," by Steve Hockensmith.
3737. ———. "The Italian Secretary: A Further Adventure of Sherlock Holmes." Library Journal 131, no. 5 (2006): 108-108.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the audiobook "The Italian Secretary: A Further Adventure of Sherlock Holmes," by Caleb Carr.
3738. ———. "On the Wrong Track." Library Journal 132, no. 13 (2007): 129-129.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book on tape "On the Wrong Track," by Steve Hockensmith.
3739. Arnold, Sue. "Review: Audio: Sue Arnold's Choice: The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes." The Guardian (London), October 4, 2008: 9.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of the audiobook The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes: Six Unabridged Stories, Vol 1, by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, read by Edward Hardwicke. (7hrs, CSA Word, GBP19.99)
3740. Baskin, Barbara. "Media: Audiobooks." Booklist 97, no. 2 (2000): 263.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews two audio books written by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. 'The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes II'; 'The Case Book of Sherlock Holmes.'
3741. Beauregard, Sue-Ellen. "Audiobook Preview." Booklist 100, no. 19/20 (2004): 1769-1772.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Offers a preview of audiobooks to be released from June through December 2004. Lists The Return of Sherlock Holmes II. Read by David Timson. Naxos.
3742. Bilton, Karen T. "The Case of the Left-Handed Lady." School Library Journal 53, no. 12 (2007): 67-67.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the audiobook "The Case of the Left-Handed Lady," by Nancy Springer, the second title in a series featuring Enola Holmes, the famed detective's younger sister.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

3743. Bunce, Kim. "Review: Books." The Observer, February 15, 2004: 18.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of the audiobook "Return of Sherlock Holmes," Vol. 1, read by David Timson. Running time 3.5 hours. Naxos, 3 tapes unabridged, GBP9.99
3744. Burkey, Mary. "The Case of the Bizarre Bouquets." Booklist 104, no. 17 (2008): 97.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the audiobook "The Case of the Bizarre Bouquets" by Nancy Springer. Read by Katherine Kellgren. 2008. 4hr. Recorded Books, CS, $30.75 (9781428182523); CD, $30.75 (9781428182578).
3745. Burns, Ann. "Audio Reviews." Library Journal 125, no. 12 (2000): 161.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews several audio tapes, including O Jerusalem by Laurie R. King. 9 cassettes. unabridged. 13 1/2 hrs. Recorded Bks. 1999. ISBN 0-7887-3746-5. $80. "King has received both the Edgar and the John Creasey Award. O Jerusalem is the newest in a series about Sherlock Holmes and his young apprentice, Mary Russell. It is a flashback to a chapter in the Beekeeper's Apprentice in which Holmes and Russell flee danger in London, traveling to Palestine in the service of Mycroft, Holmes's older brother. When Holmes and Russell reach Palestine, they join Mahmoud and Ali, all four traveling in the garb of Bedouins. Their journey begins with the investigation of a murder and ends with preventing the destruction of Jerusalem. The narrator, Jenny Sterlin, is most convincing as the arrogant and condescending older Holmes, and the voices she uses for each character are distinct and believable. Essential for listeners or readers of the Holmes and Russell series."
3746. ———. "Audio Reviews." Library Journal 125, no. 9 (2000): 141.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews several audio books including 'Memories and Adventures,' by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle.
3747. ———. "Best Audiobooks of 2003." Library Journal 129, no. 3 (2004): 44-45.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // An annotated directory of the best audiobooks of 2003 is provided. Included is Haddon, Mark. The Curious Incident of the Dog in the Night-Time. Recorded Bks. 5 cassettes, 61/4 hrs. ISBN 1-4025-5978-X. $45. "This first novel captures 'without sentimentality the joy and pain' of a child with Asperger's syndrome. Christopher, a 15-year-old with an interest in Sherlock Holmes, tries to solve the murder of his neighbor's dog. Jeff Woodman's 'voice and tone are totally convincing as those of a working-class English adolescent.' The print version was selected as one of LJ's Best Books of 2003. (LJ 1/04)"
3748. Burns, Ann, and Theresa Connors. "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes VI (Book)." Library Journal 129, no. 1 (2004): 183-183.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the audiobook "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes VI," by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle.
3749. ———. "His Last Bow." Library Journal 125, no. 8 (2000): 168.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the audio tape 'His Last Bow,' by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle.
3750. Burns, Ann, Kristin M. Jacobi, and Wry Martinis. "Audio Reviews." Library Journal 123, no. 16 (1998): 148.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents numerous brief reviews of audio recordings including The Moor by Laurie R. King. 8 cassettes, unabridged. 11 hrs. Recorded Bks. 1998. ISBN 0-7887-1979-3. $72. "In this fourth Mary Russell novel, read by Jenny Sterlin, King takes us back to Dartmoor, scene of The Hound of the Baskervilles, again on the trail of a spectral hound. Shedockians have been amused or horrified by King's misappropriation of Holmes. Holmes, who had stated that love is 'an emotional thing...opposed to true cold reason' and 'I should never marry myself, lest I bias my judgment,' is in the King books married to an American half his age. Not satisfied with changing Holmes's misogynistic nature, King also robs him of his trusty biographer, Dr. Watson. Pastiche, in its truest sense, tries to resemble the style of the original work. Libraries wanting Sherlock Holmes mysteries would do better with any of the BBC series (The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes, Audio Reviews, LJ 2/15/97). Not recommended."
3751. Carhart, Jo-Ann. "Multimedia Review." School Library Journal 52, no. 1 (2006): 80-81.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews of audio-visual materials including one with reference to Doyle and Holmes. Down the Rabbit Hole: An Echo Falls Mystery (unbar.). 6 cassettes. 8 hrs. Recorded Books. 2005. ISBN 1-4193-5747-6. $37.75; read-along pack: $59.95. Gr 6-9 "Peter Abrahams' splendid contemporary mystery (Laura Geringer Book, 2005) is ripe with allusions to Lewis Carroll's Alice's Adventures in Wonderland, Arthur Conan Doyle's stories about Sherlock Holmes, and Alfred Hitchcock's Dial M for Murder. It all starts when 13-year-old Ingrid Levin-Hill's mother is late picking her up from the orthodontist and Ingrid decides to walk to soccer practice. She gets lost and ends up on the wrong side of town in the house of a well-known poor woman, Cracked-up Katie. Katie is murdered shortly after Ingrid heads home, leaving her red soccer cleats behind. Ingrid isn't sure that the two men who are arrested actually committed the murder, so she becomes deeply entrenched in investigating what happened, while she tries to maintain her grades in math, get to soccer practice on time, learn her role as Alice in the Prescott Player's production of Alice in Wonderland, and sort out how to act around Joey, her potential first boyfriend and the police chief's son. Ingrid is an impressive heroine who learns that there are consequences to her actions and that her extremely busy parents and quirky grandfather care about her very much. This is the first young adult novel by Edgar Award nominated Peter Abrahams. His third person account is rich with red herrings and pop culture references. This works well as an audiobook because actress Mandy Siegfried hits just the right note in portraying Ingrid and her varied cast of supporting characters. Tension builds throughout the story as Ingrid's dread becomes palpable. The denouement is a masterful mix of derring-do and smart thinking. Although this mystery is solved, there is a feeling that a sequel might follow. A good choice for those who like Sammy Keyes and Nancy Drew mysteries."

3752. Connors, Theresa. "Audio reviews." Library Journal 119, no. 17 (1994): 102.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the sound recording 'Memoirs of Sherlock Holmes. Volume 2: Four More Classic Stories,' by Arthur Conan Doyle, read by Clive Merrison, Michael Williamson, Peter Davison and others.

3753. ———. "Sherlock Holmes and the Hapsburg Tiara." Library Journal 130, no. 4 (2005): 125.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the audiobook "Sherlock Holmes and the Hapsburg Tiara," by Alan Vanneman.

3754. ———. "The Sign of Four (Book)." Library Journal 129, no. 16 (2004): 118-118.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the audiobook "The Sign of Four," by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle.

3755. Connors, Theresa, and Mark Annichiarico. "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes." Library Journal 122, no. 3 (1997): 174-174.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the sound recording 'The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes,' volume 1, by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle.

3756. ———. "Audio reviews." Library Journal 121, no. 6 (1996): 138.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the sound recording 'The Hound of the Baskervilles,' by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle.

3757. ———. "Audio reviews." Library Journal 121, no. 13 (1996): 134.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the sound recording 'The Lost World,' by Arthur Conan Doyle.

3758. ———. "Audio reviews." Library Journal 117, no. 19 (1992): 124.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the sound recording 'Sherlock Holmes Casebook,' by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. 2 cassettes. Unabridged. 2 hrs. Buckingham Classics, Chicago, IL. ISBN 1-882071-28-9. Presents "The Priory School" and "The Man With the Twisted Lip" narrated by John Barnes.

3759. Davies, David Stuart. "Review--Penguin Audio Tapes: 'Four Great Adventures of Sherlock Holmes' read by Douglas Wilmer, 'The Hound of the Baskervilles' read by Freddie Jones." The Musgrave Papers, no. 8 (1995): 107.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

3760. Godden, Lynne. "Review--Four Sherlock Holmes Stories read by Douglas Wilmer." The Ritual, no. 15 (1995): 45-46.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3761. Goldsmith, Francisca, and Phyllis Levy Mandell. "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes IV." School Library Journal 47, no. 9 (2001): 76.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the audiobook 'The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes IV.'
3762. Hardyment, Christina. "Books: a Word in Your Ear; Arthur Conan Doyle: a Life by Hesketh Pearson Read by Tim Pigott-Smith Naxos, C3hrs, Pounds 8.99." The Independent (London), October 6, 2001: 11.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The fact that Hesketh Pearson knew Conan Doyle, and that his life of the man who invented Sherlock Holmes was written before many of the Doyle papers disappeared into a lawsuit in which they are still unmeshed, gives his 1943 biography an interest all its own. Pearson makes good use of Doyle's 1924 autobiography, Memories and Adventures, so that we get a satisfying sense of the voice of a man who was, it seems, more mild Dr Watson than drug-addicted detective....But Doyle was a gentleman of the old school, dedicated to chivalric causes; his only regret was that people loved Holmes too much and Brigadier Gerard, his own favourite of his creations, too little. David Timson has abridged Pearson's words skilfully; Tim Pigott-Smith is a fine choice as reader. Let's hope Naxos will add Brigadier Gerard's exploits to their four sets of Sherlock Holmes's adventures."
3763. Harris, Karen. "Media: Audiobooks." Booklist 97, no. 22 (2001): 2141.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews three audiobooks. 'The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes,' Volume IV, by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and read by David Timson; 'The Hook,' by Donald Westlake and read by William Dufres; 'The Naked Detective,' by Laurence Shames and read by Ron McLarty.
3764. Harte, Ben. "Spotlight on...audio books." People 53, no. 4 (2000): 41.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews several audiobooks including 'Sherlock Holmes: The Sign of the Four.' "This atmospheric BBC dramatization of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's mystery stars Clive Merrison as the cocaine-using sleuth and Michael Williams (Mr. Judi Dench) as his sidekick. (BDD, $18)"
3765. Hartshorn, Laurie. "Audiovisual media: Audiobooks." Booklist 92, no. 14 (1996): 1306.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the audiobooks 'Sherlock Holmes: Tale of Intrigue,' by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and 'Sherlock Holmes: Tales of Suspense,' by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle.
3766. Higgins, Marilyn, and Phyllis Levy Mandell. "Other Places, Other Times: Late 19th Century & Early 20th Century British & European Short Stories, Vol. 5." School Library Journal 47, no. 9 (2001): 77.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the audiobook 'Other Places, Other Times: Late 19th Century & Early 20th Century British & European Short Stories, Vol 5.' Includes Doyle. (AudioDrama 101 Series). 6 audiocassettes. 1 hr. ea. Prod. by Lend-A-Hand Society. Dist. by Klarity Multimedia. 2000, 2001 release. ISBN 1-892077-04-3. $14.95. "Short stories by ten British and European writers of the late 19th and early 20th century are dramatized in full. The stories as well as the writers include the familiar and the unfamiliar. Among the well-known authors are Anton Chekhov, Robert Louis Stevenson, E.M. Forster, George Bernard Shaw, W. Somerset Maugham, Rudyard Kipling, and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. Lesser studied writers include Alphonse Daudet, Leonard Merrick, and Arthur Schnitzler."
3767. Hipple, Ted. "Media: AUDIOBOOKS." Booklist 96, no. 18 (2000): 1765.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews several audiobooks. 'Jane Eyre,' by Charlotte Bronte; 'Oliver Twist,' by Charles Dickens; 'Sherlock Holmes: The Sign of the Four,' by Arthur Conan Doyle.
3768. Kim, Ann. "Prepub audio." Library Journal 130, no. 8 (2005): 126.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews several books released on audio format. "Prime Time," by Sandra Brown; "Poison Heart," by Mary Logue; "Match Me If You Can," by Susan Elizabeth Phillips; "Red Leaves," by Belva Plain; "The Sherlock Holmes Theatre," by Arthur Conan Doyle and Yuri Rasovsky.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

3769. Larson, Jeanette. "More British Sleuths." Booklist 97, no. 17 (2001): 1615.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews three mystery audiobooks. 'The Fear Sign,' by Margery Allingham and read by Francis Matthews; 'The Secret of Annexe 3,' by Colin Dexter and read by Michael Pennington; 'Sherlock Holmes: 3 Tales of Avarice,' by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and read by Edward Hardwicke.
3770. Levi, Peter. "Books on tape." Spectator 281, no. 8870 (1998): 29.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews several books on audio tapes for the blind. 'Cider With Rosie,' by Laurie Lee; 'Spike Milligan at the Beeb'; 'Chinese Classic Stories,' by Lu Xun; 'A Study in Scarlet,' by Conan Doyle; 'Ethan Frome,' by Edith Wharton; 'Henry V.'
3771. Mandell, Phyllis Levy. "1998 SLJ's Audiovisual buyers' directory." School Library Journal 44, no. 8 (1998): 83.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Lists several educational videocassettes, videodiscs, slides prints, transparencies and educational games, and recordings released between January 1998 and December 1998. Includes an entry for Holmes: Sherlock Holmes: Tales of Mystery. 2 cassettes. 3 hrs. Tangled Web Audio. ISBN 1896552-24-2. $16.95.
3772. ———. "Audio: Literature." School Library Journal 46, no. 8 (2000): 64.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews several audiotapes on literature. 'The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes II'; 'Edgar Allan Poe's Stories & Tales II'; 'The Hound of the Baskervilles.'
3773. ———. "Audiovisual review: Recordings." School Library Journal 43, no. 4 (1997): 80.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a review of different music recordings with regards to language arts, literature, music and science. 'Book of Monsters'; 'The Castle in the Attic'; 'Sherlock Holmes: Tales of Betrayal'; 'Bodywise'; 'Interactive Animal Kit: Bears'; More.
3774. Mandell, Phyllis Levy, and Sarah Smith. "Audiovisual Review: Audio: Literature." School Library Journal 45, no. 3 (1999): 156.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews three audiobooks on literature. 'The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes'; 'A Midsummer Night's Dream'; 'The Odyssey: Ain't Nothing Odd About the Odyssey.'
3775. Masters, Rosalind. "Review--'The Hound of the Baskervilles' Harper Collins Audio Book read by Tony Britton." The Ritual, no. 11 (1993): 36.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3776. Maughan, Shannon. "Fall 2007 Audio." Publishers Weekly 254, no. 29 (2007): 28-34.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews several audio books including "The Casebook of Sherlock Holmes Volume One" by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, read by David Timson. "These six cases are among the last undertaken by Holmes before he retired to the Sussex downs, (Naxos, July)"
3777. ———. "Spoken Audio for Spring." Publishers Weekly 250, no. 5 (2003): 34.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents several audio recordings. 'The Girl Who Heard Dragons,' by Anne McCaffrey; 'Children of the Mind,' by Orson Scott; 'A Presumption of Death,' by Jill Paton Walsh and Dorothy L. Sayers; 'A Right to Die,' by Rex Stout. Also includes The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes VI by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. Read by David Timson. Unabridged, three cassettes, three hours, $17.98; three CDs, $19.98, Feb.
3778. McCormick, Moira. "Kids audio: A fourth-quarter blizzard of carols, lullabies and cartoon classics." Billboard 108, no. 34 (1996): 76.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents children's compact discs and cassettes released for the 1996 holiday season. Includes one item related to Holmes. "Willowdale Conn.-based Tanglewood, which recently signed renowned U.S. story-teller Jim Weiss' Greathall Productions for distribution in Canada, is releasing Weiss' complete line, including 'Sherlock Holmes For Children,' 'The Jungle Book' and 'Rip Van Winkle.'"

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

3779. McCray, Nancy. "Audiovisual media: Audiobooks." Booklist 90, no. 14 (1994): 1385.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the sound recording 'Memoirs of Sherlock Holmes.'
3780. Miller, Barry X., and Phyllis Levy Mandell. "Multimedia Review: Audio." School Library Journal 47, no. 1 (2001): 75.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the audiobook 'Sherlock Holmes: The Adventures of the Sussex Vampire and Other Stories.'
3781. O'Gorman, Rochelle. "You know my methods: new Holmes mysteries." The Boston Globe, April 11, 1999: G3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Both Baker Street Irregulars and garden-variety mystery buffs should prick up their ears at the news of two new Sherlock Holmes whodunits. Though the mystery takes a back seat to vivid characterization and rich atmosphere, Laurie R. King's 'The Moor' is an addictive 1920s adventure (Recorded Books; unabridged fiction; eight cassettes; 10 hours, 45 minutes; $16.50 if rented, $72 if purchased; read by Jenny Sterlin; 800-638-1304)....A more conventional tale is found in a Sherlockian mystery by Larry Millett, who once again brings the hawk-eyed detective to America in 'Sherlock Holmes and the Ice Palace Murders' (Penguin Audio; abridged fiction; four cassettes; six hours; $24.95; read by Simon Prebble)...."
3782. Postgate, Mary. "The Return of Sherlock Holmes 1." Oxford Today 16, no. 3 (2004): 51-51.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the sound recording "The Return of Sherlock Holmes 1," read by David Timson.
3783. Pumphrey, Mark, Michael T. Fein, Cliff Glaviano, Gloria Maxwell, Melody A. Moxley, Leah Sparks, Joyce Kessel, Mark P. Tierney, John Hiett, Kristen L. Smith, Theresa Connors, Nancy Paul, Norman Oder, R. Kent Rasmussen, Beth Farrell, and Ann Burns. "Audio Reviews." Library Journal 125, no. 1 (2000): 187.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews several sound recordings including Sherlock Holmes: A Study in Scarlet by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. 3 cassettes. unabridged. 4 1/2 hrs. Blackstone Audiobks. 1999. ISBN 0-7861-1604-8. $23.95. "This is the first story Conan Doyle wrote about his famous detective, Sherlock Holmes. In this short novel, Dr. Watson is presented to Holmes as a potential Baker Street roommate. Holmes utters the immortal line, 'You have been in Afghanistan, I perceive,' and the adventures begin. A Study in Scarlet introduces and fleshes out the characters of Holmes and Watson, while initiating readers to the world's first consulting detective. Valuable to Sherlockians as the beginning of an ageless saga, this novel is also an interesting mystery. It allows Holmes a chance to outwit Scotland Yard, and readers get to see how he resolves the mysterious murder at Lauriston Gardens. Frederick Davidson gives a correctly British narration to this Baker Street adventure. Sure to be a hit with mystery readers; recommended for all public libraries."
3784. Robinson, Karen. "Talking Books." The Sunday Times (London), August 10, 1997: Books 1.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes: Volume 1, by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, read by Douglas Wilmer. "The observational powers of supersleuth Sherlock Holmes have been parodied so often that the real thing can read like a pastiche. Take Holmes's typical remarks on meeting the victim of the Red-Headed League: 'beyond the obvious facts that he's done manual labour, that he is a freemason, that he takes snuff and that he has been in China...' And as he explains his deductions to Dr Watson, the obligingly impressed sidekick registers only that he feels, again typically, 'oppressed with a sense of my own stupidity' in his dealings with his brainy friend. But Holmes without Watson would be a megacephalic show-off with a cocaine habit, and Watson a boring medico. Together, as Watson provides ballast to Holmes's daring and brilliance, they solve some of the most dastardly crimes of Victorian England. This collection includes a scam in which 'Fleet Street was choked with red-headed folk', and an encounter with a tantalising female who arouses unusual feelings in the misogynistic Holmes breast. Douglas Wilmer conjures up a gaslit London rich in mystery and incident (Penguin Pounds 7.99, 3 hours abridged)."
3785. Rogers, Michael. "Audio reviews." Library Journal 123, no. 3 (1998): 183.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews books on audiotape, including The Memoirs of Sherlock Holmes, by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. 6 cassettes. 9 hrs. BDD Audio. 1997. ISBN 0-553-47954-7. $29.95
3786. Rosenblum, Trudi Miller. "Adult Audio For Fall." Publishers Weekly 248, no. 32 (2001): 35.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a list of several audiotapes for adults including Naxos Audiobooks Arthur Conan Doyle: A Life by Hesketh Pearson. Read by Tim Pigott-Smith. Abridged, two cassettes, 2.5 hours, $13.98; two CDs, $15.98. Oct.
3787. ———. "Adult Audio for Fall." Publishers Weekly 247, no. 32 (2000): 43.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews several adult audiobooks for fall 2000 including Audio Partners' Sherlock Holmes: 3 Tales of Avarice by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. Read by Edward Hardwicke. Unabridged, two cassettes, three hours, $17.95; two CDs, $24.95. Sept. Also Commuters Library, Sherlock Holmes: The Musgrave Ritual and The Final Problem by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. Read by Ralph Cosham. Unabridged, two CDs, two hours, $19.95. Oct.
3788. ———. "Avalanche of audiobooks set for holidays." Billboard 106, no. 45 (1994): 89.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on the increased publication of audiobooks in preparation for the 1994 Christmas season. Includes a reference to Holmes. "...Durkin Hayes has two holiday promotions: an Audio Gift Collections line and a Paperback Audio 'Stocking Stuffer' display. The Audio Gift Collections include 'Great Women Authors' (featuring Louisa May Alcott and Jane Austen), a Frederick Forsyth boxed set, a Sherlock Holmes collection, a 'Rumpole Of The Bailey' collection, a set of James Herriott's dog stories, and others, for $24.99 each....Simon & Schuster has a never-before-released 1945 radio broadcast of two Sherlock Holmes dramatizations ('The Night Before Christmas' and 'The Darlington Substitution'), starring Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce ($12.00)...."
3789. ———. "Read to me." Billboard 108, no. 8 (1996): 64.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on audiobooks and spoken-word audio recordings for children. Book-and-tape combinations; Traditional audiobooks; Non-book-based audios. Includes a Holmes reference. "...Last but not least, award-winning storyteller Jim Weiss displays an exhilarating range of voices in his dynamic release--'Shakespeare For Children,' as well as his retelling of Greek myths, King Arthur legends and Sherlock Holmes stories, all available from Greathall Productions...."
3790. ———. "Spoken Audio for Spring." Publishers Weekly 248, no. 6 (2001): 37.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Provides information on several audiobooks which will be released in the United States in the spring of 2001. Includes Audio Partners' Sherlock Holmes: 3 Tales of Intrigue by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. Read by Edward Hardwicke. Unabridged, two cassettes, three hours, $17.95; three CDs, $24.95. Feb. Scenario Productions' Mystery Theatre Series. Based on CBC archival radio recordings with a full cast. Each two cassettes, two hours, $14.99 (unless noted), Apr: Moby Dick by Herman Melville; The Rime of the Ancient Mariner by Samuel Taylor Coleridge ($18.99); The Forest Warden by E.T.A. Hoffman ($18.99); Dracula by Bram Stoker; The Spare Room by Mordecai Richler; Sherlock Holmes: Hound of the Baskervilles by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle ($18.99). Apr.
3791. Scott, Whitney. "Media: Audiobooks." Booklist 97, no. 22 (2001): 2143.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews four mystery audiobooks. 'Maigret Sets a Trap,' by Georges Simenon and read by Andrew Sachs; 'A Man Lay Dead,' by Ngaio Marsh and read by James Saxon; 'Murder by the Book,' by Rex Stout and read by Michael Prichard; 'Sherlock Holmes: Three Tales of Intrigue,' by Arthur Conan Doyle and read by Edward Hardwicke.
3792. Sigwald, John. "Media: Audio." Booklist 93, no. 21 (1997): 1830.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the audiocassette 'Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's The Lost World.'
3793. Slough, Brian. "A brush with Basil." Times Educational Supplement, no. (1997): VII.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the sound recording 'Audiopacks,' a collection of Sherlock Holmes stories read by Basil Rathbone.
3794. Tadman, Betty, and Victoria Neumark. "Got the case taped up." Times Educational Supplement, no. (2000): 24.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents different audiobooks for adults. The Geilgud Collection; The History of Theatre; The Decameron; Hercule Poirot's Christmas; The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

3795. Tierney, Mark Phillips, and Phyllis Levy Mandell. "Audiovisual review: Recordings." School Library Journal 42, no. 11 (1996): 70.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the cassette recording 'Sherlock Holmes: Tales of Suspense.'
3796. Tynan, Laurie, and Bette-Lee Fox. "A Treasury of Sherlock Holmes: A Collection of Seven Great Stories. (Audio)." Library Journal 114, no. 12 (1989): 124-124.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the audio book "A Treasury of Sherlock Holmes: A Collection of Seven Great Stories," by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle.
3797. Valle, Barbara. "Audio Reviews." Library Journal 124, no. 14 (1999): 250.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews several audiobooks including Other Worlds by Barbara Michaels. 2 cassettes. abridged. 3 hrs. HarperAudio. 1999. ISBN 0-694-52082-9. $18. "Seated around the fire at a fancy London club, a group of famous men, including Houdini and Arthur Conan Doyle, are gathered to discuss the poltergeists, murder, and unexplained hauntings in two stories of ghostly happenings (the famous Bell Witch in Tennessee and the haunting of a family in Stratford, CT). Each story is related without interruption, then the experts offer their interpretations of the spooky events. Reader Barbara Rosenblat, one of the most talented spoken audio performers recording today, renders the voices of the family members and the famous men superbly. The listener can sense the build-up of suspense as the chilling events unfold. Rosenblat's reading is so fascinating and atmospheric, the listener almost forgets to notice the lack of resolution to the stories. Recommended for all libraries where there is an audience for nonviolent ghost tales."
3798. White, Kathryn. "Review--'His Last Bow and other Stories' read by Martin Jarvis." The Ritual, no. 14 (1994): 61.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3799. Whitten, Robin. "Listen up." Christian Science Monitor, Nov 20, 1997: B8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews six books on tape. 'In Southern Words: Volume 2, Family Album,' from Southern Living Magazine; 'A Christmas Carol,' by Charles Dickens; 'A Christmas Carol and Other Favorites,' from Greathall Productions; 'The Christmas Tree,' by Julie Salamon from Random House Audiobooks; 'A Certain Justice,' by P.D. James from Random House; 'Sherlock Holmes Mysteries,' by Arthur Conan Doyle.
3800. Wright, David. "Hearing the Sound of Murder." Library Journal 129, no. 9 (2004): 15-18.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // An annotated directory of audiobooks focusing on murders and mysteries is provided. It features British classics, American crime fiction, and contemporary crime books. Includes an entry for Holmes. Doyle, Arthur Conan. Sherlock Holmes: 3 Tales of Avarice Audio Partners. 2000. 2 cassettes. 3 hrs. ISBN 1-57270-173-0. $17.95; 3 CDs. ISBN 1-57270-176-5. $24.95 "Edward Hardwicke, a.k.a. Dr. Watson in the popular PBS productions, skillfully navigates nine labyrinthine plots in three story collections. The other series entries are 3 Tales of Betrayal and 3 Tales of Intrigue."
3801. ———. "Sherlock Holmes: 3 Tales of Avarice (Book)." Library Journal 129, no. (2004): 16-16.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the audiobook "Sherlock Holmes: 3 Tales of Avarice," by Arthur Conan Doyle.
3802. Zinsser, John. "Spoken Audio for Spring." Publishers Weekly 247, no. 6 (2000): 31.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a list of newly released audiobooks as of February 2000. Includes Bantam Doubleday Dell Audio (1540 Broadway, New York, N.Y. 10036; (800) 323-9872) listing of BBC Radio Series. Dramatized productions. Each, two cassettes, 3 hrs., $18, Mar. Titles: Daniel Deronda by George Eliot; The Hound of the Baskervilles by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. The Runner; Reef Audio, Reef Series. Each, four-six cassettes, $24.95-$29.95, Feb. Titles: Secrets, Plots (5 Hidden Agendas by Paul Coughlin; The Poison Belt by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle; A Million a Minute by Hillary Davis.

10E ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- COMPACT DISCS (22)

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

3803. "The Black Dove." Publishers Weekly 255, no. 17 (2008): 133-133.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the audiobook "The Black Dove," by Steve Hockensmith. Read by William Dufriis. Tantor Audio, unabridged, nine CDs, 10.5 hrs., $34.99 ISBN 978-1-4001-0605-9. "William Dufriis provides an appealing down-home delivery to his narration of Hockensmith's third adventure featuring the Sherlock Holmes and Doctor Watson-emulating brothers, Gustov 'Old Red' and Otto 'Big Red' Amblingmeyer...."
3804. "The Case of the Left-Handed Lady." School Library Journal 54, no. (2008): 55-55.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the audiobook "The Case of the Left-Handed Lady," by Nancy Springer.
3805. "The Casebook of Sherlock Holmes Volume 2." Publishers Weekly 255, no. 21 (2008): 59-59.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "The Casebook of Sherlock Holmes," Volume 2, by Arthur Conan Doyle. Read by David Timson. Naxos AudioBooks, unabridged, four CDs, 5.5 hrs., $28.98 ISBN 978-962-634-862-8. "After 10 years, 57 stories, four novels and 60 CDs, David Timson's monumental task of recording every word of Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes stories for Naxos concludes. Timson even contributes a Holmes-Watson adventure of his own, 'The Wonderful Toy.' Timson reads energetically, throwing himself into the stories' spirit of elegant deduction and head-long adventure. The dulcet tones of Timson's Watson are frequently interrupted by a panoply of other voices: Cockney ladies of the night, harried businessmen and, of course, the clipped public school staccato of Holmes himself."
3806. "Language arts: literature and drama." School Library Journal 46, no. 8 (2000): 99.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Lists The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes, Vol. III. 3 cassettes or 3 CDs. 3:30 hrs. Prod. by Naxos AudioBooks. Dist. by Naxos of America. cassette, ISBN 9-62634-6914: $17.98; CD, ISBN 9-62634-191-2: $19.98; Historical Recording: Writers & Actors. 2 cassettes or 2 CDs. 2:30 hrs. Prod. by Naxos AudioBooks. Dist. by Naxos of America. cassette, ISBN 9-62634-700-7: $13.98; CD, ISBN 9-62634-200-5: $15.98. Includes some of the greatest historical recording of the works of writers such as Tennyson, Joyce, Shaw, Doyle, Wallace and Tolstoy, as well as actors, Bernhardt, Gielgud, and Olivier; The Hound of the Baskervilles. 2 cassettes. 3 hrs. Prod. by HarperCollins UK Audiobooks. Dist. by Trafalgar Square. ISBN 0-00-104674-8. $14.95. Tony Britton reads the abridged version of Doyle's classic.
3807. "The Lost World." Publishers Weekly 255, no. 13 (2008): 57-57.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the audiobook The Lost World, by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and read by Glen McCready. Naxos Audio, unabridged, seven CDs, 8.5 hrs., $34.98 ISBN 978-962-634-852-9.
3808. "Notes." Publishers Weekly 250, no. 41 (2003): 29-29.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents news briefs related to children's audio and video materials in the U.S. as of October 2003. Launch of the first six titles in the Family Listening Series of Oasis Audio. Oasis has entered an arrangement to distribute at retail dramatizations that were originally produced for the California Artists Radio Theatre program. CART features such performers as Michael York, Roddy McDowall, Samantha Eggart, Lynn Redgrave, William Windom and many others. Each title contains two CDs and two bonus cassettes. Initial releases include Peter and Wendy by James M. Barrie, Little Women by Louisa May Alcott, Treasure Island by Robert Louis Stevenson, Alice in Wonderland by Lewis Carroll, Sherlock Holmes and Selecting a Ghost by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and Hobson's Choice by Harold Brighouse. (Each 2.5 hours, $17.99, ISBN 1-58926-165-8; -180-1; -169-0; -167-4; -184-4; -325-1, all ages, Sept.)
3809. "The Suspicions of Mr. Whicher." Publishers Weekly 255, no. 51 (2008): 49-49.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Kate Summerscale, read by Simon Vance. HighBridge Audio, unabridged, eight CDs, 10 hrs., $34.95 ISBN 978-1-59887-849-3. "Simon Vance does a fine job reading this unusually detailed and thoughtful true crime investigation into a notorious child murder case in 1860 London. At the time, there were only eight detectives working in England. Scotland Yard's top man was Insp. Jonathan Whicher, and he headed the investigation. Intertwined with the tale of detection in its infancy is a fascinating examination of the role played by this case and its inspector in the creation of the detective novel genre by the likes of Wilkie Collins, Edgar Allan Poe, Charles Dickens and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

3810. Adams, Michael. "Audio." Library Journal (1976) 130, no. 20 (2005): 183.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // An annotated bibliography of fiction and nonfiction audiobooks is provided. Includes Cullin, Mitch. A Slight Trick of the Mind. 6 CDs. unabridged. 7 1/4 hrs. HighBridge Audio. 2005. ISBN 1-56511-950-9. $29.95. "Cullin takes an unusual approach to Sherlock Holmes by creating a character study of the elderly detective instead of having him solve a traditional mystery. A Slight Trick of the Mind alternates between three narratives: the 93-year-old Holmes in retirement, keeping bees at his cottage on the Sussex coast; a visit to Japan shortly after World War II; and flashbacks to a case of a missing wife years earlier. The author smoothly ties the three strands together to present Holmes's regret over his underdeveloped emotional nature. A death for which Holmes bears some responsibility results in the cold, distant old man seeking forgiveness. The sections depicting the detective in his prime and the sojourn to Japan are full of colorful period detail. Cullin's moving story of the necessity and pain of love is brilliantly handled by Simon Jones, who creates a wonderfully evocative, gruff voice for Holmes. Recommended for all collections."
3811. Burkey, Mary. "The Case of the Bizarre Bouquets." Booklist 104, no. 17 (2008): 97.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the audiobook "The Case of the Bizarre Bouquets" by Nancy Springer. Read by Katherine Kellgren. 2008. 4hr. Recorded Books, CS, $30.75 (9781428182523); CD, $30.75 (9781428182578).
3812. Cruze, Karen. "The 100-Year-Old Secret." Booklist 105, no. 4 (2008): 81.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book "The 100-Year-Old Secret" by Tracy Barrett. Read by David Pittu. 2008. 3hr. Listening Library, CD, $24 (9780739367636). Gr. 4-6. "This first Sherlock Files mystery-series title rests on the conceit that 12-year-old Xena Holmes and her 10-year-old brother, Xander, are direct descendants of Sherlock Holmes. Transplanted to England with their parents, the American sleuths investigate an unsolved Sherlock Holmes case involving a missing painting.... A fun, fast listen for young mystery lovers."
3813. Hardyment, Christina. "Books: a Word in Your Ear; Arthur Conan Doyle: a Life by Hesketh Pearson Read by Tim Pigott-Smith Naxos, C3hrs, Pounds 8.99." The Independent (London), October 6, 2001: 11.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The fact that Hesketh Pearson knew Conan Doyle, and that his life of the man who invented Sherlock Holmes was written before many of the Doyle papers disappeared into a lawsuit in which they are still unmeshed, gives his 1943 biography an interest all its own. Pearson makes good use of Doyle's 1924 autobiography, Memories and Adventures, so that we get a satisfying sense of the voice of a man who was, it seems, more mild Dr Watson than drug-addicted detective....But Doyle was a gentleman of the old school, dedicated to chivalric causes; his only regret was that people loved Holmes too much and Brigadier Gerard, his own favourite of his creations, too little. David Timson has abridged Pearson's words skilfully; Tim Pigott-Smith is a fine choice as reader. Let's hope Naxos will add Brigadier Gerard's exploits to their four sets of Sherlock Holmes's adventures."
3814. J.C. "Nb." TLS, no. (2003): 14.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents news briefs related to books and literature as of May 16, 2003. Includes: Contents of spoken word CDs release by the British Library featuring Alfred, Lord Tennyson, Arthur Conan Doyle and others reading from their own works; Others.
3815. Maughan, Shannon. "Spoken Audio for Fall." Publishers Weekly 250, no. 31 (2003): 26.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a list of audiobooks. Includes Holmes and Doyle entries. The Lost World by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. Read by Michael Prichard. Unabridged, seven CDs, 8.5 hours, $39; one MP3 CD, $20, July. Classic Tales of Horror and Suspense by Edgar Allan Poe, H.G. Wells, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and Robert Louis Stevenson. Dramatization. Four cassettes or four CDs, 4.5 hours, $24.95, Aug. The Sign of Four by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. Read by David Timson. Unabridged, four CDs, five hours, $26.98, Nov. The New Adventures of Sherlock Holmes: Volume 1--6 by Anthony Boucher and Dennis Greene. Read by Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce. Abridged, six CDs, six hours, $29.95, Oct.
3816. ———. "Spoken Audio for Spring." Publishers Weekly 250, no. 5 (2003): 34.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents several audio recordings. 'The Girl Who Heard Dragons,' by Anne

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- McCaffrey; 'Children of the Mind,' by Orson Scott; 'A Presumption of Death,' by Jill Paton Walsh and Dorothy L. Sayers; 'A Right to Die,' by Rex Stout. Also includes The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes VI by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. Read by David Timson. Unabridged, three cassettes, three hours, $17.98; three CDs, $19.98, Feb.
3817. ———. "Tuning in to Fall Audio." Publishers Weekly 252, no. 30 (2005): 27-35.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Lists several audiobooks available in the U.S. market. Includes two Holmes items from Sound Room/In Audio. The Complete Adventures of Sherlock Holmes by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, read by Ralph Cosham. Unabridged, eight CDs, 9.5 hours, $34.95; one MP3 CD, $24, Sept. The Complete Memoirs of Sherlock Holmes by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, read by Ralph Cosham. Unabridged, seven CDs, 8.3 hours, $34.95; one MP3 CD, $24, Oct.
3818. McCormick, Moira. "Kids audio: A fourth-quarter blizzard of carols, lullabies and cartoon classics." Billboard 108, no. 34 (1996): 76.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents children's compact discs and cassettes released for the 1996 holiday season. Includes one item related to Holmes. "Willowdale Conn.-based Tanglewood, which recently signed renowned U.S. story-teller Jim Weiss' Greathall Productions for distribution in Canada, is releasing Weiss' complete line, including 'Sherlock Holmes For Children,' 'The Jungle Book' and 'Rip Van Winkle.'" 3819. Pour-El, I. "Audio." Library Journal 131, no. 3 (2006): 155-157.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews of recently released fiction and nonfiction audio-books are provided. Included is King, Laurie R. Locked Rooms. 10 cassettes, unabridged. 14 hrs. Recorded Bks. 2005. ISBN 1-4193-4062-X. $94.75; 12 CDs. ISBN 1-4193-4064-6. $119.75. "Traveling back to England by way of her childhood home in San Francisco, Mary Russell (a.k.a. Mrs. Sherlock Holmes) is troubled by disturbing nightmares. Although she was the only survivor of the tragic motor-car accident that killed her father, mother, and younger brother, there is clearly something more than survivor's guilt on her mind. Gradually, as Mary explores the gaps in her memory, her husband realizes that someone is trying to kill her, and they both set out to identify the criminal. Set in a less exotic location than recent Russell/Holmes adventures, the book focuses on Mary's self-exploration rather than crime, politics, or mountaineering. Along the way, the two detectives collect an appealing set of assistants, including Dashiell Hammett, a Chinese scholar, and a modern set of street urchins. While the work lacks the charms of fictional, post-Victorian colonial England characteristic of the neo-Holmes canon, it is still a good mystery. King's writing style always transfers well to the audio format, and reader Jenny Sterlin is competent and easy to understand. Recommended for all public libraries."
3820. Rasmussen, R. Kent. "The Valley of Fear." Library Journal 133, no. 9 (2008): 137-137.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the audio book version of the book "The Valley of Fear" by Arthur Conan Doyle. 6 CDs. unabridged. 6 hrs. Sound Library: BBC Audiobooks America. 2007. ISBN 978-0-7927-5059-8. $64.95.
3821. Romriell, Deanna. "The 100-Year-Old Secret: The Sherlock Files, Book 1." School Library Journal 54, no. 10 (2008): 74-74.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A review of the CD release of the audio book "The 100-Year-Old Secret: The Sherlock Files, Book 1," by Tracy Barrett, is presented. (unabr.). 3 CDs. 5:50 hrs. Prod. by Listening Library. Dist. by Listening Library/Books on Tape. 2008. ISBN 978-0-7393-6763-6. $24. "Shortly after 12-year-old Xena and her younger brother Xander move with their parents to London from Florida, they discover that they are the direct descendants of Sherlock Holmes and they receive his notebook of unsolved cases in this first title (Holt, 2008) in the series by Tracy Barrett....Likeable characters, an intriguing premise, and references to original Sherlock Holmes stories combine for a fun telling. David Pittu does a laudable job reading the tale and has an excellent sense of timing. He gives each character a unique voice and brings the various personalities to life. An enjoyable beginning to a new series."
3822. Rosenblum, Trudi Miller. "Adult Audio for Fall." Publishers Weekly 247, no. 32 (2000): 43.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews several adult audiobooks for fall 2000 including Audio Partners' Sherlock Holmes: 3 Tales of Avarice by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. Read by Edward Hardwicke. Unabridged, two

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

cassettes, three hours, $17.95; two CDs, $24.95. Sept. Also Commuters Library, Sherlock Holmes: The Musgrave Ritual and The Final Problem by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. Read by Ralph Cosham. Unabridged, two CDs, two hours, $19.95. Oct.

3823. ———. "Spoken Audio for Spring." Publishers Weekly 248, no. 6 (2001): 37.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Provides information on several audiobooks which will be released in the United States in the spring of 2001. Includes Audio Partners' Sherlock Holmes: 3 Tales of Intrigue by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. Read by Edward Hardwicke. Unabridged, two cassettes, three hours, $17.95; three CDs, $24.95. Feb. Scenario Productions' Mystery Theatre Series. Based on CBC archival radio recordings with a full cast. Each two cassettes, two hours, $14.99 (unless noted), Apr: Moby Dick by Herman Melville; The Rime of the Ancient Mariner by Samuel Taylor Coleridge ($18.99); The Forest Warden by E.T.A. Hoffman ($18.99); Dracula by Bram Stoker; The Spare Room by Mordecai Richler; Sherlock Holmes: Hound of the Baskervilles by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle ($18.99). Apr.
3824. Shiffman, Stu. "Review--The Hound of the Baskervilles by Clive Nolan and Oliver Wakeman." The Holmes & Watson Report 6, no. 4 (2002): 29-31.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

10F ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- FILMS (42)

3825. "Brief Mention." American Literature 74, no. 3 (2002): 687-701.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes reference to Doyle. The Devil Himself: Villainy in Detective Fiction and Film . Ed. Stacy Gillis and Philippa Gates. Westport, Conn.: Greenwood. 2002. viii, 217 pp. $62.00. "What does the fictional villain reveal about the cultural context that created him or her? With essays on topics such as 'The Arch-Villainess in Victorian Popular Fiction,' 'The Conflict of the Imperial and the Anti-Imperial in Conan Doyle,' and 'The Bond Villains and Cold War Heroism,' this collection endeavors to answer that question. Texts under discussion range from Charles Brockden Brown's Weiland (1798) to the 1995 film Seven."
3826. "Cheat's Guide to the Classics: 2." Daily Mail (London), July 30, 1999: 59.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Short summary of The Hound of the Baskervilles, Doyle, and Hound movies.
3827. "Classic Returns." Library Journal 132, no. 17 (2007): 104-104.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Short review of Davies, David Stuart. Starring Sherlock Holmes. 208p. ISBN 978-1-84576-537-8. Hearn, Marcus & Alan Barnes. The Hammer Story: The Authorised History of Hammer Films. 192p. ISBN 978-1-84576-185-1. ea. vol: Titan. Oct. 2007. illus. filmog. $35.
3828. "Guilty Pleasures Alec Baldwin." Film Comment 39, no. 5 (2003): 8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents the favorite films of actor Alec Baldwin. 'Midnight Lace,' starring Doris Day and Rex Harrison; Favorite comedies; 'Woman in Green,' starring Basil Rathbone. "My favorite movies of all time? Nothing takes me back to my childhood better and quicker than Basil Rathbone as Sherlock Holmes. Give me Woman in Green or Voice of Terror any day."
3829. "Jude Law to be new Sherlock." The Evening Standard (London), February 25, 2002: 6.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "He will appear as the detective in 'Sherlock Holmes and the Vengeance of Dracula.' A movie source said today: 'With his great looks and accent, Jude will be perfect for the role of Holmes. This will be the darkest Sherlock Holmes project ever made.' In 1990, before he became famous, the 29-year-old actor had a bit part in the TV series The Casebook Of Sherlock Holmes, with Jeremy Brett as Holmes."
3830. "A long and winding trip." Economist 358, no. 8206 (2001): 83-84.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the portrayal of drug abuse in motion pictures and includes a passing reference to Holmes. "From the silent era, when few police adventures were complete without a chase through

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

a Chinatown opium den, Hollywood has treated drugs with an unstable mixture of fear and fascination, moralism and concern. In 1930 came outright denial in the form of a self-censorship code which, among other strictures, forbade depiction of drug takers or makers in any light whatsoever. Film producers almost all complied. Even in Sherlock Holmes films you had to be a detective yourself to intuit that the demon sleuth liked cocaine."

3831. "The master detective on screen." The Times (London), September 2, 2002: 19.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Sherlock Holmes has been played by nearly 100 actors in more than 200 films. Ellie Norwood, a hit as Holmes in 47 films in the early 1920s, tackled the role with a De Niro-like intensity. He read all the stories, learnt to play the violin (presumably badly) and wore a dressing gown given to him by Arthur Conan Doyle. But he grew weary of the part. Basil Rathbone, partnered by Nigel Bruce's amiable old buffer of a Watson, made the role his own in the 1940s....Most post-Rathbone Holmeses have been a rather dreary lot. Perhaps the role's need for both restraint and flamboyance cancel each other out....Their old foe Moriarty features in the forthcoming The League of Extraordinary Gentlemen, in which he does battle with Dr Jekyll and Captain Nemo. Holmes's big-screen future currently looks as if he'll have to play second fiddle. As we know already, that's not a sweet-sounding prospect."
3832. "Passings Edwin H. Blum, Eric Porter, Miklos Roza." Baker Street West 1 1, no. 3 (1995): 35.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3833. "Sir Hugo's Wild and Profane Sinema--A Phat Phantasy from '44: The Case of the Screaming Bishop." The Holmes & Watson Report 7, no. 3 (2003): 5-9.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3834. "Sir Hugo's Wild and Profane Sinema--From Gene Wilder to Rolf Becker: A review of Alan Barnes's Sherlock Holmes on the Screen." The Holmes & Watson Report 6, no. 5 (2002): 16-20.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3835. Barnes, Jon. "Shadows and slapstick." TLS, no. 5439 (2007): 18-18.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article discusses the film and theater adaptations of two Victorian melodramatic stories including "Gaslight," starring Ingrid Bergman, Charles Boyer and Joseph Cotten in the film version, and the book "The Hound of the Baskervilles," by Arthur Conan Doyle, which has been produced on both stage and screen. Details relating to the summary of each and their various productions are provided.
3836. Burr, Robert C. "Review--Sir Arthur Conan Doyle at the Cinema by Scott Allen Nollen." The Holmes & Watson Report 1, no. 2 (1997): 24.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The major adaptations of all of Conan Doyle's literary works are fully covered here, as is a 1927 one-reel documentary in which the author talks about his work and his psychic beliefs. The focus is on how faithful each adaptation is to the author's own work and the overall effectiveness of the film.
3837. Clapperton, Guy. "Unusual Holmes." The Times (London), December 18, 2004: 10.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Rupert Everett? As Sherlock Holmes? On Boxing Day? Guy Clapperton unearths some even stranger incarnations including Tom Baker, Charlton Heston, Roger Moore, Leonard Nimoy, Michael Caine, and Larry Hagman.
3838. Cook, William. "Holmes, sweet Holmes." New Statesman 131, no. 4602 (2002): 31.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the success experienced by film adaptations of books on Sherlock Holmes. Main attraction of the silent films on Sherlock Holmes played by Eille Norwood; Actors who played the role of Sherlock Holmes; Overview of film adaptations of books.
3839. Coughlan, Gilles. "Elementary, my dear Gayle." The Globe and Mail (Toronto), January 3, 2002: A16.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Letter to the editor. "It is unfortunate that, in an otherwise excellent article on Sherlock Holmes, Gayle MacDonald chose to bring out the tired cliché that 'no one, it is generally agreed, can touch Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce' in portraying Holmes and Watson (The Case Of The Perennial Sleuth --

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- Jan. 2). While that might have been true 20 years ago, since the mid- to late-1980s, the Sherlockian/Holmesian community has been divided by a friendly debate as to which actor has best portrayed the great detective. For many fans, Jeremy Brett, who appears in the Granada TV series, deserves the title. As far as Nigel Bruce is concerned, most Sherlockians I know agree that the actor's performance had little to do with what the real Dr. Watson was like. As far as I am concerned, his performance in the 1939 Adventures of Sherlock Holmes was atrocious."
3840. Coules, Bert. "Review--Sherlock Holmes Screen and Sound Guide by Gordon E. Kelly." The Ritual, no. 15 (1995): 52-53.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3841. Culley, Maureen. "Fry adds weight to the role of Sherlock Holmes." Daily Mail (London), March 31, 2004: 37.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "It is a mystery to tax even the legendary powers of the master detective himself. For almost 120 years, fans of Sherlock Holmes have known him as a tall, hawk-nosed man whose rigorous studies have left him, in the words of his trusty companion Dr Watson, 'excessively lean'. So when makers of a Pounds 2million TV adaptation of the famous sleuth's adventures cast rather more robustly proportioned comedian Stephen Fry as their new Holmes, it seemed a strange choice to say the least. To confuse matters further, Dr Watson often portrayed on screen as a plump and bumbling Victorian gentleman is to be played by Fry's perennially slim comic partner Hugh Laurie...."
3842. Endo, Takahiko. "Silent Films Related to Sherlock Holmes Released in Japan." Shoso-In Bulletin 8, no. (1998): 199-205.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3843. Goodrich, William D. "Book review--'Sherlock Holmes: Screen and Sound Guide' by Gordon E. Kelly." Baker Street Miscellanea, no. 76 (1994): 50.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3844. Harada, Kakuko. "Holmes and Spock, how are they related?" Shoso-In Bulletin 5, no. (1995): 30-32.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3845. Hobbs, Don. "Review--Sherlock Holmes on the Screen: The Complete Film and TV History by Alan Barnes." The Holmes & Watson Report 6, no. 5 (2002): 34.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3846. Jackson, Kevin. "There is a class of cinemagoer for whom the sharpest pleasure is the chance to spot double yellow lines in the roads of Sherlock Holmes' London." The Independent (London), June 15, 1995: 7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Fox-hunting may or may not be the sport of kings, but gaffe-hunting is definitely the sport of anoraks. There are many cinemagoers for whom the greatest pleasure offered by the world of film is the chance to spot a boom falling into frame, a pistol that fires one shot more than its chamber can hold, a glass that mysteriously refills itself between shots. The American movie magazine Premiere has a regular column in which consenting blooper-watchers can gleefully share their sightings...."
3847. Jancovich, Mark. "The Meaning of Mystery: Genre, Marketing and the Universal Sherlock Holmes Series of the 1940s." Film International 5, no. 17 (2005): 34-45.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3848. Johns, Ian. "Pipe dreams, smoke screens." The Times (London), September 2, 2002: 18.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "As Sherlock Holmes returns to the stage, Ian Johns dons his deerstalker to investigate the pursuit of the whole sleuth. It's quite elementary, if you think about it. Sherlock Holmes was a woman who disguised herself as a man. That high voice and hairless chin, that secrecy about the past and the mysterious childhood. That love of dissembling. How else could a Victorian woman solve crimes in such a chauvinistic age? Curiously, Holmes's trusty chronicler Dr Watson (and Arthur Conan Doyle) failed to note this fact. But Therese Lentz did with her 1994 play 221B Baker Street. When it comes to the world's greatest

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

detective, the theatre has often lifted the curtain on some lesser known aspect of his life. But finding the right tone has always been a three-pipe problem. 'It's the biggest hurdle,' admits the actor-turned-playwright Simon Williams, whose new version of The Hound of the Baskervilles opens this week at the Belgrade in Coventry. 'If it's too reverential and literal then you simply end up with a flat transcription. The best adaptations take a few liberties.'..."

3849. Kane, Alex. "Monday Books: Elementary Approach to Sherlock Holmes ; Starring Sherlock Holmes by David Stuart Davies. Published by Titan Books, London. Pounds 29.99." Belfast News Letter (Northern Ireland), October 1, 2001: 40.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...David Stuart Davis is an acknowledged authority on Sherlock Holmes and this book is a well researched, fascinating and pictorially lavish tribute to an enduring legend. It begins with the first of the over 300 films which have featured Holmes...."
3850. Kendall, Nigel. "Sherlock Holmes - The Definitive Collection." The Times (London), January 29, 2005: 11.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Sherlock Holmes - The Definitive Collection. Directors: Various. Stars: Basil Rathbone, Nigel Bruce....Ah, Holmes, sweet Holmes! This 7-DVD set comprises all 14 of the adventures starring the inimitable pairing of Rathbone's meerschaum- toting sleuth and Bruce's bumbling sidekick. The films have been restored and reassembled from the best available prints, a process that took ten years but is worth every minute...."
3851. Kitahara, Naohiko. "The Sherlock Holmes Films That Did Not Survive (translated by Koike Shigeru)." Shoso-In Bulletin 8, no. (1998): 176-180.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3852. Krebs, Josef. "Movies." Stereo Review's Sound & Vision 66, no. 1 (2001): 138.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews three motion pictures released in digital video disc. 'The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes'; 'The Woman in Green'; 'Dressed to Kill.'
3853. ———. "Ways of Looking." Sound & Vision 69, no. 4 (2004): 97-97.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews two motion pictures released on DVD format. "Sherlock Holmes," starring Basil Rathbone; "Cracker," starring Robbie Coltrane.
3854. Love, Damien. "Home Movie." The Sunday Herald, June 25, 2000: 45.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Although their hasty flickering worlds have little to do with Arthur Conan Doyle, there will only ever be one quicksilver-sardonic Sherlock Holmes, and, bumbling sweetly beside him, only one Watson. Basil Rathbone, like a sneering rapier, and Nigel Bruce first breathed life into the duo for 20th Century Fox's Hound of the Baskervilles (1939) and the same year's follow-up, The Adventures of ... Both films were moody main features, faithful to Conan Doyle in plot and period. Between 1942-1946 Universal employed the pair to reprise the roles in 12 fine B-movies, transposing Holmes and Watson to (then) modern times. Showing this week are five of these: Sherlock Holmes and the Secret Weapon (1942), The Pearl of Death (1944), Pursuit to Algiers (1945), House of Fear (1945) and The Woman in Green (1945), all directed by Roy William Neil...."
3855. Lucas, Tim. "Time after time." Sight & Sound 14, no. 5 (2004): 83-83.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews film compilations released in 2004. "The Monkees: Season 2"; "Naked City: Prime of Life"; "The Sherlock Holmes Collection Volume Two".
3856. MacDonald, Heidi. "Comics Go to the Movies." Publishers Weekly 250, no. 24 (2003): 30.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Highlights films based on comic books in the U.S. Titles of Marvel comic books made into films; Remarks from Marvel marketing manager Michael Moran regarding films based on comic books; Basis of the film produced by DC Comics. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...In contrast to this tangled web, over at DC Comics, their movie offering this year has a single product. The League, starring Sean Connery, is based on The League of Extraordinary Gentlemen by Alan Moore and Kevin O'Neill, a fiendishly clever story that teams various Victorian fictional characters in a plot that ties in everything from H.G. Wells to

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Sherlock Holmes to Jules Verne to James Bond...."

3857. Macnab, Geoffrey. "Friday review: Crime and Punishment: Sherlock Holmes might have been created for the cinema. But playing him cost at least two actors their careers." The Guardian (London), July 12, 2002: 12.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...His creator, who named him after a pair of cricketers called Sherlock and Holmes, had little fondness for him, and many of the actors who played him often became exasperated by him. He was haughty, erratic, self- obsessed and his violin-playing was atrocious. 'I came to the conclusion (as one may in living too closely and too long in seclusion with any one rather unique and difficult personality) that there was nothing lovable about Holmes,' Basil Rathbone admitted after playing the detective in 14 feature films, innumerable radio plays and an ill-fated Broadway show. Eille Norwood, who clocked up 47 screen appearances as Holmes in the early 1920s, grew equally frustrated at being typecast as the man with 'the dressing gown, the violin and the untidy Baker Street rooms'...."
3858. Martindale, David. "The game's afoot so don those deerstalkers." The Globe and Mail (Toronto), April 16, 1994: E6.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A film quiz of fifteen questions. "Attention, Sherlock Holmes fans: Put on your thinking caps (deerstalkers, naturally) and break out the tobacco for the following Sherlock-on-the-screen quiz."
3859. McDonald, Toby. "Elementary, dear Doctor; From the Tardis to 221b Baker Street, Scots actor Tennant is touted to play Holmes in GBP50m Hollywood movie." Mail on Sunday (London), June 15, 2008: 3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "He has played the most famous detective of the future, scouring the universe for alien enemies as Time Lord Doctor Who. But now Scots actor David Tennant is set to swap his futuristic adventures to become the best-loved supersleuth of the past - Sherlock Holmes. The 37-year-old is being lined up to play Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's legendary investigator in a [pounds]50 million Hollywood blockbuster...."
3860. McKuras, Julie. "100 Years Ago." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 4, no. 4 (2000): 2.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Sherlock Holmes Baffled was made in 1900, and marked the premier of the Master Detective in the new entertainment medium of the motion picture. Although the film lasts less than one minute, the impact of Holmes on the screen is still felt 100 years later. Jennie Paton has donated a copy of this film to the Sherlock Holmes Collections.
3861. Michael, Patrick. "Review--'Starring Sherlock Holmes' by David Stuart Davies." The Ritual, no. 28 (2001): 57-58.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3862. Przybilka, Thomas. "Book Review (Sherlock Holmes in Film und Fernsehen: Ein Handbuch)." Shoso-In Bulletin 14, no. (2004): 149.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3863. Raymond, Trevor S. "Billy Wilder on Baker Street: The making and unmaking of a movie." Canadian Holmes 27, no. 1 (2003): 35-48.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
3864. Robey, Tim. "Top Five Portrayals of Sherlock Holmes." Sunday Telegraph (London), September 08, 2002: 06.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Brett, Rathbone, Cushing, Richardson, and Caine (with comments).
3865. Ryan, Desmond. "Desmond Ryan: Sherlockian cinema: Follow the evidence." The Philadelphia Inquirer, May 18, 2002: E01.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Brief reviews of MPI video release of Volume 5 of the Brett/Hardwicke series. "For purists, one of the most admirable aspects of this accomplished series, which initially ran in the mid-'80s, is its scrupulous fidelity to Conan Doyle's Holmes stories." Also comments on Rathbone/Bruce and others. "The succession of Sherlocks to follow - notably Peter Cushing, Christopher Lee and John Neville - clung to Rathbone's interpretation. Holmes was cold, brilliant and omniscient. Beginning with Nicholas Meyer's

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

splendid The Seven-Per-Cent Solution...in 1976, a more nuanced Holmes emerged. Nicol Williamson's detective is beset by drug-induced paranoia and nightmares, and he is ably complemented by Robert Duvall as Watson. Williamson and Duvall set a new standard that was almost matched by Christopher Plummer and James Mason as Holmes and Watson in Murder by Decree...three years later. The story of a possible royal involvement in the Jack the Ripper murders is a little muddled, but the leads have enjoyable chemistry. It was left to Brett, who died of a heart attack at age 59 seven years ago, to give us the ideal modern Holmes - cerebral, compassionate and flawed. If you want a different take on Holmes, avoid Gene Wilder's leaden and dumb The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes' Smarter Brother...released in 1975, and try Disney's amusing riff in The Great Mouse Detective.... The 1986 animated feature posits a parallel world where Sherlock is a mouse with amazing deductive powers. Barry Levinson's 1985 contribution to the genre, Young Sherlock Holmes...does well with the ingenious idea that Holmes and Watson met as schoolboys and cracked their first big case in their teens."

3866. Young, Chris. "Top character is elementary." Evening Times (Glasgow), July 21, 2001: 14.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Peter MacDonald of Ibrox, Glasgow, asks which fictional character has been most often portrayed in films? Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's detective Sherlock Holmes was played by more than 70 actors in over 200 films! Holmes was a favourite of silent films from 1903...."

10F ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- FILMS -- A STUDY IN SCARLET (1933)
(1)

3867. "Sir Hugo's Wild and Profane Sinema--'Suggested by the book by A. Conan Doyle': Revisiting Edwin L. Marin's A Study in Scarlet (1933)." The Holmes & Watson Report 7, no. 2 (2003): 9-13.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

10F ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- FILMS -- DER HUND VON BASKERVILLE (1937) (1)

3868. Haasse, Holger. "Review--'Der Hund von Baskerville (1937)'." The Ritual, no. 21 (1998): 60-64.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

10F ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- FILMS -- DRESSED TO KILL (1946)
(7)

3869. "New on DVD." St. Petersburg Times (Florida), May 12, 2000: 6W.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Fans of Sherlock Holmes can rejoice with the release of An Evening With Sherlock Holmes. Actually, it should be titled several evenings because this boxed set contains four movies - Sherlock Holmes and the Secret Weapon (1942), Woman In Green (1945), Terror By Night (1946) and Dressed To Kill (1946). And that's not all. It also includes an interview with Holmes creator Sir Arthur Conan Doyle filmed in 1927 and 30 original radio broadcasts starring the film's leads, Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce...."

3870. Blowen, Michael. "Video Watch." The Boston Globe, May 7, 2000: C9.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...Fans of Sherlock Holmes can rejoice with the release on Tuesday of An Evening With Sherlock Holmes." Actually, it should be titled several evenings because this boxed set contains four movies - "Sherlock Holmes and the Secret Weapon" (1942), "Woman In Green" (1945), "Terror by Night" (1946), and "Dressed To Kill" (1946). And that's not all. It also includes an interview with Holmes creator Sir Arthur Conan Doyle filmed in 1927 and 30 original radio broadcasts starring the film's leads, Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

3871. Clark, Mike. "The DVD watch." USA Today, May 12, 2000: E08.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Though the hoopla for An Evening With Sherlock Holmes (1942-46, FOCUSfilm, unrated, $70) claims the four films in the box set have been restored, the prints look like dupes, and one of them -- 1946's Terror by Night (seven chapters) -- is a truncated 54-minute version. For those who can overlook this, the collection -- which also includes 1942's Sherlock Holmes and the Secret Weapon, 1945's Woman in Green and 1946's Dressed to Kill (all unrated and with 12 chapters) -- has its rewards. The Basil Rathbone-Nigel Bruce series of Holmes films remains one of the most enjoyable in Hollywood history. The set includes 30 good-sounding Holmes radio shows from the '40s (with wine commercials), and a rare 1927 on-camera chat with Holmes creator Sir Arthur Conan Doyle."
3872. Nichols, Peter M. "Conan Doyle, On Holmes." The New York Times, May 19, 2000: E1:28.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "It was really terribly important after the war when all the young men needed contacting,' Sir Arthur Conan Doyle says rather breezily on camera during a 10-minute address he delivers on a DVD recently released by Focusfilm, a distributor in Ossining, N.Y. It was 1926, and by his remarks and manner the writer clearly wants to be done with his celebrated creation, the detective Sherlock Holmes, and move on to matters that he considers more serious: psychic experiences and communication with the beyond. The young men he refers to were killed during World War I. Holmes, he seems to imply, would be better off laid to rest himself if only the public would permit it....On the same disc, part of a set of four, is 'Terror by Night,' a Holmes adventure filmed by Universal during the 40's with Basil Rathbone as the detective and Nigel Bruce as Watson....The detective brings off other nice surprises in three other cases on the discs: 'Sherlock Holmes and the Secret Weapon' (1942), 'The Woman in Green' (1945) and 'Dressed to Kill' (1946), which was Rathbone's last Holmes film. By then he had played the role more than 200 times, not only on screen but on the radio in 'The New Adventures of Sherlock Holmes.'...The movies come from the National Film Museum, a large archive in Bangor, Me., that provides old film to producers and distributors...."
3873. Petrovic, Hans. "Dumb tricks, and a drunk mum." The Press (Christchurch, New Zealand), November 14, 1998: WE19.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Listing of movies on television for the week. "Sherlock Holmes and the Secret Weapon (CTV, 12.30pm, 1942): The supersleuth (Basil Rathbone) is hired to protect the inventor of a new bombsight from the deadly clutches of Moriarty. One of the more exciting episodes of this series. (1hr 30min)...Dressed to Kill (CTV, 4.30pm, 1946): Music boxes made in prison hold the key to the whereabouts of stolen bank plates in this lively final entry in the Rathbone Sherlock Holmes series. (1hr 30min)..."
3874. Schaefer, Eric, and Dan Streible. "Archival News." Cinema Journal 42, no. 2 (2003): 125.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents an update on film archives as of January 2003. Motion picture collection acquired by the Library of Congress; Film memorabilia acquired by the Herrick Library; Film preservation grant awarded by the Andrew W. Mellon Foundation to the National Film Preservation Foundation. Includes a reference to Holmes, Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce. "The UCLA Film and Television Archive presented its eleventh Festival of Preservation in the summer of 2002. The biennial festival programmed its most diverse line-up ever. More than forty feature films, TV programs, trailers, shorts, and newsreels from 1905 to 1987 were showcased, almost all preserved or restored by the archive....Low-budget efforts were also shown, including two Universal Sherlock Holmes films starring Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce, Sherlock Holmes and the Voice of Terror (1942) and Dressed to Kill (1946)..."
3875. ———. "Archival News." Cinema Journal 40, no. 4 (2001): 104.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents updates on the motion picture industry as of June 2001. Acquisition of nitrate film elements from Warner Bros. by the UCLA Film and Television Archive; Decision of Shaw Brothers Ltd. of Hong Kong to sell its archive of original films to media magnate T. Ananda Krishnan of Malaysia; Development of several projects related to cinema by the Museum of Jurassic Technology in Culver City, California. Includes a reference to Holmes, Basil Rathbone, and Nigel Bruce. "...Warner Bros. has initiated the completion of a preservation project through the UCLA Film and Television Archive that was begun by Hugh Hefner. Funding from Hefner helped preserve six films in Universal's Sherlock Holmes series that starred Basil Rathbone as Holmes and Nigel Bruce as Dr. Watson: Sherlock Holmes and the Secret Weapon (1942), Sherlock Holmes and the Spider Woman (1944), The Scarlet Claw (1944), The Pearl of Death

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

(1944), The Woman in Green (1945), and Terror by Night (1946). Warner Bros., which recently acquired the rights to the series, has already funded the preservation of Sherlock Holmes Faces Death (1943) and The House of Fear (1945) and has committed to funding the preservation of the remaining Universal Holmes films: Sherlock Holmes and the Voice of Terror (1942), Sherlock Holmes in Washington (1943), Dressed to Kill (1946), and Pursuit to Algiers (1945)."

10F ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- FILMS -- FAIRY TALE: A TRUE STORY (1997) (9)

3876. "Family movie guide." Christian Science Monitor, Nov 28, 1997: 13.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews several motion pictures which are either family films, potential blockbusters or movies which might interest young people. Reference to Doyle in the review of "Fairytale: A True Story."

3877. "Freeze frames." Christian Science Monitor, Oct 24, 1997: 13.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews several motion pictures in theaters as of October 24, 1997. Includes reference to Doyle in review of "Fairytale: A True Story."

3878. "The Monitor's 1997 movie guide." Christian Science Monitor, Dec 26, 1997: B1.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents the 'Christian Science Monitor' guide to movies for 1997. An alphabetical listing of the motion pictures released in 1997 with reviews for each one; Includes Fairytale--A True Story. "Two girls snap a photo of fairies in their family's English garden, sparking different responses from interested parties, including the author Arthur Conan Doyle, who believes in supernatural beings, and the magician Harry Houdini, who takes a skeptical view of such matters. Charles Sturridge's fantasy is slow and complicated for very young viewers, but others will enjoy its wholesome story and detailed depiction of the World War I era, not to mention the fairyland scenes, which are truly magical. The strong cast includes Peter O'Toole as the celebrated writer and Harvey Keitel as the world's greatest escape artist....Heartwarming, intricate, marvelous fairy effects."

3879. "Vanity fair and fairies." Skeptic 5, no. 3 (1997): 27.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Applauds essay written by Christopher Hitchens published in the October 1997 issue of 'Vanity Fair' magazine about the motion picture 'Fairytale: A True Story.' "The October issue of Vanity Fair featured an essay by Christopher Hitchens about a new film released from Paramount entitled Fairytale: A True Story, starring Harvey Keitel as Harry Houdini and Peter O'Toole as Sir Arthur Conan Doyle...."

3880. Cunneen, Joseph. "An absorbing girls' story, two plots less convincing." National Catholic Reporter 34, no. 5 (1997): 18.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews three motion pictures including 'Fairytale: A True Story'. Includes reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...Even better, 'Fairytale' follows the case on which it was based by having Gardner pass them on to Arthur Conan Doyle (Peter O'Toole) who, known to all as the creator of the super-logical Sherlock Holmes, had lost his son in the war and become an ardent spiritualist. Doyle in turn was a close friend of the skeptical Houdini, who is shown exposing a seance as an elaborate hoax...."

3881. Johnson, Brian D. "The sacred and profane." Maclean's 110, no. 36 (1997): 62.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Looks at films to be showcased by the annual Toronto International Film Festival that runs through September 13, 1997. Atom Egoyan's 'The Sweet Hereafter'; Jean-Jacques Annaud's 'Seven Years in Tibet'; The special festival program on indigenous Balkan cinema. Includes a reference to Doyle. "...The issue of trust between adults and children crops up again and again--in films haunted by a yearning sense of parental responsibility towards children shining with innocence and wisdom. In The Sweet Hereafter, a teenage girl (Sarah Polley) is jarred out of an incestuous relationship with her father. Seven Years in Tibet focuses on an 11-year-old Dalai Lama (Jamyang Wangchuk) who learns the ways of the world from an Austrian climber (Pitt). And in The Mirror, Iranian director Jafar Panahi's sequel to his impressive debut, The

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

White Balloon, a young girl gets lost in the street among insensitive adults. But British director Charles Sturridge offers the strangest glimpse into a child's imagination with Fairytale--A True Story, based on the 1917 controversy over two English girls who produced snapshots of fairies in a summer garden that photographic experts could not dispute. Peter O'Toole plays Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, who jumps to the children's defence, while Harvey Keitel plays escape artist Harry Houdini, who condemns their claim as a fraud...."

3882. McCormick, Moira. "A duo of fairy tales offers rare quality viewing." Billboard 110, no. 10 (1998): 59.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents news about children's home videos. Details about 'Fairy Tale: A True Story,' which alights in stores March 31, 1998; 'Kristen's Fairy House,' from Great White Dog Picture Co. Includes reference to Doyle. "...Controversy erupts when the girls produce photographs of the fairies; they eventually attract the attention of celebrities Sir Arthur Conan Doyle (Peter O'Toole) and Harry Houdini (Harvey Keitel)....'Frances was completely adamant that the last photograph was true,' he says, noting that the first four images were achieved with cardboard cutouts. The fifth 'looks like a double exposure . . . But [Frances' daughter] Christine Lynch showed me a blowup of it, and there are three faces hidden in the grass. What's interesting is that these were the plates that Conan Doyle had given the children--they were marked, so they couldn't be fiddled with. They were never able to find [evidence of tampering]."
3883. Randi, James. "Fairies, frauds, & fuss." Skeptic 5, no. 3 (1997): 10.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the motion picture 'Fairy Tale: A True Story,' from Paramount Studios. Includes multiple references to Doyle and a photograph of Doyle and Houdini.
3884. Rozen, Leah. "Fairytale: A True Story." People 48, no. 18 (1997): 22.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the motion picture 'Fairytale: A True Story,' starring Harvey Keitel and Peter O'Toole.

10F ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- FILMS -- PURSUIT TO ALGIERS (1945)
(1)

3885. Schaefer, Eric, and Dan Streible. "Archival News." Cinema Journal 40, no. 4 (2001): 104.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents updates on the motion picture industry as of June 2001. Acquisition of nitrate film elements from Warner Bros. by the UCLA Film and Television Archive; Decision of Shaw Brothers Ltd. of Hong Kong to sell its archive of original films to media magnate T. Ananda Krishnan of Malaysia; Development of several projects related to cinema by the Museum of Jurassic Technology in Culver City, California. Includes a reference to Holmes, Basil Rathbone, and Nigel Bruce. "...Warner Bros. has initiated the completion of a preservation project through the UCLA Film and Television Archive that was begun by Hugh Hefner. Funding from Hefner helped preserve six films in Universal's Sherlock Holmes series that starred Basil Rathbone as Holmes and Nigel Bruce as Dr. Watson: Sherlock Holmes and the Secret Weapon (1942), Sherlock Holmes and the Spider Woman (1944), The Scarlet Claw (1944), The Pearl of Death (1944), The Woman in Green (1945), and Terror by Night (1946). Warner Bros., which recently acquired the rights to the series, has already funded the preservation of Sherlock Holmes Faces Death (1943) and The House of Fear (1945) and has committed to funding the preservation of the remaining Universal Holmes films: Sherlock Holmes and the Voice of Terror (1942), Sherlock Holmes in Washington (1943), Dressed to Kill (1946), and Pursuit to Algiers (1945)."

10F ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- FILMS -- SHERLOCK HOLMES (2009)
(15)

3886. "10 People Who Mattered 2008." Time 172, no. 26 (2008): 100-114.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article discusses U.S. celebrities from 2008. Includes Robert Downey Jr. and mention of Holmes. "...Next year Downey will attempt to breathe new life into Sherlock Holmes. After what

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

he's been through, it should be elementary."

3887. "Breakups." People 70, no. 26 (2008): 121.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to the new Holmes movie. "Amid rumors of a romance with Yankees star Alex Rodriguez, Madonna kept busy on her Sticky & Sweet tour while Ritchie shot Sherlock Holmes...."

3888. "Most Improved...Robert Downey, Jr." Maclean's 121, no. 45 (2008): 90-90.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reports on an incident that befell Robert Downey Jr., an actor, on the set of the motion picture "Sherlock Holmes," directed by Guy Ritchie. According to the piece, a tobacco pipe being used as a prop in the film fell into Downey's lap, igniting a fire on his crotch which was extinguished by co-star Jude Law.

3889. "Pop Chart." Time 172, no. 4 (2008): 19-19.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A chart of events in popular culture is presented, including "recovering addict Robert Downey Jr. to play remorseless addict Sherlock Holmes."

3890. Akbar, Arifa. "Sherlock Holmes and the case of the Hollywood duel." The Independent (London), July 3, 2008: 6.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Sherlock Holmes, the pipe-smoking Victorian super-sleuth with a penchant for drugs, is to become the subject of a face-off by two Hollywood studios which are both bringing out films about Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's literary hero. In one camp is Columbia Pictures, which has announced the making of an as yet untitled comedy starring Sacha Baron Cohen as Holmes and Will Ferrell as his sidekick, Watson. Squaring up to Columbia is Warner Brothers, whose Guy Ritchie-directed project Sherlock Holmes, which will portray the legendary detective as a punching, sword-jousting comic book-style adventure hero...."

3891. Bamigboye, Baz. "Elocutionary, Dr Watson; It's Friday!" Daily Mail (London), October 3, 2008: 56.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Guy Ritchie has assembled a thoroughly British cast for his Sherlock Holmes movie. But what, you might well ask, about Robert Downey Jr, the all-American star who plays Holmes? 'His accent is perfect!' Kelly Reilly insisted. Kelly plays Mary, the girlfriend of Dr Watson (Jude Law) in Sherlock Holmes, as the film is simply titled...."

3892. Bartolomeo, Joey. "For Better Or for Worse." People 70, no. 4 (2008): 60-61.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article discusses the singer Madonna and husband Guy Ritchie. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "In a few weeks Madonna, Ritchie and their three kids will head back to London so the singer can put the final touches on her tour (which kicks off in Wales on Aug. 23). Come fall they will be leading separate lives again: In October Madonna returns to the U.S. to tour for two months, while Ritchie begins filming Sherlock Holmes with Robert Downey Jr. in London...."

3893. Collins, Tony. "It's elementary, my dear Big Joe!" Birmingham Evening Mail, October 25, 2008: 3.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...Big Joe' Egan, who was also a former sparring partner of ex-world champion Mike Tyson, has landed a part in film director Guy Ritchie's latest movie, Sherlock Holmes, which is due for release in 12 months' time...."

3894. Harlow, John. "It's grungy, Watson: Ritchie to film a fighting Holmes." The Sunday Times (London), June 8, 2008: 6.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The film director Guy Ritchie, husband of Madonna, is to try to revive his career by giving Sherlock Holmes a gritty, gangland-style makeover. Ritchie is best known for his violent 1998 hit Lock, Stock and Two Smoking Barrels but has had little success since. The Hollywood studio Warner Bros is backing his attempt to repackage Holmes from his tweedy, cerebral image into a sword-wielding fist-fighter with a short fuse. In Los Angeles last week, an executive at Warner said it was looking for a 'grungy' Holmes. 'This is Sherlock Holmes as a street-fighting man, ready to take on man, monsters, whatever the world can throw at him.' The studio hopes to release the film, to be called Sherlock Holmes, in 2010. The story was conceived as a comic book by Lionel Wigram, a Briton based in Los Angeles who worked on the Harry Potter

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- films. The comic will be published when the film is released...."
3895. Jones, Catherine. "Movie Boom is Legacy of 2008; Hollywood stars and TV shows all flock to city." Liverpool Daily Echo, December 27, 2008: 3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Movie and TV crews spent more than 580 days filming in Liverpool during Capital of Culture year. The figure is a 23% increase on 2007 and Liverpool Film Office bosses said today it highlighted the city's standing across the world. Filming projects included the Guy Ritchie-directed Sherlock Holmes, featuring Robert Downey Jr and Jude Law...."
3896. Kidd, Chip. "Robert Downey Jr." The New York Times, February 8, 2009: 45.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Profile of the actor along with photographs from filming "Sherlock Holmes."
3897. Lyall, Sarah. "Is That You, Sherlock?" The New York Times, January 25, 2009: AR1.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "In a filthy, dank labyrinth of rooms below the streets of the East End, Sherlock Holmes was solving a case. That is, Robert Downey Jr., playing Holmes in the forthcoming film 'Sherlock Holmes,' was engaged in hand-to-hand, foot-to-stomach combat with a very big and very bad villain (Robert Maillet). Bam! Pow! Ouch! Both characters would end up knocked out on the floor, along with Holmes's trusty sidekick, Dr. John Watson, played by Jude Law. Filmed in December, the scene presented a sharp corrective to the popular cinematic view of Holmes, at least the one propagated by the old films featuring the wonderfully named British actor Basil Rathbone...."
3898. Steinberg, Jacques. "Robert Downey Jr. To Play Sherlock Holmes." New York Times, July 11, 2008: 3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "In the first role he has signed up for since 'Iron Man,' Robert Downey Jr., left, will forsake his high-tech suit for a woolen cloak and cap. Mr. Downey has agreed to play the lead role in the film 'Sherlock Holmes,' which will be directed by Guy Ritchie for Warner Brothers, Variety reported. The film is scheduled to begin shooting in October, with a screenplay by Anthony Peckham based on the detective stories of Arthur Conan Doyle and on a comic book, also called 'Sherlock Holmes.' Most of the movie will be filmed in London. In the role, which Variety said would plumb Holmes's brawn as well as his brains, Mr. Downey will have some competition. Columbia Pictures is also preparing a movie based on Holmes, this one a comedy with Sacha Baron Cohen as the title character and Will Ferrell as his sidekick, Dr. Watson. [Abstract from publisher]
3899. White, Richard. "The strange case of Mr Ritchie and the cursed movie." The Sun (London), November 29, 2008: 33.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Guy Ritchie's new film Sherlock Holmes seems to be cursed after a string of nasty accidents. The cast and crew first wondered if they had a mystery fit for legendary detective Holmes on their hands when Robert Downey Jr was knocked out by a 7ft wrestler. Then yesterday, he and Jude Law, 35 -- who plays his sidekick Dr Watson -- had to flee the set with Ritchie when a petrol tanker exploded in a fireball...."
3900. Wloszczyna, Susan. "Sherlock Holmes? Ritchie's on the case." USA Today, Aug 22, 2008: 8B.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Information on an upcoming Holmes movie. "Guy Ritchie's latest gangster yarn, RocknRolla, won't even be in theaters for another six weeks, but he already has turned his attentions to his next project, a version of Arthur Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes for contemporary tastes. 'It will be a very big production, visceral and intellectual,' Ritchie says. 'His brilliance will percolate into the action.' The expected 2010 Warner release will be set in the olden days, he says, but the emphasis will be as much on Holmes' physical prowess as it is on his keen powers of deduction. 'His intellect was as much of a curse as it was a blessing,' Ritchie says. 'He was a deeply layered character.' No word on the villain yet, but there will be a love interest based on Conan Doyle's Irene Adler. Casting is expected to be finished in six or so weeks. Ritchie already has been lucky to snag Robert Downey Jr., hot off of this summer's Iron Man and Tropic Thunder, as his lead. 'His wife, Susan, was a producer on RocknRolla, and he was one of the first people who saw it and was a big fan,' the filmmaker explains. 'He wanted to do something together, and this was a natural.' As for Downey's English accent, 'it's flawless.' Ritchie has no worries about producer Judd Apatow's competing Sherlock Holmes with Sacha Baron Cohen. As he says: 'They don't even have a script yet. We are way ahead.'

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

10F ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- FILMS -- SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE CASE OF THE SILK STOCKING (2004) (TV) (18)

3901. "Everett steps into Sherlock's 'Stocking'." USA Today, October 21, 2005: E1.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of production.
3902. "Hotstuff." Newsday, Oct 23, 2005: C.04.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Silk Stocking. The body of a woman in rags lies on the muddy shore of the Thames, and Holmes is prompted out of retirement by Dr. Watson, who suspects a more complex kind of foul play than the simple murder of a prostitute. Screenplay by Allan Cubitt, who adapted 'The Hound of the Baskervilles' for 'Masterpiece Theatre' in 2003. Rupert Everett stars as Holmes...."
3903. "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Silk Stocking." People 64, no. 18 (2005): 42.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the television program "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Silk Stocking," starring Rupert Everett.
3904. Andreoli, Richard. "Broadcast steps up." Advocate, no. (2005): 4p.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article presents an overview of several television programs and films about gays and lesbians. Includes reference to Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Silk Stocking (PBS). "Rupert Everett stars as Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's famous Victorian detective in this new original story."
3905. Clark, Pete. "Seasonal choices." Daily Mail (London), December 23, 2004: 2.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Brief note on "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Silk Stocking." "Television viewers feel snugly at home in the fog-filled streets of Sherlock Holmes' London. The fog, widely reviled at the time, is a crucial part of the chilling atmosphere. Even if nothing is happening, it seems that it might at any moment, and if anything does happen, it will be bad. We meet Holmes, icily played by Rupert Everett, in the middle of an extended drugs bender."
3906. Cubitt, Allan. "Holmes is where the heart is." Daily Mail (London), December 11, 2004: 6.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Although I read and hugely enjoyed The Hound Of The Baskervilles, and many other Sherlock Holmes stories as a child, Holmes is actually a very adult character. Sir Arthur Conan Doyle created the great detective as a manic-depressive with a brooding darkness within him. And that complexity is one of the reasons Holmes has become a classic role on stage and screen. The late Jeremy Brett was Sherlock Holmes on TV for a decade, and described the role as tougher than Hamlet or Macbeth. Brett became so obsessed with playing Holmes that he was once discovered outside Doyle's former London house, begging to be released from the spirit of the master detective. In the 1940s, Basil Rathbone made the role his own in radio broadcasts and Hollywood films. For Christmas 2002, I adapted The Hound Of The Baskervilles for BBC television with Richard Roxburgh playing Holmes. This Christmas, my offering is Sherlock Holmes And The Case Of The Silk Stocking, with Rupert Everett in the lead role. He is a fascinating choice...."
3907. James, Martin. "Sherlock Holmes And The Case Of The Silk Stocking." Sunday Times (London), December 26, 2004: 86.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...Rupert Everett makes an excellent Holmes, with Ian Hart a sterling Doctor Watson and Neil Dudgeon an amusing Inspector Lestrade in this melodramatic story of the hunt for a serial killer. Though not based on a Conan Doyle story, Allan Cubitt's wholly original screenplay does remain true to the spirit of the canon...."
3908. Jones, Alison. "Culture: Watching the Detective; Rupert Everett Tells Alison Jones He was Born to Play Sherlock Holmes." Birmingham Post, December 23, 2004: 10.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "'Actors always have certain characters they think they should play. Most people think it is Hamlet; I think it is Sherlock Holmes,' admits Rupert Everett, who gets his wish on Boxing Day when he plays the legendary 'tec in The Case of the Silk Stocking. He certainly looks the part. Long, lean and

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

elegant with a kind of sardonic detachment which perfectly suits a man who is an observer rather than a participant of life...."

3909. Keal, Graham. "Culture: Moving Tribute to Pete and Dud; Sherlock Holmes may be Stuck in a Pea Souper, but Don't Risk Missing." Birmingham Post, December 22, 2004: 11.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...Another outing for Sherlock Holmes sounds rather conventional in comparison, but BBC1's Boxing Day offering, Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Silk Stocking...is actually rather wonderful. Rupert Everett is Holmes in this entirely new story by Allan Cubitt - it's not based on any of Conan Doyle's books. Everett gives his brooding, narcotics-abusing Holmes a marvellously arrogant touch, and he's brave enough not to go out of his way to make Holmes likeable...."
3910. Kington, Miles. "All Roads Lead to Baker Street for Writers." The Independent (London), December 31, 2004: 27.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "On Boxing Day on BBC-TV they showed a Sherlock Holmes adventure called The Case of the Silk Stocking, starring Rupert Everett as the great detective. If you are puzzled not to recognise the name of this Holmes story, puzzle no longer. It was written by Alan Cubitt, and although my wife and I thought Everett very good in the role, and enjoyed some of the goings on, the story was shaping up quite preposterously by the time some visitors rang our door bell, and we missed the final five minutes and never found out what happened. What I was not shocked by was the fact that anyone should attempt to concoct a new story based on 221b Baker Street, even if it did involve inventing a completely new fiancée for Dr Watson. Because although it may seem to be sacrilege to imagine you can do the job as well as Conan Doyle, it must also be one of the most universal instincts among writers....Even Bert Coules has done it. He has adapted all the Holmes stories and the four novels for Radio 4, starring Clive Merrison as Holmes. That's 50 stories or more. And when Mr Coules had no more Holmes yarns to adapt, how did he use the skill and knowledge he had gained from vicariously living in Baker Street for so long? Why, he overcame his respect for Conan Doyle and concocted a clutch of brand- new Holmes stories of his own. I heard some of them on Radio 4, and they weren't bad, even if they were slightly far-fetched and over- wrought...."
3911. Lisotta, Christopher. "PBS Sets Scorsese's 'Dylan'; Web Site to Get Downloadable 'Nerd'." Television Week 24, no. 29 (2005): 4-4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents an update on television broadcasting in the U.S. as of July 18, 2005. Schedule of the availability of the television program "NerdTV" via the Internet on PBS.org; Broadcasting of the Martin Scorsese documentary "No Direction Home: Bob Dylan" for the "American Masters" series on PBS stations; Role of Rupert Everett and Helen Mirren in the film "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Silk Stockings" aired on "Masterpiece Theatre."
3912. McKie, Robin. "OTV: Boxing Day: Pick of the day: Capital Holmes: Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Silk Stocking, BBC1." The Observer, December 19, 2004: 99.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The omens for this year's Sherlock Holmes festive special are scarcely encouraging. The prospect of using an 'original' Holmes mystery by TV playwright Allan Cubitt, rather than picking a Conan Doyle original, is a worry for any aficionado. Nor does Rupert Everett...seem a great choice to play the great detective: a bit too foppish and slight, surely. Holmes should be all brooding menace and frowns. Such prejudices are misplaced, however, for The Case of the Silk Stocking turns out to be a real treat. Everett is especially convincing, turning in a fine, dark performance..."
3913. Pierce, Andrew. "Rupert Everett as Sherlock Holmes." The Times (London), August 24, 2004: 7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Rupert Everett is filming Sherlock Holmes, minus his trademark deerstalker and pipe. The character is not described in the book in this way. It was one actor, Basil Rathbone I think his name was, who invented the hat and the pipe, which have wrongly been associated with the character ever since."
3914. Rabinowitz, Dorothy. "Return of the Master Detective." Wall Street Journal - Eastern Edition 2005: W5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the television program "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Silk Stocking," starring Rupert Everett and Ian Hart.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

3915. Rampton, James. "Arts: Not our Ideal Holmes." The Independent (London), December 16, 2004: 10.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Sherlock Holmes is a national treasure, a literary character who has long enjoyed 'untouchable' status. He arouses especially strong passions among the purists who feel deeply possessive about 'their' man. Mess with him at your peril. So the makers of Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Silk Stocking, BBC1's radical new take on their hero, may be diving for cover after the film goes out on Boxing Day. Ian Hart, who plays the sleuth's companion and chronicler, Dr John Watson, in this new Holmes story written by Allan Cubitt, is certainly bracing himself for some flak from Arthur Conan Doyle devotees...."
3916. Ramsey, Terry. "Pick of the Day." The Evening Standard (London), December 24, 2004: 42.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Silk Stocking. "Was there ever such a brooding, handsome and strangely sexy Sherlock Holmes as this new version? The great Victorian detective is usually portrayed as an academic and austere individual. But in the hands of British Hollywood star Rupert Everett (right) he maintains these qualities while gaining a hint of another fictional hero, the dark and romantic Heathcliff. Albeit a version of Heathcliff who wears a dapper hat and polished shoes...."
3917. Rebello, Stephen. "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Silk Stocking." Advocate, no. 949 (2005): 64.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the television program 'Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Silk Stocking' directed by Simon Cellan Jones and starring Rupert Everett.
3918. Stasio, Marilyn. "Attention, Holmes Devotees: Baker Street Is Irregular." New York Times, October 22, 2005: B7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Provides information about the production of the Sherlock Holmes film "Masterpiece Theater," starring Rupert Everett and Ian Hart in the U.S.

10F ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- FILMS -- SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE DEADLY NECKLACE (1962) (2)

3919. Brown, Geoff. "Arts." The Times (London), May 18, 2000: 2.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Brief review of "Sherlock Holmes and the Deadly Necklace," Orbit Screen Classics, 12, 1962. "'Sherlock Holmes, Detective,' says the nameplate above the Baker Street doorbell. Inside live Christopher Lee (just right for pipe, deerstalker and logical reasoning) and Thorley Walters's bumbling Dr Watson. But this is a German film, dubbed into English by unknown Americans, none of whom can pronounce Moriarty. The story is not canonical, but there's fun of a kind watching the hunt for an old necklace of Cleopatra's in a vaguely 1920s London...."
3920. Michael, Patrick. "Review--'Sherlock Holmes and the Deadly Necklace'." The Ritual, no. 27 (2001): 53-55.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

10F ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- FILMS -- SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE SECRET WEAPON (1942) (8)

3921. "Edmund Hartmann." The Times (London), January 2, 2004: 39.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Edmund Hartmann, film writer, was born on September 24, 1911. He died on November 28, 2003, aged 92....Although Hartmann was known primarily as a gagman, he also worked in other genres and scripted two of the best Sherlock Holmes films, Sherlock Holmes and the Secret Weapon (1942) and The Scarlet Claw (1944), with Basil Rathbone as the famous detective...."
3922. "New on DVD." St. Petersburg Times (Florida), May 12, 2000: 6W.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Fans of Sherlock Holmes can rejoice with the release of An Evening With Sherlock Holmes. Actually, it should be titled several evenings because this boxed set contains four movies - Sherlock Holmes and the Secret Weapon (1942), Woman In Green (1945), Terror By Night (1946) and

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Dressed To Kill (1946). And that's not all. It also includes an interview with Holmes creator Sir Arthur Conan Doyle filmed in 1927 and 30 original radio broadcasts starring the film's leads, Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce...."

3923. Blowen, Michael. "Video Watch." The Boston Globe, May 7, 2000: C9.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...Fans of Sherlock Holmes can rejoice with the release on Tuesday of "An Evening With Sherlock Holmes." Actually, it should be titled several evenings because this boxed set contains four movies - "Sherlock Holmes and the Secret Weapon" (1942), "Woman In Green" (1945), "Terror by Night" (1946), and "Dressed To Kill" (1946). And that's not all. It also includes an interview with Holmes creator Sir Arthur Conan Doyle filmed in 1927 and 30 original radio broadcasts starring the film's leads, Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce...."

3924. Clark, Mike. "The DVD watch." USA Today, May 12, 2000: E08.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Though the hoopla for An Evening With Sherlock Holmes (1942-46, FOCUSfilm, unrated, $70) claims the four films in the box set have been restored, the prints look like dupes, and one of them -- 1946's Terror by Night (seven chapters) -- is a truncated 54-minute version. For those who can overlook this, the collection -- which also includes 1942's Sherlock Holmes and the Secret Weapon, 1945's Woman in Green and 1946's Dressed to Kill (all unrated and with 12 chapters) -- has its rewards. The Basil Rathbone-Nigel Bruce series of Holmes films remains one of the most enjoyable in Hollywood history. The set includes 30 good-sounding Holmes radio shows from the '40s (with wine commercials), and a rare 1927 on-camera chat with Holmes creator Sir Arthur Conan Doyle."

3925. Nichols, Peter M. "Conan Doyle, On Holmes." The New York Times, May 19, 2000: E1:28.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "'It was really terribly important after the war when all the young men needed contacting,' Sir Arthur Conan Doyle says rather breezily on camera during a 10-minute address he delivers on a DVD recently released by Focusfilm, a distributor in Ossining, N.Y. It was 1926, and by his remarks and manner the writer clearly wants to be done with his celebrated creation, the detective Sherlock Holmes, and move on to matters that he considers more serious: psychic experiences and communication with the beyond. The young men he refers to were killed during World War I. Holmes, he seems to imply, would be better off laid to rest himself if only the public would permit it....On the same disc, part of a set of four, is 'Terror by Night,' a Holmes adventure filmed by Universal during the 40's with Basil Rathbone as the detective and Nigel Bruce as Watson....The detective brings off other nice surprises in three other cases on the discs: 'Sherlock Holmes and the Secret Weapon' (1942), 'The Woman in Green' (1945) and 'Dressed to Kill' (1946), which was Rathbone's last Holmes film. By then he had played the role more than 200 times, not only on screen but on the radio in 'The New Adventures of Sherlock Holmes.'...The movies come from the National Film Museum, a large archive in Bangor, Me., that provides old film to producers and distributors...."

3926. Petrovic, Hans. "Comedy lovers in for a treat." The Press (Christchurch, New Zealand), January 29, 2000: WE20.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Listing of films on television, including a number of Holmes offerings. "Sherlock Holmes and the Secret Weapon (CTV, noon, 1942): First-rate Sherlock Holmes adventure made as British WW2 propaganda, with Basil Rathbone playing the supersleuth, who is up against the Nazis and his arch-nemesis Professor Moriarty in a battle for possession of a wartime invention. (1hr 15min)...Sherlock Holmes and the Woman in Green (CTV, 1.15pm, 1945): When Scotland Yard begins receiving the severed fingers of several women, Holmes (Rathbone) finds Moriarty at the bottom of it. (1hr 15min)...Terror By Night (CTV, noon, 1946): Entertaining mystery with Sherlock Holmes (Rathbone) guarding a valuable gem on a Scotland-bound train, and solving a few murders along the way. (1hr 10min)...The Triumph of Sherlock Holmes (CTV, 1.20pm, 1936): Arthur Wontner and Ian Fleming make up the Holmes-Watson team in this mystery-adventure involving murder and a secret society among coal miners. (1hr 10min)..."

3927. ———. "Dumb tricks, and a drunk mum." The Press (Christchurch, New Zealand), November 14, 1998: WE19.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Listing of movies on television for the week. "Sherlock Holmes and the Secret Weapon (CTV, 12.30pm, 1942): The supersleuth (Basil Rathbone) is hired to protect the inventor of a new bombsight from the deadly clutches of Moriarty. One of the more exciting episodes of this series. (1hr

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

30min)...Dressed to Kill (CTV, 4.30pm, 1946): Music boxes made in prison hold the key to the whereabouts of stolen bank plates in this lively final entry in the Rathbone Sherlock Holmes series. (1hr 30min)..."

3928. Schaefer, Eric, and Dan Streible. "Archival News." Cinema Journal 40, no. 4 (2001): 104.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents updates on the motion picture industry as of June 2001. Acquisition of nitrate film elements from Warner Bros. by the UCLA Film and Television Archive; Decision of Shaw Brothers Ltd. of Hong Kong to sell its archive of original films to media magnate T. Ananda Krishnan of Malaysia; Development of several projects related to cinema by the Museum of Jurassic Technology in Culver City, California. Includes a reference to Holmes, Basil Rathbone, and Nigel Bruce. "...Warner Bros. has initiated the completion of a preservation project through the UCLA Film and Television Archive that was begun by Hugh Hefner. Funding from Hefner helped preserve six films in Universal's Sherlock Holmes series that starred Basil Rathbone as Holmes and Nigel Bruce as Dr. Watson: Sherlock Holmes and the Secret Weapon (1942), Sherlock Holmes and the Spider Woman (1944), The Scarlet Claw (1944), The Pearl of Death (1944), The Woman in Green (1945), and Terror by Night (1946). Warner Bros., which recently acquired the rights to the series, has already funded the preservation of Sherlock Holmes Faces Death (1943) and The House of Fear (1945) and has committed to funding the preservation of the remaining Universal Holmes films: Sherlock Holmes and the Voice of Terror (1942), Sherlock Holmes in Washington (1943), Dressed to Kill (1946), and Pursuit to Algiers (1945)."

10F ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- FILMS -- SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE SECRET WEAPON (1943) (1)

3929. Vosburgh, Dick. "Obituary: Edmund Hartmann; Erudite Screenwriter for Bob Hope." The Independent (London), December 9, 2003: 20.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...When his RKO contract lapsed, Hartmann signed a seven-year deal with Universal Pictures. 'At Universal, I wrote for three great teams,' he told an interviewer, 'Abbott and Costello, Olsen and Johnson, and Holmes and Watson.' His Universal assignments included Abbott and Costello's Keep 'Em Flying (1941), Ride 'Em Cowboy (1942), In Society (1944), Here Come the Co-eds (1945) and The Naughty Nineties (1945), Olsen and Johnson's The Ghost Catchers (1944) and See My Lawyer (1945), and Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce's Sherlock Holmes and the Secret Weapon (1943), Sherlock Holmes in Washington (1943) and The Scarlet Claw (1944)...."

10F ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- FILMS -- SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE VOICE OF TERROR (1942) (7)

3930. "Guilty Pleasures Alec Baldwin." Film Comment 39, no. 5 (2003): 8.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents the favorite films of actor Alec Baldwin. 'Midnight Lace,' starring Doris Day and Rex Harrison; Favorite comedies; 'Woman in Green,' starring Basil Rathbone. "My favorite movies of all time? Nothing takes me back to my childhood better and quicker than Basil Rathbone as Sherlock Holmes. Give me Woman in Green or Voice of Terror any day."

3931. "Opening Shots." Film Comment 39, no. 5 (2003): 6.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Looks at various developments in the motion picture industry as of September 2003. Sidebar article with reference to Holmes--Guilty Pleasures Alec Baldwin: "My favorite movies of all time? Nothing takes me back to my childhood better and quicker than Basil Rathbone as Sherlock Holmes. Give me Woman in Green or Voice of Terror any day."

3932. Jancovich, Mark. "Female monsters: Horror, the 'Femme Fatale' and World War II." European Journal of American Culture 27, no. 2 (2008): 133-149.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The article is an examination of critical reception of the figure of the female monster as it emerged from the horror film during World War II, and it seeks to analyse discourses through

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

which this figure was understood during the period of their initial release." Includes multiple references to Holmes. "...Everlyn Ankers, a woman who signified modern, independent femininity and, in the previous year, she had even helped Holmes and Watson defeat the Nazi's in Sherlock Holmes and the Voice of Terror (1942)....Alternatively, the Sherlock Holmes series saw Holmes pitted against a series of deadly female masterminds, most particularly his adversary in The Spider Woman (1944). The New York Journal-American even referred to its female lead, Gale Sondergaard, as an actress who is 'always good as a femme fatale' (Blackford 1944: 493), as did the New York Post, which referred to her schemes as 'diabolical', the work of 'a 'female Moriarity,' a 'femme fatale' (Winsten 1944a: 494). There was even the sense that many reviewers felt that the film had refreshed a tired series. While the New York Newspaper PM claimed that Holmes's 'current antagonist, the Spider Woman . . . is for my money a much shifter and certainly a much niftier trick than was Prof. Moriarity of other days' (McManus 1944: 493), the New York Journal American claimed: 'Inasmuch as the current instalment of the master-sleuth serial is above the average in plausibility, suspense and interest and has been really quite well presented, it should do nothing to spoil your appetite for future releases' (Blackford 1944: 493). If these women were not bored, self-centred housewives like Phyllis in Double Indemnity, they are also far more active than the classic femme fatale, plotting and executing their own schemes, rather than simply seducing others into acting for them....These female monster movies continued into 1945 with Holmes encountering more female threats in the form of The Woman in Green (1945) and Universal completing its third in the Captive Wild Woman films, Jungle Captive (1945)...."

3933. Kehr, Dave. "Critic's Choice: New DVDs." New York Times, July 4, 2006: E5.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews several films released on DVD format including "Petulia," directed by Richard Lester, starring Julie Christie, "Cannibal Holocaust," directed by Ruggero Deodato and "Sherlock Holmes and the Voice of Terror."

3934. Koldys, Mark. "Guide to Records: SALTER." American Record Guide 63, no. 4 (2000): 180.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews several music recordings performed by the Slovak Radio Symphony with William T. Stromberg. 'Ghost of Frankenstein,' composed by Hans Salter; 'Sherlock Holmes & the Voice of Terror,' by Skinner. "...Yet Skinner, who is overdue for a serious reevaluation, wrote in a neo-romantic European style that meshed so well with Salter's that the pair often collaborated at Universal. The music for the Basil Rathbone Sherlock Holmes series is possibly Skinner's best-known work, given the popularity these films have sustained over half a century. Along with Son of Frankenstein this is some of Skinner's most adroit writing, and the enduring themes (especially the call-to-arms Main Title) never fail to inspire...."

3935. Schaefer, Eric, and Dan Streible. "Archival News." Cinema Journal 42, no. 2 (2003): 125.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents an update on film archives as of January 2003. Motion picture collection acquired by the Library of Congress; Film memorabilia acquired by the Herrick Library; Film preservation grant awarded by the Andrew W. Mellon Foundation to the National Film Preservation Foundation. Includes a reference to Holmes, Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce. "The UCLA Film and Television Archive presented its eleventh Festival of Preservation in the summer of 2002. The biennial festival programmed its most diverse line-up ever. More than forty feature films, TV programs, trailers, shorts, and newsreels from 1905 to 1987 were showcased, almost all preserved or restored by the archive....Low-budget efforts were also shown, including two Universal Sherlock Holmes films starring Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce, Sherlock Holmes and the Voice of Terror (1942) and Dressed to Kill (1946)..."

3936. ———. "Archival News." Cinema Journal 40, no. 4 (2001): 104.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents updates on the motion picture industry as of June 2001. Acquisition of nitrate film elements from Warner Bros. by the UCLA Film and Television Archive; Decision of Shaw Brothers Ltd. of Hong Kong to sell its archive of original films to media magnate T. Ananda Krishnan of Malaysia; Development of several projects related to cinema by the Museum of Jurassic Technology in Culver City, California. Includes a reference to Holmes, Basil Rathbone, and Nigel Bruce. "...Warner Bros. has initiated the completion of a preservation project through the UCLA Film and Television Archive that was begun by Hugh Hefner. Funding from Hefner helped preserve six films in Universal's Sherlock Holmes series that starred Basil Rathbone as Holmes and Nigel Bruce as Dr. Watson: Sherlock Holmes and the Secret Weapon (1942), Sherlock Holmes and the Spider Woman (1944), The Scarlet Claw (1944), The Pearl of Death

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

(1944), The Woman in Green (1945), and Terror by Night (1946). Warner Bros., which recently acquired the rights to the series, has already funded the preservation of Sherlock Holmes Faces Death (1943) and The House of Fear (1945) and has committed to funding the preservation of the remaining Universal Holmes films: Sherlock Holmes and the Voice of Terror (1942), Sherlock Holmes in Washington (1943), Dressed to Kill (1946), and Pursuit to Algiers (1945)."

10F ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- FILMS -- SHERLOCK HOLMES FACES DEATH (1943) (1)

3937. Schaefer, Eric, and Dan Streible. "Archival News." Cinema Journal 40, no. 4 (2001): 104.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents updates on the motion picture industry as of June 2001. Acquisition of nitrate film elements from Warner Bros. by the UCLA Film and Television Archive; Decision of Shaw Brothers Ltd. of Hong Kong to sell its archive of original films to media magnate T. Ananda Krishnan of Malaysia; Development of several projects related to cinema by the Museum of Jurassic Technology in Culver City, California. Includes a reference to Holmes, Basil Rathbone, and Nigel Bruce. "...Warner Bros. has initiated the completion of a preservation project through the UCLA Film and Television Archive that was begun by Hugh Hefner. Funding from Hefner helped preserve six films in Universal's Sherlock Holmes series that starred Basil Rathbone as Holmes and Nigel Bruce as Dr. Watson: Sherlock Holmes and the Secret Weapon (1942), Sherlock Holmes and the Spider Woman (1944), The Scarlet Claw (1944), The Pearl of Death (1944), The Woman in Green (1945), and Terror by Night (1946). Warner Bros., which recently acquired the rights to the series, has already funded the preservation of Sherlock Holmes Faces Death (1943) and The House of Fear (1945) and has committed to funding the preservation of the remaining Universal Holmes films: Sherlock Holmes and the Voice of Terror (1942), Sherlock Holmes in Washington (1943), Dressed to Kill (1946), and Pursuit to Algiers (1945)."

10F ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- FILMS -- SHERLOCK HOLMES IN NEW YORK (1976) (1)

3938. Pollak, Michael. "F.Y.I." The New York Times, January 2, 2005: 14.2.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Questions from readers. "Q. As we Sherlock Holmes fans approach the anniversary of the master's birth, I started wondering: Did Sherlock Holmes ever visit New York? A. Only in the movies. The screen's most-filmed detective came to Manhattan in "Sherlock Holmes in New York," a 1976 pastiche that included Roger Moore as Holmes, Patrick Macnee as Watson, John Huston as the evil Moriarty and Charlotte Rampling as Irene Adler. The fanciful plot has Moriarty seeking world domination by stealing Lower Manhattan's gold supply, and kidnapping Irene Adler's son, who may or may not be Holmes's."

10F ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- FILMS -- SHERLOCK HOLMES IN WASHINGTON (1943) (3)

3939. Clark, Mike. "New on DVD." USA Today, November 7, 2003: E09.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Brief review of "Sherlock Holmes in Washington." "Universal's Basil Rathbone-Nigel Bruce Holmes series delighted over and over on early-'60s TV, and some of the most amusing entries were time-machine affairs in which Holmes and Watson got involved in World War II espionage. Check out Rathbone's weird hair curls, some fractured Washington, D.C., geography....Also new: Sherlock Holmes and the Voice of Terror and Sherlock Holmes and the Secret Weapon (both 1942), plus Sherlock Holmes Faces Death (1943). Like Washington, they were preserved by the UCLA Film and Television Archive and look their best in years."

3940. Schaefer, Eric, and Dan Streible. "Archival News." Cinema Journal 40, no. 4 (2001): 104.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents updates on the motion picture industry as of June 2001. Acquisition of

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

nitrate film elements from Warner Bros. by the UCLA Film and Television Archive; Decision of Shaw Brothers Ltd. of Hong Kong to sell its archive of original films to media magnate T. Ananda Krishnan of Malaysia; Development of several projects related to cinema by the Museum of Jurassic Technology in Culver City, California. Includes a reference to Holmes, Basil Rathbone, and Nigel Bruce. "...Warner Bros. has initiated the completion of a preservation project through the UCLA Film and Television Archive that was begun by Hugh Hefner. Funding from Hefner helped preserve six films in Universal's Sherlock Holmes series that starred Basil Rathbone as Holmes and Nigel Bruce as Dr. Watson: Sherlock Holmes and the Secret Weapon (1942), Sherlock Holmes and the Spider Woman (1944), The Scarlet Claw (1944), The Pearl of Death (1944), The Woman in Green (1945), and Terror by Night (1946). Warner Bros., which recently acquired the rights to the series, has already funded the preservation of Sherlock Holmes Faces Death (1943) and The House of Fear (1945) and has committed to funding the preservation of the remaining Universal Holmes films: Sherlock Holmes and the Voice of Terror (1942), Sherlock Holmes in Washington (1943), Dressed to Kill (1946), and Pursuit to Algiers (1945)."

3941. Vosburgh, Dick. "Obituary: Edmund Hartmann; Erudite Screenwriter for Bob Hope." The Independent (London), December 9, 2003: 20.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...When his RKO contract lapsed, Hartmann signed a seven-year deal with Universal Pictures. 'At Universal, I wrote for three great teams,' he told an interviewer, 'Abbott and Costello, Olsen and Johnson, and Holmes and Watson.' His Universal assignments included Abbott and Costello's Keep 'Em Flying (1941), Ride 'Em Cowboy (1942), In Society (1944), Here Come the Co-eds (1945) and The Naughty Nineties (1945), Olsen and Johnson's The Ghost Catchers (1944) and See My Lawyer (1945), and Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce's Sherlock Holmes and the Secret Weapon (1943), Sherlock Holmes in Washington (1943) and The Scarlet Claw (1944)...."

10F ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- FILMS -- TERROR BY NIGHT (1946)
(7)

3942. "New on DVD." St. Petersburg Times (Florida), May 12, 2000: 6W.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Fans of Sherlock Holmes can rejoice with the release of An Evening With Sherlock Holmes. Actually, it should be titled several evenings because this boxed set contains four movies - Sherlock Holmes and the Secret Weapon (1942), Woman In Green (1945), Terror By Night (1946) and Dressed To Kill (1946). And that's not all. It also includes an interview with Holmes creator Sir Arthur Conan Doyle filmed in 1927 and 30 original radio broadcasts starring the film's leads, Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce...."

3943. Blowen, Michael. "Video Watch." The Boston Globe, May 7, 2000: C9.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...Fans of Sherlock Holmes can rejoice with the release on Tuesday of "An Evening With Sherlock Holmes." Actually, it should be titled several evenings because this boxed set contains four movies - "Sherlock Holmes and the Secret Weapon" (1942), "Woman In Green" (1945), "Terror by Night" (1946), and "Dressed To Kill" (1946). And that's not all. It also includes an interview with Holmes creator Sir Arthur Conan Doyle filmed in 1927 and 30 original radio broadcasts starring the film's leads, Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce...."

3944. Clark, Mike. "The DVD watch." USA Today, May 12, 2000: E08.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Though the hoopla for An Evening With Sherlock Holmes (1942-46, FOCUSfilm, unrated, $70) claims the four films in the box set have been restored, the prints look like dupes, and one of them -- 1946's Terror by Night (seven chapters) -- is a truncated 54-minute version. For those who can overlook this, the collection -- which also includes 1942's Sherlock Holmes and the Secret Weapon, 1945's Woman in Green and 1946's Dressed to Kill (all unrated and with 12 chapters) -- has its rewards. The Basil Rathbone-Nigel Bruce series of Holmes films remains one of the most enjoyable in Hollywood history. The set includes 30 good-sounding Holmes radio shows from the '40s (with wine commercials), and a rare 1927 on-camera chat with Holmes creator Sir Arthur Conan Doyle."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

3945. Nichols, Peter M. "Conan Doyle, On Holmes." The New York Times, May 19, 2000: E1:28.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "It was really terribly important after the war when all the young men needed contacting,' Sir Arthur Conan Doyle says rather breezily on camera during a 10-minute address he delivers on a DVD recently released by Focusfilm, a distributor in Ossining, N.Y. It was 1926, and by his remarks and manner the writer clearly wants to be done with his celebrated creation, the detective Sherlock Holmes, and move on to matters that he considers more serious: psychic experiences and communication with the beyond. The young men he refers to were killed during World War I. Holmes, he seems to imply, would be better off laid to rest himself if only the public would permit it....On the same disc, part of a set of four, is 'Terror by Night,' a Holmes adventure filmed by Universal during the 40's with Basil Rathbone as the detective and Nigel Bruce as Watson....The detective brings off other nice surprises in three other cases on the discs: 'Sherlock Holmes and the Secret Weapon' (1942), 'The Woman in Green' (1945) and 'Dressed to Kill' (1946), which was Rathbone's last Holmes film. By then he had played the role more than 200 times, not only on screen but on the radio in 'The New Adventures of Sherlock Holmes.'...The movies come from the National Film Museum, a large archive in Bangor, Me., that provides old film to producers and distributors...."

3946. Petrovic, Hans. "Comedy lovers in for a treat." The Press (Christchurch, New Zealand), January 29, 2000: WE20.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Listing of films on television, including a number of Holmes offerings. "Sherlock Holmes and the Secret Weapon (CTV, noon, 1942): First-rate Sherlock Holmes adventure made as British WW2 propaganda, with Basil Rathbone playing the supersleuth, who is up against the Nazis and his arch-nemesis Professor Moriarty in a battle for possession of a wartime invention. (1hr 15min)...Sherlock Holmes and the Woman in Green (CTV, 1.15pm, 1945): When Scotland Yard begins receiving the severed fingers of several women, Holmes (Rathbone) finds Moriarty at the bottom of it. (1hr 15min)...Terror By Night (CTV, noon, 1946): Entertaining mystery with Sherlock Holmes (Rathbone) guarding a valuable gem on a Scotland-bound train, and solving a few murders along the way. (1hr 10min)...The Triumph of Sherlock Holmes (CTV, 1.20pm, 1936): Arthur Wontner and Ian Fleming make up the Holmes-Watson team in this mystery-adventure involving murder and a secret society among coal miners. (1hr 10min)..."

3947. Rogers, Michael. "Classic Returns." Library Journal 130, no. 19 (2005): 107.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // An annotated bibliography of re-released classic fiction and nonfiction titles is provided. Includes an entry for Doyle and Holmes. Doyle, Sir Arthur Conan. The Sherlock Holmes Mysteries. 547p. ISBN 1-59609-176-2. Signet. 2005. pap. $14.95 with DVD. "These clever packages combine a classic text with a DVD of a film version. The Holmes volume's 22 stories accompany Terror by Night and The Woman in Green, starring Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce...."

3948. Schaefer, Eric, and Dan Streible. "Archival News." Cinema Journal 40, no. 4 (2001): 104.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents updates on the motion picture industry as of June 2001. Acquisition of nitrate film elements from Warner Bros. by the UCLA Film and Television Archive; Decision of Shaw Brothers Ltd. of Hong Kong to sell its archive of original films to media magnate T. Ananda Krishnan of Malaysia; Development of several projects related to cinema by the Museum of Jurassic Technology in Culver City, California. Includes a reference to Holmes, Basil Rathbone, and Nigel Bruce. "...Warner Bros. has initiated the completion of a preservation project through the UCLA Film and Television Archive that was begun by Hugh Hefner. Funding from Hefner helped preserve six films in Universal's Sherlock Holmes series that starred Basil Rathbone as Holmes and Nigel Bruce as Dr. Watson: Sherlock Holmes and the Secret Weapon (1942), Sherlock Holmes and the Spider Woman (1944), The Scarlet Claw (1944), The Pearl of Death (1944), The Woman in Green (1945), and Terror by Night (1946). Warner Bros., which recently acquired the rights to the series, has already funded the preservation of Sherlock Holmes Faces Death (1943) and The House of Fear (1945) and has committed to funding the preservation of the remaining Universal Holmes films: Sherlock Holmes and the Voice of Terror (1942), Sherlock Holmes in Washington (1943), Dressed to Kill (1946), and Pursuit to Algiers (1945)."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

10F ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- FILMS -- THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES (1932) (1)

3949. Howlett, Anthony. "Review--The Hound of the Baskervilles (1932)." The Musgrave Papers, no. 6 (1993): 104-107.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

10F ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- FILMS -- THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES (1939) (1)

3950. Burke, Ken. "Charting relationships in American popular film, part 1." International Journal of Instructional Media 24, no. 4 (1997): 341-361.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // As an extension of some of the author's previous writings on American popular cinema, this study presents and explains several diagrams showing the evolution of significant film genres in context of each other and relevant historical trends. Figure 3 includes Sherlock Holmes by way of The Hound of the Baskervilles (1939) and the series of films with Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce.

10F ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- FILMS -- THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES (1959) (1)

3951. Grose, Thomas K. "Reality doesn't bite (hard)." U.S. News & World Report 122, no. 23 (1997): 52.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Describes the 1997 efforts being made to revive the British film company Hammer Film Productions. Includes a reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...The deal maker was Neil Mendoza, a London trade-magazine publisher and Saatchi business associate. Mendoza's lawyers are vetting contracts going back 60-plus years (including the will of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, creator of Sherlock Holmes, which gives Hammer the rights to film The Hound of the Baskervilles) to determine which film rights belong or have reverted back to Hammer. Mendoza estimates his lawyers may unearth rights worth as much as $33 million...."

10F ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- FILMS -- THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES (2002) (1)

3952. McNamara, John. "Watson! The game is afoot." The Times (London), January 22, 2005: 28.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "When the American Sir Henry Baskerville (Matt Day) inherits the curse of his family along with the ancient manor, Baskerville Hall, the obvious man to help him with his problem is Sherlock Holmes. It may have come as some surprise, though, to find Holmes being played by an Australian whose most famous role was as the insanely jealous Duke in Baz Luhrmann's musical spectacular Moulin Rouge! An odd choice maybe, but Richard Roxburgh proves a good one, perilously locating his detective just the right side of the line that divides genius and madness...."

10F ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- FILMS -- THE HOUSE OF FEAR (1945) (2)

3953. "Books on TV." Bookseller, no. 5212 (2006): 43-43.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article presents information on certain books that will be serialized in television in Great Britain. "Sherlock Holmes and the House of Fear" will be shown on January 14, 2006, on BBC2 at 1 pm. Basil Rathbone stars in this 1945 adaptation of author Conan Doyle's sleuth yarn. "Johnny and the Bomb" will be shown on January 15, 2006, on BBC1 at 5:35 pm. It is a three-part dramatization of Terry Pratchett's time-travel fantasy, with Zoe Wanamaker. "Balderdash & Piffle" will be shown on January 16, 2006, on BBC2 at 9 pm.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

3954. Schaefer, Eric, and Dan Streible. "Archival News." Cinema Journal 40, no. 4 (2001): 104.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents updates on the motion picture industry as of June 2001. Acquisition of nitrate film elements from Warner Bros. by the UCLA Film and Television Archive; Decision of Shaw Brothers Ltd. of Hong Kong to sell its archive of original films to media magnate T. Ananda Krishnan of Malaysia; Development of several projects related to cinema by the Museum of Jurassic Technology in Culver City, California. Includes a reference to Holmes, Basil Rathbone, and Nigel Bruce. "...Warner Bros. has initiated the completion of a preservation project through the UCLA Film and Television Archive that was begun by Hugh Hefner. Funding from Hefner helped preserve six films in Universal's Sherlock Holmes series that starred Basil Rathbone as Holmes and Nigel Bruce as Dr. Watson: Sherlock Holmes and the Secret Weapon (1942), Sherlock Holmes and the Spider Woman (1944), The Scarlet Claw (1944), The Pearl of Death (1944), The Woman in Green (1945), and Terror by Night (1946). Warner Bros., which recently acquired the rights to the series, has already funded the preservation of Sherlock Holmes Faces Death (1943) and The House of Fear (1945) and has committed to funding the preservation of the remaining Universal Holmes films: Sherlock Holmes and the Voice of Terror (1942), Sherlock Holmes in Washington (1943), Dressed to Kill (1946), and Pursuit to Algiers (1945)."

10F ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- FILMS -- THE LOST WORLD (1925)
(7)

3955. "New entries to the National Film Registry." American Cinematographer 80, no. 1 (1999): 28-29.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // For the tenth year in a row, 25 films have been designated by the Library of Congress for preservation in the National Film Registry in recognition of their cultural, historical, or aesthetic significance. Given the recent expansion of the Registry's dictate about the type of films that are eligible, the entries are quite varied in terms of style, genre, and subject matter: They include silent pictures such as The Lost World (1925), based on the novel by Arthur Conan Doyle; works that evidence the Registry's eclectic taste, such as Dead Birds (1964), an ethnographic study of a tribe in Western New Guinea; and more modern fare, such as Dennis Hopper's counterculture classic Easy Rider (1969).
3956. "Restorations." Cinema Journal 38, no. 2 (1999): 118-119.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // George Eastman House has sponsored the restoration of the 1925 First National version of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's novel The Lost World. From 8,000 to 8,500 surviving feet of footage have been reassembled to resemble the original as closely as possible. In addition, tinting has been done, and new intertitles have been created using a script. First shown in 1997, the restoration is being exhibited in various specialized venues for silent-movie fans worldwide.
3957. Chambers, Paul. "Rock idol." New Scientist 188, no. 2519 (2005): 31-33.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...In late 1915 Brown was approached by Willis O'Brien and Herbert Dawley, amateur film-makers and pioneers of stop-motion animation, who wanted to recreate battling dinosaurs on screen. The result was a jerkily animated T. Rex in the 1919 movie The Ghost of Slumber Mountain, followed by a small walk-on part in the screen adaptation of Conan Doyle's The Lost World...."
3958. Clark, Mike. "This week's platinum picks." USA Today, Sep 14, 2007: E4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Brief reviews of new releases including one related to Doyle. The Lost World. 1925/1960, Fox, unrated, $20 Though Fox isn't ballyhooing it, the bonus inclusion of Willis O'Brien's original movie is what makes this twofer worth it. The pioneer effects maestro also was the genius behind King Kong in 1933. Back story: Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's yarn deals with dinosaurs amid a jungle expedition. The '25 version offers Bessie Love (1929's Oscar winner for The Broadway Melody), Lewis Stone (Andy Hardy's judge father) and Wallace Beery. In 1960, the year after its box-office smash Journey to the Center of the Earth, Fox mounted a CinemaScope/color remake that plunked Jill St. John into the Amazon with Michael Rennie, Fernando Lamas, The Fly's David Hedison, tight pink Capri pants and Frosty the Poodle -- a nutty, nutty mix that heads deep into the Amazon. Extras, extras: Very minor.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

3959. Corliss, Richard, and Jeffrey Ressler. "Peter Pan grows up but can he still fly? (Cover story)." Time 149, no. 20 (1997): 74.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Profiles director Steven Spielberg. Includes a reference to Doyle. "...Spielberg came up with the theme of The Lost World at the end of a meeting with David Koepp, a screenwriter of the first Jurassic Park....Spielberg suggested that Koepp watch the 1925 film of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's The Lost World, which tells of an expedition to a South American jungle habitat where dinosaurs still roam, and Howard Hawks' 1962 Hatari!, starring John Wayne as a safari hunter on a game preserve...."

3960. Tanner, Ron. "Terrible Lizard! The Dinosaur as Plaything." Journal of American & Comparative Cultures 23, no. 2 (2000): 53.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the popularity of the toy dinosaur in the United States. Increase in the production of toy dinosaurs; Impact of the dinosaur on the kids; Representation of the dinosaur remains. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Other O'Brien-animated films followed, culminating in the relatively sophisticated 1925 film, The Lost World, based on Conan Doyle's 1912 novel of the same name, which recounts the discovery of dinosaurs thriving today on a remote Amazonian plateau...."

3961. Taves, Brian. "Archival News." Cinema Journal 38, no. 2 (1999): 111-121.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Announces events and developments related to motion picture studies. Fifth annual Domitor Conference in Washington D.C.; Exhibition of apparatus from the photographic history collection of the Smithsonian Institution's Museum Support Center; Film festivals. Pages 118-119 discusses the 1925 First National version of Doyle's The Lost World and its restoration by the George Eastman House.

10F ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- FILMS -- THE LOST WORLD (1960)
(1)

3962. Clark, Mike. "This week's platinum picks." USA Today, Sep 14, 2007: E4.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Brief reviews of new releases including one related to Doyle. The Lost World. 1925/1960, Fox, unrated, $20 Though Fox isn't ballyhooing it, the bonus inclusion of Willis O'Brien's original movie is what makes this twofer worth it. The pioneer effects maestro also was the genius behind King Kong in 1933. Back story: Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's yarn deals with dinosaurs amid a jungle expedition. The '25 version offers Bessie Love (1929's Oscar winner for The Broadway Melody), Lewis Stone (Andy Hardy's judge father) and Wallace Beery. In 1960, the year after its box-office smash Journey to the Center of the Earth, Fox mounted a CinemaScope/color remake that plunked Jill St. John into the Amazon with Michael Rennie, Fernando Lamas, The Fly's David Hedison, tight pink Capri pants and Frosty the Poodle -- a nutty, nutty mix that heads deep into the Amazon. Extras, extras: Very minor.

10F ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- FILMS -- THE MYSTERY OF THE LEAPING FISH (1916) (1)

3963. Cape, G. S. "Addiction, stigma and movies." Acta Psychiatrica Scandinavica 107, no. 3 (2003): 163-169.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a reference to Holmes. "...One of the earliest movies (The Mystery of the Leaping Fish, supervised by D.W. Griffith, 1916) depicting drug use shows the antics of Douglas Fairbanks, Sr. as private detective Cokennyday (a parody of Sherlock Holmes) burying his face in a mountain of cocaine or injecting himself whenever his energy is waning...."

10F ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- FILMS -- THE PEARL OF DEATH (1944)
(1)

3964. Schaefer, Eric, and Dan Streible. "Archival News." Cinema Journal 40, no. 4 (2001): 104.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents updates on the motion picture industry as of June 2001. Acquisition of nitrate film elements from Warner Bros. by the UCLA Film and Television Archive; Decision of Shaw Brothers Ltd. of Hong Kong to sell its archive of original films to media magnate T. Ananda Krishnan of Malaysia; Development of several projects related to cinema by the Museum of Jurassic Technology in Culver City, California. Includes a reference to Holmes, Basil Rathbone, and Nigel Bruce. "...Warner Bros. has initiated the completion of a preservation project through the UCLA Film and Television Archive that was begun by Hugh Hefner. Funding from Hefner helped preserve six films in Universal's Sherlock Holmes series that starred Basil Rathbone as Holmes and Nigel Bruce as Dr. Watson: Sherlock Holmes and the Secret Weapon (1942), Sherlock Holmes and the Spider Woman (1944), The Scarlet Claw (1944), The Pearl of Death (1944), The Woman in Green (1945), and Terror by Night (1946). Warner Bros., which recently acquired the rights to the series, has already funded the preservation of Sherlock Holmes Faces Death (1943) and The House of Fear (1945) and has committed to funding the preservation of the remaining Universal Holmes films: Sherlock Holmes and the Voice of Terror (1942), Sherlock Holmes in Washington (1943), Dressed to Kill (1946), and Pursuit to Algiers (1945)."

10F ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- FILMS -- THE PRIVATE LIFE OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (1970) (21)

3965. "Billy Wilder: A death in the Hollywood family (Movie)." Rolling Stone, no. 895 (2002): 79.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews several motion pictures directed by Billy Wilder, including "The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes."

3966. "Isolated scores or music & effects tracks on laserdisc." Films in Review 47, no. 3/4 (1996): 22.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Lists scores or music and effects tracks on films on laserdisc. Includes entry for The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes, Miklos Rozsa.

3967. "Letters from Readers." Commentary 113, no. 3 (2002): 3.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes the following letter: To the Editor: Terry Teachout's article on Miklos Rozsa was, as usual, profound and well researched, and deserved by this marvelous composer. But Mr. Teachout fails to mention the most challenging and innovative film Rozsa ever had anything to do with, as well as one of the best: Alain Resnais's Providence (1977), starring the late Sir John Gielgud. Rozsa also incorporated his 1956 Violin Concerto into the score for the underrated Billy Wilder film, The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes (1970), which featured, I believe, the composer's single on-camera appearance, conducting in London's Albert Hall.

3968. "Movies." New Yorker 81, no. 35 (2005): 26-32.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This section presents information on the latest movies playing in various theaters in New York City, as of November 7, 2005. Included is a listing at the Museum of the Moving Image for the November 5-6 showing of "The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes."

3969. "MPAA ratings." Variety 355, no. 3: 20.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Lists the Motion Picture Association of America's (MPAA) ratings for various movies. Includes 'Arizona Dream'; 'The Last Party'; 'One Night Stand'; 'Silent Fall'; 'Warriors'; 'Beverly Hills Cop III'; 'Dark Secrets'; 'Eden 6'; 'White'; 'Sioux City'; 'Wyatt Earp'; 'The Cowboy Way'; 'The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes'; 'Renaissance Man'; 'The Wedding Gift'; 'French Silk'; 'Maverick'.

3970. "They Look so Good on the Shelf." Advocate, no. (2003): 1/3p.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents brief descriptions of boxed sets of movie DVDs. "The sophisticated Billy Wilder DVD Collection (MGM Home Entertainment, $129.96) contains two of the legendary writer-director's queerest--Some Like It Hot and The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes--along with seven other classics..."

3971. Aloff, Mindy. "Dance in Film." Chronicle of Higher Education 49, no. 49 (2003): B15.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the presentation of dance in U.S. motion pictures, with a reference to

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Billy Wilder's The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes.

3972. Burr, Ty. "Video; (Cover story)." Entertainment Weekly, no. 255/256 (1995): 132.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a list of the best and worst videos of 1994. Billy Wilder's The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes is listed under the "Honor Roll" category.
3973. Clarke, Roger. "Cinema: the Best Films." The Independent (London), December 11, 2002: 16.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Brief review of "The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes" (PG, Billy Wilder, 125mins). "Made in 1970, when the great director was in his sixties, this 'Sherlock Holmes investigates the Loch Ness monster' yarn was butchered down from its three-hour length by the studio, which then threw away all the discarded negatives. Even in its shortened form, though, it remains a Holmes classic. Robert Stephens stars. Limited release."
3974. Combs, Richard. "Talking Cure." Film Comment 44, no. 5 (2008): 78-78.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of "Have you seen...?" by David Thomson. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Actually, the account is fairly typical of Thomson's method throughout, since he mixes everything into his analyses--production histories, anecdotes, surmises about small but significant failings, and gossip. Jean Simmons, we're told, can be seen smiling secretly at the camera in Spartacus, hoping that someone else is in on the joke; Billy Wilder's nagging on The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes drove the star Robert Stephens to attempt suicide...."
3975. Davey, Peter. "Back in the picture." Strad 110, no. 1315 (1999): 1188.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Offers a look at musical concertos for motion pictures in the United States. Overview of composers for American films with a focus on Miklos Rozsa. Includes a reference to Holmes and a photo of Wilder and Rozsa. "...When Hollywood director Billy Wilder first heard Rozsa's composition, he liked it so much he decided to construct a film around it. The result was The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes (1970). The composer remodelled his concerto to the needs of the film. The first movement pointed up the introspective character of the cocaine-addicted, violin-playing detective; the beautiful slow movement proved ideal for highlighting the relationship between Holmes and the spy Gabrielle; and the tense, dynamic third movement set the mood as the film moved towards its dramatic Loch Ness climax. Never short of inspiration, Rozsa then added a march - 'Elgarian' in spirit - to accompany the arrival of Queen Victoria at Balmoral. Finally, as if to put his personal stamp on it all, he makes an appearance in the film, conducting the Royal Philharmonic Orchestra in a performance of Swan Lake."
3976. Eder, Bruce. "Miklos Rozsa." Films in Review 47, no. 3/4 (1996): 2.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on Miklos Rozsa, three-time Oscar recipient and multiple nominee as a composer. Return of Rozsa's music to the New York Philharmonic Orchestra in October 1995; Film credits include 'Ben-Hur'; Training and orientation in music; Personal background; Career history; Concert works. Includes a reference to Holmes. "...Throughout the 1960's, when he wasn't writing new works for the concert hall, Rozsa busied himself with various labels, re-recording his classic film scores with the Hollywood Bowl Symphony Orchestra (Capitol/Angel Records) and the Royal Philharmonic Orchestra (Polydor and London Records), along with the occasional new score (Wilder's The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes)...."
3977. Goldman, David. "Shocking, lurid, and true!" Biography 3, no. 1 (1999): 18.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reveals that the photograph of Scotland's Loch Ness Monster is a hoax. Researchers who revealed that the photo is a fake; Reconstruction of the mythical creature by Marmaduke Arundel Wetherell; Debate on the existence of the creature. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Perhaps one day someone will find the two creatures that actually do reside at the bottom of the loch. One is a model of the monster that was sunk during the filming of the 1970 film The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes. The other is Wetherell's creation. Hearing a groundskeeper approach, Wetherell and his crew quickly sunk their replica in the loch on that day in 1934. It has never been recovered."
3978. Handzo, Stephen. "The golden age of film music." Cineaste 21, no. 1/2 (1995): 46.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the achievements of the American film music industry from 1935 to

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

1962. Shift from silent films to the use of sound and music; Accomplishments of composers Max Steiner and Alfred Newman; Criticisms regarding the Hollywood film music composers; Use of assembly line approach in film music during the 1930s. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Rozsa did get a worthy film when his old colleague Billy Wilder had him adapt his violin concerto into the score of The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes (1970), a late masterpiece with a rich mixture of moods and genres that went unseen in an era of 'relevance.'"
3979. Kael, Pauline. "The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes." New Yorker 81, no. 35 (2005): 30-30.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the motion picture "The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes," directed by Billy Wilder, starring Robert Stephens.
3980. Koldys. "Spellbound/The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes." American Record Guide 70, no. 5 (2007): 154-155.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews two music releases composed by Miklos Rozsa including "Spellbound," performed by Celia Sheen, the Slovak Radio Symphony and Alan Wilson and "The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes," performed by Lucie Svehlova, Nic Raine and the Prague Philharmonic.
3981. Macaulay, Sean. "Ready for your close-up, Mr Wilder?" The Times (London), Nov 10, 2005: 21.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Forget the how-to books. There is only one place for any aspiring, or indeed working, screenwriter to start. It is the cabinet on the left as you enter the new Writers Guild Foundation library in Los Angeles. Here, locked behind glass on two shelves, sits a leatherbound set of Billy Wilder's screenplays. These yellowed, coffee-stained pages are as close to genius as a mortal can get: 38 alphabetised scripts from Ace in the Hole to Witness for the Prosecution. In between are the masterpieces: Double Indemnity, Some Like It Hot, Sunset Boulevard, The Apartment (all included in the current Wilder retrospective at the National Film Theatre)...I find it telling that the most creatively successful of Wilder's later films, The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes (1970), was set in the past. Period decorum allowed him to return to his flair for putting realistic dents into a sanitised image...."
3982. Macnab, Geoffrey. "The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes (Film)." Sight & Sound 14, no. 8 (2004): 77-77.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the DVD videodisc release of the motion picture "The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes," directed by Billy Wilder and starring Robert Stephens.
3983. Moriarty, James. "Was Sherlock Holmes gay?" Advocate, December 9-22, 1970: 20-21.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the motion picture 'The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes,' starring Robert Stephens.
3984. Simels, Steve. "The week." Entertainment Weekly, no. 226 (1994): 71.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews motion pictures released as of June 10, 1994. Includes the laserdisc release of The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes. "Robert Stephens, Colin Blakely (1970, Image, PG-13, $59.99) Depending on your perspective, Billy Wilder's revisionist take on literature's most famous detective was a theatrical flop either because philistines at United Artists cut the film nearly by half, or audiences weren't ready for a wise-cracking, practical joke-playing Holmes. In any event, this new disc edition provides a glimpse of what might have been: Following the wide-screen but cut version of the film, it presents one deleted sequence that's almost complete (the sound has been lost, but subtitles are appended), as well as the entire audio track of another missing episode, the original shooting script, and various odds and ends including an interview with film editor Ernest Walter. It's a tantalizing coda to what is--even in this truncated form--a vastly entertaining romp. B+"
3985. Ts. "Tapes & discs: Laserdiscs." Video Magazine 18, no. 5 (1994): 54.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the videodisc 'The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes: Collector's Edition,' directed by Billy Wilder.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

10F ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- FILMS -- THE SCARLET CLAW (1944)
(3)

3986. "Edmund Hartmann." The Times (London), January 2, 2004: 39.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Edmund Hartmann, film writer, was born on September 24, 1911. He died on November 28, 2003, aged 92....Although Hartmann was known primarily as a gagman, he also worked in other genres and scripted two of the best Sherlock Holmes films, Sherlock Holmes and the Secret Weapon (1942) and The Scarlet Claw (1944), with Basil Rathbone as the famous detective...."

3987. Schaefer, Eric, and Dan Streible. "Archival News." Cinema Journal 40, no. 4 (2001): 104.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents updates on the motion picture industry as of June 2001. Acquisition of nitrate film elements from Warner Bros. by the UCLA Film and Television Archive; Decision of Shaw Brothers Ltd. of Hong Kong to sell its archive of original films to media magnate T. Ananda Krishnan of Malaysia; Development of several projects related to cinema by the Museum of Jurassic Technology in Culver City, California. Includes a reference to Holmes, Basil Rathbone, and Nigel Bruce. "...Warner Bros. has initiated the completion of a preservation project through the UCLA Film and Television Archive that was begun by Hugh Hefner. Funding from Hefner helped preserve six films in Universal's Sherlock Holmes series that starred Basil Rathbone as Holmes and Nigel Bruce as Dr. Watson: Sherlock Holmes and the Secret Weapon (1942), Sherlock Holmes and the Spider Woman (1944), The Scarlet Claw (1944), The Pearl of Death (1944), The Woman in Green (1945), and Terror by Night (1946). Warner Bros., which recently acquired the rights to the series, has already funded the preservation of Sherlock Holmes Faces Death (1943) and The House of Fear (1945) and has committed to funding the preservation of the remaining Universal Holmes films: Sherlock Holmes and the Voice of Terror (1942), Sherlock Holmes in Washington (1943), Dressed to Kill (1946), and Pursuit to Algiers (1945)."

3988. Vosburgh, Dick. "Obituary: Edmund Hartmann; Erudite Screenwriter for Bob Hope." The Independent (London), December 9, 2003: 20.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...When his RKO contract lapsed, Hartmann signed a seven-year deal with Universal Pictures. 'At Universal, I wrote for three great teams,' he told an interviewer, 'Abbott and Costello, Olsen and Johnson, and Holmes and Watson.' His Universal assignments included Abbott and Costello's Keep 'Em Flying (1941), Ride 'Em Cowboy (1942), In Society (1944), Here Come the Co-eds (1945) and The Naughty Nineties (1945), Olsen and Johnson's The Ghost Catchers (1944) and See My Lawyer (1945), and Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce's Sherlock Holmes and the Secret Weapon (1943), Sherlock Holmes in Washington (1943) and The Scarlet Claw (1944)...."

10F ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- FILMS -- THE SEVEN-PER-CENT SOLUTION (1976) (4)

3989. Caps, John. "Soundtracks 101." Film Comment 39, no. 6 (2003): 31.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Features several motion picture scores from 1933 to 2001, including "The Seven-Per-Cent Solution."

3990. Gander, Nick, and Jon Coope. "Review--The Seven-Per-Cent Solution Anniversary." The Ritual, no. 15 (1995): 37-39.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

3991. McKay, Alastair. "Pure Textual Intercourse." The Scotsman, February 19, 2005: 18.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Passing reference to Holmes. "In his most famous work, the Great Bear, Simon Patterson turns the stations of the London Tube map into stops in the memory of popular culture....There is something quite refreshing about this juxtaposition of order and randomness, and it happens frequently when Patterson talks about his work. A discussion of the Tube map can lead to a digression about the drug habits of Sherlock Holmes, false memory, and the merits of Star Trek. The connection between these things is the writer

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Nicholas Meyer, who bought The Great Bear, and wrote the screenplay for the 1976 film, The Seven Per Cent Solution, in which Sherlock Holmes travelled to Vienna to consult Freud about his cocaine habit...."

3992. Shapiro, Harry. "From Chaplin to Charlie--cocaine, Hollywood and the movies." Drugs: Education, Prevention & Policy 9, no. 2 (2002): 133-141.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Throughout the history of cinema, the use of drugs such as opiates and marijuana has been consistently condemned or has passed through distinct phases from opprobrium to celebration. But because of both its image and functionality within the film industry, the framing of cocaine use has been more ambivalent and fluctuating. The period prior to World War II saw cocaine use portrayed both in comic situations and in so-called exploitation films which more closely mirrored sensational press coverage where cocaine was viewed as the 'gateway' drug to opiates. Cocaine largely disappeared from the recreational drugs scene until the late 1960s. Since then, films as diverse as Easy Rider (1969), Annie Hall (1977), Scarface (1983) and Clean and Sober (1988) have framed cocaine use and dealing variously as comic, heroic, glamorous, as well as damaging. This contrasts with crack cocaine in the context of black cinema in the 1980s and 1990s where settings of violence and death predominate. With the cocaine cartels as the focus, Traffic (2000) questions for the first time in a Hollywood movie, the efficacy of the 'war on drugs' while the cocaine trafficking film Blow (2001) returns to a more traditional Hollywood view of vice punished. [Abstract from author] Includes references to Holmes. "...There was a problem of squaring the circle between a drug that appeared to give the user energy and vitality--while at the same time being addictive, the model for which was the opium. In fact, films often confused the effects of the two drugs--both classified as narcotics in US drug law. This was demonstrated in one of the many Sherlock Holmes films from the silent era where the detective takes coke and dreams the opium dreams of the Orient...There were some coded hints that all might not be well: perhaps in Nicol Williamson's portrayal of Sherlock Holmes' runaway cocaine paranoia in Seven Percent Solution (1976) or Diane Keaton's drug-fuelled neurosis in Looking for Mr Goodbar (1977). But this was contrasted by the famous scene in Woody Allen's Annie Hall (again 1977 and again Diane Keaton) where he sneezes $2000 worth of cocaine into the air...."

10F ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- FILMS -- THE SPIDER WOMAN (1944)
(3)

3993. Ellen, Barbara. "TV movie of the week." The Times (London), June 29, 2000: 2.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...Sherlock Holmes and the Spider Woman (1944)...was the seventh Sherlock Holmes film, and one of the silliest. In this one he fakes his own death, dresses up as the most unconvincing Indian seen on television since It Ain't Half Hot Mum, and investigates the death of a bunch of men found in their pyjamas. Other than that, the 'murder weapon' is a venomous spider, and Holmes's trusty sidekick, Watson, almost shoots him, thinking he's Hitler. Confused? You should be...."
3994. Jancovich, Mark. "Female monsters: Horror, the 'Femme Fatale' and World War II." European Journal of American Culture 27, no. 2 (2008): 133-149.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The article is an examination of critical reception of the figure of the female monster as it emerged from the horror film during World War II, and it seeks to analyse discourses through which this figure was understood during the period of their initial release." Includes multiple references to Holmes. "...Everlyn Ankers, a woman who signified modern, independent femininity and, in the previous year, she had even helped Holmes and Watson defeat the Nazi's in Sherlock Holmes and the Voice of Terror (1942)....Alternatively, the Sherlock Holmes series saw Holmes pitted against a series of deadly female masterminds, most particularly his adversary in The Spider Woman (1944). The New York Journal-American even referred to its female lead, Gale Sondergaard, as an actress who is 'always good as a femme fatale' (Blackford 1944: 493), as did the New York Post, which referred to her schemes as 'diabolical', the work of 'a 'female Moriarity', a 'femme fatale' (Winsten 1944a: 494). There was even the sense that many reviewers felt that the film had refreshed a tired series. While the New York Newspaper PM claimed that Holmes's 'current antagonist, the Spider Woman . . . is for my money a much shifter and certainly a much niftier trick than was Prof. Moriarity of other days' (McManus 1944: 493), the New York Journal American claimed: 'Inasmuch as the current instalment of the master-sleuth serial is above the average in plausibility, suspense and interest and has been really quite well presented, it should do nothing to spoil your appetite for future releases' (Blackford 1944: 493). If these women were not bored, self-centred housewives like Phyllis in Double Indemnity, they are also far more active than the classic femme fatale, plotting and executing their own schemes, rather than simply seducing others into acting for them....These female monster movies continued into 1945 with Holmes encountering more female threats in the form of The Woman in Green (1945) and Universal completing its third in the Captive Wild Woman films, Jungle Captive (1945)...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

3995. Schaefer, Eric, and Dan Streible. "Archival News." Cinema Journal 40, no. 4 (2001): 104.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents updates on the motion picture industry as of June 2001. Acquisition of nitrate film elements from Warner Bros. by the UCLA Film and Television Archive; Decision of Shaw Brothers Ltd. of Hong Kong to sell its archive of original films to media magnate T. Ananda Krishnan of Malaysia; Development of several projects related to cinema by the Museum of Jurassic Technology in Culver City, California. Includes a reference to Holmes, Basil Rathbone, and Nigel Bruce. "...Warner Bros. has initiated the completion of a preservation project through the UCLA Film and Television Archive that was begun by Hugh Hefner. Funding from Hefner helped preserve six films in Universal's Sherlock Holmes series that starred Basil Rathbone as Holmes and Nigel Bruce as Dr. Watson: Sherlock Holmes and the Secret Weapon (1942), Sherlock Holmes and the Spider Woman (1944), The Scarlet Claw (1944), The Pearl of Death (1944), The Woman in Green (1945), and Terror by Night (1946). Warner Bros., which recently acquired the rights to the series, has already funded the preservation of Sherlock Holmes Faces Death (1943) and The House of Fear (1945) and has committed to funding the preservation of the remaining Universal Holmes films: Sherlock Holmes and the Voice of Terror (1942), Sherlock Holmes in Washington (1943), Dressed to Kill (1946), and Pursuit to Algiers (1945)."

10F ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- FILMS -- THE WOMAN IN GREEN (1945)
(10)

3996. "Guilty Pleasures Alec Baldwin." Film Comment 39, no. 5 (2003): 8.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents the favorite films of actor Alec Baldwin. 'Midnight Lace,' starring Doris Day and Rex Harrison; Favorite comedies; 'Woman in Green,' starring Basil Rathbone. "My favorite movies of all time? Nothing takes me back to my childhood better and quicker than Basil Rathbone as Sherlock Holmes. Give me Woman in Green or Voice of Terror any day."

3997. "New on DVD." St. Petersburg Times (Florida), May 12, 2000: 6W.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Fans of Sherlock Holmes can rejoice with the release of An Evening With Sherlock Holmes. Actually, it should be titled several evenings because this boxed set contains four movies - Sherlock Holmes and the Secret Weapon (1942), Woman In Green (1945), Terror By Night (1946) and Dressed to Kill (1946). And that's not all. It also includes an interview with Holmes creator Sir Arthur Conan Doyle filmed in 1927 and 30 original radio broadcasts starring the film's leads, Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce...."

3998. "Opening Shots." Film Comment 39, no. 5 (2003): 6.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Looks at various developments in the motion picture industry as of September 2003. Sidebar article with reference to Holmes--Guilty Pleasures Alec Baldwin: "My favorite movies of all time? Nothing takes me back to my childhood better and quicker than Basil Rathbone as Sherlock Holmes. Give me Woman in Green or Voice of Terror any day."

3999. Blowen, Michael. "Video Watch." The Boston Globe, May 7, 2000: C9.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...Fans of Sherlock Holmes can rejoice with the release on Tuesday of "An Evening With Sherlock Holmes." Actually, it should be titled several evenings because this boxed set contains four movies - "Sherlock Holmes and the Secret Weapon" (1942), "Woman In Green" (1945), "Terror by Night" (1946), and "Dressed To Kill" (1946). And that's not all. It also includes an interview with Holmes creator Sir Arthur Conan Doyle filmed in 1927 and 30 original radio broadcasts starring the film's leads, Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

4000. Clark, Mike. "The DVD watch." USA Today, May 12, 2000: E08.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Though the hoopla for An Evening With Sherlock Holmes (1942-46, FOCUSfilm, unrated, $70) claims the four films in the box set have been restored, the prints look like dupes, and one of them -- 1946's Terror by Night (seven chapters) -- is a truncated 54-minute version. For those who can overlook this, the collection -- which also includes 1942's Sherlock Holmes and the Secret Weapon, 1945's Woman in Green and 1946's Dressed to Kill (all unrated and with 12 chapters) -- has its rewards. The Basil Rathbone-Nigel Bruce series of Holmes films remains one of the most enjoyable in Hollywood history. The set includes 30 good-sounding Holmes radio shows from the '40s (with wine commercials), and a rare 1927 on-camera chat with Holmes creator Sir Arthur Conan Doyle."

4001. Jancovich, Mark. "Female monsters: Horror, the 'Femme Fatale' and World War II." European Journal of American Culture 27, no. 2 (2008): 133-149.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The article is an examination of critical reception of the figure of the female monster as it emerged from the horror film during World War II, and it seeks to analyse discourses through which this figure was understood during the period of their initial release." Includes multiple references to Holmes. "...Everlyn Ankers, a woman who signified modern, independent femininity and, in the previous year, she had even helped Holmes and Watson defeat the Nazi's in Sherlock Holmes and the Voice of Terror (1942)....Alternatively, the Sherlock Holmes series saw Holmes pitted against a series of deadly female masterminds, most particularly his adversary in The Spider Woman (1944). The New York Journal-American even referred to its female lead, Gale Sondergaard, as an actress who is 'always good as a femme fatale' (Blackford 1944: 493), as did the New York Post, which referred to her schemes as 'diabolical', the work of 'a 'female Moriarity,' a 'femme fatale' (Winsten 1944a: 494). There was even the sense that many reviewers felt that the film had refreshed a tired series. While the New York Newspaper PM claimed that Holmes's 'current antagonist, the Spider Woman . . . is for my money a much shiftier and certainly a much niftier trick than was Prof. Moriarity of other days' (McManus 1944: 493), the New York Journal American claimed: 'Inasmuch as the current instalment of the master-sleuth serial is above the average in plausibility, suspense and interest and has been really quite well presented, it should do nothing to spoil your appetite for future releases' (Blackford 1944: 493). If these women were not bored, self-centred housewives like Phyllis in Double Indemnity, they are also far more active than the classic femme fatale, plotting and executing their own schemes, rather than simply seducing others into acting for them....These female monster movies continued into 1945 with Holmes encountering more female threats in the form of The Woman in Green (1945) and Universal completing its third in the Captive Wild Woman films, Jungle Captive (1945)...."

4002. Nichols, Peter M. "Conan Doyle, On Holmes." The New York Times, May 19, 2000: E1:28.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "It was really terribly important after the war when all the young men needed contacting,' Sir Arthur Conan Doyle says rather breezily on camera during a 10-minute address he delivers on a DVD recently released by Focusfilm, a distributor in Ossining, N.Y. It was 1926, and by his remarks and manner the writer clearly wants to be done with his celebrated creation, the detective Sherlock Holmes, and move on to matters that he considers more serious: psychic experiences and communication with the beyond. The young men he refers to were killed during World War I. Holmes, he seems to imply, would be better off laid to rest himself if only the public would permit it....On the same disc, part of a set of four, is 'Terror by Night,' a Holmes adventure filmed by Universal during the 40's with Basil Rathbone as the detective and Nigel Bruce as Watson....The detective brings off other nice surprises in three other cases on the discs: 'Sherlock Holmes and the Secret Weapon' (1942), 'The Woman in Green' (1945) and 'Dressed to Kill' (1946), which was Rathbone's last Holmes film. By then he had played the role more than 200 times, not only on screen but on the radio in 'The New Adventures of Sherlock Holmes.'...The movies come from the National Film Museum, a large archive in Bangor, Me., that provides old film to producers and distributors...."

4003. Petrovic, Hans. "Comedy lovers in for a treat." The Press (Christchurch, New Zealand), January 29, 2000: WE20.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Listing of films on television, including a number of Holmes offerings. "Sherlock Holmes and the Secret Weapon (CTV, noon, 1942): First-rate Sherlock Holmes adventure made as British WW2 propaganda, with Basil Rathbone playing the supersleuth, who is up against the Nazis and his arch-

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

nemesis Professor Moriarty in a battle for possession of a wartime invention. (1hr 15min)...Sherlock Holmes and the Woman in Green (CTV, 1.15pm, 1945): When Scotland Yard begins receiving the severed fingers of several women, Holmes (Rathbone) finds Moriarty at the bottom of it. (1hr 15min)...Terror By Night (CTV, noon, 1946): Entertaining mystery with Sherlock Holmes (Rathbone) guarding a valuable gem on a Scotland-bound train, and solving a few murders along the way. (1hr 10min)...The Triumph of Sherlock Holmes (CTV, 1.20pm, 1936): Arthur Wontner and Ian Fleming make up the Holmes-Watson team in this mystery- adventure involving murder and a secret society among coal miners. (1hr 10min)..."

4004. Rogers, Michael. "Classic Returns." Library Journal 130, no. 19 (2005): 107.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // An annotated bibliography of re-released classic fiction and nonfiction titles is provided. Includes an entry for Doyle and Holmes. Doyle, Sir Arthur Conan. The Sherlock Holmes Mysteries. 547p. ISBN 1-59609-176-2. Signet. 2005. pap. $14.95 with DVD. "These clever packages combine a classic text with a DVD of a film version. The Holmes volume's 22 stories accompany Terror by Night and The Woman in Green, starring Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce...."

4005. Schaefer, Eric, and Dan Streible. "Archival News." Cinema Journal 40, no. 4 (2001): 104.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents updates on the motion picture industry as of June 2001. Acquisition of nitrate film elements from Warner Bros. by the UCLA Film and Television Archive; Decision of Shaw Brothers Ltd. of Hong Kong to sell its archive of original films to media magnate T. Ananda Krishnan of Malaysia; Development of several projects related to cinema by the Museum of Jurassic Technology in Culver City, California. Includes a reference to Holmes, Basil Rathbone, and Nigel Bruce. "...Warner Bros. has initiated the completion of a preservation project through the UCLA Film and Television Archive that was begun by Hugh Hefner. Funding from Hefner helped preserve six films in Universal's Sherlock Holmes series that starred Basil Rathbone as Holmes and Nigel Bruce as Dr. Watson: Sherlock Holmes and the Secret Weapon (1942), Sherlock Holmes and the Spider Woman (1944), The Scarlet Claw (1944), The Pearl of Death (1944), The Woman in Green (1945), and Terror by Night (1946). Warner Bros., which recently acquired the rights to the series, has already funded the preservation of Sherlock Holmes Faces Death (1943) and The House of Fear (1945) and has committed to funding the preservation of the remaining Universal Holmes films: Sherlock Holmes and the Voice of Terror (1942), Sherlock Holmes in Washington (1943), Dressed to Kill (1946), and Pursuit to Algiers (1945)."

10F ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- FILMS -- WITHOUT A CLUE (1988)
(3)

4006. Johnson, B. D. "Spoofing Sherlock." Maclean's 101, no. 45 (1988): 53.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Film review of 'Without A Clue', directed by Thom Eberhardt and starring Michael Caine and Ben Kingsley. The film is a spoof of the Sherlock Holmes and Dr. John Watson characters created by British writer Sir Arthur Conan Doyle.

4007. Kasahara, Seiji. "A Clue for Without a Clue." The Nezire Zanmai International 2, no. (1992): 43-49.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

4008. Portman, Jamie. "Ben Kingsley, light and dark: Knighted Oscar-winner covers a wide spectrum this summer, from Sherlock Holmes spoof on DVD to villain in Thunderbirds and killer in Suspect Zero." The Gazette (Montreal), August 14, 2004: D8.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...However, the 61-year-old Oscar winner is also delighted by this summer's DVD release of one of his favourite movies - the 1988 Sherlock Holmes spoof, Without a Clue, in which he played a highly resourceful Dr. Watson to Michael Caine's bumbling Holmes. For Kingsley, Thunderbirds and Without a Clue serve as a reminder to audiences (also, he hopes, to producers) that he can be funny on screen. His comedic abilities have never been in question in the world of live theatre, where he has been equally comfortable with the comedy of William Shakespeare or that of Tom Stoppard...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

10F ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- FILMS -- YOUNG SHERLOCK HOLMES (1985) (12)

4009. "Overview: Film music. (Cover story)." American Record Guide 61, no. 2 (1998): 51.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents several composers who wrote music for various films. Mentions the film Young Sherlock Holmes under the note for composer Bruce Broughton. "...It is worth viewing Baby's Day Out and Young Sherlock Holmes just to hear Broughton's ravishing music and ponder why they cannot be had on disc."
4010. "Resources." Earth 3, no. 6 (1994): 72.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents products about dinosaurs and crystallized minerals with a passing reference to Holmes. "...castings of original sculptures by Jay Davis, whose work has been featured in such films as Steven Spielberg's Explorers and Young Sherlock Holmes...."
4011. Ansen, David, and Yahlin Chang. "Building a Better Dinosaur. (Cover story)." Newsweek 135, no. 20 (2000): 58.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on the development of the movie 'Dinosaur' by the Walt Disney Co. and reviews its use of computer graphics (CG). Includes a reference to Holmes. "...1985 Young Sherlock Holmes: Barry Levinson's revisionist take on the duke of deduction marked the first use of an all-CG character in a movie. The sequence, in which a stained-glass knight comes to life, still holds up extremely well...."
4012. Burr, Ty. "Discovering Columbus." Entertainment Weekly, no. 219 (1994): 64.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews several motion pictures created by Chris Columbus, with mention of his screenplay Young Sherlock Holmes.
4013. Grover, Ronald. "A Pixar Exec's Fairy-Tale Story." Business Week Online, no. (2006): 7-7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article features John Lasseter, a top creative executive at Pixar Animation Studios. It highlights the role played by Lasseter in Walt Disney's purchase of Pixar. An overview of his family and academic background is presented. It emphasizes the importance of Lasseter to the continued success of Pixar. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...In search of high-tech animated work, he signed on with George Lucas' film unit in 1983 to do computer animation special effects on Young Sherlock Holmes. Lasseter stayed on with the new company when Lucas sold his computer animation business to Steve Jobs in 1986 for $10 million...."
4014. Kaplan, David A. "Grand illusions." Newsweek 127, no. 20 (1996): 62.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on some of the movies to be released for the summer of 1996 that rely heavily on special effects. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...'Twister,' opening this Friday (summer starts early this year), is the latest offspring of the marriage between Hollywood and Silicon Valley. A long, long time ago--1977--'Star Wars' begat the new era of fantastic effects. Matte paintings and miniatures had been around for generations, but George Lucas's crew taught a computer how to play nice with a camera, so that spaceships, planets and other elements could be added seamlessly to the same shot. In 1982, 'Star Trek II' produced the first sequence ever generated by a computer--the creation of a planet. Three years later came the first 3-D digital character--the 'stained-glass man' in 'Young Sherlock Holmes.' Then came the computer-graphics (CG) revolution: the pseudopod slithering through 'Abyss,' the metallic cyborg in 'Terminator 2' and the T. rex that razed 'Jurassic Park....'" 4015. Kleiner, Carolyn. "Making movie magic." U.S. News & World Report 126, no. 20 (1999): 58.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Looks at the visual effects used in the motion pictures such as 'The Matrix' and 'Star Wars: Episode 1--The Phantom Menace.' Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Since the beginning of motion pictures, moviemakers have maxed out technology to make fantasy look real. Early films like 1902's Le Voyage dans la Lune used simple trick photography. These days, the best tool is a computer workstation. In the past five years, huge gains in processing power and speed have made it possible to create creatures far more sophisticated than those in the 1985 effects classic Young Sherlock Holmes, which featured the first 3-D digital character (a stained-glass knight), or even 1993's Jurassic Park, whose dinosaurs were the first 'living,'

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

breathing computer-generated stars...."

4016. Lane, Randall. "The magician. (Cover story)." Forbes 157, no. 5 (1996): 122-128.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports that George Lucas has changed the way in which motion pictures are made through the use of a digital studio. Filmmakers no longer bound by physical limitations of what they can film; Steven Spielberg's use of the technique to make lifelike dinosaurs in 'Jurassic Park'; Forrest Gump's conversation with President John F. Kennedy; Other details of Lucas' special effects and films using them. INSETS: Money machine, by Randal Lane and James Samuelson; George's industry; The real thing. Includes a photographic reference to Holmes. PHOTO (COLOR): Young Sherlock Holmes, 1985. ILM develops its first computer-generated character: the "stained glass man."

4017. Magid, Ron. "The Lucas Effect." Popular Mechanics 182, no. 6 (2005): 124-128.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article focuses on film-maker George Lucas who hated making movies the old-fashioned way. He has compared traditional, film-based movie production to wearing handcuffs and waging war. But instead of just complaining, Lucas decided that there had to be a better way--and he has dedicated much of his career to finding it. From the digital cameras that are replacing film cameras on movie sets, to the way movies are edited, to how special effects are created, to the sound one hears in theaters and at home, and even to the way movies are distributed to theaters, Lucas has led the way in adopting innovative technologies. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...With the stained-glass knight in 1985's 'Young Sherlock Holmes,' ILM created the first CG character in the history of cinema...."

4018. Maio, Kathi. "Hooray for Siliwood." Fantasy & Science Fiction 91, no. 1 (1996): 103.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the use of computers in special effects of motion pictures. Reluctance of Hollywood to embrace technological advances; Special effects of the motion picture, 'Jumanji'; Plot of the motion picture, 'Toy Story.' Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...A Disney-escapee animator who had worked on Tron very early in his career, John Lasseter, was particularly driven to make digital features. Lasseter had designed and animated the stained glass knight of The Young Sherlock Holmes (1985), and won an Oscar for his Pixar computer-animated short, Tin Toy, in 1989...."

4019. Metz, Cade, and Sean Carroll. "Hollywood Reboots (Cover story)." PC Magazine 25, no. 9 (2006): 62-74.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article focuses on the impact of microcomputers and digital technology on the motion picture industry. Digital effects in the motion pictures were first used in the film "Young Sherlock Holmes," directed by Steven Spielberg. In earlier films like "Alien and Star Trek II: The Wrath of Khan," digital images show up only on computer screens. The "Young Sherlock Holmes" used CGL computer-generated imagery, to create the illusion of photorealism, fashioning a digital object that, in the context of the film, is not digital at all. The bigger leap came on "Attack of the Clones," the first major picture shot with a high-definition digital camera. High-definition (HD) provides an image remarkably similar to what one can get with 35mm film while eliminating a good part of the hassle. Given the prevalence of digital technology throughout the movie-making process, it is amazing that most Hollywood movies are still shot on film. The trouble is, HD cameras cannot capture the same range of light as traditional cameras can, and movie-makers often complain that the HD image is too pristine and unforgiving.

4020. Robertson, Barbara. "Movie Retrospective." Computer Graphics World 25, no. 7 (2002): 36.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents photographs of digital visual effects and scenes from different films in the U.S. Use of the three-dimensional technology in the effects; Impact of computer graphics on animated features; Implications of CG for filmmakers. Caption for one photograph reads "May 1986 Arguably, the first 3D character in a feature film is a knight who leaps out of a stained glass window in Young Sherlock Holmes. The Pixar group at Lucasfilm uses new motion blur technology and its 32-bit RGBA paint system to create the effect."

10G ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- MUSIC (6)

4021. "Isolated scores or music & effects tracks on laserdisc." Films in Review 47, no. 3/4 (1996): 22.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Lists scores or music and effects tracks on films on laserdisc. Includes entry for The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes, Miklos Rozsa.

4022. "Overview: Film music. (Cover story)." American Record Guide 61, no. 2 (1998): 51.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents several composers who wrote music for various films. Mentions the film Young Sherlock Holmes under the note for composer Bruce Broughton. "...It is worth viewing Baby's Day Out and Young Sherlock Holmes just to hear Broughton's ravishing music and ponder why they cannot be had on disc."

4023. Caps, John. "Soundtracks 101." Film Comment 39, no. 6 (2003): 31.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Features several motion picture scores from 1933 to 2001, including "The Seven-Per-Cent Solution."

4024. Davey, Peter. "Back in the picture." Strad 110, no. 1315 (1999): 1188.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Offers a look at musical concertos for motion pictures in the United States. Overview of composers for American films with a focus on Miklos Rozsa. Includes a reference to Holmes and a photo of Wilder and Rozsa. "...When Hollywood director Billy Wilder first heard Rozsa's composition, he liked it so much he decided to construct a film around it. The result was The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes (1970). The composer remodelled his concerto to the needs of the film. The first movement pointed up the introspective character of the cocaine-addicted, violin-playing detective; the beautiful slow movement proved ideal for highlighting the relationship between Holmes and the spy Gabrielle; and the tense, dynamic third movement set the mood as the film moved towards its dramatic Loch Ness climax. Never short of inspiration, Rozsa then added a march - 'Elgarian' in spirit - to accompany the arrival of Queen Victoria at Balmoral. Finally, as if to put his personal stamp on it all, he makes an appearance in the film, conducting the Royal Philharmonic Orchestra in a performance of Swan Lake."

4025. Koob, Lindsay. "Choral & Organ Music." American Record Guide 70, no. 5 (2007): 103-103.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the music release "Choral & Organ Music," composed by Patrick Gowers. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...High points among the choral works (most with organ) are 'Libera Me II', a profound and mournful piece (heard in a different version in the previous album) that was originally written for the Sherlock Holmes TV series. Gowers's four-piece Advent Sequence contains some memorable moments, especially in the slowly unfolding opening item, 'Ad te Levavi'. The mysterious fourth piece, 'Memento Nostrum', is also something special...."

4026. Shiffman, Stu. "Review--The Hound of the Baskervilles by Clive Nolan and Oliver Wakeman." The Holmes & Watson Report 6, no. 4 (2002): 29-31.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

10H ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- MUSICALS (3)

4027. "Mysteries Reveal Message of Christmas; [Fourth Edition]." The Oregonian (Portland, OR), December 15, 1994: 06.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Something mysterious is going on in Bethlehem, and Sirlock and Watstein get to the bottom of it in "The Inn Kaper," a Christmas musical by St. Stephen Lutheran Church in Gladstone.; The musical will follow the indefatigable detective, Sirlock, and his trusty assistant, Watstein, as they uncover the meaning of Christmas, said Troy Lutz, youth director of the play. The characters are based on the Sherlock Holmes stories and placed in biblical times, he said.

4028. "A song up his sleeve." American Theatre 14, no. 10 (1997): 57.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Announces the Goodspeed Opera House's staging of 'Houdini, the Musical,' by the team of James Racheff and William Scott Duffield, through December 14, 1997 in Connecticut. Background on the story of Harry Houdini.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

4029. White, Kathryn. "Review--'Sherlock Holmes, The Musical'." The Ritual, no. 11 (1993): 46-48.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

10K ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- PLAYS (35)

4030. "Book Notes." Bulletin of the History of Medicine 77, no. 2 (2003): 482-483.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a reference to Doyle. Todd Savitt, ed. Medical Readers' Theater: A Guide and Scripts. Iowa City: University of Iowa Press, 2002. xix + 192 pp. $44.95 (cloth, 0-87745-798-0), $22.95 (paperbound, 0-87745-799-9). "'The concept behind our reader's theater program is simple,' writes Todd Savitt: 'adapt short stories about medicine to scripts, invite medical students to serve as the readers (actors), perform the stories to public and medical audiences, and hold postperformance discussions about the issues raised by the stories with the audiences and the cast' (p. xi). The result is an exchange of ideas and perceptions that, according to the author, has a profound effect on participants on both sides of the stage. The fourteen scripts--based on stories by William Carlos Williams, Richard Selzer, Susan Onthank Mates, Pearl S. Buck, Arthur Conan Doyle, Katherine Anne Porter, Mary E. Wilkins Freeman, and Margaret Lamb--are divided into four sections: 'Physicians and Patients,' 'Being a Physician,' 'Ethical and Social Issues,' and 'Aging and Chronic Illness.' Each script includes instructions for placing the characters on stage, and questions for discussion."
4031. "Books published recently with NEH support." Humanities 16, no. 4 (1995): 45.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a list of National Endowment for the Humanities (NEH)-supported books published in the United States. Includes New York University Joseph A. Callaway Prize for best theater book of the year: King, W. D. Henry Irving's Waterloo: Theatrical Engagements with Arthur Conan Doyle, George Bernard Shaw, Ellen Terry, Edward Gordon Craig, Late Victorian Culture, Assorted Ghosts, Old Men, and History. Los Angeles and Berkeley: University of California Press, 1994.
4032. "Criticism, Theater, Film, Journalism, etc." Reference & Research Book News 23, no. 3 (2008): 292-304.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews several books including one with a reference to Doyle. Blood on the stage; milestone plays of crime, mystery, and detection; an annotated repertoire, 1900-1925. Kabatchnik, Arnon. Scarecrow Pr., ©2008 417 p. $100.00 "Kabatchnik, a retired theater professor from SUNY Binghamton, Stanford U., Ohio State U., Florida State U. and Elmira College, offers this chronology of plays containing themes of crime, mystery and criminal investigation. Plot summaries and reviews are supplied for these plays, which include works from such noted playwrights as Eugene O'Neill, Arthur Conan Doyle, Jacinto Benavente and John Galsworthy. The author gives thorough criticism for the benefit of theater students on why each work is noteworthy, and why the appeal of this genre endures."
4033. "Getting Into The Act." Stage of the Art 15, no. 1 (2002): 17-23.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Six practitioners of participation theater discuss their experiences. One of the practitioners, Bernice Bronson, who developed original scripts in participatory theater during her ten years as artistic director of the Looking Glass Theatre in Providence, Rhode Island, mentioned an experience with a Holmes reference. "...For instance, in Sherlock Holmes, a red-headed actress arrived as President of the Red Headed League. She told the children they were all members of The Red Headed League and were going to be in a fashion parade with her. She distributed red mop-heads for them to wear, saying, 'Let me see some of the things you're going to do.' They experimented and then 'The League' proceeded to the performance room. Other groups were prepared as felons, the Baker Street Irregulars, merchants of London, Scotland Yard, and the streets and alleys of London. One child would play Watson and would be supported by Sherlock Holmes and Mrs. Hudson, played by actors of the company. Watson would have lots to discuss, order and report, so the actors had to make sure to phrase their questions so that however little Holmes replied, it would be appropriate and helpful. For example, instead of asking the young actor 'Is this man dead or alive?' the company actors would ask, 'When did this man die?' The field was now open to him. At one of the early performances, I was worried that the young audience members might be jealous of one person being chosen to be Watson. Instead they felt he was their hero and they carried him out on their shoulders. By and large we had a wonderful time...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

4034. "Heads Up." NEA Today 17, no. 2 (1998): 32.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Provides information on resources and events of interest to teachers and educators. Includes a Doyle reference. "Do your students have a flair for the dramatic? Treat them to Mystery Plays: 8 Plays, for the Classroom Based on Stories by Famous Writers. Tom Conklin adapts great tales by Hawthorne, O. Henry, Conan Doyle, and more for kids in grades 4-8...."
4035. "Lyceum Theatre, 10 September 1901; On This Day." The Times (London), September 10, 1996: 1.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reprint of an article from 1901 beginning: "We wonder whether it was quite politic of Dr. Conan Doyle, even with the assistance of Mr. William Gillette, to bring Sherlock Holmes upon the stage. Surely no playhouse is large enough to hold that colossal figure? You might as well attempt to get the Djinn into the bottle. And, then, the stage is fatal to mystery. The mythopoeic tendency has been busy with Sherlock Holmes. He has become the centre of a legend. To see him in the flesh, under the glare of the footlights, is to substitute intimacy for awe...."
4036. "Publishing, Library Science, Bibliography." Reference & Research Book News 23, no. 3 (2008): 336-342.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews several books including Sherlock Holmes on stage: a chronological encyclopedia of plays featuring the great detective. Kabatchnik, Amnon. Scarverow Pr., ©2008 197 p. $55.00 "Retired from teaching theater at various prestigious US universities, Kabatchnik cites and describes each of the four plays Arthur Conan Doyle himself wrote about the Victorian London detective he created, along with 38 written by others, some of them one-act plays. Each article describes the context in which the play was written, points out references and other connections to the published stories, summarizes the action, discusses the production history and reception, and identifies the playwright."
4037. "Truly enchanted. (Cover story)." Time 149, no. 21 (1997): 97.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Relates several events taking place in New Mexico in the summer of 1997. A passing reference to Holmes. "Also in Santa Fe, from June 3 through Aug. 16, is Santa Fe Stages: the International Theater Festival, for which the city will be host to everything from Canadian avant-gardists (a brochure warns of "brief nudity") to a women-in-drag version of Sherlock Holmes from Britain."
4038. Barry, Martin. "The Crown Diamond: A Radio Play in One Act." Canadian Holmes 18, no. 4 (1995): 19-26.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4039. Benedict, David. "Edinburgh Festival: Good heavens, they're alive!" The Independent (London), August 25, 1998: 12.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Sherlock Holmes and Doctor Watson are more than 100 years old and still in the detective business. In an exclusive interview, David Benedict talks to the World's Greatest Detective and his chum....As visitors to the University of Minnesota (repository of the world's largest collection of Sherlock Holmes memorabilia) will attest, there's the nasty business of the needles: Holmes is a self-confessed addict....Maggie Fox and Sue Ryding, aka Lip Service, play Holmes and Watson in 'Move Over Moriarty at the Assembly Rooms...."
4040. Billington, Michael. "Away with the fairies; What's wrong with Snoo Wilson's story about Sherlock Holmes, the sun god and the giant meteorite?" The Guardian (London), October 27, 1999: 14.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "How did it happen? No sooner had it opened than Snoo Wilson's Moonshine was dubbed 'Stinker of the Year' and 'unwatchable' by normally temperate critics. Guaranteed to empty Hampstead Theatre faster than a powerful laxative, it already has the makings of a myth, and, as with any play that sinks in the water, one wonders why anyone thought it seaworthy in the first place. My own suspicion is that Wilson made a seductive pitch to his director, Simon Stokes, and to Jenny Topper, who runs Hampstead Theatre. 'Look,' says Snoo, 'I've got this idea for a play about Conan Doyle. Did you know he was a dedicated spiritualist? And that, after he'd killed off Sherlock Holmes, he came to feel haunted by his own creation? I'm going to write this piece in which Doyle is projected into another world and I'll work in some topical stuff about global destruction and Rupert Murdoch.' 'Wowie!' say Stokes and Topper. 'Go ahead and write it.' But, given his head, Wilson proceeds to lose it...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

4041. Brereton, Matt. "Review: Sherlock Holmes : Murder in the Garden." The Scotsman, August 21, 2007: 11.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "For sheer perseverance in the face of appalling weather, the cast of this promenade play almost earned an extra star. It was certainly an enthusiastic effort from Frantic Redhead Productions, but, rather than investigating the less-than-baffling murder here, Sherlock Holmes would have been better employed in the strange case of the dodgy Scottish accents and the erratic wardrobe master."
4042. Cable, Harold. "Big Red Riding Hood." Plays 56, no. 5 (1997): 13.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents the play 'Big Red Riding Hood,' by Harold Cable. Includes multiple references to Holmes.
4043. Citron, Paula. "A little too elementary, my dear Watson." The Globe and Mail (Toronto), March 15, 2000: R4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Promising Sherlock Holmes play is hampered by direction, cast and a need to explain just how the great detective outwitted his worthy foe. Written by Doug Warwick Directed by Anne Butler Starring Michael Hanrahan, Sean Mulcahy and Catherine Vaneri At St. Vlad's Theatre in Toronto....Composer/jazzman/rock musician Doug Warwick has turned his hand to play-writing, and his ambitious maiden effort, Sherlock Holmes & The First English Gentleman , is now on view at St. Vlad's Theatre in Toronto. The play has already been running for two weeks and word-of-mouth has made it a near sell-out...."
4044. Davies, David Stuart, and Kathryn White. "'Port and Lemon' by John Cargill Thompson." The Ritual, no. 14 (1994): 53.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4045. Doyle, Arthur Conan, and Maurine V. Eleder. "The Brazilian Cat." Plays 53, no. 4 (1994): 72.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a drama adaptation of Arthur Conan Doyle's book 'The Brazilian Cat,' by Maurine V. Eleder, which deals with a man's failed attempt to murder his cousin in order to avail of the latter's inheritance.
4046. Edwards, Owen Dudley. "Sherlock Holmes in Bedlam Bedlam Theatre Theatre." The Scotsman, August 13, 1998: 10.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The rating of this show is tentative. Lemon Tree Productions has courageously chosen to perform six dramatisations of Arthur Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes short stories and our notice is based on their first, The Red-Headed League...."
4047. Fredricksen, Barbara L. "'Vampire' troupe casts shadow of clout." St. Petersburg Times (Florida), October 15, 1999: 5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The Sherlock Holmes mystery The Case of the Sussex Vampire opens at Timber Greens Thursday, played by a touring company based in South Carolina....The production is by the professional touring company Patchwork Players and is the first show in the Timber Greens theater season....The Patchwork Players are based in Lexington, S.C. The performers come from all over the country....The play is an adaptation of the original story by Arthur Conan Doyle. The playwright is Catherine Eaker, the mother of the founder of the company. 'The story was written the year after Bram Stoker published Dracula,' Genie Eaker said. 'There was a great deal of interest in vampires at the time, just as there is now.'"
4048. Hobbs, Don. "Review--Sherlock Holmes: A Trilogy of Tales II adapted by John Chaffin." The Holmes & Watson Report 7, no. 3 (2003): 28.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4049. Hunter-Purvis, Mark. "Review--'Sherlock Holmes and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle in Edinburgh' by Charles Hall and Peter Blythe." The Ritual, no. 15 (1995): 55.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Offers interesting discussions of Sherlockian and Doylean plays performed in Edinburgh (mostly during the Edinburgh Festival Fringe), Conan Doyle's speeches and lectures in Edinburgh, and memorials to him in Edinburgh, with amusing artwork by Hall."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

4050. Johns, Ian. "Pipe dreams, smoke screens." The Times (London), September 2, 2002: 18.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "As Sherlock Holmes returns to the stage, Ian Johns dons his deerstalker to investigate the pursuit of the whole sleuth. It's quite elementary, if you think about it. Sherlock Holmes was a woman who disguised herself as a man. That high voice and hairless chin, that secrecy about the past and the mysterious childhood. That love of dissembling. How else could a Victorian woman solve crimes in such a chauvinistic age? Curiously, Holmes's trusty chronicler Dr Watson (and Arthur Conan Doyle) failed to note this fact. But Therese Lentz did with her 1994 play 221B Baker Street. When it comes to the world's greatest detective, the theatre has often lifted the curtain on some lesser known aspect of his life. But finding the right tone has always been a three-pipe problem. 'It's the biggest hurdle,' admits the actor-turned-playwright Simon Williams, whose new version of The Hound of the Baskervilles opens this week at the Belgrade in Coventry. 'If it's too reverential and literal then you simply end up with a flat transcription. The best adaptations take a few liberties.'..."
4051. Lam, Agnes. "Mystery of learning English easily solved by famous British detective." South China Morning Post, March 28, 2005: 3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Students will get the chance to learn English by joining the famous fictional detectives Sherlock Holmes and Doctor Watson to investigate a theft. The Madrid-based education troupe Interacting Theatre Company will visit the city next month and host two public interactive theatre performances of Sherlock Holmes Goes to Scotland. The shows are part of 'Interacting in Hong Kong - A Theatrical Experience', jointly organised by the British Council and Standing Committee on Language Education and Research (Scolar) for the English Festival. The South China Morning Post is the media sponsor...."
4052. Mandell, Jonathan. "If Serial Killers Are All Women, It's the Theater (Fringe Festival Review)." The New York Times, August 21, 2002: E5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...The most polished of the three pieces is 'Sherlock Holmes and the Secret of Making Whoopee' at the Clemente Soto Velez Cultural Center (107 Suffolk Street, Lower East Side). It is an hourlong takeoff by Sean Cunningham that finds Dr. Watson asking Holmes for help in finding Jill the Ripper. Jack the Ripper was a doctor who preyed on prostitutes. Jill the Ripper is a prostitute who is taking her revenge on doctors. She has already chopped off Dr. Watson's hands. But things are not the way they seem, and this detective story takes some exuberantly sophomoric twists and turns, veering into crude sex jokes, scatological humor and unflattering revelations about Holmes. The result is funnier than it probably deserves to be, pulled off by a cast of seven that largely knows what it is doing, especially Ray Bokhour as Watson and Susan Ferrara as various cold women in Holmes's life...."
4053. Mauro, Robert. "The Case of the Prince and the Pauper." Plays 63, no. 6 (2004): 29-36.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents the script of the play "The Case of the Prince and the Pauper," by Robert Mauro. A Holmes play for middle grades. "World's most famous detective takes on a case of royal hijinks and mistaken identity." Setting: The library of Sherlock Holmes's house at 221B Baker Street, London, England, Bookcases on walls, a picture of Queen Victoria on center backdrop. A sofa up center. An easy chair right with a torch lamp beside it. A desk left. On it are a big magnifying glass, globe, piles of paper and a violin case covered by a large, opened map. A bust of some historic figure stands, near sofa, on a pedestal with Holmes's deer stalker cap sitting on its head.
4054. ———. "The Case of the Red and Blue Hats." Plays 59, no. 6 (2000): 31.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents the script for the children's play 'The Case of the Red and Blue Hats,' by Robert Mauro. Characters include Holmes and Watson.
4055. ———. "Who's the Real Sherlock?" Plays 60, no. 6 (2001): 39.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a script of the children's play 'Who's the Real Sherlock?'
4056. McLellan, Joseph. "P.G. Production Picks Up Where Peter and the Wolf Left Off." The Washington Post, May 09, 1996: M02.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "'Peter vs. the Wolf,' which had four performances last weekend in the Hallam

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Theatre at Prince George's Community College, opens with a newsboy (portrayed by Justin Lewis) running across the stage shouting, 'Extra! Extra! Read all about it! Crime of the Century! Wolf Swallows Duck!'...Before the first headline (or the duck) has been digested, the newsboy runs across the stage with another headline: 'Escape of the Century!' The wolf is on the loose. The scene is London in 1936 (the year 'Peter and the Wolf' was composed), and the wolf foolishly has tried to hide in a trunk in the lodgings of none other than Sherlock Holmes. He is caught, naturally, and demands a trial (on a charge of 'attempted duckicide in the first degree'), with the symphony orchestra as his witness and Sherlock Holmes (James Peacock) giving expert testimony....Designed essentially for children, the show held the attention of the adults who were nearly as numerous in the audience...."

4057. Michael, Patrick. "Review--'Ronald Howard as Sherlock Holmes in 'The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes'; Two Original Drawing Room Plays--'The Case of the Violent Suitor' and 'The Case of the Impromptu Performance'." The Ritual, no. 28 (2001): 59-60.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4058. Pendleton, Edrie. "Ghosts in the Library." Plays 59, no. 2 (1999): 35.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a school play for middle and lower grade students entitled 'Ghosts in the Library,' written by Edrie Pendleton. Holmes is one of the characters.
4059. Preston, Liz. "Spring ahead." Plays 66, no. 5 (2007): 1-1.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "This article reflects on a wonderful collection of plays that will open the mind, tickle the funny bone and gladden the heart. If one listens carefully, one will be able to hear British accents oozing through the pages of both a charming, newly minted Sherlock Holmes mystery and a selection from the humorous 'The Pickwick Papers.'"
4060. Rose, Lloyd. "Gilbert & Sullivan, According To Doyle." The Washington Post, July 30, 1997: C01.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review. "'Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Purloined 'Patience,' which opened Saturday at Interact Theatre, is a charmer. In the time-honored tradition of Sherlockian pastiche (think 'The Seven-Per-Cent Solution'), author Nick Olcott has taken an actual incident in Victorian history -- the 'pirated' American productions of Gilbert & Sullivan's 'Patience' in 1881 -- and brought in the fictional Holmes to solve the case. It's a slightly loony enterprise, the sort that might have called forth the classic Dr. Watson exclamation, 'What ineffable twaddle!' Yes. Exactly. Thank heaven...."
4061. Swarbrick, Lisa. "Sabotage at the Savoy." Plays 62, no. 4 (2003): 4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents the play 'Sabotage at the Savoy,' a drama for junior and senior high school children featuring Holmes and Watson.
4062. Walker, Lynne. "Arts Reviews: Theatre: Sherlock Holmes in Trouble." The Independent (London), July 29, 2003: 17.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of the play. "'When you have excluded the impossible,' said Sherlock Holmes, 'whatever remains, however improbable, must be the truth.' I doubt if even he could have made much sense of the impossible and the improbable that roams the Royal Exchange Theatre in dizzyingly equal portions in its crazy summer show, Sherlock Holmes in Trouble. It's a spoof, like no other, on Conan Doyle's famous creation, dreamed up by Mark Long and Emil Wolk. The remark I over-heard most during the interval was, 'What on earth is it all about?' Nothing, is the answer. That it is simply a giddy romp is clear from the bemusing opening, bristling with anticipation of dark deeds and derring-do...."
4063. Winston, Iris. "A riveting revelation of Sherlock Holmes , the man." The Ottawa Citizen, June 8, 2000: E6.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Short review of the play by David Stuart Davies. "...One of the most recent Sherlockian creations is a drama that provides a coda to the detective adventures. Playwright and Holmes expert David Stuart Davies offers an incisively written view of the man in Sherlock Holmes -- the last act! The show arrives in Ottawa this weekend for a three-day run...."
4064. Zinoman, Jason. "A Court Full of Chaos, a Trial Crammed With Questions." New York Times, May 28, 2008: 8.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of 'Prisoner of the Crown' playing through July 6, 2008 at the Irish Repertory Theater. "The 1916 trial of Sir Roger Casement had everything a dramatist could want: salacious revelations, media manipulation, star cameos (George Bernard Shaw and Arthur Conan Doyle were among those appealing for clemency), political intrigue and a central character wrapped in mystery. Sir Roger (played here by Philip Goodwin) was an Irish patriot and former British diplomat who was arrested on charges of treason during World War I after returning from Germany, where he was seeking aid for the Irish independence movement. During the trial, in which he was convicted, the government released his diaries. Those revealed a homosexual private life and were circulated, as the courtroom drama 'Prisoner of the Crown' suggests, in an effort to influence public opinion. 'Was that really why they hanged Sir Roger?' a narrator asks leadingly early on." [Abstract from publisher]

10K ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- PLAYS -- HELD BY THE ENEMY (1)

4065. "100 Years Ago." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 2, no. 2 (1998): 2.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Highlights the 1898 edition of William Gillette's play "Held By The Enemy."

10K ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- PLAYS -- HOUDINI - THE MUSICAL (1)

4066. "A song up his sleeve." American Theatre 14, no. 10 (1997): 57.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Announces the Goodspeed Opera House's staging of 'Houdini, the Musical,' by the team of James Racheff and William Scott Duffield, through December 14, 1997 in Connecticut. Background on the story of Harry Houdini.

10K ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- PLAYS -- SHERLOCK HOLMES (7)

4067. "What's going on: Theatre." Performing Arts & Entertainment in Canada 28, no. 4 (1994): 39.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on developments concerning theater in Canada, as of April 1994. Mentions the Shaw Festival production of Sherlock Holmes by William Gillette.
4068. Bemrose, John. "Cynics and sybarites." Maclean's 107, no. 24 (1994): 45.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the Shaw Festival, in integral part of summer at Niagara-on-the Lake, Ontario, for 33 years. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...As well, most of the works being presented later in the summer, from the Victorian melodrama Sherlock Holmes, by William Gillette, to J. B. Priestley's 1934 tale of a disillusioned actress, Eden End, feature authors or kinds of drama that have been successful draws in the past...."
4069. Birmingham. "The fourth estate." Editor & Publisher 132, no. 52 (1999): 11.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on developments in newspaper publishing in the United States as of December 25, 1999. Under "Amusements" section, a reference to a production of Sherlock Holmes at the Garrick Theater.
4070. Kennedy, Janice. "Theatre: Murder plays provide fun at Shaw Festival." The Ottawa Citizen, June 20, 1994: B9.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Christopher Newton has no illusions about Sherlock Holmes, the adventure play that opened this weekend for a four-month run at the Shaw Festival. 'It's good theatre -- not good dramatic literature,' says Newton, artistic director of the annual celebration of modern theatre at Niagara-on-the-Lake. 'Holmes is St. George, Moriarty is the dragon. It's like doing Richard III without the density of the poetry to support it.' But that doesn't mean it isn't great fun, he adds quickly. And that doesn't mean there isn't a legitimate spot on the Shaw playbill for entertainments like Holmes and the season's other murder mystery, Busman's Honeymoon...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

4071. Kirchhoff, H. J. "Theatre Review Sherlock Holmes." The Globe and Mail (Toronto), July 9, 1994: C7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The thing to keep in mind about William Gillette's Sherlock Holmes, which opened Thursday night at the Shaw Festival, is that it is a Victorian melodrama, not a detective story. Viewing the play on those undemanding terms, it's easy to forgive its unlikely, convoluted plot and one-dimensional characters, and to just sit back and enjoy the hero's swashbuckling and intellectual dexterity...."
4072. McWilliam, Rohan. "Melodrama and the Historians." Radical History Review, no. (2000): 28p.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Examines the emphasis on melodrama among historians, its significance, strengths and limitations. Sensitivity of historians to the role of fiction as a cultural resource; Views on melodrama in the 19th century; Factor that governed communication in the 19th-century public sphere. Includes a passing reference to Holmes (and Gillette, p. 65). "...Yet, in the 1970s and 1980s, melodrama was rediscovered with several revivals of melodramatic plays by the Royal Shakespeare Company: Dion Boucicault's London Assurance (1841) and William Gillette's Sherlock Holmes (1901)...."
4073. Zappula, Eve. "2005 06 Season Preview." American Theatre 22, no. 8 (2005): 43-102.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article lists the theatrical productions set to stage at the Theatre Communications Group theatres in the U.S. in 2005-2006. Includes Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure, adapt: Steven Dietz from Arthur Conan Doyle, William Gillette; dir: David Ira Goldstein. Mar 4-Apr 16 by the Arizona Theater Company; Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure, adapt: Steven Dietz from Arthur Conan Doyle, William Gillette; dir: Joseph Hanreddy. Apr 14-May 14 at the Milwaukee Repertory Theater; Sherlock Holmes and The West End Horror, Anthony Dodge, Marcia Milgrom Dodge (also dir). Oct 19-Nov 5 at the Pioneer Theater Company, Salt Lake.

10K ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- PLAYS -- SHERLOCK HOLMES - THE LAST ACT (8)

4074. "Elementary My Dear Holmes." Birmingham Evening Mail, October 31, 2001: 11.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The life of master fictional detective Sherlock Holmes will be centre stage at Stourbridge Town Hall on November 17. Sherlock Holmes - The Last Act sees Conan Doyle's creation return from retirement for the funeral of Dr Watson and reminisce about his life in a one-man show."
4075. "Sherlock Holmes is centre stage." Birmingham Evening Mail, April 1, 2008: 18.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Theatre goers will get an insight into the mind of the world's greatest fictional detective this month. Roger Llewellyn stars in 'Sherlock Holmes - The Last Act', a solo play that will be performed at the Lichfield Garrick Theatre on April 12 from 7.30pm. Set in 1916, Holmes is drawn out of his retirement in Sussex for the funeral of his good friend, Dr Watson, and returns to Baker Street to resolve the last act of his epic career - understanding his own psyche...."
4076. Beacom, Brian. "Sherlock Holmes The Last Act." Evening Times (Glasgow), September 3, 2004: 29.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Roger Llewellyn appears as the world's greatest fictional detective as he confronts his most complex case of all - his own psyche. Set in 1916, this top-rated one-man play sees Holmes returning to London, after two years retirement in Sussex, to attend the funeral of his friend and colleague Dr Watson. Combining wit, humour, drama and pathos, Sherlock Holmes - The Last Act, takes Holmes back to Baker Street. And in the process it explores the mind of the man, not the detective. What we come to discover is a passionate man with a cutting sense of humour. This vivid dramatisation also examines the close relationship between Holmes and Watson, as Llewellyn moves seamlessly through a gallery of Conan Doyle's characters. The play has toured the world to packed houses and rave reviews."
4077. Chadwick, Peter. "Review--'Sherlock Holmes: The Last Act' by David Stuart Davies." The Ritual, no. 24 (1999): 56-58.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

4078. Clarke, Roger. "Reviews: Llewellyn's excellent role is elementary; Sherlock Holmes...The Death and Life, Lichfield Garrick Theatre." Birmingham Evening Mail, February 13, 2009: 83.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Roger Llewellyn produces an acting masterclass in this sequel to his first venture into Holmes' world. Sherlock Holmes ... the last act, written like the new production by David Stuart Davies, has been touring the world since 1999 and with Holmes killed off and resurrected the new production could be following in its footsteps. Llewellyn, on stage alone for the best part of an hour-and-a-half, plays ten characters living a conflict between Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and the creation he has come to hate, Sherlock Holmes. Into the mix comes Prof James Moriarty, arch villain of his age destined to kill the finest detective of his generation - until the characters develop a mind of their own. The play examines Doyle's frustration at the lack of success of his historical novels, his passion for spiritualism, his letters to his mother, his father's incarceration in an asylum and his relationship with Holmes. It is a test of the actor's art which Llewellyn passes with distinction."
4079. Donnelly, Pat. "Sherlock Holmes's finest hour." The Gazette (Montreal), June 5, 2000: B4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "You don't have to be a card-carrying member of a Sherlock Holmes club to enjoy Sherlock Holmes...the Last Act!, a one-man show starring Roger Llewellyn, which has just dropped into Centaur Theatre...."
4080. Leland, Mary. "Review." The Irish Times, March 23, 2006: 2.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Sherlock Holmes - The Last Act! at the Everyman Palace in Cork. "An actor completely in charge of his material, his stage and his own artistry, Roger Llewellyn invests his performance in Sherlock Holmes - The Last Act! with all the tension achieved by Conan Doyle at his best. Written by David Stuart Davies and unfolding in the measured sequences of classic detective fiction, the play is, of course, a brilliant opportunity for any actor with the intelligence to grasp its rhythms and to peel away the sometimes pompous layers of the eponymous hero and reveal the passionate, lonely personality underneath....Presented by Jay Productions in association with the Salisbury Playhouse, the piece is, in fact, something of an exercise in detection in itself, but one of great style and subtlety. This is Holmes in 1916, mourning his colleague Watson whom he is at last able to acknowledge as a dear friend, and re-working through his tribute a series of plots and characters with which both have been memorably associated. It is a fiction upon a fiction, and held its audience captivated through two acts of 45 minutes each....Music by Simon Slater and lighting by Peter Hunter are threaded through Gareth Armstrong's direction in a presentation in which the few props are employed so skilfully that the bravura touches here and there are accents rather than declarations, commas rather than exclamation marks. This is a production which has been touring in England, Europe and America, yet there is nothing stale about it. The playwright - a Conan Doyle enthusiast - seasons his script with implied acknowledgements of contemporary approaches, but both the writing and the performance achieve an almost old-fashioned - and certainly rare - symmetry of excellence and entertainment."
4081. Sampson, Benjamin W. "Season preview 2002-03. (Cover story)." American Theatre 19, no. 8 (2002): 43.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a list of theatrical productions at Theatre Communications Group theaters across the U.S. for the 2002-03 season. Includes Holmes and Doyle listings. Apple Tree Theater, Highland Park, Illinois: The Sign of Four, adapt: D. Shanghai Low from Arthur Conan Doyle; dir: Steve Pickering. Jun 18-Jul 20.; The Kavinoky Theatre, Buffalo, New York: Sherlock Holmes...the last act, adapt: David Stuart Davies from Arthur Conan Doyle; dir: Gareth Armstrong. Jan 9-Feb 9.

10K ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- PLAYS -- SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE CASE OF THE JERSEY LILY (3)

4082. "On Stage." American Theatre 25, no. 6 (2008): 88-95.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes listing of Parkway Playhouse, Burnsville, North Carolina, "Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure," Steven Dietz; dir: Andrew Gall. Aug 29-Sep 6, 2008; The People's Light & Theatre Company, Malvern, Pennsylvania, "Sherlock Holmes & the Case of the Jersey Lilly," Katie Forquette; dir: Steve Umberger. Thru Jul 13, 2008.
4083. "Onstage." American Theatre 25, no. 5 (2008): 84-95.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews theatrical productions being performed by members of the Theatre Communications Group including Park Square Theatre, St. Paul, Minnesota. "Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure," Steven Dietz; dir: Peter Moore. May 30-Jun 22, 2008. The People's Light & Theatre Company, Malvern, Pennsylvania. "Sherlock Holmes & The Case of the Jersey Lily," Katie Forgette; dir: Steve Umberger. Jun 18-Jul 13, 2008.

4084. "Season Preview 2007-2008." American Theatre 24, no. 8 (2007): 47-100.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes listings with Holmes references. Arkansas Repertory Theatre, Little Rock: Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure, Steven Dietz; dir: Robert Hupp. Apr 11-27; Meadow Brook Theatre, Rochester, Michigan: Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure, Steven Dietz; dir: David Regal. Oct 10-Nov 4; Park Square Theatre, St. Paul, Minnesota: Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure, Steven Dietz; dir: Peter Moore. May 30-Jun 22; The Cleveland Play House, Ohio: Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure, Steven Dietz; dir: Tim Ocel. Oct 12-Nov 4. Co-production with Geva Theatre Center, NY; People's Light & Theatre Company, Malvern, Pennsylvania: Sherlock Holmes & The Case of the Jersey Lily, Katie Forgette; dir: Steve Umberger. Jun 18-Jul 13.

10K ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- PLAYS -- SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE CASE OF THE PURLOINED PATIENCE (3)

4085. "Theater." The Washington Times, August 14, 1997: M9.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Sherlock Holmes and Gilbert and Sullivan are a better match than you'd guess in Nick Olcott's clever Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Purloined Patience. The common ground is language: Holmes' smug intellectualism fits right in with the erudite wordsmithery of W.S. Gilbert's lyrics. Mr. Olcott and Interact Theatre Company director Catherine Flye lay on just the right amount of silliness, and a crack musical-comedy cast takes things from there. At the Folger Shakespeare Library through Aug. 31."

4086. Pressley, Nelson. "'Sherlock' finds home in musical." The Washington Times, July 29, 1997: C11.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Sherlock sings! Playwright Nick Olcott has had the happy idea of putting Sherlock Holmes in the world of Gilbert and Sullivan, and the collision of these Victorian worlds results in high silliness. At least that's what director Catherine Flye is serving up in the Interact Theatre Company's enjoyable 'Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Purloined Patience,' which opened at the Folger Shakespeare Library last weekend...."

4087. ———. "[Theater Openings and Now Playing]." The Washington Times, July 24, 1997: M21.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Purloined Patience - Interact Theatre Company. Sherlock Holmes meets the world of Gilbert and Sullivan in this piece by Nick Olcott. At the Folger Shakespeare Library through Aug. 31..."

10K ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- PLAYS -- SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE COPPER BEECHES (1)

4088. Doyle, Arthur Conan. "Sherlock Holmes and the Copper Beeches." Plays 62, no. 2 (2002): 59.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents the script of the mystery play 'Sherlock Holmes and the Copper Beeches,' adapted by Paul T. Nolan.

10K ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- PLAYS -- SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE CRUCIFER OF BLOOD (3)

4089. "On stage." American Theatre 12, no. 9 (1995): 85.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a schedule of theatrical productions in the United States for November

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

1995. Lists Pioneer Theatre Company, Salt Lake City, production of Sherlock Holmes and the Crucifer of Blood, adapt: Paul Giovanni; and PA Stage, Allentown, Pennsylvania production of Sherlock's Last Case, Charles Marowitz; dir: Dennis Delaney.

4090. Jordan, Anne. "Review--'Sherlock Holmes and the Crucifer of Blood' by Paul Giovanni." The Ritual, no. 11 (1993): 43-45.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

4091. Kim, Suki S. "1995-96 Season Schedules." American Theatre 12, no. 8 (1995): 43.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a listing of projected 1995-96 seasons of more than 250 resident professional theaters in the United States which are constituents of Theatre Communications Group. Includes the Birmingham Children's Theatre; Arizona Theatre Co.; Arkansas Repertory Theatre. Includes Doyle/Holmes production. Pioneer Theatre Company, Salt Lake City, (801) 581-6961. Sherlock Holmes and the Crucifer of Blood adapt: Paul Giovanni from Sir Arthur Corian Doyle; dir: John Going. Nov 1-18.

10K ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- PLAYS -- SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE CURSE OF THE MUMMY'S TOMB (1)

4092. Ramsden, Timothy. "Nothing like a good story." Times Educational Supplement, no. (1994): 18.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on the Christmas shows in British theaters. Charles Way's 'Sleeping Beauty'; Leicester Haymarket; Peter Whelan's 'The Tinder Box'; Julian Harries' 'Sherlock Holmes and the Curse of the Mummy's Tomb'; Dave Simpson's 'Perfect Strangers.'

10K ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- PLAYS -- SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE CURSE OF THE SIGN OF FOUR (1)

4093. "Season Preview 1999-2000." American Theatre 16, no. 8 (1999): 35.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a comprehensive listing of theater productions, complete with directors and dates at Theater Communications Group constituents and associate theaters in the United States for the 1999-2000 season. Includes Sherlock Holmes and the Curse of the Sign of Four at the Lifeline Theater, Chicago.

10K ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- PLAYS -- SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE WEST END HORROR (10)

4094. "December on Stage." American Theatre 21, no. 10 (2004): 76-87.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a list of theatrical productions scheduled for December 2004 in the U.S. Includes The West End Horror: The New Sherlock Holmes Mystery! playing at the ASOLO Theatre Company of Sarasota.

4095. "Elementary, My Dear Watson." American Theatre 19, no. 6 (2002): 74.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the play 'The West End Horror,' written by Nicholas Meyer and to be performed by Anthony Dodge through July 7, 2002.

4096. "January on Stage." American Theatre 22, no. 1 (2005): 126-143.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents the schedule of events for member theatres of the Theatre Communications Group in the U.S. for January 2005. Production of The West End Horror: The New Sherlock Holmes Mystery! by the Asolo Theatre Company, Sarasota, Florida.

4097. "March on Stage." American Theatre 22, no. 3 (2005): 60-71.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a schedule of theatrical performances in the U.S. for March 2005. Lists Asolo Theater Company, Sarasota, Florida production of The West End Horror: The New Sherlock Holmes Mystery! and the Red Barn Theatre, Key West, production of Sherlock's Secret Life.

4098. "November on Stage." American Theatre 21, no. 9 (2004): 106-119.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a schedule of plays in the U.S. for November 2004. Includes The West End Horror: The New Sherlock Holmes Mystery! playing at the ASOLO Theatre Company of Sarasota.

4099. "Onstage November 05." American Theatre 22, no. 9 (2005): 112-127.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This section presents a list of theatrical productions in the U.S. in November 2005. Included is Salt Lake City's Pioneer Theater Company production of Sherlock Holmes and the West End Horror.

4100. Harris, Claudia. "Utah." Back Stage 46, no. 34 (2005): 30.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article reports that Salt Lake's Pioneer Theatre Co. (PTC) has chosen a diverse season this year as usual. Beginning with the somewhat challenging "Metamorphoses," Mary Zimmerman's lyrical adaptation of Ovid's myths, the PTC season includes something for everyone with "Disney's Beauty and the Beast," "Sherlock Holmes and the West End Horror," "Julius Caesar," "Enchanted April," and "Five Guys Named Moe."

4101. Klein, Alvin. "This Case No Match For Sherlock Holmes." The New York Times, June 30, 2002: 14L1.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Now that Professor Moriarty is dead, Sherlock Holmes, having no reason to live, sinks into despair. What's the point of going on when your dearest enemy can no longer taunt you and challenge your wits? With such an intriguing psychological conceit, the story part of 'The West End Horror' at the Bay Street Theater begins. As if to prove Sherlock Holmes mania is ever with us, Anthony Dodge and Marcia Milgrim Dodge adapted 'The West Side Horror,' the second of Nicholas Meyer's two original Holmes novels, which was intended as a companion piece to his popular 'Seven Percent Solution.'..."

4102. Sampson, Benjamin W. "Season Preview 2004-05." American Theatre 21, no. 8 (2004): 45-104.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a comprehensive listing of theatrical productions that will be held in the U.S. for the period of 2004-2005. Includes one Holmes item from the Asolo Theater Company in Sarasota, Florida. "The West End Horror: The New Sherlock Holmes Mystery!", adapt: Anthony Dodge and Marcia Milgrom Dodge (also dir) from Nicholas Meyer, Nov 26-Mar 3."

4103. Zappula, Eve. "2005 06 Season Preview." American Theatre 22, no. 8 (2005): 43-102.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article lists the theatrical productions set to stage at the Theatre Communications Group theatres in the U.S. in 2005-2006. Includes Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure, adapt: Steven Dietz from Arthur Conan Doyle, William Gillette; dir: David Ira Goldstein. Mar 4-Apr 16 by the Arizona Theater Company; Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure, adapt: Steven Dietz from Arthur Conan Doyle, William Gillette; dir: Joseph Hanreddy. Apr 14-May 14 at the Milwaukee Repertory Theater; Sherlock Holmes and The West End Horror, Anthony Dodge, Marcia Milgrom Dodge (also dir). Oct 19-Nov 5 at the Pioneer Theater Company, Salt Lake.

10K ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- PLAYS -- SHERLOCK HOLMES TAKES THE CASE (1)

4104. "Calendar." New York Times, June 17, 2007: 11.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A guide to cultural and recreational goings-on in and around Westchester and Putnam Counties during this week. Includes "Sherlock Holmes Takes the Case," interactive theater by Traveling Lantern. June 23 at 2:30 p.m. Free. Croton Free Library, 171 Cleveland Drive.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

10K ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- PLAYS -- SHERLOCK HOLMES'S CHRISTMAS GOOSE (2)

4105. Doyle, Arthur Conan. "Sherlock Holmes's Christmas Goose." Plays 65, no. 3 (2005): 35-44.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article presents the script of the play "Sherlock Holmes's Christmas Goose," by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, adapted for school presentation by Paul T. Nolan.
4106. Doyle, Arthur Conan, and Paul T. Nolan. "Sherlock Holmes' Christmas goose." Plays 54, no. 3 (1994): 56.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents the play 'Sherlock Holmes' Christmas Goose,' by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, adapted by Paul T. Nolan.

10K ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- PLAYS -- SHERLOCK HOLMES...THE DEATH AND LIFE (2)

4107. "The most complex case for Sherlock; coffee break Preview Sherlock Holmes Torch Theatre, Milford Haven." The Western Mail, October 1, 2008: 26.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "One of the world's greatest fictional detectives confronts the most complex case of all - his own psyche - in a new Sherlock Holmes production which comes to Wales this week. In this staged fantasy based on fiction, Arthur Conan Doyle tires of his famous sleuth and creates arch-villain Professor Moriarty to dispose of him....Funny, engaging and dark, this tale of murder, mystery and the occult is a play which is packed with ideas - and it's also the perfect form of entertainment....The play features Roger Llewellyn as Holmes....Following his international success in Sherlock Holmes...The Last Act, the new play has been created and directed by the renowned author David Stuart Davies, directed by Gareth Armstrong and it features original music from the Royal Shakespeare Company's composer Simon Slater."
4108. "Spooky tale of supersleuth Sherlock." Daily Post (Liverpool), January 23, 2009: 21.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The character of Sherlock Holmes is the main talking point in a spine-tingling new drama about Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's great detective. The man in the deerstalker is played by Roger Llewellyn in Sherlock Holmes...the Death and Life. In this story at Theatr Colwyn, the supersleuth is becoming somewhat arrogant and so malevolent Moriarty is brought in to take him on. But Doyle's dangerous strategy, combined with his passion for raising the spirits of the dead, has rather more surreal and dramatic consequences than he bargains for....The new play, written by David Stuart Davies and directed by Gareth Armstrong, is billed as a fantasy based on a fiction. Davies, a playwright and author, specialises in adaptations of the Conan Doyle canon. And there's original music by Simon Slater. Sherlock Holmes...the Death and Life, Theatr Colwyn, Colwyn Bay, Wednesday, February 4, 7.30pm."

10K ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- PLAYS -- SHERLOCK HOLMES: A MELODRAMA IN FOUR ACTS (1)

4109. "'Sherlock Holmes' A Melodrama in Four Acts at The Shaw Festival, Niagara-on-the-Lake [Advertisement]." Canadian Holmes 17, no. 3 (1994): 5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Advertisement for "a convocation of Sherlockians sponsored by The Bootmakers of Toronto and An Irish Secret Society at Buffalo"

10K ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- PLAYS -- SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE FINAL ADVENTURE (16)

4110. "Awards & Prizes." American Theatre 24, no. 7 (2007): 18-19.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article discusses awards and prizes received by individuals in the theater industry including the Leadership in Energy and Environmental Design (LEED) award, which was awarded to

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Portland Center Stage's Gerding Theater at the Armory, the Rising Star Award, which was granted to Sean Montgomery, Roderick Justice, and Anthony Darnell, and McKnight Advancement Grants, which were awarded to playwrights David Adjmi and Christina Ham. Includes a reference to Holmes. "...More playwrights with winning scripts: Steven Dietz's Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure received the 2007 Edgar Allan Poe Award for best play from the Mystery Writers of America (see sidebar, page 45)"

4111. "Corrections." American Theatre 24, no. 9 (2007): 6.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article presents corrections to articles in previous issues including: "In a News in Brief (Sept. '07) item, Geva Theatre Center's first production of the season was incorrectly identified. Dial M for Murder began the 2006-07 season; this season kicked off with Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure."

4112. "Miscellaneous Book Awards." World Almanac & Book of Facts, no. (2008): 256-256.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article announces the recipients of book awards in 2007 including and Edgar awards for Best Critical/Biographical: The Science of Sherlock Holmes: From Baskerville Hall to the Valley of Fear, E. J. Wagner; Best Play: Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure, Steven Dietz.

4113. "On Stage." American Theatre 25, no. 6 (2008): 88-95.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes listing of Parkway Playhouse, Burnsville, North Carolina, "Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure," Steven Dietz; dir: Andrew Gall. Aug 29-Sep 6, 2008; The People's Light & Theatre Company, Malvern, Pennsylvania, "Sherlock Holmes & the Case of the Jersey Lilly," Katie Forquette; dir: Steve Umberger. Thru Jul 13, 2008.

4114. "On Stage." American Theatre 25, no. 7 (2008): 108-119.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A directory of theater productions throughout the United States during September 2008 is given, which includes: Theatre in the Square, Marietta, Georgia, Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure, Steven Dietz; dir: Jessica Phelps West. Thru Sep 21.; Indiana Repertory Theatre, Indianapolis, Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure, adapt: Steven Dietz from Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. Sep 16-Oct 11.; New Stage Theatre, Jackson, Mississippi, Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure, Steven Dietz; dir: Francine Thomas Reynolds. Sep 9-21.; Parkway Playhouse, Burnsville, North Carolina, Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure, Steven Dietz; dir: Andrew Gall. Thru Sep 6.; Peninsula Players Theatre, Fish Creek, Wisconsin, Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure, adapt: Steven Dietz; dir: Jim Corti. Sep 3-Oct 19.

4115. "On Stage." American Theatre 24, no. 7 (2007): 92-103.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article presents reviews of a collection of plays with the Theatre Communications Group, which are performing nationwide including "Death Trap," by Ira Levin at Cyrano's Theatre Company in Anchorage, Alaska, from September 7, 2007 to September 30, 2007, "Man of La Mancha," by Dale Wasserman at the Lyric Stage Company of Boston in Boston, Massachusetts, from September 7, 2007 to October 13, 2007 and "The Forgiving Harvest," at the Omaha Theater Company for Young People in Omaha, Nebraska, from September 14, 2007 to September 30, 2007. Includes a Holmes/Doyle listing: The Jungle Theater, Minneapolis, (612) 822-7063, www.jungletheater.com Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure, adapt: Steven Dietz from Arthur Conan Doyle, William Gillette; dir: Joel Sass. Sep 7-Oct 14.

4116. "On Stage." American Theatre 24, no. 9 (2007): 82-95.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article presents a list of theatrical productions by members of the theater communications group, which were being performed in November 2007. Productions on the list include Meadow Brook Theatre, Rochester, (248) 377-3300, www.mbtheatre.com Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure, Steven Dietz; dir: David Regal. Thru Nov 4.; The Cleveland Play House, (216) 795-7000, www.clevelandplayhouse.com Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure, Steven Dietz; dir: Tim Ocel. Thru Nov 4. Co-production with Geva Theatre Center, NY.

4117. "On Stage." American Theatre 23, no. 3 (2006): 80-95.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article presents a list of theatrical productions shown at several TCG theaters in the U.S. The productions include the Arizona Theatre Company (Tucson) production of Sherlock Holmes:

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

The Final Adventure, adapt: Steven Dietz from Arthur Conan Doyle, William Gillette; dir: David Ira Goldstein.

4118. "On Stage November 08." American Theatre 25, no. 10 (2008): 98-111.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article reviews theatrical productions from U.S. theater companies associated with the Theatre Communications Group, including Hedgerow Theatre, Wallingford, Pennsylvania's production of Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure, Steven Dietz; dir: Janet Kelsey. Thru Nov 16.
4119. "Onstage." American Theatre 25, no. 4 (2008): 86-95.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A calendar of theatrical productions playing at Theatre Communications Group theatres across the U.S. is presented including a listing related to Holmes: Arkansas Repertory Theatre, Little Rock, Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure, Steven Dietz; dir: Robert Hupp. Apr 11-27.
4120. "Onstage." American Theatre 25, no. 5 (2008): 84-95.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews theatrical productions being performed by members of the Theatre Communications Group including Park Square Theatre, St. Paul, Minnesota. "Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure," Steven Dietz; dir: Peter Moore. May 30-Jun 22, 2008. The People's Light & Theatre Company, Malvern, Pennsylvania. "Sherlock Holmes & The Case of the Jersey Lily," Katie Forgette; dir: Steve Umberger. Jun 18-Jul 13, 2008.
4121. "Season Preview 2007-2008." American Theatre 24, no. 8 (2007): 47-100.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes listings with Holmes references. Arkansas Repertory Theatre, Little Rock: Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure, Steven Dietz; dir: Robert Hupp. Apr 11-27; Meadow Brook Theatre, Rochester, Michigan: Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure, Steven Dietz; dir: David Regal. Oct 10-Nov 4; Park Square Theatre, St. Paul, Minnesota: Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure, Steven Dietz; dir: Peter Moore. May 30-Jun 22; The Cleveland Play House, Ohio: Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure, Steven Dietz; dir: Tim Ocel. Oct 12-Nov 4. Co-production with Geva Theatre Center, NY; People's Light & Theatre Company, Malvern, Pennsylvania: Sherlock Holmes & The Case of the Jersey Lily, Katie Forgette; dir: Steve Umberger. Jun 18-Jul 13.
4122. "Season Preview 2008-09." American Theatre 25, no. 8 (2008): 46-96.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article lists U.S. theatrical productions in the 2008 and 2009 season including: Indiana Repertory Theatre, Indianapolis, Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure, adapt: Steven Dietz from Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. Thru Oct 11.; NACL Theatre, Highland Lake, New York, The Uncanny Appearance of Sherlock Holmes, Brad Krumholz (also dir); lyrics: Brett Keyser; music: ensemble, Glenn Hall, Tannis Kowalchuk. Dec 5-21. Co-production with HERE Arts Center, NY.; Hedgerow Theatre, Wallingford, Pennsylvania, Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure, Steven Dietz; dir: Janet Kelsey. Oct 14-Nov 16.; Peninsula Players Theatre, Fish Creek, Wisconsin, Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure, adapt: Steven Dietz; dir: Jim Corti. Thru Oct 19.
4123. Royce, Graydon. "Great Cast Makes for an Entertaining 'Holmes'." Minneapolis Star Tribune, June 10, 2008: E2.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of 'Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure', by Steven Dietz. Directed by Peter Moore. Park Square Theatre, St. Paul. "...Moore has a fun, intriguing, well-acted show here. Nothing taxing or brilliant. Just thoroughly enjoyable."
4124. Valois, Renee. "Case closed: 'Sherlock Holmes' is brilliant." St. Paul Pioneer Press, June 11, 2008: A7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of Steven Dietz play "Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure" performed at the Park Square Theater in St. Paul through June 22, 2008. "It's no mystery that Sherlock Holmes is a compelling character. And Park Square Theatre's premiere of 'Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure' is a match for the master detective. The play about his last encounter with the sinister Professor Moriarty will leave admirers wishing there were more adventures to follow...."
4125. Zappula, Eve. "2005 06 Season Preview." American Theatre 22, no. 8 (2005): 43-102.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article lists the theatrical productions set to stage at the Theatre

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Communications Group theatres in the U.S. in 2005-2006. Includes Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure, adapt: Steven Dietz from Arthur Conan Doyle, William Gillette; dir: David Ira Goldstein. Mar 4-Apr 16 by the Arizona Theater Company; Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure, adapt: Steven Dietz from Arthur Conan Doyle, William Gillette; dir: Joseph Hanreddy. Apr 14-May 14 at the Milwaukee Repertory Theater; Sherlock Holmes and The West End Horror, Anthony Dodge, Marcia Milgrom Dodge (also dir). Oct 19-Nov 5 at the Pioneer Theater Company, Salt Lake.

10K ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- PLAYS -- SHERLOCK'S LAST CASE(3)

4126. "On stage." American Theatre 12, no. 9 (1995): 85.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a schedule of theatrical productions in the United States for November 1995. Lists Pioneer Theatre Company, Salt Lake City, production of Sherlock Holmes and the Crucifer of Blood, adapt: Paul Giovanni; and PA Stage, Allentown, Pennsylvania production of Sherlock's Last Case, Charles Marowitz; dir: Dennis Delaney.
4127. Hobbs, Don. "Review--Sherlock's Last Case by Charles Morowitz." The Holmes & Watson Report 4, no. 3 (2000): 11-12.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4128. Jones, Chris. "2nd banana ripens in this 'Sherlock'." Chicago Tribune, no. (2005): 27.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Enter a Baker Street irregular: the post-modern American playwright Charles Marowitz and his 1984 play 'Sherlock's Last Case,' currently under summer examination at the Drury Lane Oakbrook. Marowitz decided that modern audiences don't want to watch another Holmes triumph. They'd rather gain some insight into [John Watson]'s complex psyche."

10K ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- PLAYS -- SHERLOCK'S SECRET LIFE
(1)

4129. "March on Stage." American Theatre 22, no. 3 (2005): 60-71.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a schedule of theatrical performances in the U.S. for March 2005. Lists Asolo Theater Company, Sarasota, Florida production of The West End Horror: The New Sherlock Holmes Mystery! and the Red Barn Theatre, Key West, production of Sherlock's Secret Life.

10K ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- PLAYS -- THE ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES
(2)

4130. "On Stage." American Theatre 24, no. 5 (2007): 76-87.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article presents a list of plays being performed at Theatre Communications Group locations around the country. Includes a Holmes reference. "B Street Theatre, Sacramento, (916) 443-5300, www.bstreettheatre.org The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes, Jerry Montoya; dir: Buck Busfield. Thru May 27."
4131. Bird, Gail. "Review--The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes Footloose Theatre." The Ritual, no. 28 (2001): 61.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

10K ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- PLAYS -- THE CRUCIFER OF BLOOD (1978)
(1)

4132. Martindale, David. "Biograph." Biography 5, no. 6 (2001): 22.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a brief biography of film actress Glenn Close. Includes a reference to Holmes. "...1975-82 Glenn spends the next few years cementing her reputation onstage as a dynamic yet nuanced actress, taking on everything from Sherlock Holmes to King Lear. The Crucifer of Blood (1978), a Holmes mystery in which Glenn plays villainess Irene St. Claire, is a Broadway crowd pleaser that delivers more than 200 performances...."

10K ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- PLAYS -- THE DEATH AND LIFE OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (1)

4133. Key, Philip. "The return of . . . The Return of Sherlock Holmes ; 08 Culture Diary." Daily Post (Liverpool), September 23, 2008: 16.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "One-man play The Death and Life of Sherlock Holmes comes to the region tomorrow night as part of the Sefton Celebrates Writing Festival. Renowned actor Roger Llewellyn reprises the role of the famous detective - and several more roles besides - after the first outing proved so successful...."

10K ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- PLAYS -- THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES (9)

4134. "The Hound of the Baskervilles." Scholastic Scope 57, no. 6 (2008): 14-19.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article presents the script of the play "The Hound of the Baskervilles," based on the novel by Arthur Conan Doyle, adapted by Zach Jones.

4135. "No-Sweat Test Prep." Scholastic Scope 57, no. 6 (2008): 20-20.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A quiz is presented after reading the play "The Hound of the Baskervilles," based on the novel by Arthur Conan Doyle, adapted by Zach Jones.

4136. Aykroyd, Clarissa, and Bob Coghill. "The Hound on Stage." Canadian Holmes 25, no. 1 (2001): 53-55.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

4137. Barnes, Jon. "Shadows and slapstick." TLS, no. 5439 (2007): 18-18.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article discusses the film and theater adaptations of two Victorian melodramatic stories including "Gaslight," starring Ingrid Bergman, Charles Boyer and Joseph Cotten in the film version, and the book "The Hound of the Baskervilles," by Arthur Conan Doyle, which has been produced on both stage and screen. Details relating to the summary of each and their various productions are provided.

4138. Collins, Tony. "Review: Menacing Adaptation." Birmingham Evening Mail, June 10, 2004: 3.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Brief review of the play "The Hound of the Baskervilles," Highbury Theatre, Sutton Coldfield. "Tim Kelly's adaptation of the classic Arthur Conan Doyle story may not feature an actual hound, but that does not detract from the menace of his play. The supposedly supernatural beast is heard rather than seen in this stage version, written long after Conan Doyle's death in 1930....Rob Phillips and Wiley Bowkett are a double delight as Holmes and his faithful sidekick Dr Watson in this Highbury Players production....Kelly's adaptation adds one or two twists to Conan Doyle's original, but Sherlock Holmes' mastery still shines through."

4139. Doyle, Arthur Conan. "The Hound of the Baskervilles." Scholastic Scope 49, no. 8 (2000): 6.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a script of the play about Sherlock Holmes, entitled 'The Hound of the Baskervilles,' by Arthur Conan Doyle.

4140. Doyle, Arthur Conan, and Joellen Bland. "The Hound of the Baskervilles (Drama)." Plays 60, no. 1 (2000): 59.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents the script of the play 'The Hound of the Baskervilles.'

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

4141. Riley, Joe. "Arts: It's elementary Senor Watson; Spaniard playing Sherlock Holmes in Everyman shows he's a man of many parts." Liverpool Daily Echo, February 9, 2007: 13.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Sherlock Holmes with a Spanish accent? According to Javier Marzan, born in the Basque country, his transfer to The Hound of the Baskervilles should be none the worse for not being delivered in the dulcet tones of Peter Cushing. The worldwide Sherlock branding and the knock-about physical nature of the touring show heading for the Liverpool Everyman later this month, should speak for itself, argues the actor, whose own background includes the study of mask, mime and clowning...."
4142. Spencer, Charles. "Hysterical, my dear Watson." The Daily Telegraph (London), April 18, 2007: 30.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Charles Spencer reviews The Hound of the Baskervilles at The Duchess Theatre.

10K ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- PLAYS -- THE MASK OF MORIARTY
(3)

4143. Hargreaves, David. "Review--'The Mask of Moriarty' by Hugh Leonard." The Ritual, no. 21 (1998): 58-59.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4144. Hartigan, Patti. "Not so elementary, my dear Moriarty." The Boston Globe, July 12, 1994: 50.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of "The Mask of Moriarty." Play by Hugh Leonard. Directed by John Tillinger. Set, James Noone. Costumes, Jess Goldstein. Lighting, Rui Rita. Presented by the Williamstown Theatre Festival through July 17. "Folks in the British Isles have a particularly punny sense of humor, with an affinity for wacky sex farces and literary spoofs. Hugh Leonard's 'The Mask of Moriarty' fits the latter category, and it's easy to imagine audiences across the Atlantic gasping with guffaws at this takeoff on Sherlock Holmes. But what's funny on the Thames or the River Liffey doesn't necessarily make it in the Berkshires. Despite the fact that the US premiere production at the Williamstown Theatre Festival is well cast and intelligently directed, it turns out to be a one-joke affair that goes on for two hours. After all the deductions are in, 'Mask of Moriarty' is a who-cares-who-dunnit....Initially, the spoof on Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's legendary detective is very funny, but after the third 'elementary' it wears thin...With one exception, the acting is on target. Paxton Whitehead's Sherlock Holmes is witty and savvy, with perfect elocution and an appealing dose of irony. David Schramm's Watson is a spherical sidekick with a hilarious self-effacing air, and John Curless stands out as the bumbling Bobby. The weak link is Jane Krakowski as Gwen, who is all affectation and speaks her lines with a breathless girlish voice that becomes grating. The rest of the ensemble works well with the material, such as it is...."
4145. McKuras, Julie. "The Old Globe Theatre, KPBS-FM of San Diego, and 'The Mask of Moriarty'." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 1, no. 4 (1997): 4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on the production and playbill for "The Mask of Moriarty" at the Old Globe Theatre in San Diego and the associated radio program, "These Days," on KPBS-FM with the resulting donations to the Sherlock Holmes Collections. Includes photograph of Paxton Whitehead in the role of Holmes and Tom Lacy in the role of Watson

10K ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- PLAYS -- THE MUMMY (1)

4146. Bland, Joellen. "The Mummy." Plays 60, no. 5 (2001): 55.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents the play 'The Mummy.' "From a story by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle Adapted for round-the-table reading..."

10K ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- PLAYS -- THE RETURN OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (1)

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

4147. Davies, David Stuart. "Review--'The Return of Sherlock Holmes,' a play by J. E. Harold Terry and Arthur Rose." The Ritual, no. 13 (1994): 48-49.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

10K ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- PLAYS -- THE SECRET OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (2)

4148. "M2: the Secret of Sherlock Holmes." Birmingham Evening Mail, September 20, 2002: 47.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Husband-and-wife team Stephen and Sue Downing are at the heart of Oldbury Rep's production of the Secret of Sherlock Holmes, by Jeremy Paul, which opens tomorrow at the Barlow Theatre, Langley...."
4149. Byrne, Terry. "Uncovering the mystery behind the Holmes-Watson relationship." The Boston Globe, September 28, 2007: E5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Sherlock Holmes and his faithful friend Dr. Watson are the literary equivalent of Batman and Robin, a dynamic duo everyone knows. But the cornerstone of 'The Secret of Sherlock Holmes,' a stage drama about the two sleuths, is how well they know each other. Dave Demke plays Watson in Shakespeare & Company's US premiere of 'The Secret of Sherlock Holmes,' which starts previews tonight....The play will probably attract fans of the Conan Doyle stories, the Rathbone films, and the British TV series starring Jeremy Brett....'The Secret of Sherlock Holmes' was commissioned by Brett, who played Holmes in the 1980s TV series with such brittle brilliance he is considered the definitive Holmes of his generation. To honor the Holmes centenary in 1987, Brett asked series writer Jeremy Paul to create a new script, with dialogue taken almost exclusively from Conan Doyle's original stories. Brett and Edward Hardwicke (who played Doctor Watson to Brett's Holmes on TV), performed the roles in the play, which references many of the crimes Holmes and Watson solved but ultimately focuses on the friendship between the two men...."

10K ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- PLAYS -- THE SIGN OF FOUR (1)

4150. Sampson, Benjamin W. "Season preview 2002-03. (Cover story)." American Theatre 19, no. 8 (2002): 43.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a list of theatrical productions at Theatre Communications Group theaters across the U.S. for the 2002-03 season. Includes Holmes and Doyle listings. Apple Tree Theater, Highland Park, Illinois: The Sign of Four, adapt: D. Shanghai Low from Arthur Conan Doyle; dir: Steve Pickering. Jun 18-Jul 20.; The Kavinoky Theatre, Buffalo, New York: Sherlock Holmes...the last act, adapt: David Stuart Davies from Arthur Conan Doyle; dir: Gareth Armstrong. Jan 9-Feb 9.

10K ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- PLAYS -- THE STORY OF WATERLOO (1)

4151. "What's going on: Theatre." Performing Arts & Entertainment in Canada 32, no. 2 (1999): 43.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents updates on theater in Canada. Includes the Shaw Festival production of Doyle's Waterloo.

10K ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- PLAYS -- THE UNCANNY APPEARANCE OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (3)

4152. "On Stage." American Theatre 25, no. 10 (2008): 90-103.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A calendar of performances in December 2008 at U.S. theaters belonging to the Theatre Communications Group is presented. A reference to Holmes: NACL Theatre, Highland Lake, NY. The

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Uncanny Appearance of Sherlock Holmes, book and dir: Brad Krumholz; lyrics: Brett Keyser; music: ensemble, Glenn Hall, Tannis Kowalchuk. Dec 5-21. Co-production with HERE Arts Center, NY.

4153. "Season Preview 2008-09." American Theatre 25, no. 8 (2008): 46-96.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article lists U.S theatrical productions in the 2008 and 2009 season including: Indiana Repertory Theatre, Indianapolis, Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure, adapt: Steven Dietz from Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. Thru Oct 11.; NACL Theatre, Highland Lake, New York, The Uncanny Appearance of Sherlock Holmes, Brad Krumholz (also dir); lyrics: Brett Keyser; music: ensemble, Glenn Hall, Tannis Kowalchuk. Dec 5-21. Co-production with HERE Arts Center, NY.; Hedgerow Theatre, Wallingford, Pennsylvania, Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure, Steven Dietz; dir: Janet Kelsey. Oct 14-Nov 16.; Peninsula Players Theatre, Fish Creek, Wisconsin, Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure, adapt: Steven Dietz; dir: Jim Corti. Thru Oct 19.
4154. Genzlinger, Neil. "When Solving a Crime Involves Real Tricks." New York Times, Dec 9, 2008: 4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Sometimes mixing artistic genres not normally seen together can result in an exhilarating, revelatory production. Sometimes, though, it can result in an insipid, largely incoherent mishmash. Which brings us to 'The Uncanny Appearance of Sherlock Holmes,' a detective story at the Here Arts Center enacted by a rock band that also performs circus tricks. Sounds like a hoot, right? Well, it isn't, first and foremost because the disparate elements in this production by North American Cultural Laboratory never cohere. The story, by Brad Krumholz, who also directed, goes something like this: Holmes (Brett Keyser) is called on to investigate two murders -- of Jeremy Nietzsche and Kevin Freud; ah, the cleverness of it! -- and along the way confronts some self-doubt because of the presence of a crackerjack female detective (Sarah Dey Hirshan)." [Abstract from publisher]

10K ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- PLAYS -- THE UNKNOWN SHERLOCK HOLMES (1)

4155. Hobbs, Don. "Review--The Unknown Sherlock Holmes by Lloyd W. Brown." The Holmes & Watson Report 3, no. 6 (2000): 27.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

10L ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- RADIO (26)

4156. "The Forgotten Adventures of Sherlock Holmes: Based on the Original Radio Plays by Anthony Boucher and Denis Green." Kirkus Reviews 73, no. 18 (2005): 1003.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book "The Forgotten Adventures of Sherlock Holmes: Based on the Original Radio Plays by Anthony Boucher and Denis Green," by H. Paul Jeffers.
4157. "Onstage." American Theatre 25, no. 5 (2008): 84-95.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews theatrical productions being performed by members of the Theatre Communications Group including Park Square Theatre, St. Paul, Minnesota. "Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure," Steven Dietz; dir: Peter Moore. May 30-Jun 22, 2008. The People's Light & Theatre Company, Malvern, Pennsylvania. "Sherlock Holmes & The Case of the Jersey Lily," Katie Forgette; dir: Steve Umberger. Jun 18-Jul 13, 2008.
4158. Barry, Martin. "The Crown Diamond: A Radio Play in One Act." Canadian Holmes 18, no. 4 (1995): 19-26.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4159. Bauers, Sandy. "Readers will get vocal over these stocking stuffers; [Morning Edition]." Orange County Register, Dec 11, 1994: F32.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This version of Dickens' classic is read by Patrick Stewart. Although my annual

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- favorite still is the Caedmon recording by Sir John Gielgud, this is the one that gets more hype, and Simon & Schuster has just released it in a fancy new CD version.; With the publication of this recording, Simon & Schuster has completed its series of vintage Holmes radio broadcasts starring Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce. The series is available singly or in packaged sets.; The novelized version of the Battle of Gettysburg is read by George Hearn with an afterword by [Michael Shaara]'s son Jeffrey. This is not only a great recording, it also has an elegant box and a four-page folder with a map.
4160. Blowen, Michael. "Video Watch." The Boston Globe, May 7, 2000: C9.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...Fans of Sherlock Holmes can rejoice with the release on Tuesday of "An Evening With Sherlock Holmes." Actually, it should be titled several evenings because this boxed set contains four movies - "Sherlock Holmes and the Secret Weapon" (1942), "Woman In Green" (1945), "Terror by Night" (1946), and "Dressed To Kill" (1946). And that's not all. It also includes an interview with Holmes creator Sir Arthur Conan Doyle filmed in 1927 and 30 original radio broadcasts starring the film's leads, Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce...."
4161. Borzillo, Carrie. "Syndicators present shows for holidays." Billboard 106, no. 49 (1994): 100.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on shows planned by radio syndicators in the United States for the 1994 Christmas season. Includes a reference to Holmes. "Beverly Hills, Calif.-based Charles Michelson is offering a dozen of radio's most-famous drama and comedy programs for the holidays. The half-hour specials are "The Jack Benny Christmas Special,"..."The Sherlock Holmes Christmas Show,"..."
4162. Davies, David Stuart. "Review--A Sound Achievement: a consideration of Radio Four's Sherlock Holmes series." The Ritual, no. 15 (1995): 40-44.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4163. ———. "Review--The Return of Sherlock Holmes, BBC Radio Four." The Ritual, no. 11 (1993): 28-31.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4164. Donald, Ann. "Who's that cat in the deer hat?" The Herald (Glasgow), July 8, 2000: 19.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Sherlock Holmes ranks alone in the distinguished genre of crime fiction creations - if only for his class A drug habit and eccentric apparel of deerstalker and pipe. This week's celebration of the Baker Street clever clogs and his creator, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, hung on the flimsy premise that Doyle popped his clogs 70 years ago. Given the riches languishing in the BBC's own radio drama vaults, it was remiss of the powers-that-be to deprive us of at least one rendition of Basil Rathbone's blinding interpretation of the great detective. However, Radio 4 was obviously intent on plunging into the real-life mire with The Secret History of Conan Doyle and The Real Sherlock Holmes. The mystery clouding Doyle's own life was pierced by Humphrey Carpenter's investigation...."
4165. Donovan, Paul. "Radio." Sunday Times (London), December 21, 2003: 72.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "With Great Pleasure At Christmas (R4, 2.15pm). Scott of the Antarctic's diaries, a Spike Milligan cat poem and Sherlock Holmes are among the announcer Brian Perkins's...choices...."
4166. ———. "So good, it's elementary." The Sunday Times (London), June 21, 1998: 30.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "History is about to be made on Radio 4. For the first time anywhere in the world and on any medium, the entire Sherlock Holmes canon of 56 short stories and four novels has now been dramatised with the same two actors - Clive Merrison as Holmes and Michael Williams as Dr Watson. The Hound of the Baskervilles, which begins next Sunday as a two-part Classic Serial, completes a project that started nine years ago and is unlikely ever to be replicated...."
4167. Gilbert, Jenny. "Radio: Jenny Gilbert on the 'Return' of Sherlock Holmes." Independent on Sunday (London), January 27, 2002: 51.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...Bert Coules, chief dramatist of R4's Complete Sherlock Holmes, has developed five new storylines from references in the original stories to cases that Dr Watson never got around to writing up for The Strand (or that he felt "the public are not yet ready to hear"). Detective story buffs even have a word

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

for this: 'canonical pastiche'. Coules fleshes out five such unrecorded cases while adhering closely to the Conan Doyle manner. And each is produced for radio in the same format - right down to the signature tune - as R4's celebrated canon of all 56 short stories and four novels...."

4168. Hall, John. "Review--'His Last Bow' BBC Radio Four." The Ritual, no. 13 (1994): 40-43.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

4169. Jeffers, H. Paul. "Once a Week in Baker Street: The Boucher-Green Years." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana, no. (2005): 3-64.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

4170. Jeffreys, Susan. "Saturday night in." New Statesman 125, no. 4295 (1996): 40.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews radio programs aired Saturday nights on the British Radio 4 station. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...For a start there's the Inspectors. Count them. More than you can shake a stick at. Libby Purves said that the best sort of radio play started with the crunch of feet on gravel, a knock at the door and the words 'I must ask you to accompany me to the station. The Inspector would like a word with you.' She spoke only sooth. We haven't been having just any old Inspector, either. We've been having poor old Lestrade, ever slow on the uptake in Saturday Night Theatre's The Return of Sherlock Holmes. And there's a whole clutch of Glaswegian Inspectors on P Division and, as any radio listener knows, Scottish Inspectors are worth double points...."

4171. Johnson, Roger. "Review--'The Valley of Fear' dramatized by Bert Coules." The Ritual, no. 19 (1997): 61-63.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

4172. Jordan, Anne. "'The Return of Sherlock Holmes' BBC Radio Four." The Ritual, no. 12 (1993): 32-34.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

4173. ———. "Review--'The Seven Per-Cent Solution' adapted by Denny Martin Flinn from Nicholas Meyer's Novel." The Ritual, no. 11 (1993): 34-36.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

4174. Kerr, Alison. "Anything but elementary." The Herald (Glasgow), June 26, 2000: 13.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Tribute is being paid this week to Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, creator of the world's favourite detective, and a complex character in his own right For over a century, the world has been fascinated and captivated by the character and adventures of Sherlock Holmes, literature's most famous private detective. With his astounding powers of deduction and phenomenal intuition skills, Holmes paved the way, not only for the hundreds of literary detectives of the twentieth century, but also for the superhuman heroes of comic books and cartoon strips. Holmes was the creation of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, the Scottish doctor turned writer who died 70 years ago this month, an anniversary which is being marked from Saturday with a short season of programmes on Radio 4...."

4175. Kington, Miles. "All Roads Lead to Baker Street for Writers." The Independent (London), December 31, 2004: 27.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "On Boxing Day on BBC-TV they showed a Sherlock Holmes adventure called The Case of the Silk Stocking, starring Rupert Everett as the great detective. If you are puzzled not to recognise the name of this Holmes story, puzzle no longer. It was written by Alan Cubitt, and although my wife and I thought Everett very good in the role, and enjoyed some of the goings on, the story was shaping up quite preposterously by the time some visitors rang our door bell, and we missed the final five minutes and never found out what happened. What I was not shocked by was the fact that anyone should attempt to concoct a new story based on 221b Baker Street, even if it did involve inventing a completely new fiancée for Dr Watson. Because although it may seem to be sacrilege to imagine you can do the job as well as Conan Doyle, it must also be one of the most universal instincts among writers....Even Bert Coules has done it. He has adapted all the Holmes stories and the four novels for Radio 4, starring Clive Merrison as Holmes. That's 50 stories or more. And when Mr Coules had no more Holmes yarns to adapt, how did he use the skill and knowledge he had gained from vicariously living in Baker Street for so long? Why, he overcame his respect for Conan Doyle and concocted a clutch of brand- new Holmes stories of his own. I heard some of them on Radio 4, and they weren't bad, even if they were slightly far-fetched and over- wrought...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

4176. ———. "Elementary Reading, My Dear Watson; I would Sooner Reread the Professor Challenger Stories than See any Jurassic Park Film Again'." The Independent (London), July 4, 2000: 3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "This week on Radio 4 seems to be Sir Arthur Conan Doyle week, which I give three cheers for, if only because it may make people aware that it's worth going beyond the Sherlock Holmes barrier and exploring other parts of Conan Doyle country...."
4177. ———. "Why Bert can say: Honey, I'm Holmes." The Independent (London), February 4, 2002: 3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "There was a time when I bought everything by Conan Doyle that I could lay my chequebook on, and the only thing that I ever refused to buy of his was a book I found lying in a second-hand book sale in a psychic centre in Holland Park. It purported to have been dictated by the late Sir Arthur's spirit across the ether, and the dustjacket said: 'This is the first book to be written by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle since his recent death...' No, it was the real world of Holmes that we shall remember Conan Doyle for, not the spirit world, and one of the best things to happen on Radio 4 over the years has been the excellent series of dramatisations of Sherlock Holmes stories written by Bert Coules. All of them, I think, have come out on tape, and many a long drive in the Kington car has been made less weary for the Kington family by a dose of Bert Coules's Holmes stories...."
4178. McKuras, Julie. "The Old Globe Theatre, KPBS-FM of San Diego, and "The Mask of Moriarty"." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 1, no. 4 (1997): 4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on the production and playbill for "The Mask of Moriarty" at the Old Globe Theatre in San Diego and the associated radio program, "These Days," on KPBS-FM with the resulting donations to the Sherlock Holmes Collections. Includes photograph of Paxton Whitehead in the role of Holmes and Tom Lacy in the role of Watson
4179. Nadel, William. "The Sound of the Hound, or, The Case of Baskervillian Radio." The Musgrave Papers, no. 14 (2001): 73-76.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4180. Richards, Jeffrey. "Review--'221 BBC: Writing for the World's First Complete Dramatised Canon' Musgrave Monograph Nine, by Bert Coules." The Ritual, no. 23 (1999): 50-52.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4181. Vestey, Michael. "Elementary information." Spectator 285, no. 8970 (2000): 45.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Evaluates several radio programs aired in Great Britain as of July 8, 2000. Inspiration for Sherlock Holmes revealed in 'Do What You Like With Him -- The Unreal Life of Sherlock Holmes'; Author Conan Doyle's involvement with spiritualism revealed in 'The Secret History of Conan Doyle'; Basis of the character of Sherlock Holmes in 'The Real Sherlock Holmes.'

10P ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- TELEVISION (31)

4182. "All 3 shows have their own angle." USA Today, December 6, 2002: E.02.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Need a scorecard to keep track of NBC's multiplying Law & Orders? Most fans know what distinguishes the 'mother' series, which premiered in 1990...Then came the spinoffs: Special Victims Unit...launched in 1999.... Criminal Intent...goes into the mind of the perpetrator and often leads up to the crime rather than following its aftermath. 'From the very first day, we said (Criminal Intent) is Sherlock Holmes,' Wolf says. 'That's the archetype. And that's what attracted (star) Vincent (D'Onofrio). Because Sherlock Holmes is, while very procedural, the most idiosyncratic of the major detectives. It's a voyage of discovery through his eyes. Kate (Erbe) is Dr. Watson. Jamey (Sheridan) is Lestat [sic]. It kind of breaks down very evenly.'..."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

4183. "Books on TV." Bookseller, no. 5212 (2006): 43-43.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article presents information on certain books that will be serialized in television in Great Britain. "Sherlock Holmes and the House of Fear" will be shown on January 14, 2006, on BBC2 at 1 pm. Basil Rathbone stars in this 1945 adaptation of author Conan Doyle's sleuth yarn. "Johnny and the Bomb" will be shown on January 15, 2006, on BBC1 at 5:35 pm. It is a three-part dramatization of Terry Pratchett's time-travel fantasy, with Zoe Wanamaker. "Balderdash & Piffle" will be shown on January 16, 2006, on BBC2 at 9 pm.
4184. "Briefly Noted." Electronic Media 19, no. 37 (2000): 4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports developments in the television broadcasting industry in the United States as of September 2000. Reference to Holmes series on the Odyssey Network. "The Odyssey Network greenlighted three more original movies based on the classic Sherlock Holmes detective novels. Odyssey President Margaret Loesch said the network is developing a program franchise based on the detective series.... The network is also looking at developing Holmes into a network series."
4185. "Terrestrial Pick of the Day." Daily Record, May 3, 2004: 23.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes BBC2, 11.00am. The master sleuth sets out to scupper arch-villain Moriarty's dastardly plan to steal the crown jewels. Compelling detective caper, one of the best Holmes adventures, starring Basil Rathbone.... Sherlock Holmes Returns five, 1.35pm. A doctor encounters a man claiming to be Sherlock Holmes in London, and is drawn into the adventure of a lifetime. Crime drama, starring Anthony Higgins...."
4186. "The TV series we could see only parts of." The Daily Yomiuri (Tokyo), March 1, 1997: 1.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Passing reference to Holmes. "...So in an attempt to unlock the secret of this little mystery, I put on my Sherlock Holmes cap, not realizing just how terribly appropriate it was, and called NHK the next morning. It seemed the case bore a striking resemblance to last year's famed 'Case of the Misfiled X-Files,' in which TV Asahi decided to air that show, not in order, but in the order network executives preferred.... That catchall excuse 'scheduling' was offered, as well as the fact that there was much greater demand for Sherlock Holmes, which will return in March, sometime between sumo and Diet debates...."
4187. "Tv Tips." NEA Today 19, no. 6 (2001): 41.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews several television programs shown in the United States as of March 2001. Includes "The Sign of Four." "An Englishwoman calls upon Sherlock Holmes to investigate an anonymous gift of pearls that she has received along with a letter promising to right wrongs done to her, in this original presentation of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's classic mystery."
4188. Adams, Guy. "Pandora." The Independent (London), August 24, 2004: 10.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...Fans of Arthur Conan Doyle will be keeping a beady eye on The Return of Sherlock Holmes, which is being made by the BBC. Its leading man, Rupert Everett...looks sure to upset traditionalists...."
4189. Bianco, Robert. "He's a winner, this Sherlock Holmes." USA Today, Oct 25, 2002: D.17.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Now this week, USA offers a new take on an old detective favorite, Sherlock Holmes, cracking his first big crime in Case of Evil. What better lead-in could you have for Monk than Holmes, the frighteningly observant character who turned doing the 'detecting, deducing thing' into a popular genre. A bit overly impressed by his own now-celebrated skills, Holmes moves on to London's latest crime spree: the systematic elimination of the city's opium dealers. For help, he turns to the city's initially reluctant coroner, Dr. Watson (Roger Morlidge), who soon becomes Sherlock's greatest fan. He also must rely on his brother, Mycroft (Richard E. Grant), his mentor and the guiding force behind his sleuthing...."
4190. Currier, Jameson. "News." Lambda Book Report 13, no. 1/2 (2004): 50-50.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents an update on issues in the entertainment and media sectors relevant to the gay community as of August 2004. Includes reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...Two of Britain's most famous

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

gay actors will soon be dueling Sherlocks. Stephen Fry will star as Arthur Conan Doyle's quintessential British detective, Sherlock Holmes, in a movie that will air on ITV at Christmastime. Fry's longtime comedy partner, Hugh Laurie, will co-star as Dr. Watson....Rupert Everett will also star as Sherlock Holmes in another TV-movie version which will be shown earlier in the year on BBC, a follow-up to their successful Hounds of the Baskerville feature. This production will have an original screenplay and will not be based on an Arthur Conan Doyle story; Ian Hart will co-star as his Dr. Watson...."

4191. Davies, David Stuart. "'The Television Sherlock Holmes' by Peter Haining." The Ritual, no. 13 (1994): 52.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

4192. Evans, Catherine. "Elementary my dear Watson - we're going off to Wales; New Sherlock Holmes drama to be shot here." The Western Mail, December 20, 2008: 17.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Another major television drama is set to be filmed in Wales next year, as the classic saga of Sherlock Holmes is updated for 2009. Sherlock - a modern take on the life of Sherlock Holmes - has been co-created by the partnership of two big-hitting writers, Doctor Who's Steven Moffet and The League of Gentleman's Mark Gatiss, who has also written for Doctor Who. The BBC drama will star Benedict Cumberbatch...."

4193. Fox, Bette-Lee. "Trailers." Library Journal 129, no. 13 (2004): 126-126.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents information on the films "Dr. Quinn, Medicine Woman: The Complete Season Four," "Fate," "The 5 Obstructions," "Henry Jaglom's Eating," "Memoirs of Sherlock Holmes," "Speedo," "Tanner 88," "To Be and To Have".

4194. Griffith, James. "From a Certain Point of View in 'A Scandal in Bohemia': Outsmarting Mr. Sherlock Holmes." Victorian Newsletter 86, no. (1994): 7-9.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

4195. Hobbs, Don. "Review--Sherlock Holmes on the Screen: The Complete Film and TV History by Alan Barnes." The Holmes & Watson Report 6, no. 5 (2002): 34.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

4196. Johns, Ian. "Pipe dreams, smoke screens." The Times (London), September 2, 2002: 18.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "As Sherlock Holmes returns to the stage, Ian Johns dons his deerstalker to investigate the pursuit of the whole sleuth. It's quite elementary, if you think about it. Sherlock Holmes was a woman who disguised herself as a man. That high voice and hairless chin, that secrecy about the past and the mysterious childhood. That love of dissembling. How else could a Victorian woman solve crimes in such a chauvinistic age? Curiously, Holmes's trusty chronicler Dr Watson (and Arthur Conan Doyle) failed to note this fact. But Therese Lentz did with her 1994 play 221B Baker Street. When it comes to the world's greatest detective, the theatre has often lifted the curtain on some lesser known aspect of his life. But finding the right tone has always been a three-pipe problem. 'It's the biggest hurdle,' admits the actor-turned-playwright Simon Williams, whose new version of The Hound of the Baskervilles opens this week at the Belgrade in Coventry. 'If it's too reverential and literal then you simply end up with a flat transcription. The best adaptations take a few liberties....'

4197. Love, Damien. "Home Movie." The Sunday Herald, June 25, 2000: 45.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Although their hasty flickering worlds have little to do with Arthur Conan Doyle, there will only ever be one quicksilver-sardonic Sherlock Holmes, and, bumbling sweetly beside him, only one Watson. Basil Rathbone, like a sneering rapier, and Nigel Bruce first breathed life into the duo for 20th Century Fox's Hound of the Baskervilles (1939) and the same year's follow-up, The Adventures of ... Both films were moody main features, faithful to Conan Doyle in plot and period. Between 1942-1946 Universal employed the pair to reprise the roles in 12 fine B-movies, transposing Holmes and Watson to (then) modern times. Showing this week are five of these: Sherlock Holmes and the Secret Weapon (1942), The Pearl of Death (1944), Pursuit to Algiers (1945), House of Fear (1945) and The Woman in Green (1945), all directed by Roy William Neil...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

4198. McCormick, Patrick. "Science fiction." U.S.Catholic 70, no. 1 (2005): 44-46.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Criticizes the acceptance of a fundamentalist approach to the evidence used in criminal investigation as popularized in the TV program "CSI: Crime Scene Investigation." Theme of the program; Overview of detective characters in literature; Statistics on crime and criminal investigations; Result of a politicized intelligence report. Includes references to Doyle and Holmes. "...The popularity of the geek detective is nothing new. Arthur Conan Doyle gave us Sherlock Holmes, whose 221 B Baker apartment was regularly filled with the smoke and smells of some experiment and whose desk always had a stack of obscure but relevant scientific monographs. Like Grissom, Holmes loved putting his crime scene evidence under the magnifying glass, checking out footprints, soil samples, and the wear pattern on a pair of boots. Agatha Christie's master detective, Hercule Poirot, did not share Holmes' penchant for lab work, but he, too, had limitless faith in 'the little grey cells' of his very clever brain and was supremely confident in the ability of human intelligence to solve life's most daunting mysteries..." Sidebar on memorable detectives notes "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes (Granada Television, 1984-1994). William Gillette played Holmes on the stage for more than three decades and Basil Rathbone portrayed him in 16 films, but most contemporary fans agree that Jeremy Brett's performance in this British TV series has set the gold standard. In the Adventures, Return, Casebook, and Memoirs of Sherlock Holmes, as well as several TV films made from Conan Doyle's longer stories, Brett gives a meticulous and studied performance of the cerebral but impassioned detective's quest for the truth of the matter."

4199. Methven, Nicola. "Frying Squad; Fry & Laurie Return as Holmes & Watson." The Mirror, March 30, 2004: 7.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Comedy duo Hugh Laurie and Stephen Fry are to reunite as Sherlock Holmes and Dr Watson in a major new ITV drama. The pair were last on the small screen together as Jeeves and Wooster more than a decade ago. Now Fry, 46, a devoted Holmes fan, will play the Baker St detective, with 44-year-old Laurie co-starring as his loyal friend Watson...."

4200. ———. "Ideal Holmes; Robson & Jerome Targets for GBP 6m Sherlock Series." The Mirror, April 2, 2001: 15.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Robson Green and Jerome Flynn are being lined up to star as Sherlock Holmes and Dr Watson in a pounds 6million revival of the famed detective series. TV bosses hope the duo, who shot to fame in the drama Soldier, Soldier, will play younger versions of the sleuth and his aide. Although the new drama will be set in the dingy backstreets of 19th century London, there are some controversial changes in store for Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's legendary crimebusters which will outrage fans...."

4201. Petrovic, Hans. "Comedy lovers in for a treat." The Press (Christchurch, New Zealand), January 29, 2000: WE20.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Listing of films on television, including a number of Holmes offerings. "Sherlock Holmes and the Secret Weapon (CTV, noon, 1942): First-rate Sherlock Holmes adventure made as British WW2 propaganda, with Basil Rathbone playing the supersleuth, who is up against the Nazis and his arch-nemesis Professor Moriarty in a battle for possession of a wartime invention. (1hr 15min)... Sherlock Holmes and the Woman in Green (CTV, 1.15pm, 1945): When Scotland Yard begins receiving the severed fingers of several women, Holmes (Rathbone) finds Moriarty at the bottom of it. (1hr 15min)... Terror By Night (CTV, noon, 1946): Entertaining mystery with Sherlock Holmes (Rathbone) guarding a valuable gem on a Scotland-bound train, and solving a few murders along the way. (1hr 10min)... The Triumph of Sherlock Holmes (CTV, 1.20pm, 1936): Arthur Wontner and Ian Fleming make up the Holmes-Watson team in this mystery-adventure involving murder and a secret society among coal miners. (1hr 10min)..."

4202. ———. "Dumb tricks, and a drunk mum." The Press (Christchurch, New Zealand), November 14, 1998: WE19.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Listing of movies on television for the week. "Sherlock Holmes and the Secret Weapon (CTV, 12.30pm, 1942): The supersleuth (Basil Rathbone) is hired to protect the inventor of a new bombsight from the deadly clutches of Moriarty. One of the more exciting episodes of this series. (1hr 30min)... Dressed to Kill (CTV, 4.30pm, 1946): Music boxes made in prison hold the key to the whereabouts of stolen bank plates in this lively final entry in the Rathbone Sherlock Holmes series. (1hr 30min)..."

4203. Przybilka, Thomas. "Book Review (Sherlock Holmes in Film und Fernsehen: Ein Handbuch)." Shoso-In Bulletin

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

14, no. (2004): 149.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

4204. Shannon, Sarah. "BBC's elementary guide to the creator of Sherlock Holmes." The Evening Standard (London), August 13, 1999: 20.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The creation of detective fiction's most famous hero, Sherlock Holmes, is to be chronicled in a new BBC drama starring Charles Dance. Blood Line, which begins filming on Monday, will study the little known story of Arthur Conan Doyle's friendship with his tutor at Edinburgh University, the pioneer forensic pathologist, Dr Joseph Bell. Dr Bell's skills of deduction are thought to have inspired Conan Doyle to invent his pipe-smoking detective. As the young student worked for the doctor he observed his astute analyses of patients' appearances...."

4205. Sherwin, Adam. "Case of the ideal Holmes show." The Times (London), May 30, 2003: 13.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "BBC Two is to screen a 19-year-old ITV drama series to fill a gap in its schedules. The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes, starring Jeremy Brett, was first shown by ITV in 1984. In a highly unusual deal the BBC has bought the 13-part series from Granada International as a Saturday afternoon staple. A second series based on Sherlock Holmes, and previously screened by ITV, is also expected to 'cross the floor'...."

4206. Shigaki, Yamiko. "I hear of Sherlock Everywhere..." -- The Image of Sherlock Holmes Broadcast on Japanese Television (translated by Amano Yaeko)." Shoso-In Bulletin 8, no. (1998): 220-222.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

4207. Simon, Jane. "We Love Telly: Holmes Sickness; Pick of the Day the Strange Case of Sherlock Holmes and Arthur Conan." The Mirror, July 27, 2005: 39.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "His death made headline news. But what prompted Arthur Conan Doyle to kill off Sherlock Holmes at the very height of the fictional detective's popularity? As David Pirie's dark, gripping, feature-length drama suggests, Holmes sprang from the most troubled secret corners of Doyle's mind...."

4208. Teachout, Terry. "A Nero as Hero." National Review 54, no. 15 (2002): 51-52.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the television program "Nero Wolfe," produced by Timothy Hutton and Michael Jaffe. Includes a reference to Holmes. "...Like Sherlock Holmes, the predecessor on whom he was obviously modeled, Wolfe is a misogynist who will have nothing to do with women socially -- food, not sex, is his sensual outlet -- though every once in a while he gives off a faint but perceptible flicker of interest in one of the pretty ladies who pass through his office...."

4209. Thorpe, Vanessa. "The answer, my dear Watson, is elementary. One of these new Sherlock Holmes is an impostor." The Observer, June 20, 2004: 13.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Few fictional characters divide audiences so passionately. Some are fans of Basil Rathbone's Sherlock Holmes, others are devotees of the Peter Cushing version, while many argue that no actor quite caught the manner of the greatest consulting detective of them all until Jeremy Brett took up his deerstalker. Now two more actors are to take on the challenge of playing the heroic detective in a TV battle between rival interpretations, one ITV, the other BBC, which is likely to equal the struggle between Holmes and Moriarty atop the Reichenbach Falls. In the ITV corner is Stephen Fry, a passionate scholar of the work of the character's creator, Arthur Conan Doyle....Over in the BBC corner is a relative newcomer, Rupert Everett, 45, the glamorous Hollywood star who made his name on the British stage in the early Eighties....Members of the Sherlock Holmes Society of London are poised to make their judgment and, at first sight, neither actor appears to pass muster...."

4210. Wagner, Holly J. "There's No One Like Holmes." Video Store 25, no. 35 (2003): 28-28.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the DVD version of the TV program "The Return of Sherlock Holmes," by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle.

4211. Walters, Ben. "The Sherlock Holmes Collection (TV Program)." Sight & Sound 14, no. 9 (2004): 97-97.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the television program "The Sherlock Holmes Collection," starring Peter Cushing and Douglas Wilmer released on DVD format.

4212. Wilkins, Alasdair. "22 cases of Sherlock Holmes in science fiction." no. (2009).

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // He may already be the most iconic character in detective fiction, but who says Sherlock Holmes doesn't have a place in science fiction as well? We explore some of the Victorian sleuth's most fantastic adventures.

10P ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- TELEVISION -- BAKER STREET
IRREGULARS (2007) (4)

4213. Hendry, Steve. "Television: Dr Watson's Accent is so Elementary for Paterson." Sunday Mail, March 25, 2007: 15.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Bill Paterson did some sleuthing of his own when he took on the role of Sherlock Holmes sidekick, Dr Watson. The Scots actor takes on the iconic role in new series Sherlock Holmes and the Baker Street Irregulars after extensive research into the author and decided to give his own Glasgow accent to the character in tribute to his creator, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. He said: 'I think Watson is how Conan Doyle saw himself. He's a medical man and a Scotsman, as was Conan Doyle. But Watson is very seldom played as Scottish so this was an ideal opportunity for me as I'm from Glasgow. It makes for an interesting contrast with Holmes....'"

4214. ———. "Television: Dr Watson's accent is so elementary for Paterson." Sunday Mail, Mar 25, 2007: 15.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "But [Watson] is very seldom played as Scottish so this was an ideal opportunity for me as I'm from Glasgow. It makes for an interesting contrast with Holmes. [Bill Paterson], 61, star of BBC Scotland supernatural drama Sea Of Souls, hit movies including Miss Potter with Renee Zellweger and Ewan McGregor, and new film Amazing Grace, could not resist the chance to play Watson. "I don't know how many times the Irregulars pop up in the original stories but they are a gang of ruffians who appear in [Holmes]' office, much to Watson's agony."

4215. Hill, Claire. "Jonathan Pryce puts his mark on the legendary role of Sherlock Holmes." The Western Mail, March 6, 2007: 3.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Sherlock holmes is the latest hero to be given a modern makeover to appeal to young audiences following the success of Doctor Who and Robin Hood. Starring Welsh actor Jonathan Pryce as the legendary Holmes, the two-part BBC drama has been written by the people behind the new-look Robin Hood and ITV's Primeval. Most famous recently for his role as Governor Weatherby Swann in the Pirates of the Caribbean films, the Holywell-born actor has wanted to play the detective since watching him as a child...."

4216. Maloney, Jim. "Sheer luck!" The Sun (London), March 24, 2007: 21.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Sherlock Holmes And The Baker Street Irregulars BBC1 Sunday. Playing legendary detective Sherlock Holmes is a dream come true for Pirates Of The Caribbean film star Jonathan Pryce...."

10P ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- TELEVISION -- CSI: CRIME SCENE INVESTIGATION (1)

4217. Harrington, Ellen Burton. "Nation, identity and the fascination with forensic science in Sherlock Holmes and CSI." International Journal of Cultural Studies 10, no. 3 (2007): 365-382.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Although the popular television series CSI: Crime Scene Investigation presents cutting-edge images and laboratory techniques, it reiterates the reassuring ideological message and the glorification of the man of science that typify Doyle's Sherlock Holmes stories. While the Holmes stories use reassuring, formulaic narratives to consolidate a normative national identity and counter increasing

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

disenchantment with empire, CSI replays a similar sort of procedural detective story to reassure viewers with the fantasy that the United States can be secured amidst threats of violence and terrorism, that individual identity, as well as national identity, can be fixed and scientifically assured." [Abstract from author]

10P ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- TELEVISION -- FATHER BROWN (1)

4218. "Father Brown." British Heritage 28, no. 2 (2007): 59-59.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews "Father Brown, DVD 2-vol. boxed set," a collection of the episodes of the television program "Father Brown," released on DVD format. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Neither is it surprising that, like the celebrated sleuths of Agatha Christie, Dorothy Sayers, P.D. James, Conan Doyle and such, Father Brown should have made his way to the screen. What is surprising, however is that it has taken such a time for these clever tales to be widely available in video for fans of the genre. Originally aired in this country on PBS Mystery! in 1982, Acorn Media has gathered and released this set of seven Father Brown stories, starring Kenneth More as the skillful clergyman-detective...."

10P ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- TELEVISION -- GRANADA SERIES(20)

4219. "Around Town." The Statesman (India), December 8, 2006: 1.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Where's Watson Dear Watson, I am back. This December History Channel will show the adventures of Sherlock Holmes and his trusted aide Dr John Watson through the new series The Adventure of Sherlock Holmes. Indian viewers now have a chance to see Jeremy Brett's brilliant interpretation of Sherlock Holmes in the classic series that airs on 12 December at 9 p.m. An adaptation of the original stories, The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes brings alive mysteries such as A Solitary Cyclist, The Speckled Band, The Naval Treaty and many others...."

4220. "BBC's new line in repeats." Daily Mail (London), February 9, 2004: 7.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Even Sherlock Holmes might struggle to solve it the strange case of the repeats that aren't repeats. It's like this, Watson: The BBC is showing old ITV detective series . . . but claiming they are not repeats because it is the first time they have been screened by the corporation. Hardly fiendishness of Moriarty standards, you'll agree but perhaps a matter for the semantics police to look into. The acclaimed Sherlock Holmes series, starring the late Jeremy Brett and originally broadcast in the 1980s, is among the sleuth series being shown, along with Murder She Wrote and The Father Dowling Mysteries...."

4221. "Jeremy Brett and The Final Four." The Washington Post, December 31, 1995: Y03.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "'Mystery!' begins the last of four Sherlock Holmes stories starring Jeremy Brett, who for many viewers was the definitive detective for a decade. Edward Hardwicke is Dr. Watson, his friend and confidante...."

4222. "McCormick's Quick Takes on Memorable Detectives." U.S.Catholic 70, no. 1 (2005): 44-45.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the performance of several detective characters in motion pictures. Performance of Jeremy Brett in the film "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" and other Sherlock Holmes movies; Physical description of the character Poirot portrayed by David Suchet in the film "Poirot"; Portrayal of detective Jane Tennison by Helen Mirren in the film "Prime Suspect."

4223. Bailey, Paul. "Television: Holmes Flares Up again." The Guardian (London), March 8, 1994: 9.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The great amateur detective is back, and I rather wish he wasn't. The Memoirs Of Sherlock Holmes (Granada) is still being attributed to Arthur Conan Doyle, but any fool can ascertain that it's the work of Jeremy Paul, who used to adapt Doyle's stories but now writes his own. The scripts have become coarser and so has the acting. The first episode in the new series, The Three Gables, tells of a wicked lady, Isadora Klein, who likes her lovers young, athletic and titled...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

4224. Bamber, David, and Chris Hastings. "Q: When, according to the BBC, is a repeat not a repeat? A: When it appeared on ITV first." Sunday Telegraph (London), February 8, 2004: 10.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "What does the BBC do when it runs out of old programmes to repeat? Elementary, my dear Watson, it buys some older ones from ITV. In a new twist on the policy of padding out its daytime schedules with 20-year-old BBC dramas, the corporation is now filling such slots with old ITV hits including Sherlock Holmes, The Father Dowling Mysteries and Murder, She Wrote...."
4225. Barrett, Wayne M. "The Truth About the Sleuth." USA Today Magazine 133, no. 2716 (2005): 68-69.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the DVD release of the television series Mystery, "about detective Sherlock Holmes and his sidekick John Watson, starring Jeremy Brett and Edward Hardwicke."
4226. Couldry, Nick. "The view from inside the 'simulacrum': visitors' tales from the set of Coronation Street." Leisure Studies 17, no. 2 (1998): 94-107.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The social significance of visits to television and film locations has been little studied. This article concentrates on Granada Studios Tour (GST) - home of the external set of Coronation Street - and uses as its main source interviews with visitors to GST, conducted on site and in visitors' homes, to explore the complex significance of this site." Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Elsewhere there are sets from other Granada programmes (for example, the Baker Street set from Sherlock Holmes)..."
4227. Davies, David Stuart. "Shooting Sherlock on location for the filming of Granada's version of 'The Three Gables'." The Ritual, no. 12 (1993): 13-18.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4228. Dawes, Steve. "Pioneer of television design Obituary: Michael Grimes." The Guardian (Manchester), Dec 17, 1994: NOPGCIT.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Mike is said to have invented the job on a succession of live entertainment shows. He went on to produce his richest work in the sixties and seventies during his association with Peter Eckersley, producer and head of drama at Granada. This led on to Maupassant, The Nearly Man, A Family At War, dozens of episodes of Country Matters and films directed by the likes of Michael Apted, Ken Russell and Mike Newell.; The least pretentious of men, he was impatient only with pretentiousness and prevarication. His generosity was tempered by abhorrence of self-appointed prefects - and a sometimes wicked sense of humour. He would deliver verdicts on the mighty with apparent innocuous finality. 'Yes I remember him,' he said quietly of someone of para-executive importance in the BBC, currently an ITV baron. 'Was a trainee in the sixties. Nice man. Not a scintilla of talent.'; When he left Granada in 1989 it was to go to France to work with directors like Claude Goretta and Jose Pinhero and to recreate Maigret for French television. [Mike Grimes] took the French back to the France of the early fifties, detail by detail. They loved it. He bore his illness with typical fortitude and humour."
4229. Fox, Bette-Lee, and Daniel B. Schuetz. "Sherlock Holmes/Sherlock Holmes (Film)." Library Journal 128, no. 6 (2003): 145.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the digital videos 'Sherlock Holmes: The Hound of the Baskervilles,' and 'Sherlock Holmes: The Last Vampyre,' by MTI Home Video.
4230. Goodman, Walter. "The why-see-it of a whodunit." New York Times, August 20, 1997: B1.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Opinion. Presents the author's thoughts on the plots and acting in the television program 'N.Y.P.D. Blue,' and the made-for-television Sherlock Holmes, Miss Marple, and Poirot series. Why the author consulted Edmund Wilson's 'Why Do People Read Detective Stories?'
4231. Kegley, Jerry. "A Review of Granada's Newest Offerings. . . The Three Gables, The Dying Detective." Baker Street West 1, no. 3 (1995): 14.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4232. Michael, Patrick. "Review--Sherlock Holmes: Out of Time and Space, Granada Studios Tour, Manchester." The Ritual, no. 16 (1995): 56-57.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

4233. Nye, Doug. "Jeremy Brett is Sherlock Holmes - 8 New Tapes." The Philadelphia Inquirer, April 6, 1995: E01.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "I was intimidated by Rathbone at first,' Brett said during a chat in Los Angeles. 'It was depressing, because Rathbone looked exactly like the old drawings of Holmes.' Rathbone played Holmes in 14 movies during the 1940s as well as on radio for several years. Nevertheless, when Brett was offered the role in a series produced by Granada for the BBC, he was determined to bring his own interpretation to the character. 'I reread everything I could about the character,' Brett said. The results are nearly 10 years of marvelous adaptations of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's fictional detective. Not only has the series been a hit in England, but it also has won loyal fans in America with airings as part of PBS's Mystery! series and as Sherlock Holmes on cable's Arts & Entertainment network. Not surprisingly, the Holmes/Brett series has become popular on the home-video market. MPI has released many episodes of the series on video and recently made eight more available...."
4234. Roden, Barbara. "A Bootmaker Abroad." Canadian Holmes 17, no. 4 (1994): 47-48.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Now that we Toronto Bootmakers have had a chance to view The Last Vampyre and The Eligible Bachelor, we can compare our reactions to the programs to those of expatriate Master Bootmaker Barbara Roden, who wrote these thoughts on the programs when they first were telecast in Britain."
4235. Schroth, Raymond A. "If only we could call on Sherlock Holmes." National Catholic Reporter, June 20, 1997: 19.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents several television series featuring fictitious character [sic] Sherlock Holmes films. Includes 'Mystery'; 'The Adventure of Creeping Man'; 'The Three Gables'; 'The Memoirs of Sherlock Holmes'.
4236. Stasio, Marilyn. "The case of the ever-popular detectives." New York Times, June 1, 1997: 55.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews several television programs featuring detectives such as Sherlock Holmes, Hercule Poirot and Inspector Maigret, as part of the "Mystery!" series.
4237. White, Kathryn. "Review--The Making of Sherlock Holmes, The Royal Television Society, Granada TV, Manchester." The Ritual, no. 13 (1994): 37-39.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4238. ———. "Review--The Memoirs of Sherlock Holmes, Granada Television, 7 March-11 April 1994." The Musgrave Papers, no. 7 (1994): 104-115.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

10P ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- TELEVISION -- HOUSE (4)

4239. "Dr House, I presume." The Dominion Post (Wellington), March 8, 2005: 3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Series creator [David Shore] says part of the inspiration for the House character was Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's fictional 19th-century detective Sherlock Holmes, who was highly observant and frequently more interested in solving cases than in social niceties. When Shore and [Hugh Laurie] first met, they discussed the similarities between House and Holmes....Though Laurie's comedy background might seem an odd fit for a dramatic character, Shore says it's good training for an offbeat doctor on a show with comedic touches, including House's Sherlock Holmesian diagnoses of clinic patients."
4240. "Dr House, I presume." The Press (Christchurch, New Zealand), March 8, 2005: T4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "When doctors can't solve a case they turn to a special team of dedicated medical professionals led by a controversial doctor, whose determination and sleuthing skills bring to mind Sherlock Holmes, in House....Series creator David Shore says part of the inspiration for the House character was Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's fictional 19th-century detective Sherlock Holmes, who was highly observant and frequently more interested in solving cases than in social niceties. When Shore and Laurie first met, they

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

discussed the similarities between House and Holmes...."

4241. Koch, Tom. "The doctor in this House: lessons from TV's Gregory House, M.D." CMAJ: Canadian Medical Association Journal 178, no. 1 (2008): 67-68.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the television program "House, M.D.," starring Hugh Laurie, Lisa Edelstein, and Robert Sean. Includes references to Holmes.
4242. Waldman, Allison J. "Emmy's 500-Pound Gorilla." Television Week 26, no. 32 (2007): 14-14.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the television program "House," starring Hugh Laurie and David Morse. "...According to the creators of the show, there's a link between Gregory House and Sherlock Holmes, especially in their relentless need to uncover the truth...."

10P ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- TELEVISION -- MURDER ROOMS (25)

4243. "Critic's Choice; It's Elementary for Dr Bell." Daily Record, December 18, 1999: 61.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Murder Rooms BBC 2. Filmed in Glasgow and Edinburgh last summer, this edgy - and somewhat spooky - thriller is inspired by the real life relationship between writer Arthur Conan Doyle and his tutor at Edinburgh University, pioneer forensic pathologist Dr Joseph Bell. The pair become embroiled in a hunt for a serial killer, a journey which reveals the stinking underbelly of Victorian society and inspires Doyle to create the most memorable detective of all time - the one and only Sherlock Holmes. This two-part drama stars a whole host of Scottish talent lead by the excellent Ian Richardson - best known at the scary PM Francis Urquhart in the BBC's House of Cards trilogy and recently seen in Gormenghast and The Magician's House - as Joseph Bell, with Robin Laing (Joey in both series of Jimmy McGovern's The Lakes) as the young Arthur Conan Doyle...."
4244. "Did Conan Doyle play Dr Watson, on the case with a real Sherlock Holmes?". Daily Mail (London), January 3, 2000: 27.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Shortly before the black flag above the jail let the crowds swarming over Calton Hill know justice had been done, the condemned man made a remarkable request. Turning to Dr Henry Littlejohn, Edinburgh's chief medical officer who had come to witness the hanging, wife murderer Eugene Chantrelle said coolly: 'Give my compliments to Joe Bell. He did a good job in bringing me to the scaffold.' In 1878 the remark was widely reported, yet it remains a mystery. Joseph Bell was an eminent Victorian surgeon at Edinburgh's Royal Infirmary, who would amuse medical students by deducing the occupation of his patients from small clues in their appearance. This habit would later inspire a certain student called Arthur Conan Doyle to create the world's most famous detective in Sherlock Holmes. But could there have been more to it than that? Chantrelle's remark suggests Bell solved the murder, not those who took credit at the trial for proving the womanising alcoholic had disposed of his wife with a large dose of opium. If Bell was a real-life Sherlock Holmes, solving crimes that baffled the police, who was the real Doctor Watson who assisted in his secret detective work? The creator of a new BBC drama claims the model for Watson was Doyle himself, and that he and Bell were actively involved in solving crimes. In uncovering the evidence, screen writer David Pirie had to wrestle with mysteries that would have taxed even Holmes. Bell and Doyle were very private men and would in any case have been sworn to secrecy if they did special detective work for the Crown Office...."
4245. "Heart of Holmes drama." The Evening Post (Wellington), January 22, 2001: TV3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The world of Sherlock Holmes is reinvented in Dr Bell And Mr Doyle: The Dark Beginnings Of Sherlock Holmes, a story inspired by the real-life relationship between Arthur Conan Doyle (Laing) and his tutor at Edinburgh University, pioneer forensic pathologist, Dr Joseph Bell (Richardson), this week's Summer Mystery. Set in Edinburgh in 1878, the pair become embroiled in a hunt for a serial killer, a journey that reveals the underbelly of Victorian society and inspires Doyle to create the most memorable detective of all time - Sherlock Holmes. Writer David Pirie says this mystery is based on a true story...."
4246. "Satellite Pick of the Day." Daily Record, March 19, 2004: 54.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...Murder Rooms: The Dark Beginnings Of Sherlock Holmes UKTV Drama,

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

9.00pm This murder mystery does exactly what it says on the tin, traces the beginnings of fictional detective hero Sherlock Holmes. Dr Joseph Bell, the Victorian forensic doctor widely recognised as the inspiration for Sherlock Holmes, teams up with the young doctor and budding author Dr Arthur Conan Doyle to form a formidable detective duo....With Ian Richardson, Charles Edwards and Alexander Armstrong...."

4247. "Video." Library Journal 131, no. 6 (2006): 125-127.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // An annotated bibliography of video titles, soon to be published or recently published, is provided. The "trailers" section contains a reference to Doyle and Holmes. Murder Rooms: The Beginnings of Sherlock Holmes. 2 vols. color. 6 hrs. MPI Media. Jun. 2006. DVD ISBN 0-7886-0726-X. $39.98. "The young Conan Doyle and his mentor, a forensic scientist, turn the tables on Victorian criminals."

4248. Banks-Smith, Nancy. "Television: TV review: These ghoulish things." The Guardian (London), September 5, 2001: 22.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "In Baker Street I once heard a tourist say 'But where's the fog?' I was fairly befogged in Murder Rooms: the Dark Beginnings of Sherlock Holmes (BBC 1), which featured Dr Bell (Ian Richardson), the inspiration for Sherlock Holmes, and young Dr Doyle (Charles Edwards)....Posh production values have been poured over the film like warm brandy over plum pudding. The writing and acting are better than strictly necessary, the lighting is downright seductive and where did they find those charming bats? Someone has taken a lot of trouble. Being an Anglo-American production, all this is largely for the benefit of the disappointed American tourist in Baker Street. Who will not be disappointed with this drama...."

4249. Bianco, Robert. "Critic's corner." USA Today, May 18, 2000: 12D.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "PBS's Mystery! has Murder Rooms: The Dark Origins of Sherlock Holmes.... The film supposes that writer Arthur Conan Doyle based Sherlock Holmes on his university tutor -- and then sends Conan Doyle and the professor (Ian Richardson of House of Cards) on a hunt for a serial killer."

4250. Fox, Bette-Lee. "Trailers." Library Journal 131, no. 6 (2006): 126-126.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article reviews several motion pictures released onto DVD including "The Boat is Full," directed by Markus Imhoff, "That Girl: Season One," starring Marlo Thomas, "Murder Rooms: The Beginnings of Sherlock Holmes," "Beyond the Rocks: The Deluxe Edition," directed by Sam Wood, and "The Ozzie and Harriet TV Collection."

4251. Frame, Anna. "Murder Rooms:The Dark Beginning Of Sherlock Holmes." The Times (London), January 10, 2004: 37.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "According to Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, who left notes to prove it, he was inspired to create Sherlock Holmes by his professor at Edinburgh Medical School, Sir Joseph Bell. A pioneering forensic detective, Bell possessed enviable analytical skills that led to the cracking of many crimes. This evocative dramatisation, well directed by Paul Seed (A Touch of Frost, Auf Wiedersehen, Pet), stars Ian Richardson as Bell and Robin Laing as an unexpectedly rangy Doyle. Their hunt for a serial killer on the loose is involving, but the historical emphasis on early forensic science is fascinating in its own right."

4252. Gibb, Eddie. "Alimentary." The Sunday Herald, January 2, 2000: 12.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...The parallels between Bell and Holmes have been milked for all they are worth in a new two-part drama called Murder Rooms: The Dark Beginnings of Sherlock Holmes, which the BBC has high hopes it will be able to turn into a series. Think of a Victorian Inspector Morse with a heavy dollop of Edinburgh Gothic and you will get an idea of how this show looks. Much of the drama was shot in the narrow wynds of Edinburgh's Old Town and has a grim, claustrophobic feel that producer Ian Madden likens to the contemporary horror movie, Seven...."

4253. Gussow, Mel. "Vengeance in the Cotswolds And Other Intrigues." The New York Times, July 7, 2002: 13.4.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Where have all the mysteries gone? Was the death of Morse -- and, later, of John Thaw, the actor who created the role -- a sign of closure? For the past year, viewers of television mysteries have had to satisfy their appetite by judicious cable surfing, snaring a rerun of Morse or Poirot on A&E, catching a 'Cracker' on BBKA, searching for a second 'Second Sight' anywhere, anytime, while always

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

wondering, haven't we seen this before?...Well, at least 'Mystery!' is back for the summer, with a round of three new series, followed by one repeat performance (from Robson Green, who plays the moody detective in 'Touching Evil 3')....Next in line is 'Murder Rooms: The Dark Beginnings of Sherlock Holmes,' a four-part continuation of a series of several seasons ago. 'Murder Rooms' is, we are told, the real-life story behind Sherlock Holmes, in which a doctor named Doyle (short for Arthur Conan Doyle) links up with his professor, Dr. Joseph Bell, a scientist who is also a detective. Bell is played by Ian Richardson, who in common with many other classical British actors, has already played Holmes himself...."

4254. Hanks, Robert. "Television Review." The Independent (London), January 5, 2000: 16.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "David Pirie's two-part drama, Murder Rooms: the Dark Beginnings of Sherlock Holmes (BBC2), which concludes tonight, doesn't leave much to the imagination. Not that it is notably explicit; it just won't allow any credit to human powers of invention. The subject is the early life of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, and in particular his relationship with Joseph Bell, the Edinburgh surgeon whose forays into minute observation and deduction were the avowed inspiration for Sherlock Holmes...."

4255. Hegarty, Shane. "What a wonderful world." The Irish Times, September 8, 2001: 65.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Television review. "...Murder Rooms: The Dark Beginnings of Sherlock Holmes is a series based on the premise that Arthur Conan Doyle's very real inspiration, the surgeon Dr Joseph Bell, was also a cracking private investigator to whom Doyle would play the Watson. It takes a very modern view of the Holmes novels and their time and drops them into a right old potboiler. Taking as its cue the Sherlock Holmes mystery The Solitary Cyclist, it opened with a young lady in a forest being shadowed by a cloaked, featureless figure on a bike, who has a habit of disappearing into thin air. From such preposterous beginnings did an equally preposterous and wildly enjoyable plot emerge. There was a mysterious figure in a window, a fainting lady, a contested estate, an arranged marriage, shots in the dark, a ghost and a horribly scarred ex-lover bent on revenge...."

4256. Hellen, Nicholas. "Elementary, My Dear Doctor." The Toronto Star, May 22, 1999: 1.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Sherlock Holmes, regarded by many as the world's greatest fictional detective, might well have owed his literary origins to a note scribbled by a condemned murderer as he stood at the gallows. The doomed man identified Dr. Joseph Bell, Arthur Conan Doyle's medical instructor, as the sleuth who secretly helped the police secure his conviction. 'My compliments to Joseph Bell,' wrote Eugene Chanterelle. 'He did a good job in bringing me to the scaffold.' BBC researchers are convinced that the note alerted Conan Doyle to the double life of his eminent tutor and helped inspire some of the most memorable cases of the fictional Victorian detective. At the Cannes Film Festival last weekend, the BBC announced plans for a feature film and TV series starring Bell as the real Sherlock Holmes with Conan Doyle - rather than Dr. Watson - as his loyal assistant. Jonathan Pryce, the actor best known for his role as the villain in the James Bond movie, Tomorrow Never Dies, is tipped to play the part of Holmes. David Pirie, the script editor of the dramatization, says fresh clues to the origins of Holmes emerged from the memoirs of Conan Doyle's Edinburgh contemporaries...."

4257. ———. "Last words of killer gave life to Sherlock Holmes." Sunday Times (London), May 16, 1999: 7.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Sherlock Holmes, regarded by many as the world's greatest fictional detective, owed his literary origins to a note scribbled by a condemned murderer as he stood at the gallows. The doomed man, Eugene Chantrelle, identified Dr Joseph Bell, the medical instructor of Arthur Conan Doyle, as the sleuth who secretly helped the police to secure his conviction. 'My compliments to Joseph Bell,' he wrote. 'He did a good job in bringing me to the scaffold.' BBC researchers are convinced that the note alerted Conan Doyle to the double life of his eminent tutor, and helped to inspire some of the most memorable cases of the fictional Victorian detective. Tomorrow, at the Cannes Film Festival, the BBC will announce plans for a feature film and a television series starring Bell as the real Sherlock Holmes with Conan Doyle, instead of Watson, as his loyal assistant. Jonathan Pryce, the actor best known for his role as the villain in the James Bond movie Tomorrow Never Dies, is tipped to play the part of Holmes. David Pirie, the script editor of the dramatisation, said fresh clues to the origins of Holmes had emerged among the memoirs of Conan Doyle's Edinburgh contemporaries...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

4258. ———. "Secrets behind Sherlock's Scots origins revealed." Sunday Times (London), May 16, 1999: 7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...Tomorrow, at the Cannes film festival, the BBC will announce plans for a feature film and a television series starring Bell as the real Sherlock Holmes with Conan Doyle, instead of Watson, as his loyal assistant. Jonathan Pryce, the actor best known for his role as the villain in the James Bond movie Tomorrow Never Dies, is tipped to play the part of Holmes. David Pirie, the script editor of the dramatisation, said fresh clues to the origins of Holmes had emerged among the memoirs of Conan Doyle's Edinburgh contemporaries...."
4259. Joseph, Joe. "Review." The Times (London), September 5, 2001: 2.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...Although freshly minted, with a pacy storyline from David Pirie, Murder Rooms has the air of a show that could have been made at any time in the past three decades: those vintage railways, wreathed in steam so as to mask the electricity pylons in the background; the wigs that would never have got past Burt Reynolds's grooming consultant; the itchy suits; every set diligently screened for period authenticity. All this puts a heavy burden on the writer, cast and director which -in this case -they carry lightly...."
4260. Kelleher, Terry. "Picks & Pans: Tube." People 53, no. 20 (2000): 31.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews a number of television programs, including one with a Holmes and Doyle connection. Murder Rooms: The Dark Origins of Sherlock Holmes, PBS (Thurs., May 18 and 25, 9 p.m. ET) "To avoid frustration at the end, bear in mind that this intriguing two-part Mystery! is less a conventional whodunit than a piece of literary detective work. The mix of fact and fiction teams young Arthur Conan Doyle (Robin Laing)--the future creator of Sherlock Holmes--and his medical-school mentor Dr. Joseph Bell (Ian Richardson) in an investigation involving gore, mutilation, religious zealotry and an immoral philanthropist (Charles Dance). Though the murder plot has more than its share of complications, concentrate on Doyle's love for a fellow student (Dolly Wells) and his deepening relationship with the masterful Bell, an apparent Holmes prototype who believes in a rigorously rational approach to crime-solving."
4261. Leonard, John. "According to Doyle." New York 33, no. 20 (2000): 100.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews several television programs in the United States. 'Murder Rooms: The Dark Origins of Sherlock Holmes,' 'Growing Up Brady,' 'The Linda McCartney Story.'
4262. Mason, M. S. "Cracking the case of Sherlock Holmes." Christian Science Monitor, March 3, 2000: 17.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of television program. "Creepy as the title may sound, Murder Rooms: The Dark Origins of Sherlock Holmes is a fascinating fictionalized account of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's first interest in criminal investigation. Despite a plot hole or two, it is well-made, eerie, and complicated - like so many of the Holmes cases. Best of all, the two-part Victorian thriller...provides some insight into Doyle's early life and helps explain where the real prototype for his famous detective came from - a genuine pleasure for Holmes fans...."
4263. Paterson, Peter. "Less than ideal Holmes." Daily Mail (London), September 5, 2001: 59.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Murder Rooms: The Dark Beginnings Of Sherlock Holmes (BBC1); Grand Designs (C4). "'Good Lord, Holmes,' said Dr Watson, 'I thought I saw you on the television last night, but it turned out to be a certain Joseph Bell, who claims that you were modelled on him.' 'Bell is a complete imposter, I assure you, my dear Watson,' replied Sherlock Holmes, lighting another opium pipe. 'Only by getting that fellow Ian Richardson to play him did they have the slightest chance of convincing gullible viewers such as yourself that they were seeing the real thing.'..."
4264. ———. "Master of manoeuvres; Television." Daily Mail (London), September 26, 2001: 51.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...Murder Rooms, the Sherlock Holmes stories by proxy, caught up in last night's tale with our current preoccupation with terrorism. But The Kingdom Of Bones was about Irish terrorism, which curiously doesn't seem to count in the new antiterrorist war, and was, besides, safely set in the Victorian period. Its only Arab reference - firmly pre-Islamic - was the discovery of a modern corpse within the linen wrappings of what should have been an Egyptian mummy. Instead of the great fictional detective in person, David Pirie's series gives us his creator, Arthur Conan Doyle, as a junior version of Dr Watson, and Dr Joseph

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Bell, Doyle's Edinburgh University medicine tutor and supposedly the inspiration for Holmes, as - well - Holmes by another name. Doyle was already writing his detective stories while struggling as a general practitioner in Southsea, near Portsmouth, where Murder Rooms is set...."

4265. Rampton, James. "The Case of the Real Sherlock Holmes." Scotland on Sunday, December 19, 1999: 8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "A woman and her young child were visiting an Edinburgh surgery in the 1870s. She was mortified when, within seconds, the doctor had deduced that she came from Fife, had travelled a certain route to the capital, worked in a linoleum factory and had dropped off an older child on the way. Does this supersleuthing sound familiar? It should do. This real-life incident involved Dr Joseph Bell, who is widely seen as the role model for the greatest fictional detective of them all, Sherlock Holmes. Bell was a dazzling lecturer and trailblazing forensic pathologist at Edinburgh University in the latter part of the last century. In 1878, he began teaching a young medical student named Arthur Conan Doyle. Doyle saw Bell as his mentor and became his clerk....Not much more is known about Bell's actual relationship with Doyle - many of the relevant papers have been locked away in an interminable legal battle that has been raging since the Forties. However, these skeletal facts have now been fleshed out by writer David Pirie to create Murder Rooms, a new two-part drama for BBC2...."
4266. Salamon, Julie. "A Blueprint for Imagining Sherlock." The New York Times, May 18, 2000: E5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of "Murder Rooms." "...Over the last century numerous films and then television adaptations have been based on the Sherlock Holmes stories. Yet a new British series has found a clever way to capitalize on Holmes's popularity without trying to reinvent 'The Hound of the Baskervilles' yet again. In fact, Holmes doesn't even appear in 'Murder Rooms: The Dark Origins of Sherlock Holmes,' presented in two hourlong episodes tonight and next Thursday on 'Mystery,' the PBS anthology...."
4267. Walker, Maxton. "The 'real' Sherlock Holmes ; A new BBC drama about the origins of the world's most famous detective mixes fact and fiction until they are indistinguishable." The Guardian (London), January 4, 2000: 29.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "I blame William Shakespeare. Now there was a man who knew how to play fast and loose with the facts when it suited him. Take poor Richard III, for example. Does anybody now imagine him as anything other than a great malevolent bottled spider? And tonight a two-part BBC serial Murder Rooms...which purports to reveal the origins of Sherlock Holmes reinvents the early years of the great detective's creator, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, with a similar healthy disregard of the known facts. The premise is ingenious. In Edinburgh in 1878, young medical student, Conan Doyle, catches the eye of a brilliant surgeon-cum- detective called Joseph Bell (played by Ian Richardson) and becomes his assistant. After helping Bell, who is on the trail of a local serial killer, Conan Doyle is inspired to create the world's most famous detective. It's a producer's dream: a Sherlock Holmes mystery and high-class costume drama rolled into one, without the need to go through the palaver of reinventing the detective for the small screen. But there's one problem: Murder Rooms is mixture of fiction and supposition...."

10P ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- TELEVISION -- MURDER ROOMS: MYSTERIES OF THE REAL SHERLOCK HOLMES (3)

4268. Starkey, Gabrielle. "Murder Rooms: The Dark Origins Of Sherlock Holmes." The Times (London), March 27, 2004: 57.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The third instalment of this brilliantly dark series--based on the premise that Arthur Conan Doyle's professor, Dr Joseph Bell...was the original Sherlock Homes--is also the strangest. The plot revolves around an Ancient Egyptian mummy discovered in a museum which, when unwrapped, turns out to contain a fresh corpse the perfect Holmes-style mystery."
4269. Stasio, Marilyn. "Elementary, My Dear Mr. Conan Doyle." The New York Times, May 14, 2000: 13.63.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Well, it seems that Sherlock Holmes was a real person, after all. His name was Dr. Joseph Bell, a legendary medical diagnostician who taught at the Medical School of the University of Edinburgh when Sir Arthur Conan Doyle enrolled there in 1878 as a medical student. In fact, Dr. Bell chose the young Conan Doyle to be his clerk -- a devoted-slave position that entailed emptying the bloody buckets

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

after an autopsy, trotting after the master on the forensic cases he handled for the Edinburgh police department, and writing down the brilliant principles of criminal deduction that would later issue from the lips of the immortal Sherlock Holmes. If it's proof you want, tune in to 'Murder Rooms: The Dark Beginnings of Sherlock Holmes,' a two-part film..."

4270. Walker, Andrew. "Drama Tells of Holmes's Real Genius." The Scotsman, August 12, 1999: 20.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "As one of the world's greatest fictional detective teams, Sherlock Holmes and Dr Watson have captivated readers for more than a century. Now the real-life inspiration behind the famous sleuth and the man who created the Sherlock Holmes phenomenon is to be put in the spotlight, as the subject of the BBC's latest period drama set in 19th century Edinburgh...."

10P ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- TELEVISION -- SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE CASE OF THE SILK STOCKING (2004) (18)

4271. "Everett steps into Sherlock's 'Stocking'." USA Today, October 21, 2005: E1.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of production.
4272. "Hotstuff." Newsday, Oct 23, 2005: C.04.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Silk Stocking. The body of a woman in rags lies on the muddy shore of the Thames, and Holmes is prompted out of retirement by Dr. Watson, who suspects a more complex kind of foul play than the simple murder of a prostitute. Screenplay by Allan Cubitt, who adapted 'The Hound of the Baskervilles' for 'Masterpiece Theatre' in 2003. Rupert Everett stars as Holmes...."
4273. "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Silk Stocking." People 64, no. 18 (2005): 42.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the television program "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Silk Stocking," starring Rupert Everett.
4274. Andreoli, Richard. "Broadcast steps up." Advocate, no. (2005): 4p.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article presents an overview of several television programs and films about gays and lesbians. Includes reference to Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Silk Stocking (PBS). "Rupert Everett stars as Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's famous Victorian detective in this new original story."
4275. Clark, Pete. "Seasonal choices." Daily Mail (London), December 23, 2004: 2.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Brief note on "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Silk Stocking." "Television viewers feel snugly at home in the fog-filled streets of Sherlock Holmes' London. The fog, widely reviled at the time, is a crucial part of the chilling atmosphere. Even if nothing is happening, it seems that it might at any moment, and if anything does happen, it will be bad. We meet Holmes, icily played by Rupert Everett, in the middle of an extended drugs bender."
4276. Cubitt, Allan. "Holmes is where the heart is." Daily Mail (London), December 11, 2004: 6.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Although I read and hugely enjoyed The Hound Of The Baskervilles, and many other Sherlock Holmes stories as a child, Holmes is actually a very adult character. Sir Arthur Conan Doyle created the great detective as a manic-depressive with a brooding darkness within him. And that complexity is one of the reasons Holmes has become a classic role on stage and screen. The late Jeremy Brett was Sherlock Holmes on TV for a decade, and described the role as tougher than Hamlet or Macbeth. Brett became so obsessed with playing Holmes that he was once discovered outside Doyle's former London house, begging to be released from the spirit of the master detective. In the 1940s, Basil Rathbone made the role his own in radio broadcasts and Hollywood films. For Christmas 2002, I adapted The Hound Of The Baskervilles for BBC television with Richard Roxburgh playing Holmes. This Christmas, my offering is Sherlock Holmes And The Case Of The Silk Stocking, with Rupert Everett in the lead role. He is a fascinating choice...."

4277. James, Martin. "Sherlock Holmes And The Case Of The Silk Stocking." Sunday Times (London), December 26,

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- 2004: 86.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...Rupert Everett makes an excellent Holmes, with Ian Hart a sterling Doctor Watson and Neil Dudgeon an amusing Inspector Lestrade in this melodramatic story of the hunt for a serial killer. Though not based on a Conan Doyle story, Allan Cubitt's wholly original screenplay does remain true to the spirit of the canon...."
4278. Jones, Alison. "Culture: Watching the Detective; Rupert Everett Tells Alison Jones He was Born to Play Sherlock Holmes." Birmingham Post, December 23, 2004: 10.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "'Actors always have certain characters they think they should play. Most people think it is Hamlet; I think it is Sherlock Holmes,' admits Rupert Everett, who gets his wish on Boxing Day when he plays the legendary 'tec in The Case of the Silk Stocking. He certainly looks the part. Long, lean and elegant with a kind of sardonic detachment which perfectly suits a man who is an observer rather than a participant of life...."
4279. Keal, Graham. "Culture: Moving Tribute to Pete and Dud; Sherlock Holmes may be Stuck in a Pea Souper, but Don't Risk Missing." Birmingham Post, December 22, 2004: 11.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...Another outing for Sherlock Holmes sounds rather conventional in comparison, but BBC1's Boxing Day offering, Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Silk Stocking...is actually rather wonderful. Rupert Everett is Holmes in this entirely new story by Allan Cubitt - it's not based on any of Conan Doyle's books. Everet gives his brooding, narcotics-abusing Holmes a marvellously arrogant touch, and he's brave enough not to go out of his way to make Holmes likeable...."
4280. Kington, Miles. "All Roads Lead to Baker Street for Writers." The Independent (London), December 31, 2004: 27.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "On Boxing Day on BBC-TV they showed a Sherlock Holmes adventure called The Case of the Silk Stocking, starring Rupert Everett as the great detective. If you are puzzled not to recognise the name of this Holmes story, puzzle no longer. It was written by Alan Cubitt, and although my wife and I thought Everett very good in the role, and enjoyed some of the goings on, the story was shaping up quite preposterously by the time some visitors rang our door bell, and we missed the final five minutes and never found out what happened. What I was not shocked by was the fact that anyone should attempt to concoct a new story based on 221b Baker Street, even if it did involve inventing a completely new fiancée for Dr Watson. Because although it may seem to be sacrilege to imagine you can do the job as well as Conan Doyle, it must also be one of the most universal instincts among writers....Even Bert Coules has done it. He has adapted all the Holmes stories and the four novels for Radio 4, starring Clive Merrison as Holmes. That's 50 stories or more. And when Mr Coules had no more Holmes yarns to adapt, how did he use the skill and knowledge he had gained from vicariously living in Baker Street for so long? Why, he overcame his respect for Conan Doyle and concocted a clutch of brand- new Holmes stories of his own. I heard some of them on Radio 4, and they weren't bad, even if they were slightly far-fetched and over- wrought...."
4281. McKie, Robin. "OTV: Boxing Day: Pick of the day: Capital Holmes: Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Silk Stocking, BBC1." The Observer, December 19, 2004: 99.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The omens for this year's Sherlock Holmes festive special are scarcely encouraging. The prospect of using an 'original' Holmes mystery by TV playwright Allan Cubitt, rather than picking a Conan Doyle original, is a worry for any aficionado. Nor does Rupert Everett...seem a great choice to play the great detective: a bit too foppish and slight, surely. Holmes should be all brooding menace and frowns. Such prejudices are misplaced, however, for The Case of the Silk Stocking turns out to be a real treat. Everett is especially convincing, turning in a fine, dark performance...."
4282. Pierce, Andrew. "Rupert Everett as Sherlock Holmes." The Times (London), August 24, 2004: 7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Rupert Everett is filming Sherlock Holmes, minus his trademark deerstalker and pipe. The character is not described in the book in this way. It was one actor, Basil Rathbone I think his name was, who invented the hat and the pipe, which have wrongly been associated with the character ever since."
4283. Rabinowitz, Dorothy. "Return of the Master Detective." Wall Street Journal - Eastern Edition 2005: W5.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the television program "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Silk Stocking," starring Rupert Everett and Ian Hart.

4284. Rampton, James. "Arts: Not our Ideal Holmes." The Independent (London), December 16, 2004: 10.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Sherlock Holmes is a national treasure, a literary character who has long enjoyed 'untouchable' status. He arouses especially strong passions among the purists who feel deeply possessive about 'their' man. Mess with him at your peril. So the makers of Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Silk Stocking, BBC1's radical new take on their hero, may be diving for cover after the film goes out on Boxing Day. Ian Hart, who plays the sleuth's companion and chronicler, Dr John Watson, in this new Holmes story written by Allan Cubitt, is certainly bracing himself for some flak from Arthur Conan Doyle devotees...."
4285. Ramsey, Terry. "Pick of the Day." The Evening Standard (London), December 24, 2004: 42.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Silk Stocking. "Was there ever such a brooding, handsome and strangely sexy Sherlock Holmes as this new version? The great Victorian detective is usually portrayed as an academic and austere individual. But in the hands of British Hollywood star Rupert Everett (right) he maintains these qualities while gaining a hint of another fictional hero, the dark and romantic Heathcliffe. Albeit a version of Heathcliffe who wears a dapper hat and polished shoes...."
4286. Rebello, Stephen. "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Silk Stocking." Advocate, no. 949 (2005): 64.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the television program 'Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Silk Stocking' directed by Simon Cellan Jones and starring Rupert Everett.
4287. Stasio, Marilyn. "Attention, Holmes Devotees: Baker Street Is Irregular." New York Times, October 22, 2005: B7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Provides information about the production of the Sherlock Holmes film "Masterpiece Theater," starring Rupert Everett and Ian Hart in the U.S.
4288. Taylor, D. J. "Sherlock Holmes is More than a Brand Name." The Independent (London), August 31, 2004: 33.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "We should be grateful, in a landscape crowded out with the likes of Big Brother and TV's Naughtiest Blunders 14, that any literary classic gets dramatised for the small screen these days. Even so, I was slightly alarmed to discover the BBC's intentions with regard to its latest remake of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's immortal Sherlock Holmes. The attempt to return Baker Street's cadaverous, cocaine-injecting sleuth to the forefront of the public consciousness is to be called The Return of Sherlock Holmes, and the choice of Rupert Everett as the leading man is, according to the pundits, sure to upset the diehard fan...."

10P ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- TELEVISION -- SHERLOCK HOLMES IN THE 22ND CENTURY (6)

4289. "Natpe Notes." Electronic Media 22, no. 3 (2003): 79.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents news briefs related to the National Association of Television Program Executives's convention in the U.S. as of January 2003. Mentions 'Sherlock Holmes in the 22nd Century.'
4290. Anderson, William W. "Establishing a Protocol for Evaluating Prosocial Merit in Children's E/I Television Programs." Simile 7, no. 2 (2007): 1-14.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "This study used content analysis methodology to examine difference in levels of prosocial elements within similar E/I classified children's television series, Nickelodeon's Rugrats and PBS's Arthur, and compare them against levels of prosociality in two non E/I programs, The Cosby Show and The Simpsons, established in a previous research study." Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...A quick sampling of what broadcasters exhibit as 'educational' or 'informative' (E/I) children's television in 2007 can truly be an eye-opening experience. Few would question the merit of offerings such as Mister Roger's Neighborhood or Liberty's Kids displaying E/I badges. Indeed, programs such as The Littles and Sherlock Holmes in the 22nd Century arguably could qualify for inclusion due to their respective roots in classic literature. However, when broadcasters (who, themselves, assign E/I status to their offerings) slip in programs

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

such as Saved by the Bell, The Smurfs, and Archie's Weird Mysteries, it becomes patently obvious that rules for membership within the E/I club are lax, to say the least...."

4291. Pursell, Chris. "Stars turned into 'Mutants'." Electronic Media 20, no. 23 (2001): 3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on the deals of Tribune Entertainment for the 2001 fall television season in the United States. Includes a reference to Holmes. "...Tribune Entertainment has also acquired distribution rights to 26 episodes of half-hour animated children's program 'Sherlock Holmes in the 22nd Century' from The WB."
4292. Spring, Greg. "Bohbot to package DIC's 'Mummies Alive.'." Electronic Media 17, no. 1 (1998): 1A.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // States that DIC Entertainment will increase the viewing of the television program 'Mummies Alive' to five days a week, while switching distributors from Claster Television to Bohbot Entertainment. What Bohbot will offer; Comments from Andy Heyward, president and chief executive officer of DIC; Indepth look at the agreement. Includes a reference to Holmes. "...For the 1999 season, DIC is working on the animated kids series 'Sherlock Holmes in the 22nd Century,' which is a co-production with Scottish TV and ITV...."
4293. ———. "Pax animates afternoons." Electronic Media 18, no. 15 (1999): 8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports that American network Pax TV has ordered two animated children's strips from DIC Entertainment for airing in the fall of 1999. Airing of 'Archie's Weird Mysteries' and 'Sherlock Holmes in the 22nd Century'; Scheduling for the programs.
4294. Spring, Greg, and Michael Schneider. "Hollywood notes. (Cover story)." Electronic Media 18, no. 32 (1999): 34.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on developments related to television broadcasting in the United States as of the week of August 9, 1999. Includes a reference to Holmes. "...Fox Kids Network has announced its fall 1999 Saturday morning lineup, which consists almost entirely of new series. The morning kicks off at 8 a.m. with the new series 'Sherlock Holmes in the 22nd Century.'"

10P ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- TELEVISION -- STAR TREK (4)

4295. Harada, Kakuko. "Holmes and Spock, how are they related?" Shoso-In Bulletin 5, no. (1995): 30-32.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4296. Sarantakes, Nicholas Evan. "Cold War Pop Culture and the Image of U.S. Foreign Policy: The Perspective of the Original Star Trek Series." Journal of Cold War Studies 7, no. 4 (2005): 74-103.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Contains references to Doyle and Holmes. "...The prime directive became a troublesome and contradictory element in the stories the series presented. The idea, at its core, ran counter to the Wilsonian impulse that was so pronounced in U.S. foreign policy during the administrations of John F. Kennedy and Lyndon Johnson--an impulse whereby the United States sought to remake the world in its own image. On the other hand, as Jon Wagner and Jan Lundeen have pointed out, in episode after episode the main characters implement the concept in radically different, even contradictory, ways. These inconsistencies were the product of two factors. First, television is a collective effort, and many individuals contributed to the original Star Trek series during its run of three years. Mistakes or logical inconsistencies were almost inevitable, and sometimes story ideas and concepts that had little to do with issues of world affairs or colonialism ran afoul of the prime directive. (The general problem is not limited to works produced in a collective manner. Arthur Conan Doyle's stories and novels about Sherlock Holmes provide many classic examples of internal inconsistency created by an individual author.)..."
4297. Zimmerman, Herman, and Philip Thomas Edgerly. "Architrek: Designing generations." Omni 17, no. 3 (1994): 50.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the work of production designer Herman Zimmerman on the set of the film 'Star Trek: Generations.' Various ways that Zimmerman seeks to stimulate his imagination during the set creation process; Comments from him about his work. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...The

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

holodeck is pure joy for a designer, because it is a place where you can go to get away from the starship and usual science-fiction locations. You can design an exterior in a garden. as we did in the Next Generation pilot, 'Encounter at Farpoint.' You can be taken back to merry old England; to the Wild West; to Sherlock Holmes' study; or to a card game with Einstein, Newton, and Stephen Hawking...."

4298. Zoglin, Richard, and Dan Cray. "Trekking onward. (Cover story)." Time 144, no. 22 (1994): 72.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Features the Star Trek phenomenon, the most enduring and all-embracing pop-culture marvel of our time. The television series 'Star Trek: The Next Generation' and 'Deep Space Nine'; The six 'Star Trek' movies; Revenues from 'Trek'-related merchandise; 'Star Trek: Generations,' with William Shatner and Patrick Stewart; History of the series. INSETS: Star Trek: The timeline; Reconfigure the modulators! (techno-babble), by Michael Okuda. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...The mother ship of all TV cult hits seems poised to boldly go where none has gone before: into eternity. For all that, Star Trek has never won much respect. In the realm of long-running entertainment phenoms, Sherlock Holmes has more history; James Bond, more class; Star Wars and Indiana Jones, more cinematic cachet. And while no one sneers at the Baker Street Irregulars, noninitiates consider Trekkies to be pretty odd...."

10P ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- TELEVISION -- THE GREAT DETECTIVES
(4)

4299. "Detective Fiction: It's Quite Elementary, My Dear Nigel; The Great Detectives BBC2, 8.00pm." Daily Record, May 15, 1999: 29.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Detective fiction is the most popular genre of literature. Fictional detectives Sherlock Holmes, Hercule Poirot, Philip Marlowe and Inspector Maigret have not only stood the test of time, but have also been the inspiration for countless detectives who populate today's fiction on film and television. In tonight's episode, The Mysterious Affair Of Sherlock Holmes And The Visionary Doctor, [Nigel] Williams sets out to investigate why, over 100 years since his first appearance, Sherlock Holmes remains so popular."
4300. "Super sleuths." The Evening Post (Wellington), October 22, 2001: 15.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Detective fiction is the most popular genre of literature. The Great Detectives explores the world's most famous sleuths and their creators. Fictional detectives Sherlock Holmes, Hercule Poirot, Philip Marlowe and Inspector Maigret have been the inspiration for a myriad of detectives who populate today's fiction. Author Nigel Williams believes detective fiction has gripped readers throughout the world for more than 100 years. 'From the Victorian world of Sherlock Holmes, through to the hard-boiled mean streets of Philip Marlowe, to the best-selling contemporary crime stories, the genre - and the detectives - have endured. In The Great Detectives we look at the founding fathers, the inspiration for generations of detectives and detective writers,' he says. This episode looks at Philip Marlowe...."
4301. Paterson, Peter. "Crime Isn't What It Was; Touching Evil (ITV); Great Detectives: (BBC2); Jane Russell (BBC2)." Daily Mail (London), May 17, 1999: 49.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "What a huge gap exists between the traditional detective story and the kind of crime thriller that has, to a large extent, displaced it on television. Last night, we were invited to celebrate the immortal detective, Sherlock Holmes, and his creator, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, before we were plunged into the bloodstained horrors of Touching Evil, a typical product of our own age. It only added to the confusion - as well as emphasised a loss of intelligence in our attitude to crime and criminals - that nearly all the regular characters in Touching Evil had the noble title of detective, yet behaved in a fashion that would probably have been repugnant to the likes of Holmes...."
4302. Rampton, James. "Elementary School; Detective Fiction has a Lot to Teach Us about Old-Fashioned Morals." The Independent (London), May 15, 1999: 47.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Worldwide, the novels of Agatha Christie outsell everything apart from The Bible. Meanwhile, letters from Sherlock Holmes fans all over the globe still pour in to 221b Baker Street. A recent missive from the police force in Worth, Illinois, asked for the detective's help with an unsolved murder. But why are we so in thrall to such strange figures as Poirot and Holmes with their ridiculous moustaches,

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

deer-stalkers and tics? Why do we have bookshops such as Murder One, entirely devoted to the single genre of detective fiction? In The Great Detectives, a new four-part series for BBC2, the author Nigel Williams...whips out his magnifying-glass and attempts to get to the bottom of 'The Mystery of The Popular Sleuth' by investigating, in turn, Sherlock Holmes, Hercule Poirot, Philip Marlowe and Jules Maigret...."

10P ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- TELEVISION -- THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES (1)

4303. "Tv Tips." NEA Today 19, no. 2 (2000): 44.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews several television programs in the United States. Includes Odyssey's production of the Hound. "Sir Henry Baskerville returns to his ancestral home after his uncle suffers a mysterious death, and while many in the village believe his death was the result of a Baskerville family curse, Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson hurry to sort through the suspects and save Sir Henry from an untimely death. KIDSNET is producing free educator guides designed for high school English teachers."

10P ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- TELEVISION -- THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES (2000) (2)

4304. "Sherlock on the prowl again." New Straits Times (Malaysia), February 18, 2001: 18.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The Hound Of The Baskervilles, which premiered on Hallmark was the first story to resurrect Sherlock Holmes. The story is an inspired interpretation of the 1902 Doyle masterpiece that re-imagines the inscrutable Holmes and his latest case in a style faithful to the original. In the fifth re-telling of The Hound Of The Baskervilles there's plenty of vintage Doyle intrigue, amusing wordplay, plot twists, and nail-biting suspense to satisfy both the hardcore Holmes fan and newcomers alike....Matt Frewer, a classically trained actor, turns in a surprisingly accomplished performance as the Baker Street detective, delivering lines with the modest irony that Holmes fans love. Frewer is supported by Kenneth Welsh (as the amenable Dr Watson) and Jason London, last seen in Hallmark's Jason And The Argonauts, as Sir Henry, the latest heir apparent to the Baskerville estate - and whose life is on the line...."

4305. Curran, Peggy. "Hound of the Baskervilles puts a new leash on Holmes, Watson." The Gazette (Montreal), October 25, 2000: G7.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The Hound of the Baskervilles has lost one of his contact lenses. Eno, a large German shepherd who snarls and growls on cue, has been made up to look like Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's fictional 'monstrous hound from Hell.' With his coat matted and eyes glowing with the magic of red contacts, he does a pretty convincing job. Until one of the lenses pops out, and crew members have to get down on all fours to search for it while their canine star naps in his trailer. Ah, the glamour of film-making. The first instalment in CTV's new take on the classic Sherlock Holmes mysteries, The Hound of the Baskervilles, airs Saturday at 9 p.m., one of a slew of spooky specials on tap to coincide with Halloween. Matt Frewer plays Sherlock Holmes to Kenneth Welsh's Dr. Watson...."

10P ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- TELEVISION -- THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES (2002) (6)

4306. "Christmas TV: the Dark Side of Sherlock Holmes." Belfast News Letter (Northern Ireland), December 20, 2002: 6.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Sherlock Holmes and his loyal companion Dr Watson are back on the trail of The Hound Of The Baskervilles. But those fans expecting a quaint, pipe-smoking detective in this new production might be in for a few surprises. The well-known detective will be hounding out the culprit on BBC One on Boxing Day and viewers will get to see him injecting morphine into his arm. Australian actor Richard Roxburgh, who plays Holmes, thinks that there is nothing wrong in revealing the super sleuth's darker side...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

4307. Barnes, Jon. "A beast just for Christmas." Tls, no. (2002): 16.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the television film 'The Hound of the Baskervilles,' starring Richard Roxburgh and Ian Hart as Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson.
4308. Boshra, Basem. "Baskerville hound barks again: First-class actors star in BBC adaptation of the classic Sherlock Holmes mystery." The Gazette (Montreal), November 18, 2002: D6.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "What to watch: Richard Roxburgh (Moulin Rouge) stars as the legendary Sherlock Holmes and Ian Hart (Harry Potter and the Philosopher's Stone) is his loyal sidekick, Dr. Watson, in a faithful, stylish new BBC adaptation of The Hound of the Baskervilles.... A bevy of top-shelf Brit character actors, including Richard E. Grant, Matt Day and John Nettles, provides admirable support in this delightful version of the Sir Arthur Conan Doyle tale...."
4309. Jury, Louise. "Holmes Wears Mantle of Action Hero in Hi-Tech BBC Thriller." The Independent (London), April 2, 2002: 8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Sherlock Holmes and his sidekick Dr Watson are to be transformed from the intrepid sleuths of modern imagination into muscular men of action in a remake of one of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's classic stories. The Hound of the Baskervilles is to be filmed for a one-off BBC drama this spring, with its leading characters played by the youngest actors since the detective duo were first brought to the screen more than 60 years ago. For those weaned on the likes of Basil Rathbone or Nigel Bruce, the latest castings may appear yet another step in the march of youthful vigour over the wisdom of age. However, the production, by the independent company Tiger Aspect, will take the much-adapted story closer to the original, with Holmes and Watson portrayed as young and athletic men in their mid-30s in contrast to the mature and paternalistic figures of most screen versions. Richard Roxburgh, 40, who played the Duke in the film Moulin Rouge, will star as Holmes while Ian Hart, 38, who portrayed Quill in Harry Potter and the Philosopher's Stone, will be Dr Watson...."
4310. Leonard, Tom. "BBC puts youthful slant on Hound of the Baskervilles." The Daily Telegraph (London), April 01, 2002: 13.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Sherlock Holmes and Dr Watson will be portrayed as athletic young men in their mid-thirties in a glossy new BBC version of The Hound of the Baskervilles. Richard Roxburgh, 40, and Ian Hart, 38 - who played Professor Quirrell in the Harry Potter film - will be the youngest Holmes and Watson since the pair first appeared on screen more than 60 years ago...."
4311. Rees, Jasper. "The good, the bad and the ugly." The Times (London), December 21, 2002: 38.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Richard Roxburgh was the evil Duke in Moulin Rouge, and next year will carry out more devilish work on our cinema screens as Dracula and Moriarty. But this Christmas he joins the other side, as a surprisingly sexy Sherlock Holmes..."

10P ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- TELEVISION -- THE LOST WORLD (23)

4312. "MIP-TV listings." Electronic Media 18, no. 15 (1999): 42.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents information on television programs offered at the 1999 MIP TV gathering. Includes two listings for Doyle's The Lost World.
4313. Ault, Susanne. "Familiarity breeds success." Broadcasting & Cable 131, no. 3 (2001): 74.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Features the company New Line Television in the United States. Conversion of rejected scripts of movies into television syndicated series; Production of the action series 'Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's The Lost World'; Introduction the series 'Hard Knox.'
4314. Ault, Susan. "Lost World Isn't." Broadcasting & Cable 131, no. 38 (2001): 4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports the status of television program 'Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's The Lost World' in the United States. Impact of the bankruptcy of production partner Telescene; Role of Over the Hill

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Gang on the series; Selling of the off-syndication rights to TNT television network.

4315. Clark, Samantha. "Dino might." Video Business 23, no. 43 (2003): 20-20.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on television programs in the U.S. to be released on DVD. Release date of "Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's The Lost World: Season One," from Image; Price of the disc set of "Jeremiah" from MGM; DVD offerings of Paramount.
4316. Frankel, Daniel. "From big screen to small screen." Electronic Media 18, no. 40 (1999): 2.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents an interview with film director John Landis. Foray into syndicated television programs in the United States; Rationale for selecting Arthur Conan Doyle's 'The Lost World' as a television series; Opinion on media consolidation.
4317. ———. "Hollywood Notes." Electronic Media 18, no. 49 (1999): 62.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Provides updates on the entertainment industry in the United States, including a reference to Doyle. "...New Line Television is set to bring another weekly syndicated action series to NATPE this January. Like the internationally produced 'Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's The Lost World,' 'Matthew Blackheart: Monster Smasher' is billed as an 'Action Adventure Network presentation of a Telescene Production.' And also like 'Lost World,' 'Monster Smasher' will have a big-name executive producer--in this case, Richard Donner. New Line sources said a demo tape is being pieced together for NATPE, where it will be pitched to large station groups, including Tribune Broadcasting Co...."
4318. ———. "Talk shows clear NATPE." Electronic Media 19, no. 5 (2000): 1A.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on the durability of the hour-long syndicated daytime talk show format in the United States. Includes notes on other television shows including one with a Doyle reference. "...New Line Television also announced a series of upgrades and clearances for new and returning programs, with the hour-long weekly 'Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's The Lost World' gaining renewals on Wilkes-Barre, Pa.'s WNEP-TV; Tulsa, Okla.'s KOKI-TV; and Hartford, Conn.'s WBNE-TV...."
4319. Freeman, Michael, and Chris Pursell. "Hollywood Notes." Electronic Media 20, no. 4 (2001): 95.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents news items related to television programs in the United States as of January 22, 2001. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...New Line Television's weekly action hour 'Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's The Lost World' has been renewed for its third season on the station group, with more than 75 percent of the country on board for another year of the show...."
4320. Gray, John. "Behind closed doors." Canadian Business 73, no. 22 (2000): 36.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the scandals and inefficiencies in the board of directors at many Canadian companies. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...But Cinar is not the only Canadian media company that has come under scrutiny this year. Montreal-based Telescene Film Group Inc. (TSE: TFG.B) has seen its stock price crumble from a high of $12.75 just last year to 70(cents) on Nov. 9. According to recent financial statements, the producer of such low-budget TV shows as Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's The Lost World and Big Wolf on Campus is teetering on the brink of financial ruin...."
4321. Hall, Lee. "DirecTV signs DBS originals." Electronic Media 16, no. 47 (1997): 3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports the production alliance DirecTV and Action Adventure Network for several television series. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...The first series, expected to be a remake of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's 'The Lost World,' will debut in mid-1998...."
4322. Ingrassia, Joanne. "Sellers pitch movies, kids series." Electronic Media 19, no. 4 (2000): 110.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on the United States-based National Association of Television Program Executives' planned 2000 convention. Canada-based television production companies' plan to market their productions during the event; Movies to be marketed by Canada-based Telescene Film Group. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...While the original plan was to produce eight pilots over two years to try to get two series, AAN has already struck gold with 'Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's The Lost World' and 'Matthew Blackheart: Monster Smasher,' now both available in series...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

4323. Lafayette, Jon, David Hatch, Leslie Ryan, Daniel Frankel, Jim McConville, and Diane Mermigas. "Electronic Media focused on a dozen industry leaders last year. Here's a look at the class of '99 today." Electronic Media 19, no. 4 (2000): 86.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Profiles several broadcasting industry executives in the United States as of January 24, 2000. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...David Tenzer is unfazed by the shrinking syndicated action hour market; in 1999 he kept on beating the odds by putting together new projects amid shrinking ratings points and soaring costs. After assembling a web of international financing and big-name producing talent to create New Line Television's 'Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's The Lost World' for fall 1999, Mr. Tenzer, a TV packaging agent for Creative Artists Agency, embarked on a similar road for fall 2000...."
4324. Pursell, Chris. "Clearances add up with WB 100+." Electronic Media 20, no. 4 (2001): 6.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on the television programs acquired by WB 100+ Station Group in the United States. Includes a reference to Doyle. "...In the first-run action genre, the group has added New Line's upcoming hour, 'Hard Knox,' and renewed the company's 'Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's The Lost World' for a third season."
4325. ———. "Weekly hours gain steam for NATPE." Electronic Media 21, no. 2 (2002): 1A.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports the rescheduling of television programs in the United States. Includes a reference to Doyle. "...New Line has announced that it will extend its partnership with Tribune's station group on the nationally syndicated series, 'Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's The Lost World.'" With more than 70 percent of the country on board going into the National Association of Television Program Executives convention, the syndicator gave an early green light to a fourth season of the weekly series on stations such as New York's WPIX-TV, Los Angeles' KTLA-TV and Chicago's WGN-TV...." Also includes a photograph dealing with the series.
4326. Spring, Greg. "The best of both 'Lost Worlds'." Electronic Media 18, no. 17 (1999): 8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on New Line Television's syndication of the television program 'Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's The Lost World,' produced by Village Roadshow Pictures and Telescene Film Group. DirecTV's satellite broadcast of the program before the network broadcast.
4327. ———. "Digital PPV network is all action-adventure." Electronic Media 17, no. 11 (1998): D8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents information on the collaboration of DirecTV and a group of Hollywood producers to create a pay-per view network. Information on the network; Details on its action adventure theme; Identification of some of the big name Hollywood directors that are involved; How the network makes other programming options more viable; Reference to some of the shows that are being produced for the network. Includes a reference to Doyle. "...Several series have already been inked, including: 'Monster Smasher' from William Peter Blatty ('Exorcist'); 'The Further Adventures of Gulliver's Travels' from Steven deSouza ('Die Hard'); a remake of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's 'The Lost World'; and Mr. Coppola's contemporary 'Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde' remake based in Hong Kong...."
4328. ———. "The insider." Electronic Media 18, no. 29 (1999): 8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents news items related to mass media in the United States as of July 19, 1999. Includes a reference to Doyle. "...John Landis, executive producer of 'Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's The Lost World,' says much has been done on the new series to keep it as true to the original work as possible, but some modifications had to be made. In the book, for example, the lost adventurers eventually make it back home -- a sure killer for an ongoing series. There was one other small change for the male-oriented action series as well, Mr. Landis says, pointing to such sexy cast members as Rachel Blakely and Jennifer O'Dell. 'The book didn't have any women,' he says...."
4329. ———. "The insider." Electronic Media 18, no. 3 (1999): 8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents news items pertaining to the broadcasting industry in the United States for the week of January 18, 1999. Includes the premiere of DirecTV's television program 'Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's The Lost World'; National Association of Broadcasters' opposition against a Federal Communications

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Commission program to create low-power radio stations.

4330. ———. "New line in '99 has a new line." Electronic Media 18, no. 4 (1999): 121.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on the return of New Line Television to the syndication marketplace by distributing its first weekly action 'Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's The Lost World.' Series capping a developing season for the producer; Evolving role of the company as tied to the ever-changing parentage.
4331. Spring, Greg, and Michael Schneider. "Hollywood notes." Electronic Media 18, no. 30 (1999): 32.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on developments related to television broadcasting in the United States as of July 26, 1999. Includes a reference to Doyle. "DirecTV will premiere the first of 20 episodes of 'Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's The Lost World' on June 30, marking the satellite broadcaster's first foray into original series as well as the first time a series has been offered in pay-per-view. The series will run from July 1999 to February 2000 and be available from 7 p.m. to 6 a.m. (ET) Monday through Friday, and 24 hours on weekends. The cost per viewing is $1.49."
4332. ———. "Syndicators' Combination Platter." Electronic Media 18, no. 24 (1999): 56.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Looks into the growing popularity of the use of combination spots among television syndicators. Factors which influence the use of combination spots; Combination spot created by Worldvision Enterprises for its 'Judge Judy' and 'Judge Joe Brown' shows; Other developments concerning syndication include New Line Television's offer of a watch-and-win sweepstakes for 'Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's The Lost World.'
4333. Stein, Joel, and Jeanne McDowell. "Babe Tube." Time 154, no. 19 (1999): 133.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the popularity of female action television programs as of November 1999. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Likewise, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's The Lost World, produced by Animal House director John Landis and featuring Jennifer O'Dell, needs to up the babe quotient and tone down the silly adventure plots. But a couple of shows for next year look to have more potential. Former Baywatch star Gena Lee Nolin will star in Sheena, Queen of the Jungle, in which she will morph her body into animals'. That can't be bad. The only catch is that Sheena will focus on saving the environment, which means the show will have to include a lot of leopard morphs to make it worth watching...."
4334. Tarr, Greg. "DBS Rivals Square Off At SBCA Event." TWICE: This Week in Consumer Electronics 14, no. 17 (1999): 6.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the debate between DirecTv chief Eddy Hartenstein and EchoStar chief Charlie Ergen over proposals for new home satellite legislation in the United States. Sidelights at the 1999 Satellite Broadcasting & Communications Association show; Ergen's criticism of DirecTv's compromise agreement with the National Association of Broadcasters. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...In other news, DirecTv announced several programming exclusives designed to make the satellite platform more attractive to potential subscribers. Starting July 30, DirecTv and the Action Adventure Network will premiere the first episode of a pay-per-view series based on John Landis and Leslie Belzberg's film adaptation of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's The Lost World...."

10P ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- TELEVISION -- THE MAN WHO LOVED SHERLOCK HOLMES (4)

4335. Jackson, James. "Multichannel Choice." The Times (London), Dec 24, 2005: 66.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "An evening dedicated to the sleuth begins with The Man Who Loved Sherlock Holmes, a curious, far-from-elementary investigation into the demise of Richard Lancelyn Green, a leading Holmes expert. Having been embroiled in wrangles over the Conan Doyle archive, his death under strange circumstances in March 2004 revived talk of a 'Sir Arthur Conan Doyle curse', and in exploring his fate the programme reveals the obsessive world of Holmes aficionados. Also tonight, last Christmas's BBC One special, with Rupert Everett making a youthful Holmes."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

4336. McNeil, Robert. "TV Review: A mystery Holmes would have loved." The Scotsman, Dec 27, 2005: 26.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "In March 2004, Richard Lancelyn Green died in mysterious circumstances. The wealthy Sherlock Holmes expert had been garrotted with a bootlace tightened by a wooden spoon. It was a great story for the press but, obviously, a tragedy for his family and friends. The Holmes angle trivialised the awful fact of his death, but it had also been the obsession of his life. The Man Who Loved Sherlock Holmes, narrated by Stephen Fry, traced Green's life while worrying away at his death. The coroner recorded an open verdict, though suicide was thought likely. Or was it murder? It's trite to suggest Holmes would have loved this mystery but, as my old gran never said, there's truth in trite...."
4337. Ramsey, Terry. "Pick of the Day." Evening Standard (London), Dec 23, 2005: 38.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The Man Who Loved Sherlock Holmes 9pm, BBC4 The world's biggest Sherlock Holmes fan, Richard Lancelyn Green, was found dead in his flat in March 2004, garrotted by a bootlace tightened by a wooden spoon. Did the 50-year-old millionaire bachelor commit suicide or was he murdered? This Stephen Fry-narrated documentary digs deep into the origin of a borderline barking obsession with the fictional detective before outlining some very strange conspiracy theories."
4338. Wright, Jonathan. "The Guide: Television and Radio: Television: Boxing Day: Watch this: The Man Who Loved Sherlock Holmes 9pm, BBC4." The Guardian (London), Dec 24, 2005: 71.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "In March 2004, Richard Lancelyn Green was found dead, garrotted by a bootlace tightened with a wooden spoon. Millionaire Green was the world's foremost Sherlock Holmes expert, a man whose collection of Conan Doyle memorabilia was valued at pounds 2m when it was bequeathed to Portsmouth Library Service. But was Green's death a case of suicide or was it, as some have speculated, somehow related to an auction of Conan Doyle's so-called 'lost papers' at Christie's? A portrait of the kind of mystery that Holmes himself might have investigated, and a glimpse into the obsessive world of Sherlockians."

10P ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- TELEVISION -- THE STRANGE CASE OF SHERLOCK HOLMES AND ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE (16)

4339. "Doyle drama." Bookseller, no. 5187 (2005): 50.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reports that author Arthur Conan Doyle is to be the subject of a new BBC 2 feature-length drama. To be screened during the week commencing 23rd July, "The Strange Case of Sherlock Holmes and Arthur Conan Doyle" will dramatise the life of the writer and his struggle with the detective he created. It features a strong cast of British and Irish acting talent including Douglas Henshall, Emily Blunt and Sinead Cusack.
4340. "G2: Lawson on TV: The man who wouldn't die." The Guardian (London), July 25, 2005: 17.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Just a few weeks after the publication of Julian Barnes's splendid novel about [Arthur Conan Doyle] as a real-life detective comes David Pirie's drama The Strange Case of Sherlock Holmes and Arthur Conan Doyle. This is the latest biographical variation from Pirie who explored in a previous film Doyle's relationship with the apparent model for [Holmes]: the Scottish doctor, Sir Joseph Bell."
4341. "Tv Mail: Conan the Holmes Wrecker." Birmingham Evening Mail, July 27, 2005: 17.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The Strange Case of Sherlock Holmes and Arthur Conan Doyle (BBC2, 9pm) dramatises the birth of the sleuth. Written by David Pirie (Murder Rooms, The Woman In White), this is an exploration of the dark family past which drove Arthur Conan Doyle to create the world-famous detective...and then murder him!..."
4342. "TV: Pick of the Day: Holmes Death Drama Worth a Closer Look." The Mirror, July 27, 2005: 1.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The Strange Case Of Sherlock Holmes And Arthur Conan Doyle, BBC2, 9pm. His death made headline news. But what prompted Arthur Conan Doyle to kill off Sherlock Holmes at the very height of the fictional detective's popularity? As David Pirie's gripping, feature-length drama suggests, Holmes sprang from the most troubled secret corners of Doyle's mind. With death threats and letters from outraged readers pouring in, his publisher despaired of Doyle's (played by Douglas Henshall) decision to kill his golden

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

goose...."

4343. Amos, Ilona. "Television: Looking for Clues." Scotland on Sunday, July 24, 2005: 39.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "It's said that you must suffer for your art, but you must surely have to be passionate about your work to grow a moustache in order to perform your duties. It seems that a dislike for glue and heavy make-up meant that this is exactly what our Dougie Henshall did for his latest role, as Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, creator of the legendary sleuth Sherlock Holmes. We know that Doyle, a trained doctor, was fascinated by the macabre, but most of us probably picture him as a traditional Victorian gentleman, getting on in years and enjoying the success of his penmanship. But in The Strange Case of Sherlock Holmes and Arthur Conan Doyle, which is largely based on fact, we find the writer as an energetic 33-year-old struggling to deal with a dark secret that threatens to destroy him...."

4344. Billen, Stephanie. "Pick of the day a tale of mystery: The Strange Case of Sherlock Holmes." The Observer, no. (2005): 81.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "This handsome drama by David Pirie ( Murder Rooms, The Woman in White ) ultimately fails to live up to its considerable promise. The opening scene, a rich Fanny and Alexander -style family Christmas, introduces us to the young Conan Doyle, basking in his popularity as the creator of Sherlock Holmes. His world is about to fall apart, however, with the death of his father in an asylum and the shock diagnosis of consumption in his wife. Convinced that he is being followed and haunted by images of severed ears (a motif from one of his stories), Doyle becomes increasingly paranoid and determines to kill off his fictional detective: 'If I don't finish him, he could finish me....'"

4345. Fowler, Alice. "Who killed Sherlock Holmes?" Daily Mail (London), July 9, 2005: 11.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Walking down a London street, Arthur Conan Doyle's eye is caught by a stranger, his face in shadow. When the man turns, Conan Doyle sees he is grotesquely mutilated: one ear ripped clean away, his face wet with blood. An instant later, the man - if he existed at all - is gone. At the height of his literary success, the creator of Sherlock Holmes is left doubting his own sanity. For Conan Doyle, as depicted in a new BBC drama, such moments of Gothic horror were all too common. In The Strange Case Of Sherlock Holmes Arthur Conan Doyle, the bestselling author - played by Douglas Henshall - is a troubled man, at war with the fictional detective who made his name. Set in the 1890s, it describes a time in Conan Doyle's life when the pressures of success, coupled with deep personal trauma, threatened to destroy him...."

4346. Grant, Graham. "Why was Sherlock Holmes killed off in his prime? The true answer is less than elementary." Daily Mail (London), January 8, 2005: 38-39.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...Browsing through the deluge of angry letters from loyal readers in the pages of national newspapers that appeared after Holmes's 'death', Conan Doyle was also grieving not just for Holmes, but also for his father, Charles Altamont Doyle....Now the story of Conan Doyle's 'lost' father is to be explored in a new BBC drama, which begins shooting soon. The Strange Case of Sherlock Holmes and Arthur Conan Doyle, starring Dundonian Brian Cox as the author's mentor, the surgeon Joseph Bell, and Douglas Henshall as Holmes, aims to explain why Conan Doyle killed off his celebrated detective...."

4347. Hendry, Steve. "Television : Pick of the Week: Conan Doyle Role is Elementary for Doug." Sunday Mail, July 24, 2005: 15.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Sir Arthur Conan Doyle gave life to the world's most famous private detective, Sherlock Holmes And it was the hand of the Scots author which consigned the Baker Street sleuth to death at the height of his popularity in 1893. The decision to kill-off Holmes shocked the world and spawned headlines and hate mail. And public pressure famously forced Conan Doyle to bring Holmes back to life. Just why the writer would even contemplate committing such a murderous act is at the heart of new drama The Strange Case Of Sherlock Holmes And Arthur Conan Doyle. It was the intriguing tale behind the real-life mystery which convinced Douglas Henshall to play Conan Doyle...."

4348. Laws, Roz. "The Week: Murder Mystery; Why Conan Doyle Killed Off Sherlock Holmes." Sunday Mercury, July 24, 2005: 8.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Imagine the fuss if TV executives decided to axe Coronation Street. Or if JK

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Rowling killed off Harry Potter. That's the modern-day equivalent of what happened in 1893 when Arthur Conan Doyle shocked his fans. He sent his infamous creation of Sherlock Holmes to his death at the Reichenbach Falls, prompting public outrage, scandalised headlines in the press and even hate mail. The backlash was so great that he was later forced to resurrect his hero. Now a new feature-length drama, The Strange Case Of Sherlock Holmes And Arthur Conan Doyle (BBC2, Wednesday), shows what was in Doyle's mind when he made the decision...."

4349. Paterson, Peter. "Conan the barbarian." Daily Mail (London), July 28, 2005: 53.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The Strange Case Of Sherlock Holmes And Arthur Conan Doyle (BBC2). "To make a story from the life of a real historical character, it is usually best to ignore the obvious and attribute his actions and behaviour to the most complicated explanation. Especially if you are contracted to fill 90 minutes of primetime TV. Filling the allotted span seemed to be a burden for last night's psychodrama, The Strange Case Of Sherlock Holmes And Arthur Conan Doyle...."

4350. Pendreigh, Brian. "Family's 'shame' gave birth to Sherlock Holmes; New TV drama claims drunken father was Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's model for his drug-abusing detective." The Sunday Herald, November 28, 2004: 7.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "A new television drama about Sherlock Holmes starring some of Scotland's top acting talent will suggest the fictional detective was based on author Arthur Conan Doyle's alcoholic father. The similarities between Holmes and Charles Doyle were never acknowledged by the author, who enjoyed fame and fortune while his father was secretly shut away in a mental institution. The drama's producer, Richard Downes, believes Charles Doyle's death in 1893 may have caused Conan Doyle to suffer a nervous breakdown and kill off his father's literary alter ego - only to resurrect him eight years later after sorting out his own personal demons...."

4351. ———. "What's the big Holmes secret? It's elementary; New BBC drama claims Conan Doyle's alcoholic father explains flaws in the great detective." Mail on Sunday (London), November 28, 2004: 44-45.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Sherlock Holmes was the hero of dozens of classic detective novels, baffling the hapless Dr Watson with his powers of deduction. But the image of the cold, calculating Victorian gentleman always sat slightly awkwardly with his mood swings and his liking for cocaine. Now BBC producer Richard Downes believes he may have solved the mystery, controversially attributing Holmes's darker side to author Arthur Conan Doyle's alcoholic father...."

4352. Pryor, Cathy. "Tv Choice: the Strange Case of Sherlock Holmes and Arthur Conan Doyle Wednesday, 9pm BBC2." Independent on Sunday (London), July 24, 2005: 29.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...There's much to like in this imaginative piece, though it takes a short while to grip. For starters, there simply cannot be too many dramas with Tim McInnerny in them, though Henshall is equally good. The thoroughbred cast also includes Sinad Cusack, Brian Cox and Allan Corduner. And it's intriguing to learn about Conan Doyle's life, which was at least as tangled as any of his plots. Viva Holmes!"

4353. Ramsey, Terry. "Elementary flaws spoil this Holmes." The Evening Standard (London), July 27, 2005: 19.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of "The Strange Case Of Sherlock Holmes And Arthur Conan Doyle," BBC2. "Television is in its summer doldrums at the moment (as I am sure you will have noticed), which means we have to be grateful for any new, adventurous, individual drama that comes our way. But exactly how much gratitude we should feel for this confused - and confusing - work is questionable. That's not to say its version of the life of Victorian writer Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, and his relationship with his most famous character, Sherlock Holmes, doesn't have its memorable moments - just that it also has some very frustrating ones...."

4354. Stewart, Helen. "The Strange Case Of Sherlock Holmes And Arthur Conan Doyle." Sunday Times (London), July 24, 2005: 51.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of The Strange Case Of Sherlock Holmes And Arthur Conan Doyle (BBC). "If the authors are to be believed,' says the screenwriter David Pirie, 'then the three great gothic archetypes -Sherlock Holmes, Frankenstein and Dracula -were just pieces of silliness, mere nothings.' Sir Arthur Conan Doyle always claimed that the Sherlock Holmes mysteries did not amount to more than a party trick...It is the circumstances of Holmes's birth and death that lie at the heart of Wednesday's drama. The

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

ingenious screenplay joins the author as a young man of 33, just two years after he achieved success with his stories, and already determined to kill off his most famous creation. 'It was a remarkable act of literary savagery,' says Pirie, 'and I believe it proves that there were deeper roots to the character than Doyle claimed.'...The execution, however, is disappointing, largely because of the irritating insistence of the director, Cilla Ware, on shooting Henshall through shrubbery, random vases of flowers and blazing sunbursts, all of which lends the production a sweetly dreamy quality somewhat at odds with the nightmarish reality. The 90-minute film significantly flags halfway through, but those viewers who sit tight will be rewarded with a pleasingly Holmesian twist."

10P ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- TELEVISION -- WISHBONE (1)

4355. Hightower, Susan. "Can Wishbone Sniff Out Barney's Big Success?" The Salt Lake Tribune (Salt Lake City, UT), Dec 16, 1994: Z3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The star of 'Wishbone' is Wishbone, who is portrayed by a Jack Russell terrier named Soccer and three supporting canine cohorts, vegetable-dyed to match.; The idea is to take a literary classic, boil it down to a half-hour story, and give the dog the elaborate costumes and settings to act out the starring role in his fantasies. Meanwhile, a thematically similar contemporary plot line for Wishbone's family and friends, played by human actors, helps young viewers relate to the classic, [Rick Duffield] said...."(excerpt). Wishbone is known to have played Holmes.

10Q ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- VIDEO DISCS (21)

4356. "Father Brown." British Heritage 28, no. 2 (2007): 59-59.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews "Father Brown, DVD 2-vol. boxed set," a collection of the episodes of the television program "Father Brown," released on DVD format. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Neither is it surprising that, like the celebrated sleuths of Agatha Christie, Dorothy Sayers, P.D. James, Conan Doyle and such, Father Brown should have made his way to the screen. What is surprising, however is that it has taken such a time for these clever tales to be widely available in video for fans of the genre. Originally aired in this country on PBS Mystery! in 1982, Acorn Media has gathered and released this set of seven Father Brown stories, starring Kenneth More as the skillful clergyman-detective...."
4357. "Get this Classic Detectives DVD Free Today." Daily Mail (London), January 20, 2006: 40.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Today, you can get another free Classic Detectives DVD with a feature-length episode of Sherlock Holmes. Simply take the voucher printed here to your nearest WHSmith store* TODAY and they'll swap it for a FREE DVD of Sherlock Holmes, one of the world's greatest and most popular fictional detectives. Adapted from Arthur Conan Doyle's original stories and novels, Sherlock Holmes has consistently been one of Britain's top overseas exports, has been honoured twice with awards from the Mystery Writers of America and has received accolades from all over the world. It stars Jeremy Brett, David Burke and Edward Hardwicke...."
4358. "New on DVD." St. Petersburg Times (Florida), May 12, 2000: 6W.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Fans of Sherlock Holmes can rejoice with the release of An Evening With Sherlock Holmes. Actually, it should be titled several evenings because this boxed set contains four movies - Sherlock Holmes and the Secret Weapon (1942), Woman In Green (1945), Terror By Night (1946) and Dressed To Kill (1946). And that's not all. It also includes an interview with Holmes creator Sir Arthur Conan Doyle filmed in 1927 and 30 original radio broadcasts starring the film's leads, Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce...."
4359. "Sir Hugo's Wild and Profane Sinema--Because We Can: Fun With Sherockian DVD Extras." The Holmes & Watson Report 8, no. 1 (2004): 7-11.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

4360. "They Look so Good on the Shelf." Advocate, no. (2003): 1/3p.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents brief descriptions of boxed sets of movie DVDs. "The sophisticated Billy Wilder DVD Collection (MGM Home Entertainment, $129.96) contains two of the legendary writer-director's queerest--Some Like It Hot and The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes--along with seven other classics..."
4361. "Video." Library Journal 131, no. 6 (2006): 125-127.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // An annotated bibliography of video titles, soon to be published or recently published, is provided. The "trailers" section contains a reference to Doyle and Holmes. Murder Rooms: The Beginnings of Sherlock Holmes. 2 vols. color. 6 hrs. MPI Media. Jun. 2006. DVD ISBN 0-7886-0726-X. $39.98. "The young Conan Doyle and his mentor, a forensic scientist, turn the tables on Victorian criminals."
4362. Barrett, Wayne M. "The Truth About the Sleuth." USA Today Magazine 133, no. 2716 (2005): 68-69.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the DVD release of the television series Mystery," about detective Sherlock Holmes and his sidekick John Watson, starring Jeremy Brett and Edward Hardwicke.
4363. Blowen, Michael. "Video Watch." The Boston Globe, May 7, 2000: C9.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...Fans of Sherlock Holmes can rejoice with the release on Tuesday of "An Evening With Sherlock Holmes." Actually, it should be titled several evenings because this boxed set contains four movies - "Sherlock Holmes and the Secret Weapon" (1942), "Woman In Green" (1945), "Terror by Night" (1946), and "Dressed To Kill" (1946). And that's not all. It also includes an interview with Holmes creator Sir Arthur Conan Doyle filmed in 1927 and 30 original radio broadcasts starring the film's leads, Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce...."
4364. Clark, Mike. "The DVD watch." USA Today, May 12, 2000: E08.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Though the hoopla for An Evening With Sherlock Holmes (1942-46, FOCUSfilm, unrated, $70) claims the four films in the box set have been restored, the prints look like dupes, and one of them -- 1946's Terror by Night (seven chapters) -- is a truncated 54-minute version. For those who can overlook this, the collection -- which also includes 1942's Sherlock Holmes and the Secret Weapon, 1945's Woman in Green and 1946's Dressed to Kill (all unrated and with 12 chapters) -- has its rewards. The Basil Rathbone-Nigel Bruce series of Holmes films remains one of the most enjoyable in Hollywood history. The set includes 30 good-sounding Holmes radio shows from the '40s (with wine commercials), and a rare 1927 on-camera chat with Holmes creator Sir Arthur Conan Doyle."
4365. ———. "New on DVD." USA Today, November 7, 2003: E09.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Brief review of "Sherlock Holmes in Washington." "Universal's Basil Rathbone-Nigel Bruce Holmes series delighted over and over on early-'60s TV, and some of the most amusing entries were time-machine affairs in which Holmes and Watson got involved in World War II espionage. Check out Rathbone's weird hair curls, some fractured Washington, D.C., geography....Also new: Sherlock Holmes and the Voice of Terror and Sherlock Holmes and the Secret Weapon (both 1942), plus Sherlock Holmes Faces Death (1943). Like Washington, they were preserved by the UCLA Film and Television Archive and look their best in years."
4366. ———. "This week's platinum picks." USA Today, Sep 14, 2007: E4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Brief reviews of new releases including one related to Doyle. The Lost World. 1925/1960, Fox, unrated, $20 Though Fox isn't ballyhooing it, the bonus inclusion of Willis O'Brien's original movie is what makes this twofer worth it. The pioneer effects maestro also was the genius behind King Kong in 1933. Back story: Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's yarn deals with dinosaurs amid a jungle expedition. The '25 version offers Bessie Love (1929's Oscar winner for The Broadway Melody), Lewis Stone (Andy Hardy's judge father) and Wallace Beery. In 1960, the year after its box-office smash Journey to the Center of the Earth, Fox mounted a CinemaScope/color remake that plunked Jill St. John into the Amazon with Michael Rennie, Fernando Lamas, The Fly's David Hedison, tight pink Capri pants and Frosty the Poodle -- a nutty, nutty mix that heads deep into the Amazon. Extras, extras: Very minor.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

4367. Corliss, Richard. "7 Sharpest Detectives on DVD." Time 166, no. 4 (2005): 72-72.
